The deceased, who was born in Liverpool, on the 20th February, 1825, was the son of a pilot, and devoted his early life to seafaring pursuits; he was connected with the pilot service of the port until May, 1864, when he was appointed master of the Canning Dock. In May of the following year he was removed to the George's Dock, on the retirement of Mr. Purnell, and on the 16th January, 1861, he was appointed master of the Prince's Dock. This post he continued to hold till the 7th February, 1872, when on a re-arrangement of the dock system he became the master of the Prince's and half-tide dock, the East and West Waterloo docks, the Victoria dock, and the Prince's graving dock. By his decease the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board have lost the services of a most scrupulous and attentive employee to whose care was entrusted property of enormous value, and who never failed to discharge his arduous duties in the most conscientious and painstaking manner. In token of respect for the memory of the deceased, the flags on the offices of the Prince's Dock, and also on most of the vessels in the several docks under his control, were raised half-mast high.

Owing to pressure of business, having charge of the largest and most important docks at Liverpool, Bro. Bond has of late years taken little or no active part in Freemasonry, but his heart was always in the Craft and his hand ever open and ready to help a brother in distress. It was his intention to resume active connection with Masonry in a few weeks, as an intimate friend had agreed to propose him as a joining member of one of the Liverpool lodges. Man, however, may propose, but God disposes; and our esteemed brother has suddenly been called to the Grand Lodge above, where T.G.A.O.T.U. rules and reigns for ever. Bro. Bond, it may be interesting to know, was the "first child" of St. John's Lodge, No. 971 (now No. 673), after its consecration in 1856, and he remained a subscribing member of his mother lodge for several years, esteemed as an honest, true-hearted, and enthusiastic Mason.

The mortal remains of our esteemed brother were interred in Southdown-lane Cemetery, on Wednesday afternoon, the 13th inst. The respect for the name and memory of the deceased was clearly shown by an attendance of nearly 200 persons, including a number of Masons, nearly all the dock masters at the port, a large representation of captains, private friends, &c.

The lodge first confirmed grants to the amount of £130 made at last lodge meeting. The brethren then proceeded with the new cases, of which there were seventeen. One grant was made of £103, two were made of £50 each, two of £20 each, two of £15 each, three of £10 each, and one of £5; making in all £302. Six cases were deferred.

Lodge was then closed.

His Grace the Duke of Marlborough, Vice-roy of Ireland, accompanied by her Grace the Duchess of Marlborough, the Lady Georgiana E. Churchill, Lord Randolph H. Churchill, M.P., and a select party, took their departure from the Pulteney Hotel, Albermarle-street, on Wednesday morning, on a yachting excursion in the Mediterranean Sea. His Excellency, it is understood, will be absent three or four weeks on his pleasure cruise.

Rarely if ever has there been in London a virulent outbreak of Cholera or Typhus which could not be directly traced to the drinking of impure water. Yet though the Registrar General persistently warns us, month after month, that our water supply shows no signs of improvement, there are probably more houses in London without a filter than with one. It is hardly too much to say that a law compelling landlords or ground leaseholders to place in every cistern one of the London and General Water Purifying Company's patent cistern filters would reduce the Metropolitan death rate by thirty per cent. As however there is small chance of so beneficial a piece of legislation, it becomes the duty of the householder to act for himself. The filters in question are preferable to all others for several reasons. In the first place the water passes through animal charcoal, the only efficient material. Secondly, it filters upwards, so that all sediment is avoided. Thirdly, the filter requires no filling or other attention from servants. Although the first cost of these filters, in consequence of the expensiveness of the animal charcoal, is more than of some others, this outlay is more than compensated for by their greater durability and the other advantages enumerated. It therefore seems almost incredible that any man would rather run the risk of an outbreak of Typhus or some other malignant disease in his household than incur this first trifling outlay, which would probably be more than saved in the first year's doctor's bills. We are glad to be able to state that the filters supplied to our Boys' School at Wood Green, and to the Girls' School at Battersea Rise by the above Company have all along given every satisfaction and little trouble.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been Compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 2lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as samples, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark-street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom, must be addressed to the Secretary.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Sudden changes of temperature sorely try all persons prone to rheumatism, sciatica, tic douloureux, and many maladies scarcely less painful, though of shorter duration. On the first attack of stiffness or suffering in any muscle, joint, or nerve, recourse should immediately be had to fomenting the seat of disease with hot brine and rubbing in this remarkable Ointment, which will assuage the uneasiness of the part, subdue inflammation, and reduce the swelling. The Pills, simultaneously taken, will rectify constitutional disturbances and renew the strength. No remedy heretofore discovered has proved so effective as the Ointment and Pills for removing gouty, rheumatic, and scrofulous attacks, which afflict all ages, and are commonly called hereditary.—Advt.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The Right Hon. Lord Suffield, K.C.B., Provincial Grand Master for Norfolk, the Chairman of the last festival of this Institution, which was held on the 9th ult., accompanied by the Hon. Miss Harbord and the Stewards of the festival, paid a visit to the School at Battersea Rise on Monday last. In consequence of the building operations, which have for some time past been going on in the course of enlarging the establishment for the admission of a greater number of pupils, the grounds did not present the pleasant appearance they have shewn on former occasions, bricks and mortar and other building materials not being very picturesque. But everything had been done to put the best face on the establishment under the circumstances, and laying the unfinished buildings on one side, everything else was as neat and orderly as the known system pursued on the premises might lead visitors to expect. The noble Chairman was received by Bro. Little, the Secretary, Miss Davis, the head-governess, Bro. Massa, the Architect of the new building, and the House Committee, and was immediately conducted over the dormitories and offices, and shown the arrangements which are in force for the health, comfort, and happiness of the 160 pupils at present in the school. The party was afterwards conducted over the new buildings, which will very shortly be opened, and as this is the first time we have seen them since they have been in so forward a state we may take the opportunity of saying that the space at command has been utilised to the utmost, and that the means found for affording the additional accommodation, reflect the greatest credit on all concerned. When the building is opened we shall give a full description of it, but the Craft may rest satisfied that the increased accommodation has been left in excellent hands, and that the wishes of the brethren to have an establishment equivalent to the present demands of the Order have been consulted as far as practicable. The Chairman and visitors expressed the greatest satisfaction with what they saw and heard, after having made searching enquiries into the whole regime. When the inspection of the buildings had been completed, the girls were put through their famed calisthenic exercises and marching, with all of which Lord Suffield seemed much pleased, and he complimented Miss Davis, Bro. Little, and the committee on the state of perfection to which the educational curriculum had been brought. After partaking of a déjeuner his lordship presided in the hall, by which time the bulk of the visitors had arrived. Among them were Rev. J. M. and Mrs. Vaughan, Col. Peters, H. A. Dubois, A. H. The installation meeting of the Friendly Chapter took place on Monday last. A report will appear in our next.

The advice of the late Mr. Thackeray was as much prized by his friends as his literary genius was appreciated by his fellow-countrymen. A young lady of his acquaintance, knowing how wide and deep was his knowledge of worldly matters, one day asked him what would be the best present to make to her old friend and schoolfellow, who was just married, and was now setting up housekeeping. "My dear," replied the great novelist, "you may be certain your young friends are thinking only of the luxurious and the ornamental in their purchases. Now, suppose you take the useful and the practical side. My dear, you cannot do better than present your friends with a filter—a Lipscombe's filter, mind. It is the best kind of filter I know." This was some years since, and the merits of Lipscombe's filters have become more and more esteemed as their use has spread. We find that to meet the enormous demand for these filters Messrs. Lipscombe, in addition to their well-known house at Temple-bar, have opened extensive premises at 54, Queen Victoria-street, City, and 69, Oxford-street.

The faculty for the restoration of the Sheffield Parish Church, has been issued from the Chancellor's Court. The work will no doubt be proceeded with at an early day. The Freemasons of Sheffield have offered to erect a font in the restored building, the gift being of a very handsome and valuable character, and is in association with Mrs. Thornhill-Gell's munificent act. Mrs. Thornhill-Gell holds the alternate presentation of the Vicar of Sheffield, and recently appointed the Rev. Rowley Hill, now a canon of York, which appointment seems to have given great satisfaction.

CHARITY VOTING.

Our worthy Bro. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C., says that we have done injustice to his views, and misrepresented his statement in respect of the powers of a central committee, (not necessarily a London committee), and certainly we plead guilty at once to having so understood his original suggestion and object. Curiously enough, Bro. Hughan, a not inattentive reader of the Freemason, "P.G.C." and "An Old Chairman" all understood the matter in the same way. This misapprehension was based on the following words in the printed reports, to which our attention was called by Bro. Simpson:—"It is further suggested that committees of charitable associations should intimate in their voting papers that subscribers who have no means of ascertaining the comparative merits of the candidates, or who for any other reason decline to exercise their privilege of voting, should sign and send their proxies to the committee, to be distributed amongst the poorest and most deserving." This is, practically, as we understand the words, to give the central committee the power of recommendation and allotment, and is the point which has misled us all, for it seems that Bro. Simpson does not agree with that recommendation, and does not propose anything of the kind for our Masonic Charities, and we therefore acknowledge our misconception of his views, though it was one, we think, not altogether inexcusable under the circumstances. We, however, object to the suggestion of the Charity Reform Association, for this reason. If the candidates are carefully selected, it is far better, in our opinion, for the subscribers to vote for the cases they consider the most deserving. It is all very well to blame the Committees for letting in candidates too easily, or receiving improper cases, but the fault in this rather rests with the subscribers than with the committee. But any attempt to enable the committee to support special cases will aggravate the evil instead of lessen it. And here we may observe that we do not think that we have much more to say upon the general question, for we do not know of any real abuses, and we cannot conceive what there is to reform. Canvassing cards have a good side to them in the shape of public notice and local interest, and the polling day is, in our opinion, absolutely indispensable to purity of election and fair play to all the candidates. We note that Bro. Simpson repeats the words "certain well-known abuses," as being rampant in our midst, and "to a fair and pure system of election," as if such did not now exist. We really do not profess to understand what these "well-known abuses" are, and as regards the present system of election, it is as fair as fair can be, in our humble opinion, and after some special experience of the matter, we do not realize in any way in what it is susceptible of improvement. For these and many other like reasons we say, let well alone. One abuse we shall be very happy to aid Bro. Simpson or any one in mitigating, the admission of doubtful or improper cases, though the matter is a very difficult one, for many reasons. And, as we said before, it is not so much the committees, as ourselves who are to blame. The candidates conform to the rules of the institution, and without new rules, there is no power in the committee to reject them. But why do the brethren support such a case as the following, one among many similar?—A brother who has only subscribed the actual sum of qualification, leaves the Order, and after some years, never having again subscribed to a lodge or the charities at all, dies. After his death the friends of the orphan claim, in virtue of his qualification, that the child be placed on the list of candidates. Now is it fair that the orphan of one who left the Order living, and died out of it, should be elected over the head of an orphan of a brother who lived and died in Masonry, and supported our charities? We say, then, increase the minimum of subscription and make it imperative that a brother shall not have died out of Masonry. We do not say, exclude the orphans of such altogether, but give a preference to the orphans of all who have lived and died as subscribing brethren of a lodge? This is the most needed of all reforms, and would remedy many prevalent evils and reform many serious abuses.

FAIR PLAY IS A JEWEL.

This old axiom of Anglo-Saxon morality is Masonic in the highest degree, and will be acknowledged and acceded to by all Freemasons "more Masonico," under the benign principles of Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry. The great truth involved in that proverbial expression is realized by them in theory and developed in practice. We wish we could equally say that it was always so abroad. But we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that, without for one moment denying the absurd and wicked intolerance of the Roman Catholic Church, of the Ultramontane faction, many of the words of foreign Freemasons are very unwise, and many of their acts very unmasonic. We take up our good contemporary, the Monde Maçonnique of June, for instance, and at page 332, we read as follows, from a correspondent at Milan:—"By the information which the Commission (of the Lodge La Ragione) has acquired, it results that the Roman Catholic oratories in Milan are, for the most part, attended by youths directed by the priests, and some attended by girls, directed by the sisters of charity. These oratories are found in the different quarters of the town, and especially in those localities which are mostly peopled by the working classes. They are frequented by about 6000 young people of the two sexes, recruited among the less well-to-do families from earliest youth, and it is remarkable that these young people continued to frequent the oratory until the age of enlistment. Almost all the oratories are alike, according to their general idea. The schools are large, altogether clerical in character, the direction is always in the hands of the curate. The interior government is confided to priests, assisted by the préfets, councillors, elected or nominated among the oldest pupils. In some of these oratories they pay from three to four francs annually for each scholar; the others, and they form the majority, are completely free schools. . . . The instruction is catechetical, based on religious exercises, which are repeated in the morning and evening. . . . By their 6000 'élèves' the priests exercise a great influence over 6000 families of the town, and these enfants can be employed to serve as a chain of union between the Church and the family, against this continual struggle for the development of the civil life. The Commission (of the lodge) proposes two remedies. 1. To erect, in opposition to the Roman Catholic oratories, civil institutes, asylums, clubs or recreation halls, with a purely liberal basis, destined to gather in, to educate, and amuse the young people on the days of fête. 2. To subject the Roman Catholic oratories to the intervention and surveillance of the public authority, exercised in a manner to transform their tendencies and to direct along the road of the necessities of the country and the spirit of the times the young people confided to them, entirely infusing the charters of foundation and private rights. A copy of this report has been sent to all the members of the Chamber of Deputies, all the members and Secretaries, and I have the happiness to tell you that we shall not wait long to see the fruits of this famous campaign which the Milanese Masons by the means of the lodge ('la Ragione') has begun against the priests." Now, we have no hesitation in saying that such a position is, according to our view, utterly unsound and unmasonic. As Freemasons, we have nothing to do with education, per se, and we have no business whatever to attack this or that particular religious institution. If the Milanese Freemasons like to set up Masonic schools, à la bonne heure, let them do so by all means, and may they succeed. But to set up Masonic schools, simply to attack the clerical schools, and then to ask the aid of the State to interfere with the ordinary Roman Catholic schools, which are necessary and useful, and, according to their own account, very successful, is a parody on the principles of Italian constitutional liberty, and a direct invasion of the rights of religious liberty, and of a "Free Church in a Free State." Indeed, the reason of the opposition seems to be because they are religious schools, and it never is the duty or intention of Freemasonry to attack a religious body qua a religious body. We say all this in all friendliness to the Milanese Freemasons, but we should not be doing our duty, as honest Masonic journalists, if we did not protest against any deviation from the straightforward path of freedom of worship and liberty of conscience, from any idea that such theories and such proceedings are founded on true Masonic teaching, at least as we understand it. The Freemasons at Milan have a most perfect right to set up Masonic schools if they deem it well, but they have no warrant from Masonry to make its name a rallying cry against any religious body whatever, be that body what it may. Into these internecine contests, as between Freemasonry and Roman Catholicism, we Anglo-Saxon Freemasons cannot and do not enter, neither can we approve of them. The evil they bring on Freemasonry is very great. We defend ourselves, indeed, when attacked unjustly, but nothing more; but we never assail religious institutions, as religious institutions, and we deprecate making education above all a question of heated and polemical warfare. We cannot conscientiously or Masonically approve of the animus or the attitude of the Milanese Freemasons.

THE RECENT STRUGGLE IN FRANCE.

We publish in another page a remarkable letter from a French brother in London to Bro. Hubert, the editor of the Chaine d'Union, which we think it well to reproduce in its own language, because it represents the views we have ventured to express on the Masonic struggle in France from time to time. He admits, as will be seen, the great inadvisability and error of the change. He does full justice to our happy neutrality in England on all matters pertaining to politics or religion. We wish that his words may impress some of our French brethren with the reality of the mistake an active section is apparently bent on committing and forcing upon French Freemasonry. We observe, as if to show the hesitation of French Freemasons in this sterile controversy, that, according to the last Bulletin du Grand Orient, 106 lodges had then made no return to the question, and we are inclined to hope not only that there are many French Freemasons who disapprove of so great a revolution, but that there is yet time to put an end once for all to a mischievous and hurtful agitation. If French Freemasonry is excluded from the great family of Freemasonry, it never can be said of us that we "daubed the wall with untempered mortar," for we have, we fear, offended some of our French brethren, by the freedom of our remarks and the outspoken manliness of our sentiments. But we wish them, once for all, to remember, that what we say we mean, and what we mean we say, and though our language be a little plainer and, perhaps, more uncompromising than they are accustomed to, we wish them well, and seek to offer them friendly and fraternal advice.

THE ADMITTANCE OF NON-MASONS TO THE BOYS' SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

The announcement which appears in the programme of the Boys' School Festival some of our alarmist brethren may think a "coup de Binckes." But, to say the truth, we do not think that there is much in it. It is not a purely Masonic Festival, it is what the French term "La Maçonnerie Blanche," inasmuch as our fair sisters who have long looked down on their "Lords and Masters" enjoying a good dinner, have been permitted, wisely we think, at the last Boy's School anniversary to share in the good things provided by the zeal and care of the most considerate and liberal of Stewards. Indeed, some young Masons have been heard to say, "Take the goods the gods provide you, Lovely Thais sits beside you." Being young men we pardon the quotation, though in the sentiment we fully concur. It is then another step in advance to admit non-Masons to the dinner, and, as we said before, the gathering is not purely Masonic, we do not see that it much matters one way or the other, especially at the Alexandra Palace. We do not conceal from ourselves that this change is an innovation, and one about which Masons will greatly differ, and about which a great deal may be said on both sides. But, having made a note of it, we leave it now, for the information of the Craft, and the remarks, if any, of our correspondents, as we always think it a pity to make unnecessary difficulties, or to make use of "Red tape" of any kind.

Original Correspondence.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for, or even as approving of the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but we wish, in a spirit of fair play to all, to permit—within certain necessary limits—free discussion.—Ed.]

THE RECENT INCIDENT IN PARIS.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

As I think you are quite right in clearing the good name of Freemasons from any participation in the opinions expressed by Bro. Bonnet-Duverdier, by the remarks of one of your leaders last week, I send you a few lines.

It has been alleged that he was arrested on leaving a Freemasons' Lodge, and thence it seems advisable for Freemasons to disown any sympathy whether for the principles or the position he has thought proper to assume. I lay down no law of political prepossession one way or the other, but simply protest against Freemasons having anything to do with disrespect to lawful authority, communism, or assassination. As a contemporary reports: "M. Bonnet-Duverdier, the President of the Municipal Council of Paris, was sentenced, on Friday last, by the Tenth Correctional Chamber, to fifteen months' imprisonment and 2000 francs fine, for insult to the President; and under the circumstances, you will hardly think the sentence too severe for the language used by a man in such a position, and to such an audience. Though present, or being already into custody, he insisted, by his counsel, on allowing judgment to go by default; as did also the three other persons incriminated with him, though the latter were only charged with holding illegally a public meeting. In so acting, they meant, I presume, to parade their conviction that the sentence pronounced upon them, whatever it might be, was destined, at no long date, to be rescinded wholly, or commuted, by a Government more to their taste. It was clearly proved that the meeting, which professed to be 'private' and for the 'formation of a club,' was in reality 'public,' and 'for political purposes.' Among other proofs of the latter object was the letter of Duverdier himself when replying to the invitation to attend, in which he says: 'Dear Citizen, you know I am always at your service for the purposes of propagandism and political organisation.' But there could be no doubt of the character and object of the meeting. The language laid to the charge of Duverdier, and cited as proved against him in the judgment, was as follows. I give it in the original, the better to retain its true character:—

'Le maréchal imbecile sera bientôt traduit à la barre du peuple pour expier son crime. . . . Nous sommes gouvernés par des soudards, des robes noires, des traîneurs de sabres. . . . Le maréchal voudra peut-être essayer de tirer sa loyale épée contre la démocratie. . . . le maréchal ramolli. . . . mais le fourreau est vide. Il a laissé l'épée à Sedan, le lâche; il n'a pas capitulé, mais il s'est laissé glisser de son cheval pour faire croire qu'il était blessé. . . . Rochefort a promis dix mille francs au médecin qui prouverait qu'il a été blessé.

'Les manœuvres du ministère nous ramèneront les Prussiens; mais nous ne combattrons pas sous des généraux incapables. Le patriotisme ne va pas jusqu'à se faire tuer par ces gens-là. Il faudra commencer par exécuter MacMahon et son gouvernement, et après cela nous nous arrangerons avec l'ennemi.

'Tous les moyens sont bons. Luttons d'abord avec les urnes. . . . puis il y a le moyen légal que vous connaissez.'

"The judgment further adds in aggravation that 'it was proved that the last words of the above were accompanied by a gesture significant of firing a shot.'

"The above requires, I think, no comment; and, despite a letter of Sir E. Watkin which appeared in the Times of Monday, is at once a sufficient excuse for the sentence, which is based especially upon the 'position held by the prisoner' and the 'quality of the audience he addressed.'

In protesting against such language as most contrary to the ever loyal teaching and spirit of Freemasonry I think it well that our Masonic position in such a matter should be well and clearly understood.

I am, yours fraternally,

THE WRITER OF THE ARTICLE.

FREEMASONS IN THE LAW COURTS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Some weeks ago I trespassed upon your indulgence and the patience of your readers with a dissertation upon that very lively and exciting theme "the stamp duties" of our country. Incidentally to that diverting argument I found that I was bound to bestow some consideration upon a then recent discussion, whereby in the Westminster County Court, Bayley, Q.C. C. C. J., had held,—and I thought, and expressed that I thought, soundly held,—that an initiation fee and lodge dues could not be recovered by ordinary process of law.

In your last impression the question of the legal status of members of the Craft has cropped up again, and I venture, ecce iterum Crispinus, to intrude my personality again upon your readers, parrying any thrusting charges of egotism by premising that I only seek to endeavour to help my brethren by the diffident expression of the conclusions at which I have arrived after some time devoted to serious consideration of the subject upon which I presume to put pen to paper, and sincerely professing that I write with a full conviction of the soundness of the Shakespearian motto, that "good counsels must perforce give place to better."

But, first of all, please indulge me by letting me have my fling at the "emotionalists," the "gushers," the "young lions" of the cheap daily press. I am perfectly aware that the skilled editor can command an article upon any subject, from lunar equations to St. Giles's lodgings, by selecting the appropriate "young man" to "lay on" for the purpose of "doing it." Scoffers at the modus operandi of the (vile and inaccurate colloquialism) "fourth estate," do say that the juvenile feline commanded to wag his tail or "shake the dew drops from his mane" in a given direction, is shut up in an encyclopædia lined apartment, and—the key turned, and copious four-penn'orths of gin-and-water, many clay pipes, and a general "muckness" of shag tobacco provided—is "requisitioned" to provide "copy" on pain of—death? no, dismissal—on any desiderated subject within any fraction of the interval between 10 p.m. and 1 a.m. on any of the six working nights of the week.

Is the "old Joe" of the gushing scribbler, who, being required to write by order on Chinese metaphysics, was shut up in the editor's room and advised to con the indispensable encyclopædia for the respective words "metaphysics" and "China," and then "combine his information," wholly an allegory? Is the theory that the joke is a libel supported, or presumably displaced, by the recent exertations upon the sea serpent we have had the privilege to read in that journal, the initials of whose title, unfortunately, coincide with those of a disorder induced by the excitement engendered by indulgence in "undue stimulation"? I know not—I care not. Only in the interests of that public, a boon to which is desiderated in our desire to see the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth disseminated, it would, I think, be as well if the hirer of the young lions would "lay on" to wag their tails feline specimens, who know something by experience,—actually "know, you know,"—of the subject upon which they "gush" for so much a line.

I do not venture, Sir, so far to intrude upon your space as to ask you to reproduce the very flippant and very ignorant—what shall I call it?—Editorial?—No, I believe leaderette is the proper word? more Americano! which appeared in one of your contemporaries on the recent case of Voight v. Trevor and another, on Monday the 11th inst. I only meekly suggest to the august potentates who rule, guide, and direct the Daily Telegraph, that it might not be an undesirable qualification in a writer who aspires to clothe himself in type, with Masonic matter for the material of his garment, to have a slight, say a merely elementary knowledge of what he is writing about.

The writer of the paragraph (I do not of course allude to the quoted report in your columns of last week taken from the Standard) in question, assumes that the dictum of Field, J., confers upon our beloved Craft some special, and, therefore, some exceptional status in the eye of the law never before conceded to it. The brethren will at once perceive that our learned and illustrious brother's expression does nothing of the kind. Too much jealousy cannot be evinced of a manifested tendency to "oust," as the legal expression is, the jurisdiction of the law courts in matters of controversy between citizen and citizen, quod citizen, on purely civic rights. I have sat, one year with another, on the Board of General Purposes for ten years. I have constantly attended, watched, spoken, and voted upon the proceedings of that body. I have, both by speech and vote, had the privilege and honour—I say it deliberately and proudly—to support the conclusions that assemblage has arrived at in Grand Lodge, and, although now no longer a member of that august—asust inasmuch as it is a dignified, deliberative and respectworthy—body, I can solemnly aver that this question of the due discrimination between a man's civic rights, as the member of a national community, and his duties and reciprocal dues as a fellow of a universal brotherhood, has ever received the most attentive consideration of that, the cabinet council—so to speak—of the Craft. What has been the result? I venture to say that it has been the affirmation of what is a purely common sense principle, that in matters common to all citizens, in their generic character as such, the authorities of the Craft will decline to interfere, but that in questions as to their relations as Freemasons, ex generis natura, a tribunal is provided to which they, having by their affiliation to the brotherhood agreed to submit, are estopped, at all events in honour—certainly, according to the obligations voluntarily entered into by each one on his initiation—from submitting their Masonic differences to what I may call, by a figure of speech, a lay tribunal. No similar privileges can be claimed, as the emotional scribe assumes, by the Odd Fellows, the Druids, or the Most Ancient Order of Antediluvian Buffaloes, because, in the first place, their obligations entail no such submission to a common and recognised tribunal, and, in the second place, because the organisation of those very respectable and very useful brotherhoods have not obtained that legal recognition which our ancient fraternity has acquired.*

* 39 Geo. 3rd, cap. 79, secs. 5 and 6; 57 Geo. 3rd, cap. 19, sec. 26.

Take an instance—two instances; In "The Hervey Lodge v. Fielder"—Freemason, Oct. 26, 1876, the question was essentially pecuniary, and was decided on the legal proposition that no civic status was conferred upon a lodge to sue and be sued. I venture, Sir, to say that nine-tenths of our brethren accept that as a logical result of the purely voluntary character of our association. A case which came before the Board of General Purposes in my time was some wretched social dispute about an alleged libel promulgated by one Mason against another, not quid his character as a brother Mason, but solely in respect to his position, or his conduct as a member of a local School Board. Here, and as I think, very properly, the disputants were left to their independent rights as members of the general community. The question came before Grand Lodge, and that supreme body took this, as I think, indisputably constitutional view. But the case under discussion "is to be distinguished," as they say in Westminster Hall. A brief resumé of the facts will, I think, show how. Certain members of a lodge, as I am informed of the circumstances, combined together to blackmail, irrespective of qualifications, every candidate for initiation. The conspirators were detected—how—the modus operandi—I am not called upon to describe. It is not my province to praise the device employed, nor to anlmadvert upon its employment. They were detected. It is deemed to be a Masonic offence worthy of—let us say, briefly and not invidiously "gibbeting." The bye-laws of the lodge provide, not unreasonably, for incroyables (to use a mild conventional term towards our irreconcilable brethren) being—again to use a gentle phrase—eliminated. The question then comes in whether their conduct, constituting an offence, which, if an offence at all, must surely be deemed purely Masonic, is cognisable by the general law courts of the realm; cognisable, that is to say in this way, whether the publication of what is averred to be their misconduct is such an aspersion upon their general reputation as members of the general body politic as to bring them within the risk of incurring that hatred and reprobation which is deemed by the common law ground for the awarding of pecuniary damages by an assessment of a jury of their common Masonic and un-Masonic fellow citizens.

Perhaps such a publication may be, as it is technically termed, "evidence to go to a jury," and the estimate of what a jury would give in such a case, all the circumstances proved as I have narrated them, cannot affect the question; but what we have, as Masons, to consider is this: Are we to wash our dirty linen, when it is clearly our own fouling, at home, or to seek to blanch it in the law courts? Is such imputed misconduct within the purview of the Book of Constitutions, or must we resort to the tribunals of the realm open alike to exoteric and esoteric? I venture to think that there can be but one reply. The report seems to imply that our illustrious M.W.G.M. has declined jurisdiction in the matter. I think that this must be a misapprehension of what has really occurred. Has the case been submitted to the Board of General Purposes? I treat with the disdain it merits the suggestion in the paltry exhortation I have alluded to, that the learned magistrate before whom the case came appends to his illustrious name any of the misquoted titles the sensational and ignorant scribe has besmeared it with. That Mr. Justice Field is a brother Mason I am proud to recognise, but I detect the valued fact rather in the sound discretion he apparently evinced in discriminating between what are and what are not subjects for the exercise of Masonic jurisprudence, than in the wild speculations of the writer, that the principles of our beloved brotherhood involve the proposition that Masons seek any emancipation from the ordinary obligations of law-abiding Englishmen.

I have trespassed, Sir, I fear, too long upon your space and your readers' time. Exhaustively and irrefutably as you have treated the subject in your last week's impression, I find myself reduced to imitate the ready insolence of the young advocate, (a very old joke by the way), who pleading before certain "grave and reverend seignours" of the bench, was reminded by one of them that he had already advanced the same argument twice, "And I am afraid, my lords," he retorted, "I shall have to re-iterate it twice more, for I see before me four learned judges."

ILLEGITIMACY AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have received a fraternal and truly Masonic letter from my dear friend and brother, Commander C. Scott, P.M. 350 I.C. (P.P.G.W. of Devon, &c., &c.), with respect to the subject about which we have been writing of late.

There is no doubt as to our enthusiastic brother being in the right as to the custom in Ireland, though that, of course, does not of itself prove it to be correct in the present era of Freemasonry.

We should remember that the Society has passed through many stages, and that at the present time every Grand Lodge is not in the same advanced state as England, which may be said to exclude no one for faults not of his making, so long as its liberal pre-requisites are observed.

I have taken the liberty to publish Commander Scott's letter, and thank him for the same, though this time I cannot altogether follow his views. We generally, however, are one in Masonry, and always one in heart.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
W. J. HUGHAN.

[We print these letters, but, for several reasons, we wish the discussion now to close, and will publish no more on the subject.—Ed.]

Dear Bro. Hughan,—

This is a very interesting subject to all Freemasons, and no doubt many various opinions exist. As for the late Bro. Dunckerly, it appears by the many accounts of this esteemed Mason that he was a Freemason, and delivered addresses to various lodges before he was acquainted with the secret of his paternity, which he made known to the captain of his ship shortly afterwards, and asked his advice, &c., thereon.

In Ireland the bar sinister has always been looked upon as a defect. I am well aware there is no Grand Lodge of Ireland law on the subject, but it is considered to be included in the ancient charges, and a landmark, I may say, of the Order.

All the old Masons I have ever met in this country declared they could not be even present at the making or raising of an illegitimate person. Bro. J. O. Andrews, of 154 and 513, I.C., is quite correct as to the views held in this country, and I may also add that in 1804 there were ninety-two lodges in Tyrone, and two lodges, viz., 710, Sandholls, and 806, Rock (or Zermom), did receive illegitimates, and that all such persons desirous of becoming Masons were admitted in these lodges, and afterwards were received as visitors in other lodges.

I had a conference with several very intelligent Masons about this question. We believe that free born means of honest parentage, not born of fornication, and that the words in the Gospel of St. Matthew iii., 7, "generation of vipers," and St. John, viii., 41, "born of fornication," applies to this subject. We dedicate in Ireland our lodges to the holy saint St. John, and, of course, are deeply interested in our patron saint's Gospels. I am of the same opinion as my brethren that this is a defect which can be removed by a dispensation from the Grand Master, but it would be a cruel act to make an honest and upright man, as a candidate, apply for such. I know you can show affidavits of candidates' parents being lawfully married early in this century; this was chiefly owing to Presbyterian marriages not being registered, and I really do not condemn our ancient brethren being so particular, as it tended towards morality.

I fear I have trespassed on your time unduly, and with most fraternal feelings towards all brethren who may differ from

Yours fraternally,

THE ORDERS OF ARCHITECTURE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Bro. "J. C." desires an authoritative opinion to appear in the Freemason as to how the three orders of architecture are to be appropriated, and I have pleasure in responding thereto by referring him and those interested to the Book of Constitutions, pp. 133-4 (edit. 1873), as follows, re order of procession.

The Corinthian light:
The column of the Junior G. Warden.
The Doric light:
The column of the Senior G. Warden.
The Ionic light:
The Pro G.M. and M.W.G.M., &c.

It is quite clear therefore that the Grand Lodge appropriates the Corinthian, Doric, and Ionic orders respectively to the Junior and Senior Wardens and the Master, and so that is a sufficient authority for all lodges so to do.

I have the authority of our well known and respected brother Thomas Fenn, P.G.D., &c., for stating that it is also the practice in the famous "Emulation Lodge of Improvement," and that such also was the opinion of the revered Bro. Stephen Barton Wilson is evident from an examination of the Tracing Boards painted under his superintendence, the Corinthian, Doric, and Ionic columns having thereon statues of H.A.B., H.K.T., and S.K.I. respectively.

Bro. Kenneth R. 'H. Mackenzie follows the same views in the "Royal Cyclopædia," and so does Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, M.A., in the "Masonic Cyclopædia" (proofs of which as to this matter I have in my possession), and in the magnum opus of Dr. A. G. Mackay (the "Encyclopædia of Freemasonry") a like order is observed. These three Masonic encyclopedists write accordingly as follows:—

Ionic.....East.....Wisdom.....Master.....S.K.I.
Doric .....West ...Strength...Senior Warden...H.K.T.
Corinthian ...South ...Beauty ...Junior Warden...H.A.B.

The reasons for so doing I may refer to at another time.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
WM. JAMES HUGHAN, P.G.D.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The position of the candlesticks is clearly laid down in the Book of Constitutions (small edition, 1873, pp. 133-4), where the Corinthian light is to be borne before the J.W., the Doric before the S.W., and the Ionic before the W.M. I venture to suggest to many inquirers in your columns a careful perusal of that book before writing to you.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
EMULATION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A short time ago I was in the same perplexity as your correspondent, "J. C.," with reference to the proper assignment of the three columns in a Craft lodge, and found as much uncertainty among the P.M.'s I referred to for information as he appears to have done.

An enquiry, addressed to our worthy Grand Secretary, however, set the matter at rest. He informed me that the W.M.'s column is the Ionic, the S.W.'s the Doric, and the J.W.'s the Corinthian.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

L.V.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

For the information of "J. C.," I beg to state that the columns of W.M., S.W., and J.W., should respectively be Corinthian, Doric, and Ionic—types of wisdom, strength, and beauty; which qualities again were those contributed to Solomon's Temple respectively by the three holders of those chairs, K.S., H.K. of T., and H.A.B.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

W. T.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Can any American brother inform us what the Grand Lodge of Missouri (La Grande Loge constituée en 1865 sous le titre de Grand Loge de l'Etat du Missouri), is, and what the Grand Lodge of Ohio (La Grande Loge constituée en date du 27 Decembre, 1829, sous le titre de Grande Loge de l'Etat de l'Ohio), pretends to be?

Are these the regular Grand Lodges of these two states, and have they ever been recognised by the Grand Orient of France before? See page 81, Bulletin du Grand Orient, Mars et Avril, 1877.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

QUERIST.

FREEMASONRY IN THE LAW COURTS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Let me call attention to the following extract from the Tailer of June 16:—

"A secret society, which claims jurisdiction over its own members to the exclusion of the courts of law, and which has its claims admitted by the judges in the land, is a curious anomaly, and its judicial cognizance should horrify and scandalise all who cannot hear of a theory without pushing it to extreme conclusions. What would have happened had Mr. Justice Field been unaware, as he might well have been, that a case lately before him was 'eminently' for the jurisdiction of the Masonic Grand Master? And what will happen if the Grand Master persists in refusing jurisdiction? And is a Masonic plaintiff debarred from suing in the Supreme Court if he appears before a judge instructed in Masonry, but not otherwise? The subject is as fertile in such questions as the historic battles for jurisdiction between the courts civil and the courts ecclesiastical."

Yours fraternally,

L.V.

THE STRUGGLE IN FRANCE.

We re-publish from the Monde Maçonnique for June the following extracts from a most interesting letter which appears therein, and which we think well to allude to in a leading article:—

The letter is from Bro. Léon Clerc to Bro. Hubert, Editor of the Chaine D'Union.

Nos agréables rapports dans le passé, autant que l'amiable accueil que vous me fîtes lors de mon dernier voyage à Paris, me rendent facile l'exécution de ma promesse, celle de vous tenir au courant de l'effet que pourrait produire en ce pays les discussions des Loges Françaises tendant à la suppression du paragraphe 2, art. 1er de la Constitution du Gr. Or.

Depuis mon retour, j'ai visité la loge Royal Jubilee, No 72, Or. de Londres, Thomas Hines, Vén. J'ai de plus conversé avec un grand nombre de Frères de diverses autres Loges, et je ne suis que l'écho de tous en vous affirmant que, si pareille suppression a lieu, le résultat pour la Maçonnerie Française sera des plus déplorables dans la Grande-Bretagne.

Ces FF. m'assurent qu'alors aucun Maçon Français ne sera admis comme Visiteur dans les Loges de l'Obéissance Anglaise. Vous savez que la Grande Loge Unie d'Angleterre compte plus de 1500 Ateliers, sans parler des Grandes Loges d'Irlande et d'Ecosse; et il n'y a pas à douter que celles-ci suivront l'exemple de leurs sœurs. L'Amérique, les colonies Anglaises, toutes imbuës des idées de la mère-patrie, même langue, mêmes croyances, mêmes mœurs, les imiteront aussi. Il faut ne pas connaître la race Anglo-Saxonne pour avoir des hésitations sur ce chef, et je n'ai pas passé plus de vingt années dans son sein pour ignorer ses tendances.

Que deviendra alors l'universalité de la Francmaçonnerie, si celle prêchée par le Gr. Orient de France est ainsi rejetée, stigmatisée par la moitié du globe?

Et serait-il vrai que là sont les aspirations de la Francmaçonnerie Française! Elle, qui ne date que d'un siècle et demi, prétend, par un vote, vouloir briser une croyance aussi vieille que le monde et qui vivra autant que notre globe, simplement parce qu'elle est vraie, naturelle, nécessaire.

Pardonnez-moi cette réflexion, mais une pareille prétention m'a l'air d'une gaminerie. C'est l'enfant disant à son père d'un ton mutin: Eh bien! non, tu n'es pas mon père.

Loin de moi le désir de vouloir enlever à la Maçonnerie aucun des fleurons de sa couronne, particulièrement la science qu'elle a pu acquérir et puis disséminer.

Je voudrais bien avoir le temps d'établir un parallèle entre la Maçonnerie Anglaise et la Maçonnerie Française, tel que ces regrettables débats me le font envisager; toutefois je ne peux pas m'empêcher d'affirmer que celle-ci méconnaît, sur son propre terrain, sa mission.

L'avenir du Grand-Orient de France repose dans le maintien, pour toujours et sans hésitation, de ce grand principe reconnu par lui dans sa Constitution et que l'on prétend aujourd'hui effacer.

Est-ce que nos FF. Anglais s'occupent de religion ou même de politique? L'une et l'autre sont impitoyablement exclues de leurs travaux; et comment pourrait-il en être autrement, si l'on veut, si l'on doit pratiquer cette première des vertus Maçonniques, à savoir le respect de toutes les croyances?

Et cependant, Maçonniquement parlant, ces Frères Anglais datent leur existence avant la nôtre; ils sont infiniment plus nombreux, plus répandus sur le globe, plus puissants à plus d'un titre, j'ajouterais même généralement plus respectés. Leur but, c'est de prêcher l'amour de l'humanité, de la soulager, de s'entre-aider partout où ils se rencontrent. Ils invoquent à tous pas le nom du Gr. Arch. de l'Un., et leur poétique rituel est puisé dans les codes moralistes de tous les temps, de toutes les religions, sans cependant s'occuper de dogmes.

Croyez-moi, cher Fr. Hubert, c'est un vent de souffre qui passe en ce moment sur la Maçonnerie Française, et je vois avec bonheur que vous cherchez à le détourner. S'il ne peut être conjuré, vous verrez bientôt des scissions sans fin dans l'Orde, qui, dès lors, aura perdu son universalité qui fait sa force.

Est-ce à dire qu'en Maçonnerie nous dussions avoir bientôt autant de nuances qu'en politique, et la France présenterait-elle, dans l'une comme dans l'autre, ce triste spectacle de divisions qui parmi les nations amies excite déjà, en politique du moins, leur sincère pitié! Non, il ne faut pas que cette mesure passe.

CONSECRATION OF THE CRUSADERS' LODGE (No. 1677).

The consecration of this lodge took place on Wednesday, June 13th, at St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, in the presence of a large assemblage of influential Masons. The presiding officer was Bro. James Terry, who went through the ceremony of the consecration in a most able manner, assisted by Bro. James Hill, as S.W., and Bro. Henry Marsh, as J.W. For some time past the necessity for a new lodge in this locality had been strongly felt, and several members of the Craft, dwelling on their avocations in Clerkenwell, made their determination to supply the requisite demand. Bros. Dr. W. J. Hunter and Thomas Goode were, we believe, the first instigators of this movement, and they were soon joined by Bros. Jarvis Maples, J. G. Defriez, J. W. Simmonds, A. J. Millward, F. Rothschild, R. C. Davis, J. S. Knight, W. C. Gay, and others, who became the founders of the lodge; and their efforts have been crowned with signal success. Very shortly after the Grand Lodge was petitioned the warrant was granted by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of all the Masons of England, and in due time and form the lodge was launched into existence amidst the good wishes and goodwill of Masons representing a large number of lodges. Among the visitors present were Bros. H. Field, 1602; W. H. Hooper, P.M. 435; R. D. Cummings, 704; R. W. Mountstevens, 27; J. Hill, W.M. 228; C. H. Miller, P.M. 907; R. H. Marsh, P.M. 1196; G. E. Fairchild, 1196; S. S. Bacca, 1196; W. J. Randall, 228; J. Woodman, 228; J. Tovell, 1489; D. Posener, W.M. 185; W. Rest, 1288; E. Wits, P.M. 144; C. Pinkston, 205; A. Mulford, 1288; A. H. Hickman, A.D.C. 228; J. Ward Verry, P.M. 554; H. Paine, 228; J. Newton, P.M. 174; T. Lawler, jun., 1297; R. Griggs, P.M. 228; J. Freeman, 1288; J. Means, 1107; C. Koester, P.M. 435; R. Snare, S.W. 228; J. E. Crump, 1223; G. C. Baker, 228; J. Walker, 27; S. Price, P.M. 1288; T. B. Payne, P.M. 27; Dr. H. Franklin, 228; J. Kew, P.M. 179; S. Rolly, 1602; and others. The brethren formed in procession, entered the lodge room at 4.30, and the Presiding Officer having taken the chair and appointed the Wardens pro tem., the lodge was opened in the Three Degrees.

Bro. Terry (consecrator) then addressed the brethren at some length, explaining the principles upon which Freemasonry is based, and dilating upon the duties incumbent upon Freemasons and their relations towards one another. He dwelt at some length upon the objects and aim of Freemasonry—that it is a peculiar system of morality, and that none but free, honest, and upright men should belong to it. One great end of Freemasonry has in view is to assist in charities, thereby reducing the sum of human suffering. Obedience to the laws of the land, wherever Masons might dwell, and reverence for the Great Architect of the Universe, were also principles that Freemasonry taught.

The remarks of the Presiding Officer were attentively listened to, and Bro. Terry resumed his seat amidst general approbation.

The Invocation having been given, the lodge board was uncovered, and the Master and Wardens pro tem. carried the elements of consecration three times round the lodge, to the solemn music of the Old Hundredth. The Master took the censer three times round the lodge, the brethren chanting "When once of old in Israel." On arriving at the east the Consecrating Officer strewed corn, the emblem of plenty, and solemnly dedicated the lodge in ancient form to Masonry, the brethren responding musically "Glory be to God on high." During the second circuit the brethren sang "When there a shrine to Him above," the Consecrating Officer in the east pouring wine, the emblem of joy and happiness, and solemnly dedicating the lodge to Virtue. During the third circuit the brethren sang "And we have come, fraternal bands," and the Consecrating Officer poured oil, the emblem of unity, and solemnly dedicated the lodge to Universal Benevolence, the brethren responding "Glory be to God on high."

The dedication prayer over, the brethren sang a vesper hymn, "Guide me, O Thou Great Jehovah." The Presiding Officer then constituted the lodge, which was resumed in the Second Degree.

The installation of the W.M., Bro. Jarvis Maples, P.M. 144, then followed.

The W.M. proceeded to the appointment of his officers, selecting Bros. J. W. Simmonds as S.W.; W. J. Hunter, J.W.; Thomas Goode, S.D.; F. Rothschild, J.D.; R. C. Davis, I.G.; J. S. Knight, D.C.; A. J. Millward, W.S.; and J. G. Defriez, Secretary.

In the absence of Bro. Simmonds, who was unavoidably away at sea, Bro. J. Piggott acted as S.W. pro tem.

The W.M. proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Terry and his assistants, which was seconded by the J.W., and was carried unanimously.

Bro. Terry was then unanimously elected an honorary member of the Crusaders' Lodge.

The lodge was then closed in the usual way, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet, prepared by Bro. W. C. Gay, which was served in the great hall of the old and venerable building. The menu was a very extensive one, embellished with appropriate quotations from Shakespeare.

When the cloth was removed the usual loyal toasts were proposed, which were received with musical honours.

"The Health of the W.M." was proposed by Bro. Terry, acting as I.P.M., in very felicitous terms, to which the W.M. replied, saying that he felt the honour conferred upon him by the members of the Crusaders' Lodge in electing him to the chair of King Solomon, and that he would strain every effort to serve the lodge faithfully, and sustain, during his year of office, the honour and prestige of Freemasonry.

The toast of "The Consecrating Officer" was then proposed by the W.M., to which Bro. Terry suitably replied.

The toast of "The Visitors" then followed, coupled with the name of Bro. Marsh, who took occasion to say on behalf of himself and his brother visitors how delighted they all were at the very kind and generous hospitality they had all received, and he ventured to say that the Crusaders would show themselves worthy of the fame and reputation of Freemasonry, by being careful in their selection of candidates.

The toast of "The Officers" followed, each officer appropriately replying.

The toast of the Tyler brought to a close a very interesting, and in all respects a remarkable gathering of brethren.

In the course of the evening Bro. Marsh recited, in the style of a veteran, the "Charge of the Six Hundred," and Bro. Fairchild gave "My Pipe," in excellent spirit. The music was under the direction of Bros. Miller and Millward, the latter singing "Come into the Garden, Maud" and "The Thorn" very ably and with great expression.

WOOLWICH.—Union Waterloo Lodge (No. 13).—After a year of almost unprecedented success, Bro. F. G. Pownall, on Wednesday, the 13th inst., presided over the above lodge for the last time during his present term of office as W.M., and a large muster of both the members and friends of the lodge, and its esteemed Master, assembled to do honour to the occasion, among them being Bros. Butt, W.M. 700; W. Weston, W.M. 1536; W. T. Vincent, W.M. 913; R. Croisdale, P.M. 706 and 1536; A. Penfold, P.M. 913; J. McDougall, P.M. 913; G. Spinks, W.M. elect of 1536; J. D. Hayes, J.W. 913; R. Beaver, 700; J. W. Farr, 1536; D. Deves, 1536; H. Green, 1076; Halloman, 1536; J. Donnelly, 706; H. Pryce, 913; W. Sallenger, 913; W. Cobb, 700; and C. Jolly (Freemason), 913. The officers of the lodge present beside the W.M. were C. Young, P.M.; C. F. Hills, P.M.; G. Davies, P.M.; G. W. Reed, S.W.; J. P. Moore, J.W.; J. Henderson, Treasurer and P.M.; H. Syer, Secretary; T. Hutton, S.D.; N. Brown, J.D.; S. Norman, Tyler; Bro. G. H. Masters acted as I.G. in the absence of Bro. Reilly through ill health. The lodge having been duly opened, Messrs. A. H. Hiscock and Leon C. Chasteauf were, after approval, admitted into Masonry, and Bros. Girdlestone, Debraclair, Sonas, and Deans were raised to the Sublime Degree by the W.M. in the most impressive manner. The election of W.M. for the ensuing year then took place, and Bro. Reed, S.W., was unanimously elected to that office. Bro. Henderson, who has held the office for 21 years, was again elected Treasurer, and Bro. B. Norman was re-elected Tyler. Auditors were chosen, and then Bro. Osmond proposed, and it was unanimously resolved, that a P.M. jewel of the value of ten guineas should be presented to Bro. Pownall, as a token of the esteem in which he is held, and as a recognition of his valuable services to the lodge while in the chair. Some lodge business was then transacted, and it was closed in due form. Upon re-assembling for refreshments, the W.M. gave the loyal and Masonic toasts usual upon such occasions; and then Bro. P.M. Young proposed "The Health of the W.M.," drawing attention to the manner in which he had carried out the arduous work in the lodge that evening. There could, he felt sure, be only one feeling among them, and that was, respect and admiration for their esteemed W. Master, and he asked them to drink his health. Bro. Pownall in reply, after thanking Bro. Young, said that he could not help feeling a sentiment of regret at leaving the chair, wherein he had the privilege of presiding over a lodge whose members had ever evinced towards him such continual and gratifying help, kindness, and courtesy; but the time had arrived for him to transfer its honour and its responsibilities into the hands of one who was worthy of it, and deserved it. For the last time he thanked them for that toast, but the good feeling that has ever moved them to do honour to it in his person would long be treasured as a remembrance worthy of being associated with the proudest and dearest souvenirs of his life. In taking a retrospective glance at the year just past, he would mention that death had been busy in their midst; they had lost one dear old brother, who had for forty years been a member of this lodge, Bro. Williams. They had lost Bro. Sales, who was a good brother and a good man. Bro. Richards, too, had been removed from among them, and another brother, whose name was not now before him, had as well gone from among them. Speaking generally of their financial and numerical position, he had, when he took office, a balance in hand of £50, and now, after many expenses that had occurred during the year, there was a balance in hand of £80. They had during that time thoroughly enjoyed themselves and the company of their visiting brethren round the social board, and above all, they had not neglected that divine principle of charity, that was the bright particular star of their noble Order. He wished before leaving the chair to thank his officers for their constant care and assistance to him in carrying out the duties of the lodge, his Wardens, Deacons, and Guards. He would personally thank Bro. Harding, their Organist, for the valuable assistance he had rendered to the lodge; and as for their esteemed Secretary and Treasurer he could not find words sufficiently to thank them. He felt that he had the good wishes of every brother with him, and it was gratifying to him to find so much unanimity existing among them. Every meeting had been a good one, and every one felt that it was their duty to sustain untarnished and unspotted the reputation earned for the lodge in its earliest days; and now that he was placing his trust into another one's hands, he felt that he had their good wishes, and that the universal kindness shown him would still be his in the honourable, but yet he hoped useful, retirement that always fell to the occupants of such an office as that he was now leaving. "The Initiates" were toasted, and returned thanks. "The Visitors" was the next, and in putting it the W.M. said he knew no better illustration of the good feeling shown to a lodge than by the number and position of its visitors. It improved their working, it made and cemented friendships. It brought the brethren together in unity, and he individually had to thank Masonic visits for some of his dearest and most prized friendships. Bro. Butt, W.M., replied for the Nelson Lodge, No. 700, and took the opportunity to thank the W.M. and brethren of the Union Waterloo for many kindnesses received, and wished the W.M. elect success in emulating the deeds of his predecessor. Bro. Croisdale replied for the Florence Nightingale Lodge, No. 706, and eulogised the good work and genial hospitality of the lodge, and wished them continued prosperity. Bro. Vincent, W.M., replied for the Pattison Lodge, No. 913, and congratulated them upon the number of visitors; it was always a good sign, more particularly when among them were comprised so many of the principal officers of the district. He congratulated them upon their prosperity; it was the oldest lodge out of London, and they were proud of it, and of its life and energy. He congratulated the lodge upon its W.M., and spoke of the wonderful amount of work done by him in the many offices he filled both in and outside Masonry. Bro. Pownall would soon hold a distinguished position in the Province, for Lord Holmesdale, G.M. of the Province of Kent, had determined at the next Grand Provincial meeting, in July next, to invest him with the purple. Bro. Weston, W.M., responded for the United Military, No. 1536, and spoke of the good feeling that existed between the two lodges, which he trusted would strengthen as time went by. He wished their W.M. long life to enjoy the honours he had so well and worthily earned. Bro. McDougall as well replied, and then "The Health of the W.M. elect" was given, and responded to, and after the health of the officers had been honoured, the W.M. proposed in glowing terms "The Health of Bro. C. Jolly," for the true, full, and faithful reports of their proceedings in the organ of the Craft, the Freemason. Bro. Jolly briefly responded, saying that Bro. Kenning had made the Freemason worthy of its high reputation all over the civilised world. Many a brother Mason in far away lands read, no doubt with pride and pleasure, how the work was progressing at home, and thanked his Freemason for many a happy reminiscence. He trusted they would all support it, and concluded by thanking the W.M. and them all for many kindnesses received during the past year. The Tyler's toast then concluded the business of the evening.

MIDDLETON.—Imperial George Lodge (No. 78).—In consequence of the regular lodge night falling on Thursday, May 24th (Whitsun week), the meeting was postponed until the following Thursday, May 31st. The brethren having assembled at that date at the Asheton Arms, the lodge was opened in due form by Bro. George Bradbury, W.M. The minutes of the last regular meeting, after being read by Bro. John Hatton, Sec., received confirmation. Bro. Reed was raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. by Bro. George Bradbury, W.M. The traditional history was given to Bros. Beresford, Brunt, Valentine, Hewitt, Hooper, and Reed, by Bro. John Wood, P.M., Prov. G.A.D. of C. The lodge was then lowered to the First Degree in due form, and "Hearty Good Wishes" were accorded from the Prov. Grand Lodge of East Lancashire, from Lodges 1588, 993, 230, and 29, Dilage America. Two candidates were proposed for initiation. The subject of the Callender Memorial Fund was brought before the brethren by Bro. John Wood, P.M., P.G.A.D.C., who made an earnest appeal on its behalf. The W.M. also commended the subject to their favourable consideration, and it is pleasing to state that nearly every brother has subscribed to the fund, and that a good donation may be expected by the Prov. Grand Lodge for this excellent object. Charity was next attended to, and the lodge being duly closed, the brethren adjourned to the social board. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, that of "The Prov. Grand Officers" being warmly received, owing to the presence for the first time of Bro. Albert L. Dickens, P.M., P.J.G.W., and Bro. John Wood, P.G.A.D.C., in the insignia of their respective offices. Both brethren made capital speeches in responding to the toast. Some excellent harmony enlivened the proceedings, and a very agreeable evening was spent to the satisfaction of all the brethren.

IPSWICH.—British Union Lodge (No. 114).—The summer festival of this old lodge, better known as the "Feast of Roses," was celebrated on Thursday, June 21st, when there were present Bros. the Rev. J. B. Tweed, W.M.; T. J. Burton, I.P.M.; the Rev. H. Miller, S.W.; H. C. Casley, J.W.; G. S. Elleston, S.D.; C. Schullen, Treasurer; W. Spalding, Secretary; W. Clark, D.C.; and Past Masters Bros. Peter de Lande Long, S.G. D. England; Dr. Alfred Meadows, P.G.S. England; W. Bobey, A. J. Barber, Phillip Cornell, also Bros. Dr. W. A. Elleston, Dr. J. E. Taylor, F. H. Fodick, S. Wright, C. J. Meadows, W. Fraser, jun., S. Wright, and H. Ribbans.

Visitors: E. P. Youell, W.M. 1631; N. Tracy, P.M. 376; Dr. J. H. Sladden, P.M. 376; G. J. Paine, A.P.G.D.C. 1008; and Bros. E. T. Reed, 376; S. R. Anness, 376; George Abbott, 959; C. Cook, 959; and others. After the usual lodge business the Tracing Boards in the First and Second Degrees were admirably given by Bro. P. M. Barber, and Bro. C. H. Casley, J.W., respectively. A discussion then followed as to the future prospects of the Masonic Hall at Ipswich, which unfortunately is not quite paying its way. The lodge was then closed and the brethren retired to a well served banquet; the general Masonic toasts being given in the usual felicitous style of the W.M. and ably responded to. In returning thanks for the Past and Present Grand Officers Bro. P. de Lande Long thanked the brethren of his lodge for their congratulations upon his recent appointment as S.G.D. Bro. Youell also responded most ably for the visitors, always an important toast at these meetings; and Bro. W. Roby, in responding to the toast of "The Great Masonic Charities," made a powerful and urgent appeal to the Suffolk brethren to enlarge their subscriptions still further. He thanked them most heartily for what they had already done, and reminded them that so long as they continued to bring forward candidates, so long must they keep continually increasing their subscriptions, and he trusted that they would never forget what were the three grand principles of Freemasonry—brotherly love, relief, and truth. Bros. Clark, Cornell, Miller, and Abbott contributed much to the harmony of the evening. It should be added that the room was profusely decorated with roses and exotic plants from the gardens and conservatories of the brethren, and a splendid bank of ferns, embedded in moss, intermixed with the queen of flowers, gave a most pleasing finish to the upper end of the room. This was arranged with great taste by Mr. Godbold, a young Ipswich florist, under the superintendence of Bro. P.M. Cornell, and will not soon be forgotten. After the Tyler's toast "be brethren separated, much pleased with the "Feast of Roses,"

CROYDON.—Frederick Lodge of Unity (No. 452).—The installation meeting of this celebrated lodge was held on Tuesday evening, at the Greyhound, under the presidency of Bro. J. W. Sugg, W.M. The lodge was numerously attended, the following brethren being present:—Bros. J. Robins, M. Ohren, C. W. Dommett, W. Sugg, C. Pawley, A. J. Dickinson, J. W. Sugg, W. S. Masterman, G. Wright, A. T. Jeffery, C. H. Edmands, E. H. Sugg, F. A. Manning, C. M. Ohren, F. Cassell, G. Robins, J. Methven, J. C. F. W. Rogers, D. W. Sugg, E. S. Pugh, C. G. Scott, and the following visitors:—Bros. Ball, E. Spooner, C. S. Jekyll, Morgan, T. Hunter, Leaper, and H. Massey (Freemason). Bros. Astyanax Brattle and Wm. G. Hunter were passed; Mr. Wise was initiated; and Bro. Batchelor was elected a joining member. Afterwards the W.M. installed Bro. Arthur T. Jeffery as W.M., performing the ceremony in both a fluent and impressive style. The brethren appointed and invested as officers were George Wright, S.W.; C. H. Edmands, J.W.; James Robins, Treasurer; Magnus Ohren, Secretary; Charles Pawley, S.D.; Sugg, J.D. and Organist; J. Walter Sugg, the P.M., D.C.; F. A. Manning, I.G.; George Robins and J. C. F. W. Rogers, Stewards; and C. F. Speight, Tyler. The I.P.M. then delivered the addresses and was much applauded at the conclusion of the ceremony. Bro. Magnus Ohren proposed; and Bro. James Robins seconded, a motion for the presentation of a P.M.'s jewel to Bro. J. W. Sugg, both brethren observing that never was a P.M.'s jewel more deserved. Bro. Masterman, P.M., in supporting the motion, added that he entirely concurred in this observation. A handsome jewel was then presented to Bro. Sugg, the W.M. accompanying the presentation with the remark that what had just been said by Bros. Ohren, Robins, and Masterman was entirely in accordance with his own feelings. Bro. Sugg, in acknowledging the gift, said the kindness with which he had been received by the brethren, particularly in the year during which he had acted as Master of the lodge, had been such that this jewel, valuable as it might be in his eyes, could not add to his estimation of the brethren's kindness, and he should ever wear the jewel as a memento of the happiness he had had in the lodge, of the brethren's appreciation of any Masonic service he had performed, and as a stimulus to persevere in the path he had hitherto pursued. It was not so much the possession of the jewel that gratified him, though that was no small thing, but it was the consciousness he had that the brethren's appreciation of what he had done to promote the interests of the lodge had induced them to bestow on him this jewel. Though he was conscious of many shortcomings in what he had done, the knowledge that the brethren fully recognised the motives that stimulated him in discharging his duties would cause him to wear his jewel at all times without a blush, and it would always give him unlimited satisfaction. (Laughter and applause.) On the motion of Bro. Magnus Ohren, seconded by Bro. James Robins, five guineas were voted to the testimonial to Bro. Greenwood, Provincial Grand Secretary for Surrey; and Bro. Ohren announced that the next Provincial Grand Lodge would be held at Farnham, at two o'clock, on Tuesday, the 10th July. Bro. Francis having retired from the office of D.C. of the lodge, a vote of thanks was accorded to him for his past services, and he was elected an honorary member. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet, which was elegantly provided by the proprietor of the Greyhound. At the conclusion of the banquet, as the time was running short, the W.M. proposed the toasts very briefly. Bro. Magnus Ohren, in responding for "The Provincial Grand Master for Surrey, and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers," said it was a great pleasure to the Provincial Grand Officers in attending the Provincial Grand Lodge to see how well and worthily the position of Provincial Grand Master was carried out. As one of the Provincial Grand Officers, he (Bro. Ohren) had had to attend the Provincial Grand Master in connection with the business of lodges in various parts of the province, and he had been very well pleased to see the way in which the business was conducted. There were many cases in which the Provincial Grand Master had to decide questions, and from his own experience he was able to say that the Provincial Grand Master had decided in all cases in a most conscientious spirit. He had shown himself a true man of business. When the Provincial Grand Master presided last year at the Provincial Grand Lodge he told the brethren, whom he appointed, that there were so many claims before him for office, that he trusted every officer appointed would be satisfied with the position he was placed in, and would consider it one of distinction. He could not make all the brethren Wardens or all Deacons, but whatever office a brother held it was one of distinction. This was quite true. Now this expression showed what the heart of the Provincial Grand Master was—that he did all he could to meet the wishes of the brethren; and he followed up his observations by appointing his own son to one of the lowest offices. The Frederick Lodge of Unity had been very successful in providing officers to the province, and the brethren of the lodge were very proud of the attention they had received from the Prov. G.M. The W.M. then gave "The Health of the Initiative," and hoped that the light that had dawned on him that evening would be a benefit to him. If the initiate followed up the tenets of Freemasonry, he would find it would make him a far better man. Bro. Wise responded. He came among the brethren as a stranger, but his feeling in this respect had been considerably modified by the kind way in which he had been received by the brethren. He felt that he could not add any new lustre to such an old institution as Freemasonry, but at all events he would hope that by his conduct he might not dim the lustre which the Order had. The W.M. then proposed "The Visitors," and Bro. F. Spooner replied. Bro. J. W. Sugg proposed "The W.M.," and complimented him on the way in which he had commenced his year of office. The W.M. in reply said he should do the best he could in doing what he had been placed in the chair of the lodge to do. But he had a very difficult task to perform when he followed such a W.M. as Bro. Sugg had proved himself to be. The W.M. proposed "The Installing Master," to which toast Bro. Sugg replied. The toast of "The Officers of the Lodge" followed, and the S.W. having replied, the brethren separated. The evening was a most successful one, and was enlivened by some charming singing by Bros. Magnus Ohren, Charles Ohren, and several other brethren.

WORKINGTON.—Sun and Sector Lodge (No. 962).—The festival of St. John the Baptist was celebrated by this lodge, on Wednesday, the 20th inst. The brethren assembled at their rooms, in Portland-square, Workington, shortly after three o'clock, there being present the following members of Sun and Sector Lodge—Bro. P. de E. Collin, W.M., P.P.G. Purst, being unavoidably absent through an important business engagement;—Bros. J. Wood, S.W., and W.M. elect; R. Thomas, J.W.; G. Brooker, P.M., Treasurer, P.P.G. Purst; G. Kirkwood, Secretary; G. B. McMullin, S.D.; Rowland Hill, jun., J.D.; D. Reece, Steward; W. B. Gibson, P.M., P.P.G. Sec.; G. T. Archibald, P.M.; R. Scott, Tyler; together with about a dozen others. Visitors also attended from Lodges 119 and 872, Whitehaven; 371, Maryport; 1002, Cocker-mouth; and 1400, Harrington. Bro. Gibson presided as Installing Officer, and performed the principal duties of the day, assisted by the following Board of Installed Masters—Bros. G. W. Kenworthy, P.M. 119, P.P.G. J.W.; Brooker, P.M. 962; Archibald, P.M. 962; W. B. Cowman, W.M. 872; T. Dixon, W.M. 1400; W. Alsop, W.M. 119; T. Carley, W.M. 371; T. Mandie, P.M. 371; J. Young, P.M. 1400; and W. F. Lamsonby, P.M. 1002. (Freemason). The following official appointments were made:—Bros. Collin, P.M.; Kirkwood, S.W.; McMullin, J.W.; Brooker, Treas.; Troing, Sec.; Bill, S.D.; J. Trohear, J.D.; D. Reece, I.G.; W. Williams, Organist; T. Williams, Steward; and R. Scott, Tyler. Before the lodge was closed the Treasurer produced the statement of accounts, which disclosed a most satisfactory state of affairs, inasmuch as upwards of £40 was disbursed in charity during the past twelve months, and this notwithstanding that the annual subscription is somewhat lower than most lodges in the Province. Subsequently all were entertained to banquet at the Green Dragon Hotel, Bro. J. Wood, W.M., presiding. Sun and Sector Lodge, as its number will suggest, is comparatively young, but we may add that the lodge, as at present existing, is but the revival of one of the same name that flourished in Workington more than half a century ago, and then having decayed, remained dormant for many years, up to its resuscitation in 1863. At present there are in use a few interesting souvenirs of old times, in the shape of the original bible, columns, &c., of the old lodge, which, if we remember rightly, were quite unexpectedly unearthed from the dust of obscurity of years, when the new charter was applied for. King Iron has of late years worked wonders in the dissemination of our Craft throughout West Cumberland, notably in Workington.

SHEERNESS.—De Shurland Lodge (No. 1089).—At an adjourned meeting of this lodge, on Wednesday, the 13th day of June, A.L. 5877, for the installation of Bro. Penney, the W.M. elect. There were present Bros. Bourne, W.M. (who was Installing Master); Penney, S.W.; Clarkson, J.W.; Pannell, Sec.; Isaac, S.D.; Saffery, J.D.; Johnson, I.G.; Parsons, Tyler. Bro. Bourne said before proceeding with the installation of his successor, the W.M. elect, he had a very pleasant duty to perform, which was to present Bro. W. Pannell, P.M., P.P.G. S.W., with a memento of the good feeling and respect and the high appreciation felt by the whole of the brethren of his zeal and assiduity as Secretary of the lodge during the years 1875, 1876, and 1877. Nothing could give him more satisfaction than to present Bro. Pannell with this splendid timepiece which the lodge had unanimously voted to their esteemed brother. Bro. Pannell, in reply, said he thanked the W.M. and brethren most sincerely for their very handsome present, which would be handed down as a heirloom to his family. It afforded him a great amount of pleasure to know that his humble endeavours to promote the prosperity of the De Shurland Lodge had met with their approval, more especially as they appeared to consider it deserved to be recognised in such a tangible form as the presentation of that handsome timepiece. He should look back with pride on that day, and when he looked on their present it would cause him to use, if possible, still greater exertions on their behalf. He knew that they would give him credit for sincerity when he stated that from the first moment the lodge was consecrated he felt a great and increasing interest in its prosperity, and as long as he was a member should continue to do so. One word he should like to say, in conclusion, which was, that this kindness to one of their officers would act as an incentive to all their future officers, that in carrying out their duties to the best of their ability it would be fully appreciated by the whole of the brethren of their lodge. The W.M. elect was then installed in the chair of K.S. by Bro. Bourne according to ancient custom. The W.M. Bro. Penney, then selected and invested the following officers:—Bros. Clarkson, S.W.; Isaac, J.W.; Hancock, Treas.; Pannell, Sec.; Tomkins, M.C.; Saffery, S.D.; Johnson, J.D.; Smith, I.G.; Highley, Steward; Redman, Stewart; Parsons, Tyler. The W.M. informed the brethren that the first duty he was called on to perform was an exceedingly agreeable one, and he trusted all the duties he would have to carry out would be equally pleasant—it was to present Bro. Bourne, the retiring W.M., with a gold Past Master's jewel. He was fully aware the brethren knew of his many excellent qualities, by which he had endeared himself to them all, and also in accepting the position of their Master for two years in succession by their unanimous wish, for which they owed him a debt of gratitude. He would not take up any more of their time. Addressing Bro. Bourne, he said, he had great pleasure, on behalf of himself and the members of the lodge, in presenting him with a Past Master's jewel, and hoped the Great Architect of the Universe would spare him for many years, to wear it on his breast. Bro. Bourne thanked the W.M. and brethren most sincerely for their handsome present, and particularly for the kind expression of feeling which accompanied the gift. He could assure them he should highly prize it, more especially as the W.M. had stated that it was by the unanimous wish of the brethren. He should be at all times ready to do all in his power to promote the prosperity of the De Shurland Lodge. It was proposed by Bro. McDonald, and seconded by Bro. Hancock, that a vote of thanks be given to Bro. Bourne for the able manner in which he had carried out the duties of Installing Master, which was carried unanimously. Proposed by Bro. McDonald, seconded by Bro. Regg, that a vote of thanks be given to Bro. Penney, W.M., for the efficient manner in which he had invested his officers, which was carried unanimously. The lodge was closed at 4.45 p.m. The brethren to the number of fifty retired to the Fountain Hotel, where they sat down to a banquet prepared for them by Bro. Howe in his usual very excellent manner. The visitors, before retiring, expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the kind manner with which they had been received and entertained and never remembered being so kindly treated before at any installation. After spending a very happy evening the brethren retired at 10.30 p.m.

WARRINGTON.—Gilbert Greenall Lodge (No. 1250).—The installation of the W.M. elect and ninth anniversary banquet of the above lodge was held on Tuesday, the 12th June, at the Masonic Rooms. The W.M., Bro. Charles Crosier, occupied the chair, and was supported by the following brethren: Bros. W. Richardson, I.P.M.; John Armstrong, S.W. and W.M. elect; Thos. Auckland, J.W.; J. H. Galloway, S.D.; S. Wallhead, J.D.; T. Sutton, Treas.; D. W. Finney, P.M., Sec.; R.W. Bro. Sir Gilbert Greenall, Bart., M.P., P.G. S.W. England, P.P.S.G.W. West Lancashire; Bros. W. S. Hawkins, P.M.; R. Bierley, P.M.; W. Woods, P.M.; John Harding, P.M.; W. Pollitt, P.M.; A. Potter, John Jones, J. Baird, W. Kinsey, G. Cropper, J. Farrington, J. Curry, J. Hannah, Dr. W. P. Wood, H. Foggy, J. Knight, J. R. Jones, A. W. Brundrett, G. Mackey, W. Dean, R. Heaton, W. Taylor, W. W. Tavarack, and the following visiting brethren: Bros. W. Sharp, P.M. 148, P.J.G.W. of West Lancashire; H. S. Alpass, Prov. G. Sec. West Lancashire; J. Bowes, P.M. 148, P.J.G.W. Cumberland and Westmorland; F. Derry, P.M. 482, P.P.J.G.W. Staffordshire; J. Parkington, 944; T. Tunstall, W.M. 148; T. Jones, 241; J. Pickthall, S.W. 148; J. Kenworth, 1565. The lodge having been opened in due form, the minutes of the previous meeting, and of two emergency meetings were read and confirmed; the lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and the usual preliminaries having gone through, all brethren below the chair retired. A Board of Installed Masters was then formed, and Bro. John Armstrong was, according to ancient custom, installed into the chair of K.S., as W.M. for the ensuing year, the ceremony being most ably performed by Bro. Crosier. In due course the other brethren were admitted, and the new W.M. having been proclaimed, greeted, and saluted in the Third Degree, the appointment and investiture of officers then took place as follows:—Bro. Charles Crosier I.P.M.; Thos. Auckland, E.W.; Thos. H. Sutton, J.W.; John H. Galloway, Treas.; David W. Finney (P.M.), Secretary and Director of Ceremonies; S. Wallhead, S.D.; John Knight, J.D.; George Cropper, Organist; James

Hannah, I.G.; and Thomas Donville, Tyler. The W.M. on investing his officers made some appropriate remarks to each, and in the case of Bro. Hannah said that he had particular pleasure in appointing that brother to the office of I.G., Bro. Hannah having from the commencement of the lodge satisfactorily acted as its Tyler, of which the brethren had testified their approval by the presentation of a handsome gold watch, and he (the Worshipful Master) had no doubt Bro. Hannah would discharge his duties in such a manner as to do credit to his new appointment. The remainder of the installation ceremony was then completed. The numerous Prov. Officers and P.M.'s. present expressed themselves highly pleased with the very able and impressive manner in which Bro. Crosier rendered, without assistance, the installation ceremony, more especially as it was the first occasion on which he had been called upon to act in the capacity of Installing Master; in fact he performed the ceremony, as he has done all the ceremonies during his year of office, admirably. R.W. Bro. Sir Gilbert Greenall, Bart., M.P., P.G.S.W., England, P.P.G.S.W. West Lancashire, &c., then addressed the lodge and said:—Bro. Armstrong and brethren, it affords me singular gratification to be with you this day, as notwithstanding my intimate connection with this lodge, circumstances which I could not control, have been such as to prevent my attendance as often as I could wish. It was my desire to have been present when Bro. Crosier was installed, but pressing Parliamentary business prevented me leaving London. On this occasion, however, I determined that nothing short of something very urgent should keep me away. You all know the deep interest I take in this lodge, and it certainly has afforded me considerable satisfaction to-day to witness the admirable manner in which the lodge is conducted, and to find that you have amongst yourselves such members as Bro. Crosier, who has just rendered the ceremony of Installation in such an impressive manner. Although unable to be with you personally I have been kept well informed of all your proceedings, and I have especial pleasure in congratulating Bro. Crosier on the able and efficient manner in which he has discharged his duties as W.M. of this lodge during the past year. Of the estimation in which we all hold Bro. Crosier I have in my hand at this moment strong proof, in the shape of this beautiful and costly gold P.M.'s jewel with which it is my pleasant duty to present him to-day on behalf of the members of this lodge. In doing so, Bro. Crosier, I can truly say that it affords me much pleasure to be the means of conveying this testimonial to you. I am sure it has been well deserved, and I trust that you may live long in happiness to wear it. (Applause from the brethren). Bro. Crosier, in reply, said: I must ask your kind forbearance on this occasion, as I do not feel equal to the task of thanking you in the way I ought to do on receiving this handsome testimonial at your hands. But first allow me, Bro. Sir Gilbert Greenall, to express my obligation to you for the kind and feeling terms in which you have been good enough to speak of me and of my services to the lodge. Such an expression of feeling, coming from one whose name the lodge bears, and who holds such a distinguished position in Masonry, is not only gratifying to me personally, but I am sure will be equally acceptable to all the brethren of our lodge. It is a matter of rejoicing to us all that you are here to-day in our midst, and I sincerely trust that what you have seen of the lodge and its working will be proof to you that we are progressing. W. Sir, I thank you very much for your kindness in making the presentation to me. And now, brethren, I have to tender you my sincere and heartfelt thanks for the very handsome and costly jewel which has just been presented to me on your behalf. I need not say how much I shall value such a gift, and I trust that whenever I put it on it will remind me of a pleasant but busy year of office, and of the many acts of kindness I have received from the individual members of the lodge. I promised on being installed that I would use my utmost efforts to promote the best interests of the lodge. I have tried to do so, and it is certainly very gratifying to receive this beautiful jewel from you, as it is evidence that what I have done has met with your approbation. Our lodge, I am glad to say, is prosperous, both as to members and financially, and I shall always look back with pleasure to the work in the lodge during my year of office, no less than seven brethren having been initiated. And now, brethren, before concluding, I wish to take this opportunity to tender my best thanks to my officers for the efficient services they have rendered me during my term of office, and for the kindness and support I have received from one and all of the brethren on every occasion. Without making any invidious distinction, there is one officer to whom I am particularly indebted, viz., Bro. D. W. Finney, P.M., who, as the Secretary of this lodge, is, as you are aware, of necessity more closely connected with the Master than any other officer. In Bro. Finney I have had a Secretary of the most able kind, one who thoroughly understood his work, and has performed it in a manner deserving of the highest praise. His duties, as you all know, do not terminate at the close of the lodge, and his general attention has been such that I have been entirely relieved from all anxiety respecting the conduct of the business of the lodge, and it affords me sincere pleasure to be able thus to record my testimony of Bro. Finney's untiring efforts as Secretary of this lodge. Brethren, allow me once more to thank you one and all for your great kindness, for the handsome jewel, and for the grant of £10 10s. to constitute me a life member of one of the London Masonic Charities. The P.M.'s jewel given to Bro. Crosier is the most costly one ever presented in Warrington. It is enriched with a valuable diamond, &c., and was specially made to order. The inscription is—Presented to Bro. Charles Crosier,

P.M., by the members of the Gilbert Greenall Lodge, No. 1250, Warrington, in recognition of valuable services rendered to the lodge during his year of office. 12th June, 1877." In addition to the foregoing presentation the brethren of the lodge voted the sum of £10 10s. to constitute Bro. Crosier a Life Governor of one of the London Masonic charities, and they are also about to present Mrs. Crosier (the daughter of Bro. George Bacon, the Sec. now and for many years past of Witham Lodge, Lincoln, No. 297) with a magnificent diamond ring. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Lion Hotel. The banquet was provided by Bro. Thomas Jones, of Lodge of Lights, No. 148, Warrington, and gave universal satisfaction; it embraced everything in season, and was of a bountiful description. The cloth having been withdrawn the W.M. gave briefly the usual loyal toasts, after which he gave that of H.R.H. Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., Lord Carnarvon, M.W. Pro G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, R.W. Deputy G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers, coupling with the toast the name of Bro. Sir Gilbert Greenall, Bart., M.P., P.G.S.W., &c., which was most enthusiastically received. Bro. Sharpe, P.G. J.W., and Bro. Alpas, P.G., Secretary, responded for the P.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale and other officers of West Lancashire, and Bro. Bowes, P.G.J.W., of Cumberland and Westmoreland and Bro. Derry, P.P.G. J.W. of Staffordshire, for the Grand Officers of the adjoining provinces. Bro. Alpas in his reply reviewed the position of Freemasonry generally in West Lancashire, and gave some valuable hints enjoining precaution in the admission of candidates, and amongst other things congratulated Bro. Crosier as the retiring W.M. on the manner in which he had kept down the lodge expenses for refreshments during his year of office. The next toast, that of "The Health of Bro. John Armstrong, W.M.," was then proposed by Bro. Crosier, who said I rise to propose the next toast which is the toast of the evening, viz., "Bro. Armstrong, W.M.," and I am sorry that it has not fallen to the lot of some more able brother to do it. First, Bro. Armstrong, I must congratulate you on your appointment as W.M. of this lodge, I do this with greater pleasure because I appointed you as my S.W., and we have worked together very cordially and harmoniously. This fact, brethren, has brought me into close contact with Bro. Armstrong, and I do not hesitate to say that he will discharge his duties in not only an efficient manner, but in such a way as to reflect the highest credit on himself and the lodge over which he presides. We are most of us aware that in other branches of science, Bro. Armstrong has excelled, and I have no doubt in his career as Master he will fully sustain his previous reputation. Moreover Bro. Armstrong is an enthusiastic Mason and this I think will be a strong guarantee that everything he undertakes will be done well. I feel certain that he has the best interests of the lodge at heart and that under his rule we shall go on and prosper, and I trust, become one of the best working lodges in the Province. There was one circumstance about Bro. Armstrong's election particularly gratifying—it was perfectly unanimous, and I think this is not merely proof of the admiration in which he was held by the brethren, but clearly shows what perfect harmony and unanimity prevail in the lodge—that we are all united and are pulling together. Bro. Armstrong, I once more congratulate you on your appointment to the chair of the Gilbert Greenall Lodge, and I call upon you, brethren, most heartily to drink success to him during his year of office. (Loud cheers). Bro. Armstrong, in responding, said: It is a subject of great gratification to myself that I should this day occupy the proud position of W.M. of the Gilbert Greenall Lodge. I have not been a Mason four years, but have certainly taken more than an ordinary interest in Masonry since seeing the light; this I attribute in a great measure to the very impressive manner in which my initiation ceremony was performed by Bro. Nossop, a P.M. of Lodge 1250, and the very able manner in which the Second and Third Degrees were rendered by Bro. Sharp, now G.J.W. of West Lancashire. From the first I became a working Mason, endeavouring to do the duties of every office whether acting as substitute or otherwise, to the satisfaction of the W.M. for the time being, and to this only can I account for my rapid rise and first appointment by Bro. Brierley, P.M. I am proud to be surrounded this day by so many brethren of rank and distinction, and feel it as a great compliment. I trust to have as successful a year of office as Bro. Crosier has had, but hardly hope to do the duties of the chair so successfully as Bro. Crosier; I will endeavour, however, to the best of my ability, to instil into every candidate for initiation the tenets and principles of Freemasonry. I am quite sure that all who obey the laws and act up to the teachings of the Craft, will have performed their allotted task while it is yet day, and all such may safely look forward with a firm but humble confidence to the day when this transitory life shall have passed away, for they will surely meet again in that Grand Lodge above, where the Great Architect of the Universe lives and reigns for ever. (Cheers). Bro. D. W. Finney then proposed the health of Bro. Crosier as Installing Master, and in the course of an able speech testified to the very able manner in which the Installation ceremony had been performed, and highly complimented Bro. Crosier upon the tact and business abilities which he had displayed in all the lodge concerns. Bro. Crosier in reply assured the brethren that although no longer Master of the lodge, he should always have its interests at heart, and it would always be a pleasure to him to do anything tending to its benefit. The remaining toasts included that of the W.M. and officers of the Lodge of Lights, No. 148, responded to by Bro. Tunstall, W.M., and Fickel, S.W.; "The Masonic Charities," proposed by Bro. Bowes; "The Visiting Brethren" responded to by Bros. Morris and Milner. The W.M. called upon the Tyler to propose the last toast about 10 o'clock, after which the brethren separated in perfect harmony.

HAMPTON.—Lebanon Lodge (No. 1326).—On Saturday, 16th inst., at the Red Lion, Hampton, the regular meeting was held. Bro. E. Gilbert, W.M., in an able and efficient manner raised Bros. W. Priddy and S. initiated W. Butler, J. Maxwell, and W. Kay. The elections were unanimous in favour of Bro. C. W. Fox, S.W., being W.M.; S. Wickens, P.M., Treasurer, re-elected for the fifth time; J. Gilbert, P.G.T., Middlesex, re-elected Tyler for the eighth time. Bros. H. Gloster, W. Stanton and W. R. Varsila were elected Auditors, in addition to those provided by the bye-laws. The usual seven guinea Past Masters' jewel, on the motion of Bro. F. Walters, P. G.J.D., Middlesex, P.M., was unanimously voted to Bro. E. Gilbert, W.M., for his efficient services rendered to the lodge. Ten guineas were voted from the lodge funds to the Boys' School, and several gentlemen were proposed for initiation. The lodge was closed, and adjourned to Saturday, July 21st, to meet at 2 o'clock. After business came the banquet, which was well and efficiently served. The usual loyal toasts were given and responded to. The visitors were:—Bros. E. Beckwith, 1423; Scott, 1656; T. Ockden, 1512; H. T. Murphy, 1512, &c. There were present besides those mentioned:—Bros. J. Hammond, P.M., S.D.; J. C. Woodrows, P.M., Asst. Sec.; J. W. Baldwin, P.A.G.P., Middlesex, P.M., I.G.; J. T. Moss, P. P.G.R., Middlesex, P.M.; W. Hammond, P.G.D., Middlesex, P.M., and several others.

LIVERPOOL.—Stanley Lodge (No. 1325).—The annual installation meeting of the members of this lodge was held on Tuesday afternoon, the 19th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool. This was the first meeting of the members here, as the lodge was formerly held at the Masonic Hall, Kirkdale, situated at the north end of Liverpool, and the change of place was thought necessary in consequence of being more convenient for the majority of the brethren. The installation of the W.M. was thought a fitting inauguration of the new meeting place, and there was a large gathering of members and visitors to celebrate the "house heating." Bro. F. Knight, W.M., presided at the opening of the business, and he was supported by Bros. H. Ashmore, P.M.; Crosby, Leighton, P.M., D.C.; J. W. Burgess, S.W.; J. H. Bradshaw, J.W., C. Winkill, Sec.; T. Foulkes, S.D., R. B. Burgess, I.G.; H. Robertson, S.; M. Williamson, Tyler. The members of the Stanley Lodge present were Bros. T. Henderson, G. Argyle, P. M. Campbell, A. W. Theastone, A. Samuels, P. J. Rose, S. Gordon, W. Bell, S. Hill, T. Wiseman, J. Falkingham, H. Tibbs, H. Hughes, J. Holmes, J. P. Bragan, J. Threlfall, R. P. Quick, J. Peakman, J. Ashton, and M. Cain. The list of visitors included Bros. H. S. Alpas, P.G.Sec.; J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; J. Salmon, P.G.J.W. North Wales and Shropshire; J. P. Platt, P.P.G.J.W., Cheshire; Dr. J. K. Smith, P.P.G., Registrar; J. B. Lambert, P.P.G.D.C.; the Rev. H. G. Vernon, P.P.G.C. West Lancashire and Cheshire; J. Baxendale, P.P.G.S. of W.; J. Pemberton, P.G.S. of W.; W. Jones, P.M. 220; W. Matthews, W.M., 721; J. Smith, 1035; J. Houlding, S. W. 823; W. Wilson, W.M. 823; W. Cotrell, P.M. 823; T. Roberts, W.M. 673; H. Borrows, S.W. 673; J. Williams, 240; T. Gray, 1276; W. Townshend, 876; R. Kenney, 203; J. M. Coop, 1325; T. Hatton, 203; J. P. Gamble, 1264; G. Wynn, 673; J. T. Callow, P.M., 673; W. R. Roese, 673; H. Williams, P.M., 1264; T. J. Walker, 1208; P. S. Johnson, 1356; G. E. Hanmer, P.M. 1086; G. Morgan, P.M. 1035; W. T. Bromley, 1393; W. Humphries, 1473; C. Birch, 203; F. Barquet, 249; T. Johnson, 823; J. Hayes, P.M. 249, and others. After the Worshipful Master had opened the lodge and the minutes of previous meeting had been read, the chair was taken by Bro. Henry Ashmore, P.M., who proceeded to install Bro. James Whittaker Burgess as the W.M. for the coming year, a ceremony which he performed in a highly efficient and impressive manner. After a Board of Installed Masters had been formed, and the brethren had saluted in the usual manner, the following officers were invested:—Bros. F. Knight, I.P.M.; J. H. Bradshaw, S.W.; C. Winkill, J.W.; H. Ashmore, P.M., Treas.; T. Foulkes, Sec.; R. B. Burgess, S.D.; N. Robertson, J.D.; S. Hill, I.G.; C. Leighton, P.M., D.C.; A. Samuels, S.S.; J. Peakman, J.S.; J. P. Bryan, hon. Org.; and M. Williamson, Tyler. At the close of the business the brethren adjourned to banquet, which was served by Bro. Ball. The ordinary loyal and Masonic toasts were cordially given and enthusiastically responded to. The toast of "Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M. of England, R.W.P.G.M. W.L.," was coupled with the name of Bro. Baxendale, P.P.G.S. of W., who spoke in the highest terms of his lordship as a nobleman, a neighbour, a landlord, and a Mason. He was no superficial Mason, but had a more intimate knowledge of it than many would expect. "The Provincial Grand Officers, Past and Present," was responded to by Bro. H. S. Alpas, P.G. Sec., who spoke in eulogistic terms of the praiseworthy efforts which had been made to bring the Stanley Lodge to its present prosperous condition. He stated that it afforded him great pleasure to see that these efforts had been successful, and wished the W.M. a prosperous year of office. Other toasts, including "The Worshipful Master," were heartily responded to. A very interesting portion of the evening's proceedings was the presentation of a handsome Past Master's jewel to Bro. Knight, I.P.M., on behalf of the members of the Stanley Lodge. A number of songs and recitations were given by various members, the accompaniments being furnished by Bro. Skeaf, P.G.O., and Bro. J. P. Bryan, honorary Organist.

WOODSTOCK.—Marlborough Lodge (No. 1399).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Monday the 18th inst., at the King's Arms Hotel, Woodstock. Nearly every lodge in the province was represented, and amongst the visitors were Bros. R. Bird, P.M. 537, D. Prov. G.M. Oxon; H. A. Pickard, P.M. 357; J. Potts, P.M. 599; J. Galpin, P.M. 1515, P.P.G. S.W. Oxon; J. Pratt, W.M. 340; Starnor, P.G. Org. Lincolnshire; W. Baglestone, 1515, P.P.G.S.B. Oxon (Mayor of Oxford); C. Park, P.M. 340. The officers present were Bros. H. Williams, W.M.; W. A. Reynolds, S.W.; J. Long, J.W.; E. Prescott, acting S.D.; J. S. Palmer, acting J.D.; and H. O. Crane, I.G. After the minutes of the previous meeting were confirmed, Bros. Butler and Dorrell were raised to the Third Degree, the ceremony being performed by Bro. P.M. Brown in his usual impressive and solemn manner. Bro. W. A. Reynolds was then introduced to the W.M. elect, and was duly installed into the chair of K.S. by the Installing Master. On the re-admission of the brethren the usual honours were offered to the newly installed W.M., the ceremony being performed by Bro. P.M. Brown, the manner in which the orations, &c., were delivered being the theme of universal admiration. The following were then nominated as the officers for the present year:—Bros. Prescott, S.W.; Crane, J.W.; Palmer, S.D.; Boon, J.D.; Williams, Treas.; Brown, Sec.; Salter, I.G.; Bayliss, Tyler; Butler and Debron, D.C.; Spackman, Org.; Tibbetts and Calcutt, Stewards. Previous to the closing of the lodge a Past Master's jewel was presented to Bro. Williams, the presentation being entrusted, by desire of the W.M., to Bro. Brown, who expressed his satisfaction in conferring upon him the jewel he had so well earned, for during his year of office the lodge had continued to prosper, and its working reflected the greatest credit upon him. Bro. Williams, in suitable terms, expressed his thanks. The banquet which followed the business of the lodge was served by Bro. Haynes in his usual admirable style. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been given and duly honoured, the W.M. proposed "The Provincial, Grand Lodge, and the Health of H.R.H. Prince Leopold P.G.M.," remarking that it was a great honour to the Province of Oxford to have a member of the Royal Family as its Grand Master. The name of the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Bird, having been coupled with the toast, he expressed his sincere thanks at the manner in which the Prov. Grand Lodge and its Royal Master had been received. He complimented the lodge on the proficient manner in which that day's work had been executed, and referred to the difficulty experienced in recommending to His Royal Highness officers to serve in the Prov. Grand Lodge. That position was attained only by a strict attention to the working of the lodge, and amongst so many brothers who were wont to become good Masons and attend officially to their duties, they could readily understand the difficulty he experienced in making a selection. Those who were disappointed at the last meeting he hoped would not give in, but would readily and willingly press forward and make themselves the more competent to occupy such a position of honour on some future occasion. It was a source of great satisfaction to the Craft to notice the interest His Royal Highness exhibited in Freemasonry, and particularly in his own province; for only the last time he had the honour of conversing with the Prince, he intimated his intention of being present, should circumstances permit, at the opening of the proposed new lodge. "The Health of the W.M." was then proposed by the D.P. G.M., and responded to by Bro. Reynolds, who expressed the gratification he felt in being placed in the honourable and proud position of W.M. It would be his utmost endeavour to maintain the reputation of the Marlborough Lodge during his year of office, and he hoped the officers he had chosen to assist him would, by their united efforts, work with that harmonious spirit which was the secret of all success. The toast of the visitors was next given, and responded to by Bro. Galpin, P.M. of the Bertie Lodge. In responding to the toast of the Past Masters, Bro. Pickard, of the Apollo University Lodge, said he was sorry and glad to be present—sorry because he had not before made the acquaintance of the Marlborough Lodge, and glad that he had taken this opportunity of doing so. When a brother visited a lodge he liked to see good work, and he must say he had seen good work that afternoon to his heart's content; in fact, during the whole of his twenty-five years' Masonic experience he had never seen it done better. "The Sister Lodges" was responded to by Bro. Pratt, W.M. Alfred Lodge; and the toast of "The Officers" by the S.W. Several other complimentary toasts were given and duly acknowledged. The Tyler's toast brought the pleasures of the evening to a conclusion. The glees, part-songs, &c., delightfully rendered by Bros. Crane, Hallowell, Meadley, and Wentworth, were greatly admired and appreciated.

CHISELHURST.—Chiselhurst Lodge (No. 1531).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Black Bull, Chiselhurst, on Saturday, and was well attended. The proceedings commenced at half-past two, and there were present Bros. Guest, W.M.; Kipps, S.W. (W.M. elect); Gloster, J.W.; Coutts, P.M., Treas.; Griffin, Secretary; Mason, S.D.; Hutchings, I.G.; Fox, D.C.; Hunt, W.S.; and Rawles, Tyler; also the following members:—Bros. Dowsett, West, Goldsmith, Hooker, Masters, Drinkwater, Russell (P.M. 299 and P.P.G. Asst. D.C. Kent), Babenna, Seager, Williams, Haybow, Dana, Nunn, Hollis, Griffiths (P.M. 901), Wain, and E. Kipps, and the following visitors:—Bros. C. Nash, H. Roberts, and J. Shaw, P.M.'s of 79; Macdonald, I.P.M. 1158; Wills, W.M. 299; Spreight, W.M. 147; Ireton, S.W. 1348; Bell, S.D. 79; Croft, 1326; Good, 871; and Skipton. The lodge was opened in the First Degree and the minutes of the last regular lodge and emergency meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, when Bros. Humphrey and Drinkwater were raised to the Sublime Degree. The report of the audit committee was then presented and proved to be a very satisfactory document, there being a substantial balance in hand. It was stated that during the year there had been four initiations and two members had joined, and that the lodge, which is only two years old, has no less than 84 subscribing members and 7 honorary members, the latter including the Prov. G.M., and Deputy Prov. G.M. Bro. Kippis was then presented by Bro. Griffin as the W.M. elect, and was afterwards installed in the chair of K.S. according to ancient custom and fully saluted, the imposing ceremony being very ably performed by the retiring W.M., Bro. Guest. The W.M. then proceeded to appoint and invest his officers as follows: Bros. Guest, I.P.M.; Gloster, S.W.; Mason, J.W.; Coutts, P.M.; Treasurer; W. O. Goldsmith, Secretary; Griffin, S.D.; Hutchings, J.D.; Fox, I.G.; Hunt, D.C.; E. Kippis, W.S. and Grant, Tyler. A very beautiful Past Master's jewel, with the addition of a collar and jewel attached, were presented by the W.M. to Bro. P.M. Guest on his retiring from the chair, as a mark of the respect in which he was held by the lodge and as a recognition of his valuable services. Several alterations were then made in the bye-laws with the view of making the lodge a summer gathering, and the regular meetings were fixed for the fourth Saturday in March, May, June, and September. The initiation fee was raised to seven guineas, and the joining fee to three guineas. It should be stated that letters were read from the Prov. G.M. and the Deputy Prov. G.M., stating their inability to be present. The business being over the lodge was closed in due form and the brethren re-assembled at the banquet table, the arrangements for which were admirably conducted by Bro. Wain. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and Bro. Russell, in responding for the Prov. Grand Officers, Past and Present, regretted that they did not attend the Chiselmurst Lodge more frequently, as it was admitted throughout the province to be one of the best. He congratulated the lodge upon the rapid progress which had been made and upon the large balance they had in hand for so young a lodge. He had been connected with a lodge for fourteen years, and it had taken them twelve years to realise the balance which the Chiselmurst brethren could boast of. He pointed out that it was sixteen years ago that Lord Holmesdale was installed as Prov. G.M., and at that time there were only fourteen lodges in the district, but now they boasted of forty-three, and warrants were being applied for right and left. His lordship however watched very carefully the matter, and warrants were only issued to those in whose hands they could safely be entrusted. "The Health of the W.M." was proposed by Bro. Guest, I.P.M.—who believed that the W.M. would be one of the best Masters who ever filled a chair, and wished him a year of prosperity. The W.M. in response hoped he should discharge his duties to the satisfaction of the lodge, so that they might say at the end of the year "He has done his work well." "The Past Masters," "The Visitors," "The Masonic Charities," and "The Officers" were the next toasts, and were suitably responded to. The proceedings, which were of a very enjoyable character, concluded with the Tyler's toast.

INSTRUCTION.

JORDAN LODGE (No. 201).—Bro. Albert Marvin presided at the annual meeting on Tuesday last, at the Devonshire Arms, Devonshire-street, supported by Bros. Ockenden, S.W. and Sec.; Errington, J.W.; Hiscox, J.D. and Treas.; Fox, I.G.; D. O. Wood, acting P.M., and other brethren. The lodge was opened in the First Degree, and the minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed, it was then opened in the Second and Third Degrees and closed down to the First. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed by the W.M., and the first two sections worked by Bro. Wood, assisted by the brethren. A hearty vote of thanks was given to Bro. Marvin and recorded on the minutes, for the very efficient manner in which he had performed the ceremony, particular credit being due to him, as he was only admitted into Masonry in March last. Bro. Ockenden was elected W.M. for the ensuing week. The supper announced for the 26th inst. has been postponed.

YARMOUTH.—Friendly Chapter (No. 100).—The annual meeting and installation of officers of this flourishing chapter took place on the 18th of June, the ceremony being performed by our veteran companion H. J. Mason, P.Z., who installed and invested the following companions:—Jas. Bond, M.E.Z.; Bonfellow, H.; Martin, J.; A. Hanlon, E. and Treas.; Wright, N.; Hubbard, P.S.; Fowler and Hammond, A.S.; and Rolfe, Organist. Comps. Wrightson, Stratherne, and P. Glover were ballotted for and accepted as joining members. Bros. G. H. Cooper, W.M. 71; J. Tennant, Rev. H. J. Bode, G. F. Crane, John J. Harvey, and A. D. Stone, jun., were exalted, each of the newly appointed Officers doing his own work, and in a highly creditable manner, seldom equalled and never excelled by older hands. Among the other companions present were Comps. Chipperfield, P.Z.; Franklin, P.Z.; J. F. Maybank, Captain Dods, Fisk, Swan, Owles, Stanier, and others. The companions then adjourned to the Crown and Anchor Hotel, where a very sumptuous banquet awaited them, served in Comp. Franklin's well known style, after which a most enjoyable convivial hour was spent.

BARNSTABLE.—Chapter of Loyalty and Virtue (No. 251).—A quarterly meeting of this old and flourishing chapter was held on Wednesday last, at the Masonic Hall. The chapter was opened by Comps. Wm. Britton, Z., John Terrell Shapland, H., and J. Hancock, as J. The following companions were also present:—J. Brewer, S.E.; Wm. Boyle, S.N.; W. J. List, Treas.; W. Young, P.S.; A. Herbert, A.S.; J. Wadham, H. J.

Hancock, and others. The minutes of the previous chapter meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. John Gaydon, of Lodge 251, was balloted for, unanimously accepted, and duly exalted to this Sublime Degree in Freemasonry.

BEDFORD.—Stuart Chapter (No. 540).—The companions of this rising and favourite chapter met for a long period of labour on Wednesday evening, June 13th, when there were present Comps. Alderman John Richard Bull, J.P., P.M. 540, M.E.Z.; J. M. Cuthbert, P.M., J.; Colonel Stuart, W.M. 540, P.M., P.S.G.W., G.L. Eng., P.G.H., Supt. G. Chap., R.A. Eng., &c., and P.Z. 540, acting as H. (in room of Comp. Cookson, who had suddenly been taken unwell); Rev. J. Faussett Ward, Chaplain; Rev. William Tebbs, P.M. 285, J. 285, P.P. G.C. Somerset, &c, P.S.; Billson, P.M., 1st A.S.; Capt. Colburne, E.; Fisher, P.M., N.; together with Comps. of Chapter, Capt. Nash, Harris, Allan, Thody, and Lambie; and visiting Comps. R. Boughton-Smith, H. of Leicester Chapter, and an officer of the Prov. Grand Chapter of Leicestershire. After the minutes of the last chapter had been read and confirmed, the M.E.Z. proposed, and the J. seconded, and carried unanimously, that Comp. Tody be elected Organist of the chapter. Comp. Thody was then duly invested, and afterwards contributed materially by his excellent playing to the beauty and solemnity of the ritual. The next business was the balloting for three new members of the chapter, the result being, of course unanimous election. The candidates were Comps. Alderman Sergeant, P.M. and Treasurer of Stuart Lodge, 540, Bedford; W. Higgins, of St. John Baptist Lodge, 475, Luton; and Arthur Knox Lindsell, Lieut. 18th Beds. Light Infantry, of St. Andrew's Lodge, 803, Biggleswade. Bro. Higgins was unfortunately absent through illness, but Bros. Sergeant and Lindsell were duly presented and exalted, the ceremony being performed in the most impressive manner, evidencing not only the labour bestowed by the M.E.Z. and his Officers upon the work, but rendering evident the fact that labour is a labour of love. The committee appointed to frame bye-laws for the chapter then presented their report, which, on the notice of Comp. Stuart, P.Z., seconded by Comp. Nash, was unanimously adopted, and a most excellent set of rules thus passed into law. Our attention was drawn to the fact, and we mention it for the benefit of the many London companions who so frequently visit the chapter, that the Anniversary Convocation will for the future be deemed to be the one in March, and that the banquet will then take place. The chapter then proceeded to one of those graceful acts which reflect equal honour upon those who give and those who take the dignity; Comps. Barfield, P.Z., Mount Sinai, 19, on the proposition of the M.E.Z., and Col. Stuart, P.Z., and G. Reed, P.Z., Andrew, 833, and J. 19, on the motion of Comps. Cuthbert, J., and Rev. W. Tebbs, P.S., were unanimously elected Honorary Members of the Stuart Chapter, as a mark of appreciation of their numerous kind services to it. After this lengthened time of labour the brethren proceeded to refreshment, and during the toasts which followed a most feeling allusion was made to the sad accident which had deprived, at least for some time, the chapter of the services of their 2nd A.S. Comp. Robert Barry Stafford, and great commiseration was expressed for him in his consequent suffering. We must not omit to notice the gain that the chapter has made in the addition to it of Comp. Sargent, whose skilful use of a most excellent voice was fully appreciated by the companions at refreshment; other companions, too, enlivened the evening, which was a most enjoyable one.

TYWARDREATH.—Chapter of Unity (No. 1151).—The quarterly convocation of this chapter was held in the Masonic Hall, Tywardreath, on Tuesday, the 19th June. Present: Comps. Dr. Davis, M.E.Z.; W. Polkingborne, H.; Collwill, Scribe E.; T. G. Stephens, P.Z.; W. Tomkin, N. H. Lamb, W. Rowe, J. B. Williams, J. Wellington, J. Stephens, &c. Visitor: Comp. Emma Holmes, P.Z., St. Luke's Chapter, Ipswich. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, all the companions who had not passed the chair retired, and a Board of Installed Principals was formed when Comp. W. Polkingborne was installed as M.E.Z., W. Tomkin as H., and Capt. H. Collwill as J., Comp. Stephens performing the duty of Installing Principal. The companions having been readmitted and having given the customary salute, the rest of the officers were appointed and invested by the M.E.Z. as follows:—N. H. Lamb, Scribe E.; S. Trevel, Scribe N. (by proxy); F. B. Williams, Prin. Soj.; W. Rowe, Treas.; J. Wellington and T. Stephens, Asst. Sojs.; H. Elliott, Janitor. The retiring M.E.Z., Dr. Davis, briefly returned thanks to the companions for the way in which they had supported him in the chair during his year of office as First Principal. M. E. Comp. Polkingborne also briefly addressed the brethren, and the customary business of the chapter having been gone through, Dr. Davis proposed Comp. Emma Holmes as a joining member of this chapter, which was seconded by Comp. Stephens, who said he had read the proceedings in Grand Conclave of Knights Templar, and the part Comp. Holmes took therein, and he was sure he would be equally energetic and take the same interest in this chapter of the Royal Arch. There being no further business before the chapter, it was closed in due form and the companions departed.

Hayward, the lodge was closed in form. Subsequently the brethren were invited by Bro. Mandle, W.M., to partake of an elegant collation, and a couple of hours were harmoniously whiled away in toast, song, and sentiment.

Obituary.

BRO. LIEUT.-COL. PILSWORTH.

Freemasonry in Leeds has sustained a great loss in the death of our lamented Bro. Lieut.-Col. Pilsworth, Staff Officer of Pensioners, and P.M. of Philanthropic Lodge, Leeds, as well as P. Prov. G.W. of the Province of West Yorkshire. For Bro. Pilsworth was one of those Masons too few everywhere, who loved Masonry for what it was, what it taught, what it did. He did not seek its honours from any personal egotism, he did not value its advancement for any petty ideas of consequence or outward show; he was not so much a fluent talker, as an active doer, always ready for work, always glad to help, the first to come, the last to depart, a thoroughly zealous, honest, courteous, loyal, upright Freemason.

Few Masons have more steadily kept to his proper work than did Bro. Pilsworth, and into Masonry he brought with him the orderly and disciplined principles of that great profession of which he was not an undistinguished member. A good soldier, a good Mason, a good man, his name will long be held in affectionate remembrance by his surviving brethren of the Philanthropic, where for some time to come those who attend that famous old lodge, will sadly miss his genial presence, and his kindly smile, his unpretending discharge of every duty therein. They will be glad to think, with all who knew his merits, admire his virtues, and mourn his loss, that he has found the "rest that remaineth," that rest which many a brave English soldier has found before him, whether it be in a soldier's grave abroad or in a quiet cemetery at home.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERY OF MASONIC JEWELLERY.

At the Guildhall Police Court on Tuesday last, William Hurren, a cabinet maker, was charged with stealing rings and Masonic jewellery to a very large amount from Bro. Kenning's warehouses, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, Little Britain.—Mr. George Clarke prosecuted, and Mr. E. Pratt appeared for the prisoner. Mr. Clarke said that Bro. Kenning was a Masonic jeweller, and in his warehouse were numerous cases in which he exhibited his goods. The prisoner was employed by the manufacturer of those cases, and consequently was frequently in the warehouse. The doors of the cases shut with a spring, but were not locked. In consequence of Bro. Kenning missing some jewellery inquiries were made about it, and the result had been that most of the missing property had been traced to the possession of the prisoner. Bro. Henry Cox, foreman to Bro. Kenning, said that about a fortnight ago he missed some rings and jewellery. The prisoner had been in the habit of coming to the premises on and off for the last 18 months or two years. The cases were unlocked, and shut with a spring. Henry Webb, detective sergeant, said that he and Detective Trafford apprehended the prisoner on Monday afternoon, in Cow-cross. He told him the charge would be on suspicion of stealing a number of gold rings and a quantity of Masonic jewellery from Bro. Kenning's premises, within the last month, and pledging the same at a pawnbroker's in the Holloway-road. He said he knew nothing about it; he had not stolen any, neither had he pawned any. He took him to Snow-hill police-station, where he found on him a number of racing bills, a Masonic gold ring, and 3s. 7d. in money. Witness told him that he pawned a diamond ring on Saturday, and he replied that that was his own ring and had nothing to do with what he had pawned there besides. Bro. Kenning was taking stock, and he already found a large deficiency. Sir Andrew Lusk remanded the prisoner for further evidence.

We are requested to state that at the "St. Mary-lebone" and "La Tolerance" Lodge a of Instruction have respectively adjourned their meetings for the summer until the first Friday and the first Wednesday in September.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The seventy-ninth annual festival of this Institution was held on Wednesday evening at the Alexandra Palace, Wood-green, under the presidency of Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., Prov. G.M. Hants. and the Isle of Wight. The Chairman was supported on his right by Bro. Benet-Stanford, M.P.

Among the brethren present were:—Capt. Wordsworth, T. Cubitt, F. Adlard, S. Rosenthal, Hyde Pullen, William Rosbuck, Raynham W. Stewart, J. L. Thomas, Thomas Meggy, E. Middlemas, John Seax, Wm. Mann, E. Harris, J. G. Chancellor, H. C. Levander, F. Binckes, R. Wentworth Little, James Terry, J. B. Shackleton, A. W. Hume, J. Carter, H. Massey (Freemason), W. J. Crutch, S. B. Wilson, E. Moody, Jno. Mason, J. E. Curteis, T. W. Coffin, Rev. Watts, D. W. Pearse, C. E. Layton, W. Dodd, Dr. Morris, G. Phythian, A. Lucking, N. Greene, S. S. Partridge, &c.

The Chairman, in giving the toast of "The Queen," said—Loyalty is a plant of deep growth in English soil, and it has taken a firm hold of Englishmen's hearts. They have a conviction that under the mild constitutional sway of a Sovereign they enjoy more real liberty than falls to the lot of people under any form of government in any other part of the world. During a long reign her Majesty the Queen has by the manner in which she has discharged her high functions, endeared herself to the hearts of and lives of the whole of her subjects. I ask you to drink "The Health of the Queen, the Patroness of this Institution."

The Chairman, in proposing "The Health of the Prince of Wales," said—The Prince of Wales has no light duty to perform. Very important matters are entrusted to him, but he never fails, by the courtesy of his demeanour, to make a favourable impression when he is called upon to discharge a duty. That has ever been the case in England, and it was the case with him in India. He never fails, also, to support useful institutions, and to give up no small amount of his time that they may have the benefit of his presence and his liberality. Our allegiance, as Freemasons, is especially due to him as the Grand Master of our Order, and also as the President of our Institution. It is in connection with that I would ask you peculiarly to drink his health.

In submitting the toast of "The Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, &c.," the Chairman said—I naturally, brethren, take a great interest in the Masonic career of our Pro Grand Master, because I had the privilege a good many years ago of initiating him into Freemasonry; and I will only say that he has amply justified the expectations that were entertained of him. His well-known ability led us to imagine that he would do a good deal for Freemasonry, and he has not belied the expectations that were entertained of him. In his absence he can fully rely upon Lord Skelmersdale, the Deputy Grand Master, who, although he has a very large province, one, I may say, of stupendous dimensions, yet is never absent when the cause of Freemasonry demands his presence in London; and I am certain that he has inspired the fullest confidence in his zeal for Freemasonry. I will couple with this toast the name of a well-known Freemason, that of Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, who we have always seen with us for many a long year, and whom we hope to see for many a long year yet to come.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, in reply, said—I reply with great pleasure to the toast which has been drunk in honour of our second chief. He is a brother who deserves your praise and every honour you can bestow upon him. I am exceedingly proud to hear our Chairman say that he was the means of initiating him into our good Order. It must be a great source of pleasure to him, as well as to us, to have to congratulate him on having done so noble a deed. With respect to Lord Skelmersdale, we know that he also is a good officer. Among those officers we have our worthy Chairman, who is always doing something for Freemasonry. All the Grand Officers do the same. What I do as one of them is little; but I do it from a spirit of real love to Masonry, and to all those connected with it. I am proud to see its charities successful, and I am proud to see Bro. Binckes so successful with this Institution. He says he likes innovations when the innovations are good; and the innovation he has introduced in these festivals is good, because we all enjoy the presence of the ladies among us, to participate a little in Freemasonry, and enjoy themselves at the same table with us. It is a little pleasure for them to look forward to; they see what are the fruits of our Freemasonry, and that we are ready to stretch out our hands to give assistance to those who require it—to those to whom it is our duty to give the best help we can. The Grand Officers of England, for whom I am responding, are always proud to encourage every Masonic Institution, and to do everything that they can for the good of their fellow Masons, more especially the ladies.

Bro Benet-Stanford proposed "The Health of the Chairman." He said—I will promise to be as short as possible because I am certain on occasions of this sort we are all longing to get out into the open air. The toast which Bro. Binckes gave me to propose affords me as much pleasure to propose as I am sure it will you to accept, because it is the "Health and Long Life to our most excellent Chairman, Bro. Beach." I have had the pleasure of meeting my friend, Bro. Beach, for some few years, and I have had the pleasure and honour of knowing him in more than one avocation. I may say that in every one of those avocations he has done well. First, and foremost, I take this opportunity of saying that I have never heard an inauguration or installation at a lodge more beautifully done than it has been by my Bro. Beach. Secondly, as a brother member of Parliament, we are in perfect accord, because we both sit on the same side of the House; and I may mention also as a director of the line of railway on which I live, I always find my excellent friend, Bro. Beach, to be the most gentlemanly and courteous of English country gentlemen that we ever could wish to meet. When I saw that our excellent Bro. Beach was going to take the chair on this occasion I did not wait for him to ask me to come down to support him, as I told him I should come down whether he liked it or not. All I would add to these very few words is that it gives me the greatest possible pleasure to come here this afternoon to see this charming company and to support the gentleman who takes the leadership.

The Chairman, in reply, said: Accept my best and most sincere thanks for the kind manner in which you have drunk my health, I assure you it gives me very great pleasure to be here this day, and to see so many gathered together to support this charity. If I may say a few words about myself, I will give you an account of what occurred to me soon after I was first initiated into Freemasonry. The W.M. of my lodge, the Apollo University, Oxford, enquired one day who would serve as a Steward for the Masonic Boys' Institution, and I, a neophyte, said to my nearest neighbour, "What is the Boys' Institution?" He was enabled to inform me, and I instantly sprang to my feet and said, "I will serve as Steward." It was from that I saw then, from being convinced that the Boys' Institution was a most noble one, that I first made a resolve in my own mind to do a little if I really possibly could for the interests of an Order which gave birth to such a magnificent Institution as this, and from that moment I have never relaxed in the interest I have taken in Freemasonry and in those noble Institutions which do credit to the Order. I will not detain you longer about myself, but I will proceed to propose a toast which comes home to all our minds and hearts this day, and I would ask you to give me your attention for a few minutes, and I hope I shall not unduly trespass upon you. This Institution is one now of considerable date, but it has increased considerably by means of the liberality of the Freemasons. In the year 1857 the boys educated in this school were only seventy, there are now 180, and you may judge that it has been no light expense to increase the resources of the Institution in proportion to that number. But there has been some complaints that the cost of education in the school has been too great. You have the figures before you, and therefore I will not advert at any length to the statistics, but there is one fact to which I will direct your attention. The cost of the boys per head in the year 1866 was £47 16s. 4d., and in 1876 it was £43 18s. 10½d., and during that time there has been a considerable increase in the price of provisions. So I think you will agree with me in saying that there has been no undue extravagance on the part of the managers. The boys in that Institution receive a most excellent education. It is not of one kind only; it is not an education that would only fit them for one pursuit in life; but it enables boys, if they show capacity, to fill one situation, and if they have not so much, to fill another. There is a classical and a commercial education; and in both they receive a sound and solid one; and from the honours they have taken in the University local examinations, I think we may congratulate the master and the managers upon the result of their education (cheers). Throughout the world there are many buildings magnificent in their design and in their proportion, many of which are devoted to the purpose of Freemasonry; but none of them possess such intrinsic excellence as our establishment at Wood Green, because there we carry out the principles which in our lodges we endeavour to inculcate. It may happen to any one who is sitting amongst us, whose hand we have grasped, with whom we have interchanged many a greeting here, to be stricken down, through no fault of his own, by the hand of distress; and it is something that when the dark hour of misfortune shall arrive he should be enabled to look with confidence to the sympathy of his brethren and rely on them for support. It is that reliance for support on the sympathy of his brethren which forms an indivisible tie amongst Freemasons. Long may it continue; long may we show ourselves worthy of the principles which we profess, in the future as we have done in the past. I trust that this Institution may long flourish. I commend it to your liberality; as it has been largely exercised in past years, so may I entertain a firm conviction that it will also be exercised for the advantage of the Institution whose claim I am proud to advocate this day; and I will only say in conclusion that I hope the Institution may not fail from the advocacy I have endeavoured to exercise on the present occasion. I wish you to drink "Success to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys," and I am sorry that the Treasurer, Bro. Plunknett, whose name I should have coupled with this toast, is ill; but I will call on Bro. Capt. J. Wordsworth, a name you know very well, to reply.

Captain Wordsworth in reply, said—That as they had been very successful in past years he hoped they would continue to be so. The subscriptions this year were the largest they had ever had; and as they were year by year increasing, he trusted to each succeeding year the subscriptions would prosper in the same proportion as they had hitherto.

The Chairman then proposed "The Vice-Patron, Vice-Presidents, Trustees, and Committees of Instruction," all of whom, he said, took upon themselves great trouble in performing the duties which fell upon them. These brethren were skilled and able in their various duties, and they took most zealous interest in the prosperity of the Institution.

Bro. J. G. Chancellor responded. He had been connected for many years with the House Committee, and he felt on this occasion, when they were supported by such a Chairman, only too delighted that they had secured such an advocate for the charity. The brethren for whom he responded hoped, as they had done their duty in the past, they might long continue to do so.

Bro. Binckes then read the following list of subscriptions—

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF ESSEX.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Essex was held on Thursday, the 14th inst., at the White Hart Hotel, Romford, under the Banner of the Hope and Unity Lodge, No. 214. There was a large attendance of Essex brethren and some visitors, but as regards these latter the number was small, considering the proximity of Romford to the Metropolis.

Precisely at two o'clock the lodge of Hope and Unity was opened. Bro. the Rev. Thos. Cochrane, P. Prov. G. Chap. Oxon, and W.M. 214, occupying the chair of K.S.; and Grand Lodge having been announced, was received in due form.

In the unavoidable absence, through illness, of the R.W.P.G.M. (Bro. Robert J. Bagshaw), the throne was occupied by the Worshipful Bro. Matthew E. Clark, D.P.G.M., who was then saluted in ancient form. Provincial Grand Lodge was then opened in form, the roll call of the lodges in the Province, now numbering 16, producing upwards of 100 representatives. Letters expressing regret at their inability to attend were received from the R.W.P.G.M. of Suffolk, (Bro. Lord Waveney); the V.W. Bro. the Rev. C. W. Arnold, Grand Chap. of England, D.P.G.M., Surrey; W. Bro. John Hervey, Grand Sec., &c. The Auditors' Report having been read and approved, the W.D.P.G.M. proposed and the V.W. Bro. the Rev. S. R. Wigram, Past. G. Chap. Eng., seconded the re-election of the W. Bro. Joseph Burton as Treasurer for the ensuing year, which was carried unanimously. Bro. Burton in returning thanks mentioned that it was the thirteenth time this honour had been conferred upon him.

The Grand Officers of the year were then invested as follows:—

Rev. T. Cochrane, W.M. 214. Prov. S.G.W.
George Corble, W.M. 453. Prov. J.G.W.
The Rev. J. H. Bridge, 1343. Prov. G. Chaplain.
Joseph Burton, P.M. 276. Prov. G. Treasurer.
T. J. Ralling, W.M. elect 51. Prov. G. Secretary.
E. Hunt Carter, I.P.M. 276. Prov. G. Registrar.
W. P. Lewis, P.M. 51. Prov. G.S.D.
D. Reed, W.M. 1457. Prov. G. J.D.
T. G. Day, W.M. elect 1437. Prov. G.S. of W.
A. Lucking, P.M. 1000. Prov. G.D.C.
J. A. Wardell, P.M. 1000. Prov. G.A.D.C.
B. B. Brayshaw, W.M. 1437. Prov. G.S.B.
W. W. Brown, 214. Prov. G.O.
W. F. Francis, W.M. 1024. Prov. G.P.
W. I. Chignell, 1000. Prov. G.S.
C. F. Jones, 1000. Prov. G.S.
G. W. Patmore, 1437. Prov. G.S.
A. Manning, 1437. Prov. G.S.
J. P. Sarel, P.M. 276. Prov. G.T.

At three o'clock, Prov. Grand Lodge was adjourned, and having been marshalled in procession, proceeded to St. Edward's Church, which had been kindly placed at the disposal of Grand Lodge by the Vicar, Bro. the Rev. E. Fox. Evening prayers were said by Bro. the Rev. T. Cochrane, Prov. S.G.W., W.M. 214, and Proper Lessons (1 Chron. xxix. and 8. James v.) were read by Bro. the Rev. S. R. Wigram, P.G.C., W.M. 1000 and P.M. 214. An able and practical sermon was preached by the Prov. G. Chap., Bro. the Rev. J. H. Bridge, from Luke xi. 26. At the close of the service the procession reformed, and marched back to the lodge room, where some interesting matters connected with the Craft in Essex were discussed; and a vote of thanks to the brethren of Lodge Hope and Unity for their very complete and admirable arrangements for the reception of Provincial Grand Lodge was passed.

The sum of ten guineas was voted to the School Lending Library, Romford, and was suitably acknowledged by Bro. the Rev. E. Fox, Vicar. Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed in due form and with solemn prayer.

Nearly one hundred brethren afterwards partook of a sumptuous banquet at the Corn Exchange, which had been handsomely decorated and transformed into a most comfortable banquetting hall. The W.D.P.G.M. presided; and the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, the various speeches being interspersed by some capital vocal and instrumental music, under the direction of Bro. W. W. Brown, Prov. G.O. A most successful and pleasant meeting was brought to a close shortly before nine o'clock.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of the Girls' School was held on Thursday afternoon at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. A. H. Tattershall in the chair. There were likewise present Bros. Rev. J. M. Vaughan, R. B. Webster, H. Dearsley, H. Massey (Freemason); H. A. Dubois, S. Rosenthal, H. Potter, Col. Peters, A. H. Diaper, and R. W. Little, Secretary.

After the reading of the minutes £15 was granted to apprentice one of the girls leaving the Institution.

Six petitioners were placed on the list for election; fifty children were declared to be on that list, and ten vacancies were declared.

Bro. R. B. Webster gave notice of motion for next quarterly meeting—"That twenty-five extra children be admitted at next election," in October.

The Committee then adjourned.

Masonic and General Tidings.

It will please not a few readers to learn that the first edition of the Volume of Prayers by the late Bro. Dawson has already been sold, and that a second edition is in preparation. It is a good sign of the times that such a book should have been taken up so readily. It will also be an encouragement to Mrs. Dawson to proceed as speedily as possible with the Memoir and Volume of Sermons understood to be in preparation. The high appreciation in which Bro. Dawson was held by his congregation is shown in a most striking manner by the fact that wholly amongst themselves they have subscribed two thousand guineas as a gift to Mrs. Dawson and family.

PAXTON LODGE, No. 1685.—The consecration of this lodge takes place (Saturday) afternoon, at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham. The ceremonies, which are to commence at 4.30 p.m. precisely, will be performed by Bro. H. E. Francis, P.M., P.P.S.G.D., Surrey and Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, M.A., P.G. Chaplain. A report will appear in our next.

We are authorised to state that the second State Concert will take place at Buckingham Palace, on Friday, July 6, and the second State Ball on Wednesday, July 11.

The "Craftsman and Canadian Masonic Record" has been disposed of to R.W. Bro. J. B. Traves, of Port Hope, Ontario. All communications should therefore be addressed "The Canadian Craftsman," Port Hope, Ontario, Canada.

The Provincial Grand Chapter of Monmouthshire will be held on Wednesday, July 11th, 1877, at the Masonic Hall, Newport, at 3 o'clock p.m.; installation of the St. Wool's Chapter will take place at 4 p.m., and the ceremony performed by Captain S. George Homfray, P.S.B., G.C. and P.G.H., Monmouthshire.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Monmouthshire will be held on Thursday, July 12th, 1877, at the Masonic Hall, Newport, under the banner of the Albert Edward, Prince of Wales Lodge, 1429, at 12 o'clock, noon. A procession will be formed, and the brethren will proceed to St. Wool's Church, where a sermon will be preached by the Rev. J. Osman, Provincial Grand Chaplain.

A meeting of the Provincial Grand Mark Lodge of the Province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight will be held on Thursday next, at Portsmouth Lodge, St. Mary's-street, Portsmouth.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons for Middlesex and Surrey will be held at the new Town Hall, at Twickenham, on Friday, 13th July, commencing at 3 o'clock.

Bro. C. Lord, late manager of the Cannon-street Hotel, has taken the Palatine Hotel, Manchester.

On the morning of Midsummer day, (June 24th) says the Birmingham Post, there was a rather sharp frost in the neighbourhood of Bromsgrove, and the potatoes in some gardens were much cut down by it.

The new subway under the Thames, between the town and Arsenal of Woolwich, on the south bank of the river and North Woolwich, the works of which are actively in progress, will be completed, and the tunnel opened for traffic, about the end of the present year.

The marriage of Mr. W. H. Basden to Miss Kate C. Gover, the youngest daughter of Bro. W. S. Gover, C.C., is arranged to take place in July.

The University College Hospital has received a donation of £1000 from Major Dennis Moriarty, of Plymouth, in aid of the funds.

CATTLE PLAGUE.—In Tuesday night's Gazette a report of the Privy Council states that no further outbreak of cattle plague in Great Britain has been recorded since May 22. The places lately infected are now declared free from cattle plague.

Mr. Bright's visit to Bradford to unveil the statue of Richard Cobden, in the Royal Exchange, has been definitely fixed for Wednesday, July 25.

"BELL'S LIFE IN LONDON" AND THE "OBSERVER."—On Tuesday last the splendid premises in which the editing, printing, and publishing of these two old-established journals (Bell's Life was started in 1820 and The Observer as far back as 1791) have so long and successfully been carried on, were put up to public auction, and, after a very spirited contest, they were purchased by the proprietors of The Country for nearly £7000. This large purchase may be accepted, we presume, as an evidence of the substantial success which has attended the youngest of our sporting journals.

We regret to state that the illness of the First Lord of the Admiralty is causing much uneasiness. Bro. Hunt was removed to Woolwich yesterday morning, and there embarked on board her Majesty's steamer Vivid, en route to Homburg, from the waters of which place it is hoped he may derive benefit.

In celebration of the return of Bro. Brassey, M.P., with Mrs. Brassey and family, from their voyage round the world, a banquet was given on Wednesday last in the pavilion on the pier at Hastings. About 300 ladies and gentlemen sat down, the Mayor, Mr. Alderman Gensden presiding, Sir U. J. Kay-Shuttleworth, B.A., M.P., and Lady Kay-Shuttleworth were among the assemblage. In responding to the toast of the evening B. O. Brassey gave some interesting particulars of his voyage, and spoke highly of British enterprise and prestige.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire, which was to have been held on the 4th of July, has been postponed a fortnight, and will, therefore, be held on Wednesday, the 18th of July, at the Freemasons' New Hall, Sheffield.

A new cemetery has been completed at Canterbury at a cost of £10,000.

The thirty-ninth anniversary of the coronation of her Majesty was celebrated on Thursday. The bells of St. George's Chapel and St. John's Church rang merrily at intervals in honour of the occasion.

At a special meeting of the Sheffield Corporation, held on Thursday morning, a resolution inviting General Grant to pay a visit to the town was unanimously adopted.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.—The total of the subscriptions received for this Institution up to Thursday mid-day, amounted to £13,248 17s. 6d. with 19 lists still to come in.

Bro. Shackleton, W.M. 1524, Sec., Guelph Lodge, No. 1685, &c.; has had the misfortune to lose both Father and Mother within the short period of five weeks, the former having died through the great grief caused by the loss of his wife. Bro. Shackleton has our sympathy in his misfortune.

Bro. Robert Bradley of Reading, has been appointed Grand Secretary to the Provincial Grand Lodge for Berks and Bucks, in the room of Bro. Biggs who has lately retired from that office. Bro. Bradley has been a member of the Craft for many years and is well fitted for the position.

In the list of subscriptions to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys which is given in another page, we notice rather an extraordinary donation, that is an amount of £115 10s. from a lodge that has yet to be formally consecrated. This we think augurs well for the Charities.

Newton watching the fall of the apple, Franklin observing the little boy flying a kite in a thunder-storm, and a dozen other examples rise at once to the mind as proofs of the valuable results to be obtained by an intelligent observation of the operations of nature. Recently the Society of Arts was the means of introducing another and very valuable instance of this kind. It is well known that the woodmen and other inhabitants of pine forests are exceptionally healthy; well known also that the planting of pine woods in marshy districts will change their character, and render them salubrious; well known, also, that all trees of this class secrete oils rich in hydro-carbons, and known as terpenes, whence turpentine, and by oxidation certain resinous substances such as camphor. Putting the known facts together, Mr. Kingzett, F.C.S., formed certain theories, and after several years of laborious experiment he actually succeeded, in conjunction with Mr. Maximilian Ziegler, in isolating the "health principle" of the pine and eucalyptus tree, and by a simple process, in imitation of nature, produced a solution, to which he has given the name of "Sanitas," containing the antiseptic and disinfectant principles of a pine forest. Few chemists have ever achieved a greater triumph, or one more pregnant with good to humanity, without any attendant curse, for already experiment has proved, and the most eminent medical and sanitary authorities have confirmed the proof, that "Sanitas" is the most valuable and efficacious antiseptic and disinfectant yet discovered. While giving all credit to the labours of previous investigators who have made known to us the antiseptic properties of various substances, it must be admitted that to all of these there were in actual use some very powerful objections. Some are poisonous, some destroyed the fabrics with which they came in contact, some had an acrid and disagreeable odour, hardly preferable to the noxious vapours they were intended to destroy, and which rendered them useless for the preservation of food. "Sanitas" is free from all these objections, and as a company has been formed at 57, Moorgate-street, for its supply, and it is not more costly than its unpleasant rivals, we may expect soon to see "Sanitas" in universal use in hospitals, asylums, schools, workshops, and private dwellings, in our streets and dustpits, in drains and cesspools, and, in short, wherever there is contagion to be found or guarded against, meat to be preserved, or water to be purified.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JUNE 30, 1877.

IGNORANCE OF THE BOOK OF CONSTITUTIONS.

We are often struck, as all must be, with the want of knowledge manifested by so many of our leading brethren even, in regard to the Book of Constitutions. Indeed, the absolute ignorance of some of our good brethren would be incredible were it not too common, and would be perfectly ludicrous were it not often so very serious in its results, so very hurtful, that is to the welfare of a district or a province, so inimical to the progress of Freemasonry, and a lodge. We have frequently asked ourselves, whence does this ignorance arise, and why should it exist? Can we explain it ourselves, or can it be accounted for by others? We live in an age of light and study, and the Book of Constitutions is surely cheap enough. What, then, is the reason? Why is it? Well, we think we have hit upon one prevailing reason, and we proceed to offer our explanation to our readers, to the Craft, and to all whom it may concern. We are not asserting a perverse paradox, we beg our readers to observe carefully, when we assert that the Book of Constitutions is often unread, and curiously seemingly unknown. We do not deny that many of our brethren are too listless, or too busy, too grand, or too unimpressed to give themselves up to the study of the Book of Constitutions, but making every allowance for our Masonic infirmity and the known spathy of Masons generally on this head, we feel assured that we do not find in this, a sufficient elucidation of an unaccountable anomaly. We, therefore, prefer our own suggested explanation, which is as follows. The present arrangement for the sale of the Book of Constitutions is, in our opinion, unsuitable both to the wants of the Craft, and the demands of trade. There was no fault to be found with the arrangement once upon a time, perhaps, when the sale was easily measured out, but now it appears to be based upon a want of due appreciation, alike of the legitimate requirements of business, and the larger demands of the Craft. The Book of Constitutions is sold for 1s. 6d. a copy, but there is no inducement to the trade to take a large number of copies, because there is not sufficient discount allowed to make it worth any one's while to push the work, or for any one to make anything, in fact, out of the sale. There is an allowance made—5 per cent. on 500 copies—but that is a margin far too small to allow of any extensive trading, much less of any legitimate profit. As it is well known to many for whom we write, its terms are 25 per cent. discount, and more even by special agreement, and were such a reduction conceded to all Masonic dealers alike, a very large additional sale of the Book of Constitutions would at once necessarily spring up, we have every reason to believe, remunerative both to booksellers and to Grand Lodge. Many would keep the work in stock then, who do not now to use trade terms, "touch it," or even "look at it." As it is, the sale is now a sale for individuals, whereas, the great object would appear to be, on every ground, to make a general sale of it, though a general sale hardly exists.—in fact, a regular trade sale, affected simply by the one great law of supply and demand. Many booksellers who would keep the book in stock, if they could, as we before remarked, get the trade discount, only buy it as they want it, and do not buy it in gross at all; and the consequence is that the individual sale is much more restricted than it should be. In our opinion every member of the Order ought to have a copy of the Book of Constitutions by him, and we are confident that if the sale be put on simple trade grounds the gain to Grand Lodge will, eventually, be very great indeed. In all such matters we have to look to business considerations, and business considerations alone, and all such arrangements, however artificially protected, must fall sooner or later to the common level of the wants of barter and the market. If our Book of Constitutions were more generally read, and, we will add, more widely sold, much of the ignorance respecting it would disappear, and we beg to commend our friendly remarks to those who have authority to deal with such matters of detail, as we feel certain that the course we advocate is alike most expedient and needful in the interests of all parties, and will be productive of the greatest convenience to the Order generally, and bring about a very largely increased sale of the Book of Constitutions for Grand Lodge. Let no one take offence at our words, they are fraternally meant, and honestly expressed.

HONOUR TO WHOM HONOUR IS DUE.

We cannot shut our eyes if we would, nor would it be well if we could, to the inevitable changes and chances of this mortal life, the passing away of old mates and friends and brethren, as we take up our weekly Freemason, or realize the unavoidable diminution of our ranks, as week follows week, in the onward march of fleeting years. There is an enormous amount of unrecorded work which goes on amongst us; there are countless good brethren and true friends who leave us and the lodge in which they have worked for years, and no happy pen records their merit, no kindly Freemason communicates their loss. It is a very wonderful thought, as it appears to us, namely, that onward silent march of myriads of our race, of whom no biographer recounts the services, no epitaph preserves even the memory. Thousands upon thousands, in all ranks and conditions, in all services and situations, in all callings and countries, pass away from amongst us unheeded and unnoticed, who, in their time and generation did their duty manfully to God and their brethren, and were most true and faithful servants of their Great Master during this earthly struggle. Like the thousands of those brave Crusaders whose bones whitened the hills and vales of Palestine, whose names have passed away, like that great multitude of true Anglo-Saxons whose quiet resting places mark every portion of the great peninsula of Hindostan, so it is one of the apparent and saddening conditions of humanity that the greater part of mankind go to their "long homes" utterly unknown to, forgotten by, the rest. The "nameless stone" of the poet is indeed a wonderful antithesis to all the folly, all the garish tinsel, all the insane pride of human life. We are nothing, and we become as nothing, be we who we may, and the great river of Time flows swiftly by seemingly, as it were, only to leave on its muddy banks the perishing bones of countless nameless and forgotten men. And how true is all this of Freemasonry. The life of Masonry is kept up by the lodge work of its members, and beneath its pomp and paraphernalia, its high rank and great names, its outer show and pretentious blazon, its "sounding brass, yes, and its tinkling cymbal," there, as it were, rises up before us, the great and undistinguished "ruck" of humble hard-working Masons, who are the "salt" of the Order nevertheless, though no Poet Laureate sings poems to their glory, though no recording pen on earth rescues their name, toils, and merit, from the dark oblivion of the grave. We take up our weekly Freemason, and we read the death of an old friend and fellow worker, with whom in good old days, perhaps, we consorted greatly, and whom we liked much and well. We are so "taken up," so pompous, so great, so important, so immersed in business or pleasure, in care or profit, in making money, and in wasting life, that we have no time to think of Bro. Jones. And so poor old Jones is buried out of sight, and if, when we meet again, the lodge is in mourning, and the W.M. says a few kind words,—that is all—we return to the work of the lodge and the toils of men, as a matter of course; and if we do say "Poor old Jones, is gone, I see," it is as much as we do say, and there the story ends. If to-day memory recalls old days, old hours, and old scenes, when, with "Master Shallow," we "heard the chimes at midnight" or with Bro. Jones made the old lodge a famous centre of light and goodwill, and pleasantness and peace, for some poor wayfarers for a little season, it is as much sentiment as we can afford in our practical, sensible, hard-headed, (may we say hard-hearted?) life to-day. It is good for us, then, as in another page which recalls Bro. Lieut.-Col. Pilsworth's many Masonic merits and untimely loss, to remember the true-hearted of our brethren who depart from us, and to offer, however feebly, a few words of affectionate remembrance to virtues great and many, to worth true and real, to a pleasant friendship whose earthly links are severed, and to a fraternal sympathy which begun in time, let us believe, like all good things is destined to flourish yet once again, and bloom all radiantly in that better eternity which awaits us all.

THE MONDE MACONNIQUE AND OURSELVES.

We note that in our contemporary, an answer we made has been misunderstood as regards the admission of illegitimates. We were asked, as we understood the question, what was the rule, not the policy. We stated that in the operative guilds all the candidates must be the children of honest parentage, and that our rule, as Speculative Masons, was to the same effect, and anything that has been since put forward, proves the correctness of our views of the Common Law of Masonry on the subject. Indeed there can be no doubt upon it, as all the exceptions quoted prove the rule. As regards the policy, that is another question, and a wider one, but we are inclined to agree with Bro. Hughan that where the candidate is himself a highly respectable person, we may well accept him now. We note also that at page 65 our worthy Bro. Caubet prints a note from W.M. Esq. (sic), dated Wellington, New Zealand, March 3rd, 1877, in which that brother tells Bro. Caubet that "plusieurs de ses frères de nationalité Anglaise repandues de toutes les parties, du monde, se rejouissent comme moi de l'enterprisse du Grand Orient of France," that is, the suppression of belief in God, &c. We had previously received a letter from the same brother, which we declined to print, as we thought it neither wise or true, or sound in view, but we believe that the writer no doubt honestly entertains the opinion, he puts forward, though we think them most mistaken. He declares many English brethren that approve of the revolution proposed. We know of none who do so, and we fear that in his case, as in others, it is "distance" that "lends enchantment" to his view.

IS IT TRUE?

We have been lately reading a very remarkable work, "A Glimpse of the Great Secret Society" (Macintosh, 1873, 4th Edit.), and have come upon the passage which we now proceed to give. Our brethren will read the charge thus officially made against the whole Order of Freemasons, everywhere, by the present aged and benevolent Pontiff with the regret and astonishment that we did, and will be prepared, we fancy, as we do, not only indignantly to protest against it, but to ask publicly as before our cosmopolitan Order, nay, before all men, is it true? "In fact, we cannot conceal from you, venerable brother, that our grief and astonishment were very great, when we heard that you had presided at the obsequies of Marshal Magan, Grand Master of the Order of Freemasons, and gave the solemn absolution when the Masonic insignia were placed on the funeral canopy, and the members of that condemned sect, decorated with the same insignia, were ranged around it. In the letter which you addressed to us on the 1st of last August, you assure us that these insignia had not been seen by you, nor by your clergy; that, in one word, they were unknown to you in any manner; but you knew very well, venerable brother, that the dead man had during life had the misfortune to be at the head of that proscribed sect, vulgarly called by the name of the 'Grand Orient,' and, consequently, you might have easily foreseen that the members of that sect would assist at his funeral; and that they would take care to make a parade of their insignia. You ought therefore, in your religious position, to have maturely weighed these considerations, and to have been on your guard on the occasion of this funeral, in order not to have caused by your presence and co-operation the astonishment and profound grief which all true Catholics have felt on this occasion. You cannot be ignorant that Masonic societies, and all other associations of the same iniquitous character, have been condemned by the Roman Pontiffs, our predecessors, and by ourself; that even severe penalties have been enacted against them. These impious sects, having different denominations, are, in fact, all linked together by their mutual complicity in the most criminal designs, all being inflamed with the most intense hatred of our holy religion and the Apostolic See, and are endeavouring by the dissemination of pestilential books, and in many other ways, by perverse manoeuvres and by every kind of devilish artifice, to corrupt all over the world both morality and belief, and to destroy all honest, true, and just opinion; to spread throughout the universe these monstrous opinions; to conceal and propagate the most detestable vices, and every conceivable rascality; to shake the power of all legitimate authority, and to compass the overthrow, if it were possible, of the Catholic Church, and of civil society, and to drive God Himself out of heaven." The paragraph is taken from a letter of the Pope to the murdered Archbishop of Paris, Darboy, and is dated Rome, October 26, 1865. That such a charge is not true in any sense, we can most conscientiously aver as before the great tribunal of public opinion, and we think that there are countless Roman Catholics who, if they could venture speak, would testify to the absurdity of such allegations, and the untruthfulness of such an accusation.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE AND THE GRANDE LOGE CENTRAL.

It seems that these two bodies are now again at variance, and an exchange of notes, marked by somewhat of acerbity, is going on between the distinguished brethren, St. Jean and Cremonienx. Into the merits of the case we do not profess to enter, as we are not competent to do so, in our opinion, it being to a great extent, moreover, a purely French question, but, no doubt, much may be said on both sides. But so long as the Grand Orient continues to be mixed up with the High Grades, with which it has nothing to do, and of which it ought to know nothing, all these "tracasseries" are sure to arise. In our humble opinion, if Craft Masonry were entirely under the Grand Orient, and if the High Grades were all under control of the Grande Loge, we should find an end for all these ceaseless disputes. Whatever may have been done in years past, we never can concede to the Rite, Ecossais the right to open symbolic lodges at all, neither, we believe, would it wish or seek to do so, if the anomaly was not perpetuated in France of a Craft Grand Orient, having something to do with the High Grades. We know, as French Masonic history tells us, that this is a sore point with the Grand Orient of France, but we speak in all kindness when we say to them, "disembarrass yourselves of the High Grades as soon as you can, leave them to the Grande Loge Centrale, and the Grand Orient will gain in every way, and put an end for ever to burning questions and useless controversies."

THE ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

The festival which took place at the Alexandra Palace on Wednesday, the 27th inst., has been a great success, and has resulted in a return of £13,248 17s. 6d. with nineteen lists to come in. We shall call attention to the subject fully in our next.

CHARITY LOTTERIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read with much interest the proceedings of Bro. Constable, and the large amount thus procured by him for our charities. But as for some time I have felt some doubts about these proceedings, Masonically, I venture to ventilate the question in your friendly columns to-day.

I trust that I may be more fortunate than some of your correspondents apparently are, and that my very few and friendly, and Masonically-actuated words (pardon so Johnsonian an expression) will not be deemed in any way personal, or lead to a controversy based on personal feelings or personal considerations. It is curious enough that we seemingly never touch anything Masonic, without invoking or developing personal acrimony, a sad commentary on the inconsistency of human nature, and may I not say, too, on the hollowness of Masonic profession.

I. The first remark I have to make, then, is this—that say what you will, disagree with me as you may, such a course of action, however popular, encourages a spirit of gambling among Freemasons. The brother who puts in his shilling hopes to get the equivalent of £10, two hundred times in excess of his original outlay, and I, for one, though I may be called a prig or a Pharisee, hypercritical or hyper-censorious, do not like charity to be mixed up with a desire of individual gain. Charity qua charity is a very noble virtue in itself, and ought neither to be depreciated or lowered, weakened or discredited in any way. All lotteries have been found to work badly for the morality of peoples and the safety of the state, inasmuch as they infuse into men's minds the aspirations of cupidity, and the love of risk on chances, two very great but detrimental characteristics of human nature. I cannot think that we are justified in introducing these unsound and even hurtful tendencies of human weakness into our higher struggles after what is true and good in itself. I may be wrong, but I am anxious, as the Scotchman was, to "testify" on this point for the careful consideration of many of my readers.

II. Now it might be said, and I fancy that it will be said that the "end justifies the means," and that though you may be doing evil "good" may come of it, that the object of the Institutions is so excellent, per se, that it is right to help them in every way you can. Now, as I, for one, detest these Jesuit maxims which have wrought such misery among men, I look always with suspicion on any defence which rests upon them, even in any degree. Though I give all credit to Bro. Constable for his zealous and kindly intentions, and last, not least, for his undeniable success, I cannot get over the fact that, be the movement prosperous or not, it is a tampering, nevertheless, with the stricter and safer laws of public prosperity and general duty. Admitted that the aim of Bro. Constable be a good one, is that any reason why it should be carried out in a wrong way? I think not, and here it is that I join issue with him, and I deem it proper to object to these proceedings, on Masonic grounds, and on Masonic grounds alone. As Freemasons we profess to uphold a strict if stern morality, and to avoid any act which clashes with the laws of the land, or the revealed axioms of personal duty. How far all lotteries impinge upon the prohibition of lotteries by the law, in the spirit, at any rate, I leave to learned Masonic casuists and lawyers amongst us to decide.

III. I shall be told, I know, that many brethren who cannot afford the £10 can afford the 1s., and, therefore, that there can be no real harm in thus bending for a moment, as it were the unchanging laws of Masonry and morality in these respects. But this is just where I find fault with the arrangement. Many who gain the prizes are well able to pay the £10, so that practically, with all deference to many most worthy brethren, public charity is mixed up with individual gain, in a somewhat hazardous juxtaposition.

Now I do not want to seem too querulous, or too Draconic, I am not fond of dogmatizing or laying down the law, and I can only add that I shall be most happy to read the remarks of those many able brethren who take an opposite view of the matter, as I am always open to conviction, and always amenable to fair argument. But it is a subject, I think, which needs discussion, and demands thoughtful consideration.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
W. F.

MASONS' MARKS, &c.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

"W. E. N." deserves our thanks for the mine he is opening up in regard to Masons' Marks and Masonic Archaeology, and I agree with the greater part of his statements and deductions. I have never read Wilson's "Pre-historic Annals," but I will look up the book, but it must be over fifteen years ago since I first made a comparison between old English Marks and Northern Runes, and found in many cases a perfect similarity. They were used late into Christian times, because they were angularly suited for cutting with the chisel, until, in the end, the real meaning of the signs was lost. The caste marks of India seem to be arbitrary signs; to approach more to the nature of Masonic symbols than alphabetical character. I think it very likely, however, that the origin and basis of both Masonic symbols and caste marks are transmitted to us from early times, and the original home of our race the Aryan father land.

Since I took an interest in Mark Masonry the ceremonies have been modified, but are still, to my mind, of an objectionable character. At the period I name the teaching of the degree was that, presumably, from the building of Solomon's Temple, though marks were based on the number of lines upon which the representative of the degree placed a mark of approval; and the fact that the old marks were letters of an obsolete alphabet struck at the root of the whole system.

The printed and written documents with which I am acquainted prove that the degree of Mark Master is of very modern date. All that we can say with safety is that in Scotland every Apprentice Mason was compelled by Masonic law to register his mark when he was made free of his lodge, and for which registration he paid the fee of one mark, and selected any mark or any sign whatever, not used by another member of the lodge. If there is any proof of a Mark Master's "Mark of Approval," I shall be glad to know where it can be found. The foregoing statement as to the simple compulsory registration of the Apprentice or Craftsman's Mark in Scotland is confirmed by the traditional testimony of a Scottish Operative Master Mason of my acquaintance, whose ancestors have been Operative and Speculative for eight generations, and he says "We have gone to the steeple of the Church of Glasgow to select a mark."

The objection I take to the Mark Degree is that it claims equal antiquity for its modern invention with the Craft, a degree which should embody researches such as those of which "W.E.N." would be praiseworthy, if it omitted the puerility of an ancient legendary descent.

I hope that this free expression of opinion will not offend "W.E.N.," whom I respect for the learning and ability with which he has illustrated the subject, and I hope to read more of his letters upon the subjects of which they treat.

Yours, truly and fraternally, JOHN YARKER.

IGNORANCE OF THE BOOK OF CONSTITUTIONS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It would almost seem that this ignorance of the Book of Constitutions prevails amongst our rulers. If every W.M. elect should pass an examination, previous to installation before the Board of Past Masters, would it not be a good thing in these days of examination? Seriously is it not strange, Dear Sir and Brother, that so few brethren study the Book of Constitutions?

I here beg leave to propose that on the entrance of a new brother every lodge should give him a copy of the Book of Constitutions. Might not this system make it more read?

ADEPT.

A RECENT INCIDENT IN PARIS.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

The following extract from the Times of June 23rd, gives us the conclusion of a very deplorable affair, and is the best reply to all remarks on the subject:—

The appeal of M. Bonnet Duverdiere, President of the Paris Municipality, against his condemnation to 15 months' imprisonment and 2000*fr.* fine, for defaming Marshal MacMahon at a private meeting at St. Denis, came before the Correctional Tribunal to-day. As the accused offered no defence at the former hearing, this was the real trial of the case, and accordingly it excited much interest. The defendant, on being interrogated, disclaimed the expressions imputed to him, to the effect that the imbecile Marshal would soon be brought to the bar of the people to atone for his crime; that he, like a dastard, slipped from his horse at Sedan to make believe he was wounded; that the manoeuvres of the Ministry would bring back the Prussians, but that the people would not fight under incompetent generals, or be killed for such people, but would first dispose of the Marshal and his Government and then settle matters with the enemy; that all means were good, and that after the ballot-box there was the legal means which the meeting knew of. What he really said, he maintained, was that the Marshal seemed resolved on not making a Comp d'Etat, but his advisers, reckoning on his inaptitude, were capable of anything. The wound at Sedan prevented him from capitulating, and a wit—M. Rochefort—had said he ought to recompense the doctor who cured him and enabled him afterwards to be President. He considered the Marshal a good soldier, if not a great general, but he did not call him a dastard. He might have spoken of his inaptitude, but he did not call him an imbecile or idiot. He certainly did not style him a capitlard, for he spoke of his wound preventing him from capitulating. The defendant protested against remarks at private meetings being taken notice of, and asked what would be said if the police listened at the key-hole of M. Thiers' drawing-room and detected criminality in the conversation. To this the Judge replied that a private domicile was inviolable, but a meeting of 200 people was a very different thing. Witnesses were then called on both sides, and at 7 p.m. the Court confirmed the judgment, as also that passed on the three co-defendants.

I am, yours fraternally,

THE WRITER OF THE LEADER.

A NEW DEFINITION OF FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In the Daily Telegraph of the 11th inst. an article, written in a very unhappy frame of mind against the Order, alludes to the late case in the Court of Queen's Bench, wherein two brethren were the parties to the action, and endeavours, in a flippant tone, to cast opprobrium upon "those persons, the Freemasons," because the unfortunate event was, undoubtedly, within the province of the Grand Master to settle, and need not have found its way into a court of law. The animus of the writer in the Daily Telegraph is so apparently antagonistic to Freemasonry that the probability is he is a disappointed candidate, and, therefore, still one of the profane, else he could scarcely descend to the fanfaronade in which he indulges at the supposed expense of his "quondam brothers."

In a journal which, I believe, and am informed—for I am a stranger and a sojourner here—has the reputation of much clearness of discussion, and sagacity of reasoning, coupled with liberal sentiments of political government, I am surprised to find such serious nonsense laid before the public, as the statement that Freemasonry is "a purely convivial and benevolent society," inasmuch as conviviality has nothing whatever to do with the principles of the Order, and, although based upon the ancient landmark of charity, it is not a benevolent society, distributing alms to its members in accordance with any set rules, and can in no possible manner be likened with, or compared to the Odd Fellows, the Foresters, the Druids, or any other society whatever. If the remarks of the Daily Telegraph had been of a serious nature, and calculated to bring Freemasonry into disrepute, I should have been disposed to recommend a little study of Masonic jurisprudence, or the quiet reading of the "Freemason's Manual," and it would not again fall into the egregious error of asserting that Freemasonry is a convivial society. What Freemasonry teaches is charity to all mankind, and the brother who so deports himself with morality and brotherly love, as to be entitled to be reckoned a worthy corner stone, is typically rewarded by such convivial things as "corn, wine, and oil," when called from "labour to refreshment," and this is the extent of its conviviality. It is time that the odium of a man returning to his home in a high state of excitement from imbibing, because "he has been to his lodge," should be refuted for ever, as the dignity and importance of Masonry would not be recognised if the lodge was merely a place for convivial meeting and social enjoyment.

Belonging, as I do, to a foreign jurisdiction, I indignantly resent the gratuitous aspersion, and think that the Daily Telegraph would do well to employ better informed writers on Masonic subjects for the future.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

ALFRED WELDMEN.

CHARITY VOTING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Notwithstanding your courteous rejoinder, and the quotation from our "Charity Voting Reform Association" paper, I must still say you and Bro. Hughan have been under a great misapprehension as to my meaning.

Numbers of our brethren, and myself amongst them, have understood you to imply that I advocated the abolition of voting and the appointment of a "central committee" of selection in its stead.

This I did not do, nor did I ever intend to do.

The passage you quote refers to a very different thing. This suggestion was merely thrown out to meet many enquiries made at our office, and to fill a void that is not unfrequently to be found. For instance, a subscriber has "no candidate of his own," as the phrase goes, nor has he even a "friend to oblige," nay more, he finds great difficulty in discriminating the most urgent case or cases amongst a long list, with a very brief account of each. It is suggested in such a case that he send his proxy paper to the Committee of the charity, who probably have the best means of judging of the comparative merits of the candidates (or ought to have), and allow them to allot the vote or votes as they may deem most just.

I still contend that "canvassing" by cards and circulars and "polling days" are well known abuses, both out of and in Masonry. I am thankful to say the Royal Medical Benevolent College and the Clergy Orphan Corporation have done away with the latter, to the great satisfaction of the subscribers, and they are in rapid progress towards prohibiting the former.

Most happy shall I be, dear Sir and Brother to aid in my humble measure in preventing as far as possible "the admission of doubtful or improper cases." This, no doubt, lies at the root of the matter. Let us then get to work at the root and we may hope to have branches which shall not only be more graceful, but more productive of fruit, and more calculated to afford shelter to the poorest and most deserving cases.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, fraternally yours,

R. J. SIMPSON.

[We publish Bro. Simpson's letter with pleasure, but we think the discussion had better now cease, the more so as our good brother and ourselves are not likely to agree as to the main points of his letter.—Ed.]

ROMAN CATHOLIC INTOLERANCE.

Nearly two years ago a young and thriving merchant of Batavia, in the Island of Java, resolved to take unto himself a wife. He applied for the hand of a young lady of his acquaintance, and his application was received by her family with every mark of favour. The future husband became a welcome guest at his fiancée's home. The formal betrothal took place, and "all went merry as a marriage bell." Soon the young lover hoped to be made the happiest of men. But he was reckoning without his host. A difficulty arose. The Romish clergy had discovered that our young friend was the son of a man who had been a staunch Freemason in his day, who had in Belgium, been a prominent antagonist of the clerical party there. Of course, the son would follow in his father's footsteps unless some wise and friendly hand interfered. The interference took place. The parents of the young lady were charged to withdraw their consent to the union unless they could obtain their intended son-in-law's promise that he would never become a Freemason.

To everybody's surprise, the young merchant avowed respect and veneration for his late father; refused to make any promise of the kind demanded; and had the cool audacity to declare that he fully intended to propose himself as a candidate for initiation in the mysteries of Freemasonry. He alleged as his reason for this determination that he desired to remain free both in his religious and political opinions. Bigotry prevailed. The parents revoked their consent. The marriage was broken off. Two young lives were severed. But, after all, the object of the Romanists was not attained. The young man hastened to apply for initiation—was elected a Mason.

Nor is this all; many other gentlemen of high standing, in Batavia, were induced, by the noise which the event made, to enquire for themselves, and in a short time to follow our hero's example. We need not add any comments. The world's history affords instances enough to emphasize the moral that "persecution fails to coerce any but the weak and the unworthy."—Craftsman.

Reviews.

"Wonders of Operative Masonry." By P. McCalla, P.A., B.M., and Editor of the Keystone, Philadelphia, U.S.

We have received from our kind and able confrère this little work, being sketches of the ancient Abbies and Cathedrals of Great Britain. We have read it with great interest, though much of its contents have already appeared in the Masonic Magazine, reprinted from that excellent paper the Keystone. Like all that Bro. McCalla writes, the little work is marked by singular clearness of detail and power of expression, and it is in itself a very valuable contribution to Masonic and archaeological literature. And yet the perusal of Bro. McCalla's striking words only serves to convince us, what some Masonic students have long known in England, that we are even now but at the beginning, so to say, of Masonic antiquarian investigation, and before us lies a wide field yet of study and research.

We have to bring out yet more forcibly and lucidly than has yet been achieved the condition of operative Masonic Guild Life in England, and we have to lay down the precise conditions under which the operative became entirely absorbed by the speculative element.

Until that be done, Masonic history assumes only the appearance of the "disjecta membra" of incoherent legends and unconnected traditions, and we are still as far as ever from a clear and critical history of our great Order. We hail Bro. McCalla's "opus culum" as we greeted Bro. Fort's "magnum opus," as happy offerings sent across the wide Atlantic towards the study and realization of Masonic archaeology, and we congratulate our excellent Confrère on a compilation both skilful and intelligent in the highest degree, reflecting equal credit on its writer, and the Craft, of which he is so zealous and promising a member.

SOME ACCOUNT OF MASONIC CHARITY, AND A PROPOSAL FOR EXTENSION.

By EDWIN HARDON, P.M. Second edition.

This is a remarkable pamphlet, and was originally intended for circulation among East Lancashire Masons; but the subject and the mode of its treatment render Bro. Hardon's brochure most valuable not only to the fraternity, but to all who are earnestly interested in the administration and extension of charities of the kind for which Masonry is conspicuous. There is hardly a line of our brother's pamphlet which is not interesting and worthy of study, but to us, the most sensible and attractive suggestion is (see page 12) that our charities should take a home form; that is, the children to live at home, and be clothed and educated at the expense of a Provincial Grand Lodge charity.

Bro. Hardon puts the scheme so powerfully, that lest we should fail to give the necessary pith and point to his proposal, we quote his own most forcible language—

"The £40 or £50 now spent in the entire care of one child might be made more useful to a family—the one child taken in hand, so far as the rest of the family are concerned, is but a saving of the food and clothes of one of them; and in a family—say of four children—left unprovided for, this sum of £40 or £50 would materially contribute to educate and clothe the whole of these four children. Whilst you take but one now out of them for a term of years to clothe, feed, and educate well, what are the rest of these children doing? Who clothes them? Who pays for their education? and what is their daily bread whilst the favoured one of the family is enjoying the comparative luxuries of a grand institution? And when his term has run, and at sixteen years of age his steps are to be directed homeward. What strange recollections home must recall! Childhood and its associations are long passed away, followed by years of comfort and plenty enjoyed in the fellowship of equal associates in the adopted paternity of a benevolent establishment. You have educated him out of and above the level and equality of his normal home, and you can now only return him to his family, presumably furnished and fitted to enter upon the duties of active life, and to help to assist in sustaining the household. Thus you weight him with a responsibility far beyond his age, for he is but on the mere threshold of business life, and can only enter upon its activities in a subordinate capacity, and with the beginning of an income little if any better a beginning than other boys of the family will have been compelled to enter upon at a much younger age, though they have been kept at home, unnoticed and uncared for by us. But worse for the family, this young gentleman of sixteen is likely to be impatient of parental influences, now so very necessary to control and restrain the dangerous over-enthusiasm engendered by the feeling of independence his completed training will have inspired. But as this epoch ends our care of him—his after history is untold. What of the family struggles during his absence? At a younger age some will have had to be put out, and bring their contributions to the family stock, and in the race of life have thus had a few years' start of this educated one. How glaring the contrast! and in families how fatal for peace such a contrast must be."

All our readers will, we think, admit the force and good sense of the above citation, and we take it that other than Masonic charities most advantageously consider our brother Hardon's very practical suggestions. We are persuaded that he propounds a plan which would render all such charities more extensively useful, and we cordially, nay, anxiously, commend the consideration of this most useful publication to all who are concerned in the expansion and administration of charities.

CENTENARY FESTIVAL OF THE LODGE OF PEACE, No. 149, MELTHAM.

The centenary festival took place on Friday, the 15th inst., at Meltham. The weather was beautiful, the sun shining with all its splendour the whole of the day. The lodge was opened at twelve o'clock in the Infant School-room by the officers of the lodge, Bro. Charles Rayner, I.P.M., acting as W.M., Bro. D. Cairns, S.W., Bro. Saml. Sugden, J.W., Bro. George Heywood, P.M., as I.P.M., Bro. John Ellis, S.D., Bro. Wm. Sagg, J.D., Joseph W. Sykes, J.G., and Bro. Bockley, Tyler. There were brethren present from twenty different lodges in different parts of England and Scotland, viz.:—No. 61, Probity, Halifax; 265, Royal Yorkshire, Keighley; 275, Harmony, Huddersfield; 289, Fidelity, Leeds; 290, Huddersfield Lodge, Huddersfield; 307, Prince Frederick, Hebden Bridge; 324, Moira, Stalybridge, East Lancashire; 333, St. George's, Glasgow, Scotland; 337, Candour, Saddleworth; 439, Scientific, Bingley; 448, St. James, Halifax; 495, Wakefield; 521, Truth, Huddersfield; 910, St. Oswald, Pontefract; 971, Trafalgar, Batley; 1102, Mirfield Lodge, Mirfield; 1147, St. David's, Manchester, East Lancashire; 1514, Thornhill, Lindley; 1521, Wellington Lodge, Wellington, Province of North Wales and Shropshire; 1542, Legiolium, Castleford; 1645, Colne Valley, Slaithwaite.

After the lodge had been opened in the Third Degree, the Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. T. W. Tew, J.P., Bro. Bentley Shaw, W.P.D.P.G.M. of West Yorkshire, P.G.D. of England, D.L., and other Provincial Grand Officers, were announced, and conducted to their places in the lodge, Bro. George Milnes presiding at the harmonium, when Bro. Tew and Bentley Shaw were saluted with honours in the usual manner. Bro. Rayner, as W.M., then rose and said: Brethren, we are assembled here to-day for the purpose of celebrating the one hundredth birthday of this our good old Lodge of Peace. It is an event such as rarely occurs in any province; an event which will no doubt be long looked upon as a red-letter day in the annals of the old lodge, not only by its present members, but also by their successors in time to come. I feel sure you will excuse me for seizing upon this the earliest opportunity of expressing the pleasure and the gratification it gives me to see you all here to join with us in our rejoicing on this auspicious day. I sincerely hope that we shall all enjoy ourselves, that we shall all make ourselves happy and comfortable, and that when the day's proceedings are over we may be all able to part with a full consciousness of having assisted in carrying out those proceedings in a manner both creditable to ourselves and honourable to the Craft. I will not further take up your valuable time with any remarks of my own, but will at once ask the W.D.P. Grand Master to take the chair, and lay out us with the address he has so kindly promised to give us.

Bro. Rayner then left the chair, which was afterwards occupied by the W.D.P.G.M., Bro. Tew, who then read a most interesting address on Freemasonry, prepared for the occasion.

Bro. Bentley Shaw, W.P.D.P.G.M. next addressed the brethren, and read a communication he had received from a friend in London, giving a short account of the earliest history of the lodge. That it was first opened at the Cock Inn, Barnsley, on the 1st of April, 1777, and that after having been in existence only one year it ceased working until the year 1804. He also alluded to the laying of the foundation stone of the Meltham Church Tower by the Freemasons, in the year 1835, and of the laying of the foundation stone of the Convalescent Home by the Marquis of Ripon and Provincial Grand Lodge, in the year 1868.

The banquet was prepared in the National School-room, for two o'clock, Bro. Joseph Knight, of the Swan Inn, Meltham, being the host. The room was a very suitable one for it, large, lofty, and well ventilated, and altogether accommodation was provided for about one hundred persons. The tables were decorated with very rare plants, from the conservatory at Thickholms Hall, kindly lent by Bro. J. W. Carlile for the occasion. Each napkin had in it a splendid bouquet for the coat, which had been sent down from Covent Garden Market, London, that morning. On the top or cross table we noticed that the Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master of the Province of West Yorkshire, Bro. T. W. Tew, J.P., occupied the chair in the centre of the table as Chairman; on his right were seated the W.P.D.P.G.M., Bro. Bentley Shaw, P.G.D. of England, D.L.; W.P.G.S.W. of West Yorkshire, Bro. Booth; W.P.G.J.W. of West Yorkshire, Bro. John Hirst, jun., J.P.; Bro. Simpson, W.P.P.G.W.; P.G. Sec. of West Yorkshire, Bro. Henry Smith, and Bro. Charles Rayner, I.P.M. Lodge of Peace. On his left were seated Bro. Rev. W. T. M. Sylvester, P.P.G.C.; Prov. Grand Chaplain of West Yorkshire, Bro. Rev. R. Oldfield; Bro. J. W. Carlile, Bro. T. A. Haigh, P.M. Lodge of Peace and P.P.G.D.; Bro. Jonas Craven, P.P.G.S.W., and Bro. Dr. Spark, P.P. Grand Org. of Leeds. The choir consisted of Bros. George Milnes, Joe Wood, William Todd, and B. Stocks; Bro. J. Marshall, piano.

The cloth having been removed, "The Queen" was given by the Chairman, and having been duly honoured, "The Most Worshipful Grand Master of England, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, K.G.," was next received with cheers.

The next toast was "M.W. Pro G.M., the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon; also R.W. Dep. G.M. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers, Past and Present," proposed by the Chair, and responded to by Bro. Bentley Shaw, P.G.D. of England.

The Chairman, in giving the toast of "The R.W.P.G.M., Lieut.-Col. Sir Henry Edwards, Bart.," said: We could hardly expect to be favoured with the presence of Sir Henry Edwards on this occasion—but you will echo this sentiment—we rejoice in this opportunity to drink his good health at Meltham. Although absent, he desires me to express his congratulations to the brethren assembled on the hundredth year of the existence of this excellent and valued lodge, and I, as his Deputy, shall have to inform him of the admirable order in which I find the Lodge of Peace, and on the whole with which this day's arrangements have been organised. I am requested to inform you that our summer meeting is on the 18th of July, at Sheffield, and you will see Sir Henry Edwards in his place on that occasion. We have Bro. Booth from the Lodge of Probity, the same lodge as that to which Sir Henry Edwards belongs; we have also the late Deputy Provincial Grand Master present with us. It is gratifying to every one of us that he has recovered so far from his indisposition, as to give us the light of his countenance and the sunshine of his genial and ever welcome presence. I can only say that the excellences of our Provincial Grand Master are now so well known amongst the Craft as to need no special eulogy on my part. It is his popular characteristics which have endeared him to us all, and I think no more worthy gentleman could have been selected to fill the position of Prov. G. Master than Sir Henry Edwards. I now call upon you, brethren, to join me in expressing the hope that the Great Author of the Universe will bestow His blessing upon our P.G.M., and give him health and long life to preside over our assemblies and the Craft which he adorns with every moral and social virtue. The toast having been drunk with honours,

Bro. J. W. Carlile proposed "The Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. T. W. Tew, J.P., also W.P.D.P.G.M., Bro. Bentley Shaw, D.L., and all Present and Past Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire."

Bro. T. W. Tew responded, and said—I feel it to be no light responsibility to fill the office of D.P.G.M. of this province. In 1875 I was to all of you an untried Mason, and to have been chosen representative to our Prov. Grand Master of so large a Masonic constituency as is this West Yorkshire is to me the most complimentary privilege of my life. You have been good enough to receive the toast of my health to-night in a manner much more worthy of the close of my official connection with the province than my first years of labour as your Deputy. I attribute your kind reception of me more to your indulgence and forbearance than to any Masonic talents of my own, because I feel I am continually being brought into contact with brethren in this province of greater talents and erudition than myself. I greatly regret that my business and other multifarious occupations do not leave me free and unfettered in thought and action, so that I could devote the whole of my time to gain that perfect knowledge and experience of Masonic life amongst you, without which no Master Mason can thoroughly succeed in the office of D.P.G.M. of this province. I thank you for your invitation to-night, and promise that, to the best of my poor ability, I will try in the future to do what I have tried to do in the past, to make the administration of this province under Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Henry Edwards prosperous, illustrious, and brilliant. I feel that the gathering to-day is not only a welcome to Bro. Bentley Shaw, but an enthusiastic expression of your belief in the beauty of the Masonic principles of piety, justice, and virtue; of your abiding faith in the permanency of the organisation of Freemasonry which has led to the prosperity of the Order and its development amongst all nations on the earth. In this direction the labours of your previous D.P.G.M. have been crowned with success. You have trusted Prov. G. Officers in the past. Will you trust those now newly elected? as they feel you will trust those who come in the future, so that we, your officers, may feel sure that in giving confidence to our government in dealing with great Masonic affairs you would leave matters, as in the past, so in the present in our hands, trusting to our watching over the honour and Masonic interests of our beloved province.

"The Old Lodge of Peace" was proposed in a suitable speech by Bro. Bentley Shaw.

Bro. T. A. Haigh, in responding, begged to tender his sincere and heartfelt thanks on behalf of the rest of the brethren, to Bro. Shaw, for the very kind expressions and kind remarks he had been pleased to make respecting the lodge, and he hoped that so far as the future of the lodge was concerned, those wishes and expressions might be fully realised. Bro. Haigh also begged to thank the numerous brethren present from other lodges in this and other provinces, for the enthusiastic reception they had given to the toast. The lodge, he said, had been in existence over 100 years, having been first opened in the town of Barnsley in the year 1777, but in the year 1778 it is supposed to have ceased working for a lengthened period. There was no record of its proceedings from that date until the year 1804, when it was revived by warrant of confirmation, granted March 28th of that year, and removed from Barnsley to Dewsbury, and held its meeting at the Traveller's Rest, in the latter town, until the year 1815, when, on the 26th August, it was agreed, first, to pay all expenses that might be brought against the lodge; and, secondly, to dispose of the lodge to the best advantage. In a few years after this time the lodge regalia and warrant were purchased by brethren residing at Honley, and the first lodge meeting was held there on July 20th, 1820. It did not long remain at Honley, as on the 26th August, 1826, it was agreed to remove to Meltham, and accordingly the first Freemasons' lodge meeting was held in this village September 13th, 1826, and the Lodge of Peace has now been located here for nearly 51 years, and during the last half century it has had its times of adversity as well as its times of prosperity, but at the present time, he thought, it might be safely said to be in a more prosperous state than it ever was during any period of its existence. The lodge had during the time of its existence in Meltham taken a prominent part in the following interesting occasions, viz., on the 15th October, 1827, the brethren of the lodge assisted in laying the foundation stone of South Crossland Church, and the trowel used on the occasion was now in the possession of the lodge. On March 5th, 1835, under the auspices of the lodge, the foundation stone of Meltham Church Tower was laid by our late Bro. Charles Lee, the then D.P.G.M. of this province, and a sermon preached by our late Bro. Dr. Naylor, the Provincial Grand Chaplain. He concluded by again thanking them.

Bro. Charles Rayner, I.P.M. Lodge of Peace, then proposed the next toast. He said: Brethren, the toast which I have the honour and the pleasure of proposing is that of "The Visiting Brethren." It is a toast which is always well received in this lodge, but on the present occasion I feel sure that it will meet with a most enthusiastic reception. We have amongst us here to-day visiting brethren who have spent great portions of their lives in working hard, not only for the good of their own lodges and the good of their provinces, but also for the good and the interest of the Craft generally; brethren who have attained to high honours in the Craft, honours which have been well earned and which are well deserved, and my fervent wish and ardent hope is that the Great Architect of the Universe may give them long and happy lives to enjoy those honours. We are very proud to have amongst us the hard working W.D.P. Grand Master of this province, a brother who, in filling the high office which he now holds in the province, has proved himself to be a worthy successor to his most excellent predecessor, Bro. Bentley Shaw. We also feel greatly honoured by the presence of our much respected W.P.D.P.G.M., Bro. Bentley Shaw, a brother whose Masonic zeal is well known and greatly appreciated throughout the whole of this province, whose genial temperament, kind heartedness, and whose noble and generous sentiments have won for him both the respect and the admiration, I believe, of all who have ever had the pleasure of coming in contact with him. We are greatly delighted and highly honoured in having here to-day so many of the Present and Past Officers of Provincial Grand Lodge. They are all brethren who have worked very hard in the Craft. And lastly, brethren, I see before me a large number of visiting brethren whose love for Masonry none can doubt, brethren whose Masonic labours, like my own, are in a more humble sphere than those I have before mentioned, and many of them who, like myself, may perhaps never hope to reach the higher honours in the Craft, but whose labours for the good of Masonry will be none the less incessant on that account. They are brethren whose familiar faces may be found wherever there is any Masonic work to be done. In short, visiting brethren, I beg to thank you all with the greatest sincerity and from the very bottom of my heart, both on my own behalf and on behalf of every member of this, the old Lodge of Peace, for the great honour you have conferred upon the lodge by your presence on this great occasion. The toast was received with the greatest enthusiasm, and then

Bro. W. T. M. Sylvester proposed "The Masonic Charities."

Bro. Nimrod Earnshaw, the W.M. of the lodge, subsequently took the chair; and Bro. Jonas Craven, P.P.G.S.W., responded to the toast of "The Masonic Charities." He spoke of the large sums of money subscribed every year in support of these charities, and of the good that had been done generally.

After a few songs, the remainder of the evening was spent in a very harmonious manner, and the proceedings terminated soon after eight o'clock.

The committee of management consisted of Bros. Nimrod Earnshaw, W.M.; C. H. Redfearn, P.M., Sec.; D. Wood, P.M., Treasurer of the lodge; Wm. Haigh, P.M.; Wm. Myers, P.M., and C. Rayner, I.P.M., Chairman of the Committee.

CONSECRATION OF THE GUELPH
LODGE, No. 1685.

The Guelph Lodge, No. 1685, was consecrated on Saturday last, at the Red Lion, Leytonstone, by Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, who was assisted by Bro. Joshua Nunn, Past Grand Sword Bearer, as Senior Warden, Bro. W. T. Howe, Assistant Grand Pursuivant, as Junior Warden, Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, as Director of Ceremonies, Bro. Christian, as Inner Guard, and Bro. W. H. Lee, as Secretary.

The attendance of the brethren to witness the ceremony was sufficient testimony to another lodge being required in the neighbourhood, the number of visitors being very large, and composed mostly of local residents. The following is a complete list of the brethren who were present at the ceremony of consecration:—Walter Claridge, Ebenezer Skelt, J. W. Francis, S. N. Griffiths, George C. Young, Edw. Brown, Daniel Sayer, R. Vincent, John Hervey, G.S.; Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B.; H. G. Buss, Asst. G.S.; W. H. Lee, W.M. 975; G. Martin, 879; W. H. Allaway, 1598; J. J. Woolley, 604; H. Massey (Freemason), 619; W. T. Howe, A.G.P.; Thos. Burford, P.M. 55; John Hurst, 1572; N. S. Pargeter, 1598; A. Lewis, 1426; D. Blunsum, 742; W. Christian, W.M. 1662; Jas. Pinder, P.M. 1662; J. M. Hunt, P.M. 1662; J. W. Margetts, 1572; Jas. Buchanan, 949; W. Crouch, 989; W. Thomas, 1598; A. Oldroyd, J.D. 1227; H. W. Godbold, 1598; Isaac Buscall, S.W. 1528; W. Brown, 1598; W. Groome, W.M. 861; W. Penny, 1598; Geo. E. Walters, W.M. 1598, Sec. 1445; Walter J. Nicholls, 463; Charles B. Payne, G.T.; D. W. Litson, 1306; W. H. Martin, 174; J. Galluher, 1228; W. G. Hallows, 861; Jas. Conbro, 1150; Robert 'I' Wragg, 1228; James Pick, Doric; and W. Sutherland, 189.

The lodge having been duly formed and opened, the ceremony of consecration was proceeded with, and as no Chaplain was present, Bro. Hervey fulfilled the duties of Chaplain, in addition to those of Consecrating Master, He therefore, omitted his own address to the brethren at the opening of the lodge, but gave it at that period of the ceremony when the Chaplain is accustomed to deliver the oration. Having arrived at this period,

Bro. Hervey said:—In the absence to-day of a Chaplain it will devolve upon me to say a few words to you, and they will be very few on the present occasion. I have had so many lodges to consecrate lately that really it is impossible for me to find new subjects on which to address the brethren, and I find it difficult to sit down (in fact I have not time) and write an oration or address for every new lodge it falls to my lot to consecrate. But I shall trouble you with a few words on this occasion, and as I said, they shall be few. It has given me pleasure to-day to attend here and consecrate this lodge. I recollect that about nine years ago I came down here, not to this very house, but in its immediate neighbourhood, to consecrate the Beacontree Lodge, a lodge which has maintained its reputation in a very high degree, a lodge which I am not ashamed to acknowledge as being one of my children. I, on that occasion, installed Bro. Barford as first Master, and I assure you that it has given me satisfaction to attend to-day in a house which is under his direction to consecrate another lodge, because I know that wherever Bro. Barford is concerned everything will be done that will conduce to the respectability of Masonry, and that nothing will be forgotten which can add to the comfort of the brethren who come here. Since the time I installed Bro. Barford I have been here again, not on one occasion only, but on many occasions, and one especially, not many months ago, in this room, when I consecrated the Constitutional Chapter, No. 55. To-day I once more make my appearance on the old boards to consecrate the Guelph Lodge, which takes its name from that of the Royal family of England, which the lodge has the special permission from the Prince of Wales to bear. I have upon many occasions impressed upon those I have addressed the necessity of being careful as to whom they introduce into the Craft, and I scarcely think it is necessary for me to-day again to speak upon that subject. It has been over and over again a cry not to introduce any persons except those who are well known—I do not say casually known, but well known, to those who propose them for admission to a lodge. When you admit a man to a lodge you take him like a wife almost, "for better or for worse," because you cannot say to him afterwards, "You are a disagreeable fellow, and we do not like you; there's the door, and you had better walk off." But you must find some tangible and legitimate reason why you should get rid of him; you must show, according to the Book of Constitutions, which lies now upon this pedestal, that he has done something which is contrary to the laws of the Craft before you can reasonably and legally expel him from your ranks. A man may be, in one case, very disagreeable, and yet be a very good man in the main; but still he may not be one that you care to associate with, or that the brethren like, and therefore it is that when you are going to admit men into your ranks, you should look before you leap, and know whom you are admitting. Again, there is another subject which I have repeatedly alluded to, and that is the subject of blackballing. If you do not like a candidate that is proposed, the fairest way is to speak first to the brother who proposed him and tell him candidly that his friend will not be agreeable to one or two who belong to the lodge, and therefore he would act wisely to withdraw him. But to go behind a man's back (because I almost say it is going behind his back to put a black ball into a box) simply (and frequently it is done) for no other reason than because one brother has not obtained office or because there is a disagreement with the Master or the officers, or from some motive of that kind, I think it is like stabbing a man without giving him a chance of defence. Now those are two things which I would warn you against, which I hope the W.M. (I dare say he has heard me before allude to these two subjects) will guard against. On account of his having heard these things before, I have said very little about it now. And now I would say a very few words to the officers of the lodge, and the manner in which they should serve the Master. It is very difficult for the W.M. to carry the work of the lodge properly unless he is well supported, and he ought to be well supported by the brethren in more ways than one. First, of all, they should be attentive to their duties, making themselves masters of what they are undertaking, and being at all times in their places at the proper time, so that the machine of the lodge may move smoothly and well, and that there shall be no hitch in conducting the business which may come before the Master. I do not know anything more mortifying to a Master than to find himself in the chair (and that must be especially mortifying in a young lodge, where punctuality is more desirable because there are no Past Masters or old members to look to) without Wardens or Deacons. A Master cannot perform all the duties of the lodge without assistance; he cannot keep his pedestal, he cannot of course if a candidate is to be initiated—the Master cannot conduct him round the lodge and discharge those duties which devolve on a Deacon, and also those which fall to a Warden. I trust, and I am sure, the officers of this lodge will give their best support to the Master. When I say I trust they will support the W.M., as they ought to do, I mean that I trust they will make themselves masters of the duties they undertake to perform. Those duties are not at first very onerous; but it is well for an officer to be a little zealous; it is well that he should learn the duties of more than one office, and then he may materially assist the Master on many occasions in the performance of his duties. Brethren, I told you that I should not waste your time much to-day. I hope that in the few remarks I have made you will—and I may venture to think you will—say I have not said too much. I do not think it is necessary to say a great deal, but I hope I have said enough, and that the very few words I have used if they are worth anything may produce their fruit: if not they will fall, as many words do from much more experienced men than myself in addressing assemblies, not quite down, but at any rate make some little impression on those to whom they are addressed.

The ceremony of consecration was then completed, and Bro. Hervey installed Bro. Edwin Bare as first Worshipful Master of the Guelph Lodge, 1685. The brethren invested with the collars and jewels of office were Bros. W. Charles Claridge, S.W.; Ebenezer Skelt, J.W.; Edward Brown, Treasurer; J. B. Shackleton, Secretary (W. H. Lee was invested with Bro. Shackleton's collar, Bro. Shackleton being absent in consequence of the death of his father); J. W. Francis, S.D.; S. N. Griffiths, J.D.; R. Vincent, I.G.; Daniel Sayer, D.C.; and W. Steedman, Tyler. Bro. Hervey delivered the address to the W.M.; Bro. W. T. Howe the address to the Wardens; and Bro. Joshua Nunn, that to the brethren.

On the motion of the W.M., seconded by the S.W., Bro. Hervey was unanimously elected an honorary member of the lodge; and in acknowledging the compliment Bro. Hervey said that although Saturday was the only day in which Grand Secretary and the brethren in his office got some little relaxation from their duties by leaving the office earlier than on other days, he could not find it in his heart to say no when he was asked to attend at Leytonstone to consecrate the Guelph Lodge. Having done so, and received the thanks of the brethren for what little he had done he had to tender his acknowledgments to the brethren for the hearty manner in which he had been received. He would just make one observation with respect to honorary members, that they could neither speak, vote, nor hold office in a lodge. Notwithstanding that he was sure that if he came down to any of the meetings of this lodge he would be received very kindly, and although he should not attempt to vote or speak, or put any brother out of office for his own purpose, anything he said would be accepted by the brethren with great kindness.

The W.M. having proposed the names of several brethren as joining members, a vote of thanks to the Grand Officers for coming to consecrate the lodge was unanimously passed, on the motion of the S.W., seconded by the J. W. Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, replied, and the S.W. having proposed, and the W.M. seconded, seven gentlemen as initiates, lodge was closed, and the brethren shortly afterwards partook of a choice banquet, which was provided by Bro. Barford, the table being elegantly decorated with a profusion of summer flowers and fruit. Two splendid bouquets were presented to Bro. Hervey, one by Bro. Barford and the other by a lady—a touching compliment, which he feelingly acknowledged at a later period of the evening. The speeches which followed the banquet were briefly given, and the introductory toasts having been disposed of, Bro. Joshua Nunn, in replying for the Grand Officers, after acknowledging the toast on behalf of Lord Carnarvon and Lord Skelmersdale, said that for himself and the other Grand Officers present they felt highly gratified with the reception they had met with. At no consecration and at no banquet had they experienced such great satisfaction. The consecration had been admirably conducted; the lodge room had been elegantly fitted; and the beauty of the banquet table and the sumptuousness of the banquet were as unsurpassed as they were unexpected. Going into the country the Grand Officers would hardly hope to find the banquets so perfect as they were in town, and they were not prepared to find such a display as they had witnessed at Leytonstone. From the way in which everything had been done that day the Grand Officers concluded that great success would attend the Guelph Lodge. Let them hope that years hence it might be even more successful than it had been that day. They had heard some excellent names read out as proposed joining members and initiates, and where such brethren and gentlemen were proposed there was every hope that they would be an honour not only to their lodge but to Masonry generally.

Bro. Hervey proposed "The Health of the W.M., and Success to the Guelph Lodge." In doing so he said—I have occupied a good deal of your time and attention this afternoon, and I was about to say that I hope this will be the last occasion that I shall have the necessity of addressing you; but I think the subject on which I am now going to speak is one which will interest you, which will tend to consolidate the kind feelings, not only of the Guelph Lodge, but of all the brethren who are present. I have, as I said earlier in the evening, consecrated a great many lodges. I have been successful, more or less, in those consecrations; but it has been a gratifying feeling to me that I have never yet consecrated a lodge which has been unsuccessful. I am quite sure that the Guelph Lodge will not falsify my previous experience, or the anticipations which I have formed of its future career. I must remind you that unfortunately some of us are tied by the leg this evening, but not tied by the leg in the manner in which I should like to be tied; we are compelled by that malicious demon the train to leave you somewhat early. I shall therefore say but few words more than I have already said. I think you will agree with me that there is one toast which I, in the position that I occupy to-day, ought to propose; and not that I ought to propose only, but propose with expressions of most confident hope for the future of the lodge. I am about to give you "The Health of the W.M., and Success to the Guelph Lodge." On the exertions of the W.M. of course much of the future career of the lodge must depend. That he will exert himself to the utmost to carry out the duties of his office and ensure the success of his lodge I have no doubt—I am sure you do not doubt it; and I feel confident, as I told you early in the evening, that his officers will ably support him. Without that support the W.M. cannot effect the success which he hopes to be the result of his labours, and which he is entitled to. You are all bound, I may say, to assist him in securing the success of the lodge; and if time were not so pressing, which I am reminded of by Bro. Nunn looking at his watch, I might again mention those subjects which I spoke of in the lodge with respect to the duties of the officers, and which, if borne in mind and acted upon, will materially assist the W.M. during the period for which he will preside over you. But I shall not detain you any further, though I did not intend to close my remarks so hastily as the train compels me to do.

The W.M. in reply said: I am indeed most heartily obliged to our Very Worshipful Bro. Hervey, the Grand Secretary, for the kind manner in which he has proposed my health, and also for the very hearty manner in which he has wished this lodge every prosperity. I need scarcely repeat the very deep obligation which we feel placed under to Bro. Hervey, for the kindness he has shown in coming here on the day, which perhaps of all others, is the most inconvenient for him, because on that evening it is almost impossible to obtain the services of a Chaplain. Taking all the duties therefore on himself entails much more labour, and this, I may say, must add to the obligation which under other circumstances we should owe him. While mentioning Bro. Hervey's name, I would propose his health, and will do so without making any further remarks, as he is anxious to save his train.

Bro. Hervey, in acknowledging the toast, said the brethren had just drunk his health very cordially. He had found himself in that position very frequently, and he might frankly tell the W.M. and brethren that he should be very much pained if in any society of Freemasons with whom he might mingle he was not cordially received, because that would imply some shortcomings on his part, and he should feel it very acutely. He had never arrived at that point, and he trusted he never should. He could only thank the W.M. and brethren for the way in which he had been received that evening; and if he had done some little service to the lodge by bringing it into existence he was amply repaid by the cordiality and kindness of the brethren who were around the table. But there was one thing which he confessed touched him not a little. He had had a bouquet presented to him by Bro. Barford, which he did feel to be an offering very kindly and very cordially given, one which had created in his mind a very sincere sentiment of gratitude, and for which he wished to tender Bro. Barford, now publicly, his very sincere and grateful thanks. But now there was a second bouquet, which had been sent to him by the wife of Bro. Hallows, for him (Bro. Hervey) to take home to his invalid sister. Now he had never had the pleasure of seeing this kind lady, Mrs. Hallows, more than once, and then only for a few minutes, when he had the pleasure of consecrating the Beaconsfield Lodge; but the recollection of the lady was vividly brought to his mind by the kindness which had prompted her to send such a charming bouquet for an invalid he had left at home. These were attentions which any one should be proud of, and they bound one still closer to Freemasonry, Bro. Hervey, who was deeply affected, then retired with the rest of the Grand Officers, amid a hearty salute. The W.M. afterwards proposed "The Health of the Visitors."

Bro. Bianchi was the first to respond. He said that as the Master of the Ley Spring Lodge, who had initiated, passed, and raised Bro. Bare, he felt very proud to see one of his own children occupy the position of Master of a lodge. It must be the height of ambition of any brother who took an interest in Masonry to arrive at the position of Master of a lodge. Bro. Bare would probably have the same amount of work during his year of office as he (Bro. Bianchi) had, which was the initiation, passing, and raising 16 brethren. The Guelph Lodge would no doubt be as successful as the Ley Spring, which now number 27 or 28 members. Lodges which had a very large number of members were not always the most comfortable; but he would challenge any lodge in England to produce 16 members who were more fitted to be brethren than those 16 he had had the honour to initiate. In the Guelph Lodge he found that the W.M., the J.W. (he did not know how many more of the officers), the D.C., and the Treasurer, were all initiates of the Ley Spring Lodge, and he thought this was a circumstance which he or any Master of the Ley Spring Lodge might well be proud of.

Bro. W. H. Lee, as one of the visitors, expressed the pleasure he had had in visiting the lodge, but said that that pleasure was mixed with a good deal of pain on account of the sad event which necessitated the absence of Bro. Shackleton, the Secretary, for whom he had that day acted. Bro. George E. Walters said that it had given him unlimited pleasure to be present, as he had had the honour of proposing the W.M. as an initiate in the Ley Spring Lodge. He and the W.M. had many conversations together before the W.M. joined the Order, and many were the enquiries which Bro. Bare made of him previous to joining. No member of the Order was more qualified to be received into it than Bro. Bare: no man possessed in a higher degree the qualifications of a Mason. It had been a great gratification to him (Bro. Walters) to see the rapid strides Freemasonry had made in that district within the last few years. When he first came into it four years ago the only lodge held at that house was the Beacontree. When he went into the neighbourhood he went to Bro. Barford and asked him if there was a lodge of instruction in the district. Bro. Barford told him no, that they did not require one, as all the brethren down there were Past Masters. Suggesting to Bro. Barford that there might be some new brethren coming down to reside there, and that it might be as well to have a lodge of instruction, he asked Bro. Barford whether he might rely on his (Bro. Barford's) co-operation if he tried to establish such a lodge. He said yes; and every one knew that anything in Masonry would have Bro. Barford's co-operation. The consequence was that a lodge of instruction was established, and its success might be judged of from the fact that out of the lodge of instruction sprang the Ley Spring Lodge. Indirectly he might take it to himself that he had had something to do with the founding of the Guelph Lodge, for he proposed Bro. Bare as one of the initiates of the Ley Spring Lodge; and he hoped he was not giving Bro. Bare too much praise when he said that if it had not been for Bro. Bare the Guelph Lodge would not have come into existence.

Bros. Christian, Pinder, Hurst, Sullivan, and other brethren also replied, and Bro. Brown replied for "The Treasurer and Secretary." The W.M. had been pleased to refer to his long association with him. The W.M. had known him better than many of the brethren who were present knew him; and he was gratified to hear the W.M. testify to that undeviating line of conduct that always had marked his course. His dear father used to tell him that a good Mason was sure to be a good man; and as his father had been forty-two years a member of one lodge, he supposed he knew something about it. He was very pleased to find himself among friends that were Masons, and especially among those to whom he was so well known. It would be a very great sorrow to him to have to enter into a lodge, as he had known some persons do, and then find but one or two there with whom he was acquainted. To have the pleasure of the acquaintance of the members of this lodge and of the Ley Spring Lodge, as well as their confidence, was to him, in his position, all important. He felt it his duty to say that it would ever be his delight to serve the lodge in any way he possibly could. Whenever anything was to be done that was to be entrusted to his care it should be done well. He felt under great obligations to Bro. Barford for the kindness he had received from him. He must say it in his presence, as he had often said it in his absence, that he esteemed him very highly indeed, and they should all do so. They might all feel that while he (Bro. Brown) was permitted to be among them it would be his highest pleasure to serve not only this lodge and others with which he was associated, but the interests of Freemasonry wherever they might come under his hands.

The W.M., in proposing "The Health of the S.W. and J.W.," said he was sure that whatsoever they undertook to do they would do to the best of their ability.

These brethren having responded, "The Officers' Health" was proposed and drunk, and the S.D. replied.

Bro. Stedman gave the Tyler's toast, and before separating a special toast was drunk in acknowledgment of the services of Bro. Barford; and Bro. Barford having replied the brethren separated.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF NORTHS. AND HUNTS.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Norths and Hunts was held at the Lodge of Chicheley, 607, Thrapston, on Thursday, the 21st inst. The Board of Benevolence met at twelve, at which, in addition to sums voted to local cases, £20 was voted to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution and ten guineas to the Girls' School; and at one o'clock his Grace the Duke of Manchester, P.G.M., assisted by Bro. On the motion of Bro. Ed. Cox, it was resolved that a committee be appointed for the purpose of investigating the claims of applicants for election into either of the Masonic Institutions, with power to frame rules so as to ensure proper supervision, and especially connected action in the province.

The lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren, adjourned to a marquee in the grounds of Bro. Rogers, kindly lent for the occasion, where a banquet had been prepared by Mr. G. House, of Peterborough. His Grace the Duke of Manchester presided. On his left were Bros. Butler Wilkins, D.P.G.M.; Ed. Cox, P.P.G.S.W.; B. Allen and G. Thackeray, Socrates; S. Jacobs, Fidelity; E. Orford, Merit; E. Vergette, St. Peter's; and Buckle, P.G.S. On the left of the R.W.P.G.M. were Bros. Rev. F. S. Westbrook, P.G. Chap.; Rev. R. H. Cox, Prov. G. Asst. Chap.; J. T. Green, P.G.J.W.; Winter, W.M. 360; J. S. Norman, and F. Gadsby, and in addition to the brethren whose names have been already given, the Craft visitors, Bros. Cox, Ark Lodge, 10, Belfast; J. D. Witherspoon, Port Natal, 738, South Africa; and J. W. Linnett, Sir Watkin, 1477, North Wales. Bro. Negus, P.G.O., presided at the piano.

The first toast, that of "The Queen and the Craft," was duly honoured, and the Masonic anthem was sung.

The Duke next gave "The M.W.G.M. of England, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G.," remarking that he had been requested to convey to the Province of Norths and Hunts the greetings of His Royal Highness. (The toast was received with Masonic cheers.)

The Duke next gave "The M.W. Pro G.M., Earl Carnarvon, the R.W.D.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, and the Officers of Grand Lodge," who received due honours.

Bro. J. H. Gandy, P.M., in the absence of the W.M. (Bro. Bell) gave the next toast, "The R.W. Prov. G.M. of the Province, His Grace the Duke of Manchester." (Applause.) The Masons of Norths and Hunts were highly favoured in having for a G.M. a nobleman who was so excellent a Mason, and so highly esteemed and beloved by all with whom he came in contact. (Applause.) When a nobleman or any other person in an inferior position took office he was expected to do his duty as far as he possibly could, properly and efficiently, and they as Masons might congratulate themselves that their R.W. Prov. G.M. did his duty efficiently and in every way tried to carry out their principles, not only in his own conduct but in administering the affairs of the Province. (Hear, hear.) They had a proof of it in the presence of His Grace that day, for they knew that there were great attractions in London which might well have seduced him, and kept him from coming amongst them. (Hear, hear.) Let them drink the toast in the hope that His Grace would be spared many years to fulfil the duties of his office as efficiently as he had done in the past. (Applause and Masonic honours.)

His Grace, in reply, said Bro. Gandy had hinted at the sacrifice which he (the Prov. G.M.) might have made in being there that day. "A nod is as good as a wink to a blind horse" (laughter), and he thought the allusion was to horses (renewed laughter); but he begged to assure them that when that day was fixed he was not aware it was the Ascot race meeting. But he did give up another gathering in order to be present (applause), and perhaps their brother from Natal might have heard of it, and that was a meeting of the Colonial Institute at the South Kensington Museum. He was much obliged for the way in which the toast had been proposed by Bro. Gandy, and received by them, and he was very glad if he could in any slight degree do anything which might be considered advantageous by his neighbours. (Hear, hear.) His Grace then asked them to drink the health of the D. Prov. G.M., who he now learnt did more than he (the noble Duke) had been aware of in carrying on the work of the Province in such a satisfactory manner, and for which he most heartily thanked him. (Hear, hear, and applause.) He again thanked the D. Prov. G.M. for taking so many duties off his shoulders and discharging them so efficiently.

The toast having been duly honoured, was most enthusiastically received, and Bro. Butler Wilkins, in response, said that at those anniversaries, when the brethren came together from all parts of the Province, one felt encouraged to persevere in the discharge of his duty; still in looking back upon the past it was impossible to conceal from himself that personally he had not found the office altogether a bed of roses. (Hear, hear.) At the same time, he was very glad to be able to say that the very cordial reception he invariably received from the brethren throughout the Province considerably lightened any trouble he might occasionally have in dealing with provincial matters. (Hear, hear.) Turning to other matters, he congratulated the brethren on the successful return again of another of their candidates, through the instrumentality and generalship of Bro. E. Cox, to whom their best thanks were due for the management of their charitable affairs. (Applause.) While they had one so energetic in their behalf they should furnish him with a good supply of ammunition in the shape of votes. He was sorry to say that some lodges had been remiss in that, and he hoped it would not recur. In concluding, the D.P.G.M. said it was intended to publish annually a small pocket calendar for the Province, giving information as to meetings of lodges and chapters, Masters and officers, &c., and if it were well taken up, it would help to knit them more and more together, and to promote that social intercourse which ought to exist amongst them. (Applause.) Bro. Stanton had offered to print the calendar gratuitously, but as that which was lightly obtained was often regarded as of little value, it was thought advisable to make a small charge for the calendar, which would be published as soon as possible. (Applause.) Before sitting down, Bro.

Butler Wilkins thanked the W.M. and brethren of the Chicheley Lodge for the reception they had given them.

His Grace then intimated that next year the meeting would be held at Huntingdon, and he then proposed "The Royal Masonic Benevolent Institutions."

Bro. E. Cox responded in his usual happy manner, and gave the brethren present a vast amount of information in connection with the Masonic Charities, and which could only be obtained by long experience of their workings.

His Grace then gave, "The Visiting Brethren," and Bro. Witherspoon responded, giving some interesting particulars concerning Port Natal.

"The P. Prov. G. Officers of the Province" was proposed by Bro. Puxley, and replied to by Bro. E. I. Orford, who gave "The P.G. Treasurer and Secretary," Bros. Howes and Buckle replying. "The P.G. Wardens and other Grand Officers," "The W.M.'s of the Lodges of the Province," and "The Ladies," were also toasted, and the Tyler's toast, given by Bro. Cook, brought the proceedings to a conclusion.

CONSECRATION OF THE HERVEY LODGE No. 1692.

The consecration of this lodge took place on the 26th inst., at the George Inn, Hayes, V.W. Bro. Hervey, Grand Secretary, from whom the lodge takes its title, acting as Consecrating Officer. Present: Viscount Holmesdale, M.P., Prov. G. M.; Bros. Eastes, D.P.G.M.; Rev. W. A. Hill, P.G. Chaplain; Coupland, P. Prov. J.G.W.; F. Kingsbury, Prov. G.O.; E. Coste, Prov. G.S.; Newsom, P.P.G.S.B.; S. Rawson, P.D.G.M. China; Hervey, G.S.; Bass, A.G.S.; R. F. Gould, P. Prov. S.G.W. Gibraltar; Emanuel C. Goodheart, John J. Hamilton, H. R. Brett, P.M. 92; William W. Baxter, George Weeks, Robert Moore, J. Hardy Booth, Capt. Alfred Torrens, R. F. Williams, A. S. Owen, 1223; John Covell, 1314; M. P. Powell, 742; J. H. Jewell, P.M. 1223; F. W. Forrester, 222; J. N. Fradgley, 1494; J. H. Pearson, 1319; Robert Hilton, 1319; J. Hurst, William Land, P.M. 742; S. Carrington, 1314.

The brethren having assembled pursuant to notice, proceeded to open the lodge in the Three Degrees, under the presidency of the Prov. G.M., who, after a suitable address on the object of the meeting, delegated to the Grand Secretary of England the task of consecration, which was performed by Bro. John Hervey with his accustomed skill and ability. The Wardens' chairs were occupied respectively by Bros. Rawson and Coupland, and the proceedings derived additional solemnity from the very efficient services of the Prov. Grand Chaplain, (acting as Grand Chaplain), and of Bro. Bass, acting as Director of Ceremonies. The oration of the Acting Grand Chaplain was most admirably delivered, a general feeling of regret being expressed, that so able and impressive a discourse, should live only in the memories of those who were fortunate enough to be present.

Bro. Newsom, W.M. designate, having been duly installed, the following officers were invested:—Bros. E. C. Goodheart, S.W.; J. J. Hamilton, J.W.; H. R. Brett, P.M. 92, Treas.; Baxter, S.D.; Booth, J.D.; Moore, I.G.

In investing Bro. Brett with his badge of office, the W.M., in a feeling manner, described the very great services he had already rendered to the Hervey Lodge, and in the name of the founders presented him with a Treasurers' jewel, as a slight mark of their esteem and gratitude.

Votes of thanks were unanimously passed to the Prov. G.M., the Consecrating Officers, and the Prov. G. Chaplain.

Eleven candidates were proposed for initiation, and three for joining.

The brethren then adjourned for refreshment, which was served in excellent style in the chief room of the George Inn. Much regret, however, was felt, at the inability of the Prov. G.M. to remain for the banquet, owing to unavoidable business in town.

The W.M., Bro. Newsom, presided, and after the customary loyal toasts, that of "The Grand Officers" followed, responded to by Bro. Rawson. "The health of the Prov. G.M., Viscount Holmesdale, M.P.," was received with great applause. The following lines, having special reference to his lordship's family motto, were written for the occasion by Bro. J. H. Jewell, P.M.

By Constancy and steady work
A true Freemason doth aspire

To reach the summit of his hopes,
The crowning of his heart's desire.
Combined with temperance and zeal,
An upright life, a moral aim,
Stability of purpose—with
The worth to win an honour'd name.

By Valour he combats the world
'Gainst prejudice and bitter strife;
Yet prudence in each act,—he feels
The sacred duties of his life:
To raise the fallen, help the weak,
To save a brother from distress,
To dry the widow's tears, and be
A father to the fatherless.

With Virtue for his help and guide
He stands aloof from frown or smile,
And walks the path of rectitude
Unknown to subtlety or guile;
With steady aim pursues the course
In wisdom he had well begun;
And justice consecrates the work
By Constancy and Valour won.

The W.M. then, in very felicitous language, proposed "The Health of the Consecrating Officer," Bro. Hervey, G.S., expressing the pride and gratification which the brethren experienced, at their lodge bearing the honoured name of "Hervey," and at its being ushered into actual Masonic existence under circumstances so auspicious. Bro. Hervey, in the course of an eloquent reply, assured the members of the lodge that he looked forward to a very prosperous future for the "Hervey" Lodge, in the "quiet little nook," which had been so happily selected for their meetings.

Of the remaining toasts, that of "The Provincial Grand Officers" was responded to by Bro. Eastes, D.P.G.M.; "The Army and Navy," by Bros. Captain Torrens and R. F. Gould; "The Visitors" by Bros. Buss, A.G.S., and Coupland, P.P.J.G.W.

"The W.M.," proposed by the Grand Secretary, was acknowledged by Bro. Newsom in an animated speech.

"The Musical Brethren," by Bro. Kingsbury, who, in returning thanks for the three brethren, whose voluntary services, under his own direction, had so materially conduced to the effect of the ceremonies, and to the pleasure of the evening, congratulated the founders of the lodge, on the success of the day's proceedings, which he thought would bear a contrast with the ceremony of consecration, wherever performed.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

STEWARDS' VISIT TO WOOD GREEN.

On Monday afternoon, the Earl of Donoughmore, Past Senior Grand Warden, President of the Board of Stewards of the 70th annual festival, which was held on Wednesday, attended at the school to distribute the prizes before a very large party of brethren and ladies. His lordship was received by Bros. the Rev. Dr. Morris, Head Master; F. Binckes, Secretary; Capt. Wordsworth, S. S. Partridge, S. Rosenthal, Raynham W. Stewart, Thos. Cubitt, J. G. Chancellor, W. Roebuck, W. F. C. Moutrie, H. W. Hunt, R. B. Webster, George Kenning, D. W. Pearse, Massey (Freemason), Tanner, Fellows, Terry, Meggy, Cox, Harris, Levander, Adlard, and others, and after being conducted over the building, and having explained to him all the arrangements of the institution for the education and comfort of the pupils, proceeded to the gymnasium for the purpose of handing the prizes to the successful competitors. The gymnasium was admirably arranged for the visitors, the old school forms having been dispensed with, and chairs provided in place of them, by which means a greater number of visitors were accommodated with seats, and ladies afforded an easier method of ingress and egress than under the old system. The table at which his lordship and the House Committee sat, and on which were arranged the prizes, occupied the usual position against the east wall, while at the northern end of the gymnasium a stage was fitted up for dramatic performances for the day.

Shortly after two o'clock, when the Chairman and House Committee entered, every seat was occupied.

The prizes were distributed as follows:—

At intervals during the distribution of the prizes a selection of vocal and instrumental music and dramatic performances lent variety to the proceedings.

The dramatic performances were very ably executed, and caused an immense amount of laughter in the numerous company. The singing and music were also well executed, and the satisfaction of the visitors with what they witnessed was loudly and universally expressed. Although the following of the programme occupied three hours, there was no loss of time, the interspersing of the distribution of prizes with the musical and dramatic performances relieving the proceedings of monotony. The boys who took prizes were in readiness as soon as their names were called to come forward and receive them and the Chairman immediately handed a prize to each, and, without making a speech to the boys, congratulated and shook hands with them. When the programme was finished,

His Lordship said that having come to the close of the proceedings, it rested with him to say a few words to the meeting. He thought he would be giving utterance to the feelings of every one present when he said that owing to the exertions that had been made to entertain the company they had spent not only a very agreeable but a very instructive afternoon. Everything they had seen with their own eyes, and he need not, therefore, remind them of the excellence of the performances they had witnessed. The ladies and brethren had shown their appreciation of what they considered the chief performance by awarding the prize for elocution to H. Bowler. They had listened with pleasure to the plays and songs—and he would say with as much pleasure to the songs as the plays—and he could not help saying that the choir had performed their part most admirably. He was quite sure that all would agree with him in that, and that they were all gratified at being present that afternoon. Everybody had experienced a great amount of pleasure in giving the rewards of merit where those rewards had been honestly and fairly earned, as they had been by the prize takers that afternoon. He might say for his own part that for that reason as well as many others it had been a source of great pleasure to him to be the distributor of the prizes; first of all because it afforded him the opportunity for the first time of seeing the institution of which they were all so proud; and secondly, because in doing so he felt that he was giving the prizes to boys who had thoroughly earned the distinctions bestowed upon them. There was another thing which had struck him there that afternoon, that they might look back and mark what an advance had been made in the style of education within a short time. If they would only look at the time which was the earliest that he could himself remember, the education in Irish country schools was very small; a lot of little ragged children would be found round a cottage fire, a rough master, with a big stick, would be among them, and the only sign that it was a school was a notice outside the door, "Children taken in to bate" (laughter). Then they went back to the schools of the earlier part of the century, when the treatment and care of the pupils was very much less looked after than it was now. Then looking at the time of his own schooldays, some 15 years ago, the subjects of education were very much more limited and confined than they were now. In those days it was Latin and Greek, and very little else, which was like a dinner of all beef and no pudding, and nothing to wash it down with. Then they came to these more modern days, when they had experience of the Oxford and Cambridge and other university local examinations upon a great number of subjects. What had struck him was the large number of subjects which were taught in this Institution, of which they had specimens before them that day by the variety of studies for which prizes had been given. They had this clearly shown to them by the results. Dr. Morris had informed him that at the last Oxford and Cambridge middle-class local examinations 28 candidates went up from this institution, and that out of these 28 14 won honours. Some candidates passed in eight subjects, some in five, and some in four. One of the recipients of prizes that afternoon took up one subject spontaneously and worked at it. The certificates showed him the excellence of the standard of the examination in every case, and this spoke very highly not only for the pupils, but for the care and discrimination of those who were put in authority in the Institution, and he thought all the subscribers owed Dr. Morris, and those who were associated with him, a deep debt of gratitude for the admirable education which had been given (cheers). He had another return from South Kensington, which showed that out of 44 boys 39 passed in mathematics alone, while a great many passed in other subjects. He would like to say a word to the boys themselves. He did not know quite what to say, because there were many theories about boys nowadays. If he said

"My dear boys,

Mind your books and not your toys," he would be opposed by those who said,

"All work and no play

Makes Jack a dull boy," and if he went to the other extreme he would be equally opposed by a great many. What he would say was "Work; but not all bookwork." Boys who enjoyed outdoor sports got a zest for their work; and boys who worked hard got a zest for their outdoor sports. It was by a combination of the two that they would become active members of society. To the boys who had won prizes he would say, try to win more; to the boys who had not won prizes he would say, don't be disheartened, but try again, and you may get them, but if not, you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have tried your best. He was glad to hear that the Institution did not contain one lazy boy. He would ask the company to join him in wishing prosperity and success to the Institution, which was founded in 1797, and had gone on flourishing and increasing to the present time. They all hoped that it would go on flourishing and increasing for the future. His Lordship concluded by thanking the company for listening to him.

A vote of thanks was then accorded to the Chairman, on the motion of Capt. Wordsworth, and the whole party then adjourned to a déjeuner, at which Lord Donoughmore presided. A few toasts followed, among which were "The Queen," "The Prince of Wales and the Institution," to which Capt. Wordsworth responded, "The Chairman," "Dr. Morris," and "Bro. Binckes," the Secretary; and Lord Donoughmore shortly afterwards left. Numerous outdoor amusements followed, the band playing some excellent selections, and dancing concluded the enjoyments of the day.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF BERKS AND BUCKS.

The town of High Wycombe was visited for the first time on Monday last by the Provincial Grand Lodge embracing the adjoining counties of Berks and Bucks, and the assemblage numbered nearly 100 brethren, representing the seventeen lodges which are flourishing in different parts of the important province, which is so ably presided over by Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P., who has occupied that position for the past ten years. It had been rumoured that the proceedings would take place in the beautiful park of Lord Carington, and the presence of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of the Order, was spoken of in some quarters as being more than probable, but these reports lacked confirmation by those best acquainted with the nature of the arrangements, and hence the meeting had only an ordinary amount of significance, and the attendance was less than would have been seen under special circumstances as those indicated, inasmuch as the members of the Order in the two counties number upwards of 700. There were two subjects for regret on this occasion, one being the resignation of the Deputy Grand Master, Bro. Brownrigg, and the other the retirement of the energetic Prov. Grand Secretary Bro. Biggs, of Reading, who had held the office during the whole time of Sir Daniel Gooch's connection with the province. The office of Deputy Prov. Grand Master has not been filled up at present, but Bro. Biggs will be succeeded in the office of P.G. Sec. by Bro. Robert Bradley, of Reading, who has long been a member of the Craft, and is, therefore, thoroughly acquainted with the nature of the duties to be performed.

The members reached High Wycombe by the mid-day trains, and soon after one o'clock the Prov. Grand Lodge was opened, in the Town Hall, which has just been adorned with a portrait of the Herir Apparent, attired as a Knight of the Garter. The painting was executed at a cost of 1000 guineas, and presented to the town by Lord Carington; it hung on the wall in rear of Sir Daniel's Gooch's seat, and was much admired.

The attendance of officers and brethren comprised the following, the majority of whom have held, or are holding positions of honour, either in their respective lodges, or in the province:—Revs. J. S. Brownrigg, and Robbins, O. J. Grace, and Riddle; Major Charles Stephens, and Bros. G. Chancellor, R. C. Hurley, H. H. Hodges, W. Biggs, A. Welch, R. Bradley, Martin, S. Bradley, R. E. Mount, A. M. Yetts, J. Blowers, W. P. Ivey, W. S. Cantrell, junr.; J. Palmer, L. M. Nixon, W. Huckvale, H. Seward, Weston, D. Clarke, Tottle, Wade, G. Wheeler, Barnes, Ruckley, G. Hunt, C. Hunt, T. Williams, Redington, Mason, Fuller, Beal, Speechly, Bird, Humphries, Davey, Cox, C. D. Hume, R. Roberts, G. W. Dixon, J. O. Carter, L. Bryett, J. Whitehouse, R. G. Barton, F. Manley, J. R. Berry, C. A. Walter, H. D. Gooch, A. D'Almaine, H. Clarke, S. A. Pocock, G. de Fraine, J. Bance, R. Ravenor, G. J. Cosburn (Freemason), W. H. Herbert, W. J. Westrope, C. P. Smith, W. Knight, W. Jones, Bruton, Morgan, Phillips, Westfield, Frazer, &c.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened with the usual ceremonies, after which the customary business was proceeded with. The Provincial Grand Secretary (Bro. Biggs, of Reading), read the roll of the lodges, after which the Provincial Grand Treasurer (Bro. Chancellor, of Reading), presented the annual financial statement, from which it appeared there was a balance of £141 17s. 8d. on the general account, and £69 12s. 6d. on the charity account. On the motion of the P.G.M. various sums were voted out of the balance on the charity account to several of the lodges for disposal by them among the three great Masonic Charitable Institutions—the Boys' School, the Girls' School, and the Benevolent Institution.

The P.G. Secretary then read the reports received from the different lodges in the province, which it was stated numbered nearly 700 members, with 150 Past Masters. Upwards of 250 guineas had been disbursed in charity during the past year, and the balances in hand in the lodges at the time the accounts were compiled amounted to nearly £980.

The P. G. M. proposed, and Bro. Dixon seconded the re-election of Bro. Geo. Chancellor as P.G. Treasurer.

The motion was unanimously adopted, and Bro. Chancellor returned thanks.

The Provincial Grand Master then invested the following brethren with the Charity Jewel: Bro. John Bance, P.M. 574; Bro. W. Knight, 574; W. S. Cantrell, P.M. 771; and Bro. Heber Clarke, P.M. 945.

Bro. R. Bradley proposed a resolution of which he had given notice, providing for the attendance of the Secretary as well as the Worshipful Master of each lodge at the meetings of the Charity Committee, held in London.

Bro. Cantrell seconded the motion, which was adopted nem. con.

The P.G.M. spoke of the great and good work done by the Charity Committee, and assured the brethren who were ex-officio members that they would derive much instruction and benefit by attending the meetings.

The P.G.M. said he was sure the brethren would agree with him that it was a cause for much regret that Bro. Brownrigg had resigned the office of Deputy Provincial Grand Master, because he had always been an active and zealous Mason in the Province, and although they would not continue to have the benefit of Bro. Brownrigg's services as Deputy Provincial Grand Master, he hoped they would not lose his assistance as a prominent Mason in this Province. He felt sure he was acting in accordance with the wishes of the brethren generally in requesting the Secretary to place on the minutes a record, expressing the thanks of the Provincial Grand Lodge to Bro. Brownrigg, for his past services, and their regret at his resignation.

Bro. Brownrigg briefly replied.

The Provincial Grand Officers were then appointed and invested as follows:—

J. Palmer, P.M. 1501 ..... Prov. S.G.W.
W. H. Palmer, P.M. 771 ..... Prov. J.G.W.
Rev. R. A. Robins, 771 ..... Prov. G. Chap.

Manley, S.D. 771 ..... Prov. G. Stwds.
W. Hemmings, 1101 and 414 Prov. G. Tyler.

The Provincial Grand Master then said it now devolved upon him to discharge a duty which gave him both pleasure and sorrow. He regretted to say that Bro. Biggs had retired from the office of Prov. Grand Secretary, which he had ably filled for the past nine or ten years, during which time they had been greatly indebted for the excellent manner in which he had conducted the business of the province. He had no doubt Bro. Bradley would do his best to continue the admirable system in which Bro. Biggs had discharged the numerous duties associated with the office of Secretary. Having said this much he was going to ask the brethren to do something more than pass a mere compliment upon Bro. Biggs, and make a substantial recognition of his valuable services. He would propose that the sum of twenty-five guineas be voted out of the Provincial Grand Lodge funds which he hoped would be amply added to by the lodges throughout the province, for the purpose of making a presentation to Bro. Biggs that would be worthy of his acceptance, and worthy also of such a large and important province as Berks. and Bucks. He also proposed that a committee, consisting of the Masters of the lodges, be formed for the purpose of carrying out the object in view, and he hoped that all who joined in the undertaking would throw their whole heart into it.

Bro. Dixon seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted.

It was further resolved, that the thanks of the Provincial Grand Lodge to Bro. Biggs for his past services, and the regret felt by the brethren of the province on his retirement be recorded upon the minutes.

These resolutions were proposed and agreed to during the absence of Bro. Biggs from the lodge for a few minutes.

In concluding the business the Provincial Grand Master congratulated the brethren upon the prosperity attending Masonry in this Province, and expressed his hope that when the brethren again met the reports from the lodges would be as satisfactory as those which they had heard read on this occasion. The P.G.M. stated that he believed the next Provincial Grand Lodge would be held at Windsor.

The banquet was held at the Red Lion Hotel, and reflected great credit upon the cuisine of Mr. Puttick. The P.G.M. presided, and the P.G.S.W. and P.G.J.W. respectively officiated as Vice-Chairmen.

The P.G.M. having proposed "The Queen and the Craft," which was loyally responded to, the company drank the health of the M.W. the G. M. of England, Bro. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and also that of the M.W. the Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, the R.W. the Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, and the Grand Officers of England, past and present.

Bro. Biggs, P.P.G. Sec., then rose and said, that in the absence of the D.P.G.M., he had the great privilege and pride of giving what he thought was regarded by all the brethren as the toast of the evening, namely, "The health of the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Sir Daniel Gooch, Bt., M.P." (loud cheers). In this toast they were asked to do honour to a distinguished Mason, who had raised this province from a slough of despond to a position of importance among the Provincial Grand Lodges of England (cheers). When he looked back to the time Sir Daniel took the office of Grand Master of this province, and when he remembered the miserable procession of 23 Masons from Maidenhead to Boyn Hill Church, and contrasted the condition of affairs with the present condition of Masonry in Berks and Bucks, they saw how fortunate they had been in having Sir Daniel at their head, and they saw how much they were indebted to him (cheers). The occasion he alluded to presented a great contrast to the present, when they saw such a large attendance, and knew of the good feeling which existed among the Masons of Berks and Bucks. He ventured to say without fear of contradiction that the annals of Freemasonry scarcely presented an instance of a lodge of recent standing assuming such proportions as the Wycombe Lodge. Not only had the lodge supported the Charities, but its present Master (Bro. Cantrell) had himself given 100 guineas to each of the Masonic Institutions (cheers). The same brother had also served the various offices in the province, and the P.G.M., in making his appointments, had endeavoured to give them to such brethren as had done suit and service for the Craft (cheers). Sir Daniel was fully entitled to all the honour they could accord him, and he (Bro.

Higgs) was sure they all entertained the hope that the Great Architect of the Universe would long spare the valuable life of Sir Daniel to preside over this province, and that he would continue to enjoy all possible happiness and prosperity (cheers).

The P.G.M. briefly returned thanks, and proposed "The Health of the V.W. the D.P.G. Masters, and Past Grand Officers of the Province," for whom Bro. H. H. Hodges, P.P.G.S.W., returned thanks.

The health of the visiting brethren was next drunk, and responded to by Bros. Bruton, Morgan, and Phillips.

To the toast of "The Masonic Charities" Bro. Herbert Clarke replied.

"The Health of the Provincial Grand Wardens and other officers appointed this day," having been drunk, Bro. Palmer, P.G.J.W., and Bro. Cutler, P.G.J.W., severally responded, and Bro. Palmer thanked the brethren generally for the kind support they had given, by which two children of the late Bro. Owens, the first W.M. of the Wycombe Lodge, had been elected to the Masonic Schools.

The P.G.M. then gave "The Health of the Worshipful Master and Brethren of the Wycombe Lodge," to whom (Sir Daniel said), the Provincial Grand Lodge was deeply indebted for the kind reception given that day. (Cheers). The Wycombe Lodge was one of recent birth, but they had all heard how well it had been worked, and how successful it had been in its operations. They must all regret the loss of Bro. Owens, the first W.M. of the lodge, but it was some satisfaction to know that two of his children had been elected to the Masonic Schools.

Bro. Cantrell, in responding, assured the P.G.M. that the Wycombe brethren esteemed it a great honour that they should have been permitted to receive the Provincial Grand Lodge on that occasion, seeing that the Wycombe Lodge was established only three years ago. He hoped, however, that this would not be the last time that the Provincial Grand Lodge would be held there. (Hear, hear). The Wycombe brethren also regarded it as a great honour that their first P.M. should have been appointed Provincial Grand Senior Warden. (Hear, hear.)

The P.G.M. then proposed "The Health of Bro. Biggs," remarking that the great benefit the province had derived from the labours of Bro. Biggs as Provincial Grand Secretary must be patent to all. (Hear, hear). Although they knew that Bro. Biggs' successor was an able man, who would do all he could for the prosperity of Masonry in the province, they could not help feeling considerable regret that Bro. Biggs had resigned the office he had so long held. (Hear, hear). He was sure all the brethren would join him in wishing their late Secretary health and happiness, and in hoping that although he would not hold the office of P.G.S. he would nevertheless give the new Secretary (Bro. Bradley) the benefit of his experience in carrying on the business of the province. (Cheers.)

Bro. Biggs, in reply, said he had simply retired because he felt age creeping upon him. He had reached his sixty-fourth year and for the past twenty-five years he had been in active work and taken a great interest in everything appertaining to Masonry. Having exhausted what he might describe as every move, and not knowing another he could play for the advantage of the Craft, he felt it was time to give place to another, who would give a fresh impetus to matters connected with the Craft in this province. He had done his best for the interests of Masonry, and was glad to see the great progress that had marked its history during the past nine or ten years. He should never retire from the province of Berks and Bucks, in which he naturally felt a deep interest, and he should be only too pleased to do anything in his power for the advantage of the Craft. (Cheers.)—He thanked Sir Daniel Gooch for the kind words he had been pleased to utter respecting him, and having been associated with Sir Daniel in Masonry for twenty-five years, he could assure the brethren their Provincial Grand Master was a man who was worth working for (cheers), and he felt that to have enjoyed the esteemed friendship of Sir Daniel, and been in such close contact with him for so many years, was a position that would be the envy of many. He could truly say that he had never abused Sir Daniel's confidence, and in every recommendation he had made for provincial appointments he had acted without favour or affection. He had left friendship out of the scale, and had endeavoured to recommend for appointment those who would reflect credit upon the P.G.M., and also upon the Province generally. He had always striven to keep the principles of Masonry in view, and rewarded those who, by their time, energy, or means, had done good suit and service to the Craft. (Cheers).

The P.G.M. next proposed "The Health of the Provincial Grand Treasurer and Secretary," and Bro. Chancellor and Bro. Robert Bradley severally returned thanks.

"The Health of the late D.P.G.M., Bro. the Rev. J. S. Brownrigg" was proposed in complimentary terms by the P.G.M., and received with much cordiality.

"The health of the Prov. Grand Stewards" was also drunk, and the Tyler's toast, for "All Poor and Distressed Masons" completed the list, and Sir Daniel Gooch vacated the chair.

The harmony of the gathering was greatly promoted by the vocal performances of Bro. Tottle, and others. Bro. Weston ably presided at the pianoforte.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

CHAUCER LODGE (No. 1540).—The regular meeting of this well-established and prosperous lodge was held at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark, on Wednesday, 27th ult. In the unavoidable absence of the W.M., Bro. J. C. Mason (who was out of town), the lodge was opened and presided over by Bro. T. J. Sabine, P.P.G.S.B. Middlesex, I.P.M. The work, done in an agreeable and pleasant manner, was the raising of Bros. Mayer, Ricardo, and Harrison. The entire ceremony was given, including the traditional history and the lecture on the Tracing Board. On the completion of the work the veteran Secretary, Bro. F. Walters, P.G.J.D. Midx., was heard to observe that out of the hundreds that he had initiated into Freemasonry no one had excelled Bro. Sabine, either in the work or the support given to the Masonic Charities. He said he ever felt proud of having initiated him. Every one was pleased to be present and witness such good working. This being the anniversary of the Boys' School Festival caused a thinner attendance than usual. But as this lodge has subscribed so well to the charities during its short existence it was not surprising that some of its officers should have attended at the festival. Several names were given in to the Secretary for initiation at the next meeting. Business ended, the lodge was closed and adjourned to Wednesday, August 22nd, to meet at half-past six o'clock p.m. Although no banquet was announced the brethren partook of a good supper. The usual loyal toasts were given and responded to. There were present Bros. Kemp, J.W.; C. W. Hudson, S.D.; H. Faija, J.D.; C. Graham, W.S.; A. J. Hawkes, I.G.; and amongst a large number of visitors we noticed Bros. Louis Belk, W.M. designate 1687; R. W. Williams, P.G. Organist Middlesex, W.M. elect 1538; and W. Mitchell, Organist 1325; and some others whose names we were unable to ascertain.

YARMOUTH.—Friendship Lodge (No. 100).—The last monthly meeting of this lodge, prior to the summer vacation, was held on Thursday, the 28th ult., at the Crown and Anchor Hotel. There was a very good attendance of the brethren, considering the hot weather, and the outdoor attractions of the season. Bro. Donald Currie was passed to the Second Degree by the W.M., Bro. R. Martins, the working tools from the sections being given by Bro. Glover. The lecture on the Second Tracing Board was then given by Bro. Hubbard, S.W., and after the lodge had been closed in the Second Degree, Bro. Bond, P.M., gave the Lecture on the First Tracing Board in a masterly manner.

IPSWICH.—British Union Lodge (No. 114).—This very old and flourishing lodge held its annual "Feast of Roses" on Thursday evening, the 21st ult., at which about thirty brethren were present, amongst whom were several distinguished brethren from London and the Provinces, representing Grand and Provincial Grand Officers. Lodge was opened punctually at 7 o'clock by the W.M., Bro. the Rev. J. B. Tweed, the following officers being also present: Bros. Miller, S.W.; Cassley, J.W.; Elliston, S.D.; Wright, J.D.; Spalding, P.M., Secretary; W. Clarke, W.M. 959, as D.C., filled the office of I.G. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. called upon Bro. Barber, P.M., to give a lecture upon the First Tracing Board, which was most effectively rendered, and which called forth the universal acclamation of the brethren present, at the conclusion of which the W.M. then proceeded to open the lodge in the Second Degree, and Bro. Cassley, J.W., delivered the lecture upon the Second Tracing Board, and although this worthy and energetic brother is, comparatively speaking, but a young Mason, his correctness and style of delivery elicited the admiration of all. Bro. Boby, P.M., then proposed that a vote of thanks be recorded to Bros. Barber, P.M., and Cassley, J.W., for the very able manner in which they had delivered the lectures. This was seconded by Bro. the Rev. Benton, P.M., and carried unanimously. The W.M. having resumed into the Second Degree, asked the necessary questions before proceeding to close the lodge. Bro. Clarke, W.M. and P.G.D.C., then rose and introduced the subject of the Masonic Hall, which he said was about to change hands, and he sincerely hoped it would be purchased by the Masons of Ipswich, which now boasted four Craft lodges, one Mark lodge, three chapters, two encampments, and one Rose Croix Chapter, the members of these various Masonic Orders numbering about 300 Brethren. He then gave a detail in as concise a form as possible of the amount of capital, &c., required, for carrying out the undertaking, and concluded by expressing a hope that so beautiful a building as that which they had had the pleasure of assembling in for the past twelve years might still be retained for Masonic purposes. A very lengthened discussion then ensued, the unanimous feeling being that no effort should be spared to retain the same. The lodge was then closed in peace and harmony, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting room adjoining, which was profusely decorated with that most lovely of all flowers "the rose," the table being literally laden with the same, and the top of the room behind the Worshipful Master's chair was most tastefully set out with ferns and other choice flowers, the whole being arranged by Bro. Connell, who deserves the thanks of the lodge for his energy and taste displayed on this occasion. The W.M. having given the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, which were interspersed by some very excellent singing by Bros. Miller, Abbott, Connell, and Taylor, concluded a most enjoyable and pleasant evening.

BARBADOS.—Albion Lodge (No. 196).—The regular stated meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday evening, the 6th June, at the Masonic Hall, Bridgetown. There was a large muster of members and visitors, including Bros. E. S. Crawford, W.M.; J. W. Williams, acting S.W.; W. Graydon, J.W.; C. A. Waterman, P.M., Treas.; M. Wilson, Sec.; N. R. Fitzpatrick, S.D.; J. E. King, J.D.; H. J. Armstrong, I.G.; A. B. Fillan, Acting Tyler; W. J. M. Clark, P.M.; C. T. Laurance, N. R. Nicolls, J. Murphy, R. J. Clinkett, D. Curtis, S. Wills, T. C. Killman, T. Hare, E. W. Terrey, A. S. Taylor. Among the visitors were W. H. Simpson, P.M. Scotia, 340; Geo. Sampson, P.M. Scotia, 340; T. Rickford, Scotia, 340; O. F. Coombs, P.M. Island Lodge, 89; U.S. Am.; C. M. Marchant, Martha's Vineyard, U.S. Am.; and W. Johnson, Royal Alfred, 420. The lodge was opened in due form, the minutes of past meetings read and confirmed. Ballot was taken for the admission of Mr. William Chavasse Millard, which resulted in his favour. Petitions were next handed in from Mr. E. Isaac Baeza and Sergeant Thomas Atherstone Mann, of the Army Hospital Corps. Both being highly recommended, their petitions were received, and W.M. directed that they be balloted for at the next regular meeting. The next business of the evening was the motion of Bro. T. D. Field, "That the Albion Lodge should unite with the Scotia Lodge and Chapter in establishing scholarships for six boys in the school on the ground floor of the Masonic building." Bro. M. Wilson begged leave to inform the W.M. that Bro. Field being unavoidably absent, he, as seconder of the motion, was quite ready, with permission from the chair, to submit the case to the members, which was this. A gentleman they all well knew to be a competent teacher, now rented from the Masonic body the room on the ground floor of the hall, as a school, and had some 18 to 20 boys. This gentleman had submitted a kind offer (letter read) to receive six boys, and give them a sound commercial education in consideration of his having the room rent free. The members were aware that at present, and until the comfortable building they now occupied was free from debt, which he felt sure would soon be the case, the trustees would not consent to give up the amount received for rent of this room; therefore, so as not to lose so liberal an offer, Bro. Field had brought forward his motion, which afforded him (Bro. Wilson) great pleasure in supporting, and in doing so this evening he was sure he could not too strongly advocate the measure, which it could not be denied was a good one. He would ask the brethren to remember what Masons were doing daily in the mother country for the good of the Craft, raising thousands of pounds annually for the education of hundreds of boys and girls, the children of Masons, and he felt sure we could not be doing wrong in our humble way if we followed their bright example. The amount required to be contributed by the two lodges and the chapter for this desirable object was only ten dollars, or, in other words, three dollars and thirty-three cents, each per month. It was true that the Albion had recently established two scholarships at Harrison's College, at £15 each per annum—one paid out of the lodge funds, and the other from subscriptions raised amongst its members and other kind subscribers. When this was first mooted in lodge members did not see how it could be managed, but now we all feel proud to know that we are educating two boys at this college, and hope some day to be able to increase the number, and in after years point them out as ornaments of the Masonic body. We, the Albion, have paid off our third portion of the building, and by the Treasurer's financial statement this evening we have 148 dollars to our credit, and this after deducting £15 for one boy's education at Harrison's for current year. He would, therefore, strongly urge the members to agree to the expenditure of the small amount asked for, viz., 3 dollars 33 cents, per month. Bro. J. W. Williams strongly supported the motion, which he felt happy to say was a good one. It was no use repeating what had already been said by his worthy brother, the Secretary, but he would only try to supply what he had omitted, which was this, that in sending out these six boys to obtain a preliminary education, although he could hardly term it preliminary, for it was well known that the gentleman who kept the school below was a classical scholar, and quite able to give boys a sound education, but still Harrison's College was now considered the first school in the island—from these six boys we could select from time to time, as a vacancy may occur, to extend their education at the college, and by going farther still, and giving the boy who had the best ability a profession, then we could say we had done something; we could point with pride and say, this is our boy. Therefore I press upon the members to support the measure, remembering that as a recognised body we have been holding our place in the country over 150 years, and what have we done to further the claims of education? Nothing! It is only but a few months ago that we have commenced by sending two boys to Harrison's College. When we established the first scholarship it was then said we were not in a position to do so, but we did it, and since then we have added a second; now by all means let us expend our share on this effort. Education is the lever which is moving the world; many of us know by experience the want of it; in our day we did not have the advantages of the present, let that be an incentive to us, by doing all in our power while we have the opportunity. The motion was then put to the lodge and carried unanimously, after which the visitors were thanked kindly for their attendance, and the lodge was closed.

LIVERPOOL.—Merchant's Lodge (No. 241).—The annual installation meeting of the members of this lodge (the praise and honour of which are in all the Masonic assemblies in West Lancashire, by reason of its noble and charitable deeds for all the Masonic Charities in and out of the province), was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, at noon of the 26th ult. There was a good gathering at the installation meeting, where the chair was taken at the opening by Bro. G. Hutchin, the retiring W.M., who was supported by a full complement of officers, a good array of P.G. representatives, and numerous visitors. After the transaction of some formal business, the chair of installing Master was assumed by Bro. J. H. Younghusband, P.M. 241, P.P.G.J.W. West Lancashire. In a most impressive and effective manner he installed Bro. Counsellor George Peet in the chair of the W.M. for the ensuing year, and he (the W.M.) afterwards invested the following as the officers during his year of office:—Bros. G. Hutchin, I.P.M.; J. Winsor, S.W.; T. H. Salter, Secretary; W. Williams, S.D.; John Latta, J. D.; T. Whitehead, I.G.; and G. Broadbridge, P.M., D.C. Before the closing of the lodge, Bro. G. Peet, W.M., presented a valuable P.M.'s jewel to Bro. G. Hutchin, I.P.M., as an evidence of the goodwill and esteem of the brethren. At the close of the business the members and visitors proceeded to Southport, where a splendid banquet was served at the Prince of Wales Hotel. Between eighty and ninety brethren were present, under the presidency of Bro. Peet, W.M., who was supported by a distinguished gathering of Provincial Grand Lodge Officers, Past Masters, and Visitors. After banquet, the W.M. (Bro. Peet) said:—Brethren, a sniff of the fresh breezes which blow over Southport must be more welcome to you than long and hackneyed speeches and, therefore, it is my intention to propose the toasts set down in our programme in the fewest possible words—an example which, I trust, will be followed by all who have to speak. Brethren, the first toast on our list—"Our noble Queen"—is the first in that part of our hearts where loyalty lodges, for several reasons—because she is a model sovereign, a virtuous lady, the mother of worthy Masons, and an example to the whole race of womankind. I ask a loyal greeting for "The Queen." The toast was received with great enthusiasm. The W.M. then gave "Bro. H.R.H. Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, Bro. the Duke of Connaught, Grand S.W., and the rest of the Royal Family;" and "Bro. the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro. G.M.; and Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, W. Deputy G.M. of England and R.W. Prov. G.M. of West Lancashire," the latter being responded to by Bro. Bullen, Past G.S.B. The W.M. in proposing "The West Lancashire Masonic Charitable Institutions" said, there are three virtues which especially distinguish our Craft, but the brightest and most distinguished is that which stands in the centre of what may be called "The Three Graces"—I mean "Relief," so nobly supported by the "Brotherly Love," and "Truth" which ought so especially to characterise our Masonic conduct. I have often thought of this as the link which has so strongly bound our Order for centuries, and I cannot help thinking so long as pure unostentatious charity remains as the most sparkling jewel in our insignia, Masonry must flourish and be a power on the earth. In the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution we have the embodiment of Masonic charity as the work of relief, what it does is done in an unobtrusive yet efficient way; this one of its chief charms. Thanks to the zeal and liberality of individuals and lodges this charity is now doing a really noble work, while standing on a firm basis; but I would remind the members of this and other lodges that as Masonry increases so must the calls on this and kindred institutions, grow more and more. The Hamer Benevolent Fund although comparatively young, is also, doubtless, designed to do good service, and as it is most admirably directed by well-known and tried brethren, I am sure it will receive the support from all which it deserves. Brethren, I give you "Our West Lancashire Charities," soliciting for them increased liberality, and coupling with the toast the names of Bros. R. Wilson, P.P.G.S.D. for the Hamer Benevolent Fund, and Bro. R. Brown, P.M. 241, for the West Lancashire. These brethren suitably responded, the latter (Bro. Brown) referring to the increasing claims on the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution as a reason for greater liberality on the part of the brethren in connection with the various lodges. Bro. Younghusband, P.P.G.J.W., gave the toast of "The Worshipful Master," which Bro. Peet acknowledged in an excellent speech; he said:—Bro. Younghusband, P.M.'s, officers, and brethren, the heartiness with which the toast of my health has been proposed, and the cordiality with which it has been received merit my special thanks, but the very great honour which you have conferred on me to day by placing me in the W.M.'s chair makes my words of thanks seem poor indeed. There are certain events in one's lifetime which stand out with special prominence, but in a Mason's career there can be none of greater interest than being placed in the chair of a lodge whose history is full of honourable deeds, by the unanimous vote of brethren whose name and fame are so well known, and after filling various offices in a manner which seems to have been satisfactory to the brethren. Perhaps no honour in Masonry is so honourable than that of the W.M., but attaching to the occupancy of the chair in the Merchants' Lodge there is a special honour which I assure you is fully realised by me. Brethren, I thank you most heartily for the honour you have conferred on me. The toast of "The Visitors" was acknowledged by Bros. J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C.; Bro. the Rev. T. W. Richardson, W.M. 1380; J. Jones, P.M. 216; and C. Leedham, P.M. 220. "The Installing Master," given by Bro. Hutchin, I.P.M., was eloquently acknowledged by Bro. Younghusband. The W.M. next proposed "The Past Masters," which Bros. Hutchin and Knight acknowledged in suitable terms. To the "Health of the Officers" the S.W. and J.W. responded. A capital selection of music was given by Bros. J. Jones, W. F. Naylor, J. Pugnire, and J. P. Bryan, Bro. Ewart efficiently presiding at the piano.

LEICESTER.—John of Gaunt Lodge (No. 523).—The annual festival and installation meeting of this lodge took place at the Masonic Hall, Leicester, on Tuesday, June 26th, and was attended by a very numerous gathering of members and visitors. The W.M. (Bro. W. T. Rowlett, P.P.G. Org.) was supported by the following P.M.'s of the lodge:—R.W. Bro. William Kelly, P.P.G.M.; Bros. George Toller, G.S.B. of England; S. S. Partridge, Prov. S.G.W.; W. B. Smith, Prov. G. Treas.; J. T. Thorp, I.P.M.; W. Sculthorpe, P.P.G.S.D.; F. J. Baines, P.P.G.S.D. Many visitors were present, among whom we noticed:—Bro. the Rev. W. Langley, P.P.S.G.W., P.M. 50; Bros. C. S. Preston, W.M. 50; C. E. Stretton, W.M. 279; A. Palmer, P.M. 279; J. W. Smith, P.M. 279; J. M. McAlister, A.M. 279; R. A. Barber, P.M. 1391; E. Mason, I.P.M. 1391; A. C. Smith, S.W. 50; R. B. Smith, 50; T. N. Cookson, 432; H. Colwell, 482; A. G. Randall, 1333; R. S. Toller, 1560; F. H. Hodges, 1560; W. Beeson, 1560. The ceremony of installing the W.M. elect (Bro. Tom Atkins Wykes, P.P.G. Org.) was admirably performed by Bro. W. T. Rowlett, the retiring W.M. After the usual salutes, the newly installed W.M. proceeded to appoint and invest his officers for the ensuing year, as follows:—Bros. Richard Taylor, S.W.; George Odell, J.W.; W. B. Smith, P.M., Treas.; Jos. Young, Sec.; C. C. Woodcock, S.D.; E. W. Potter, J.D.; C. E. Willoughby, Org.; R. J. Clarke, I.G.; F. R. Pickering and T. M. Quin, Stewards; C. Bembridge and T. Dunn, Tylers. The R.W. Bro. W. Kelly, P.P.G.M. (as the oldest P.M. of the lodge), then presented Bro. Rowlett with a Past Master's jewel, unanimously voted to him at a previous meeting, as a small recognition of the ability and courtesy displayed by him as W.M. during his year of office. After some further transaction of business, Bro. Partridge, Prov. S.G.W., as Charity Steward for the Boys' School Festival (to take place on the following day) took the opportunity of informing the brethren present that the generous manner in which his recent appeal had been responded to would enable his amount to far exceed any similar list gathered in the province. The lodge having been closed in due form, about sixty of the brethren sat down to the installation banquet, which left nothing to be desired, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were as heartily given as received; thus a very agreeable evening (enlivened by vocal and instrumental music of several of the brethren), was harmoniously brought to a close at a reasonable hour.

LIVERPOOL.—Downshire Lodge (No. 594).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, on Thursday, the 28th ult. Bro. R. P. France, the retiring W.M., occupied the chair at the opening, supported by Bros. H. Hunt, Peter M. Larsen, Thomas Dilcock, Past Masters; Bro. John Le Comber, S.W.; Bro. John L. Houghton, J.W.; Bro. Robert Ing, P.M.; Treasurer; Bro. Thos. Boswell, Secretary; Bro. William Leatham (S.D.), Bro. Ibbs, P.M., D.C., &c. After the usual proceedings the W.M. initiated a member, after which Bro. Le Comber was presented by Bros. Larsen and Dilcock, Past Masters, and installed by the retiring W.M. in a satisfactory manner. The following were invested as officers after the installation:—Bros. S. E. Ibbs, P.M., P.P.G.S.B., Director of Ceremonies; John L. Houghton, S.W.; T. Boswell, J.W.; R. Ing, P.M., Treasurer (re-elected); J. P. Pedersen, Hon. Sec.; J. J. Yapp, Organist; J. H. Burch, S.D.; J. Glitherow, J.D.; W. Vevors, I.G.; R. J. Wilkinson, S.S.; W. Peacock, J.S.; W. Strong and R. Maddox, Assistant Stewards; and Thos. Malcolm was elected Tyler. After the lodge business the members, with their wives and friends, to the number of nearly 250, set out for the Overton, Mills for the purpose of a picnic.

LIVERPOOL.—Dramatic Lodge (No. 1609).—The usual monthly meeting of the members of this excellently conducted lodge was held on Tuesday, the 26th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool. Bro. Joseph Bell was, as usual, in his place as W.M., and in his admirable working he was ably supported by Bros. W. J. Chapman, S.W.; L. Courtenay, J.W.; W. W. Sandbrook, J.D.; J. Atkinson, I.G.; A. Collinson, S.S.; J. Pye, J.S.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O., Org.; and W. H. Ball, Tyler. The members present included Bros. T. J. Avann, P. Lowndes, H. P. Squire, F. F. Carter, J. F. Cowdell, F. Wilkinson, T. J. Bailey, R. Burgess, J. Ashley, L. B. Brough, Dr. A. Whittle, J. Ballard, H. Leslie, J. Packer, J. Hill, W. Stafford, G. Martin, J. H. Stringer, McKenzie (Freemason), and others. There were five initiated and two raised, the work being again of a first-class kind. The brethren subsequently banquetted in the old lodge room.

APPLEBY.—Eden Valley Lodge No. 612).—On Friday, the 22nd inst., the regular meeting of this lodge was held, and was well attended by the members and visitors. In the absence of the W.M., Bro. the Rev.

Canon Simpson, LL.D., P.G. Chaplain of England, the brethren invited Bro. John Bowes, P.M., P.Z., P.J.G.W., to take the chair and conduct the ceremony of the day. In this he was assisted by Bros. Kirkbride, P.M., P.Z., P.S.G.W.; John Whitehead, P.M., P.G.R.; W. S. Foulton, P.M.; Nelson, W.M. 129; R. Godfrey, W.M. 1074; R. Warton, S.W., W.M. elect; Cockfield, J.W.; Barron, J. W. 129; G. R. Thompson; Rev. R. Chapelhow, Chaplain; Popple; Pearson; W. Ceussens, Hon. Sec.; Cupins, Tyler, &c. The lodge was opened in solemn form with prayer, when the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge being opened in the Second Degree, Bros. Kirkbride and Whitehead presented the W.M. elect, Bro. Warton, for the benefit of installation. The first part of the ceremony being completed, the following P.M.'s took up the positions indicated; Bros. Nelson, S.W.; Godfrey, J.W.; and Whitehead, I.G. The lodge was opened in the Third Degree, after which all below the Degree of Installed Master, with the exception of the W.M. elect, were requested to retire. Bro. Warton was then "entrusted" and retired. A Board of Installed Masters was opened in ample form, the W.M. elect readmitted and installed in the chair of K.S., greeted in due form and proclaimed from the centre. The worshipful brethren were then called off, when cement proper to the occasion was applied, according to ancient custom. Labour resumed, the Board of Installed Masters was closed and the brethren admitted. The W.M. was then greeted and proclaimed in the several degrees. The officers for the ensuing year having been appointed and invested, Bro. Kirkbride delivered the charges to the W.M. and brethren, Bro. Bowes the address to the Wardens. After some routine business the lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to the banquetting room where everything in season was bountifully supplied, and tastefully presented by the excellent hostess, Mrs. Rigg, and under the presidency of the newly installed W.M., nothing was wanted to render the occasion one of real enjoyment. Grace before and after meat was said by the Rev. R. Chapelhow. On the cloth being withdrawn a toast list of a unique character, interspersed with Shakespearian quotations, was placed in the hands of the brethren, for which the Appleby brethren were indebted to Bro. Kirkbride. Postprandial speeches are much of the same character wherever made; but the brethren were much pleased on this occasion by their heartiness and the true Masonic feeling manifested in the remarks of the various speakers. The W.M. is evidently held in the highest estimation, and no doubt he will make a thoroughly efficient Master. The Past Masters were highly spoken of for their long continued interest in the Craft, while the officers generally appear to have been selected with much judgment. The Installing Masters are well known and appreciated as "working" Masons and their rank in the Province shows that their worth is recognised by the Provincial Grand Master. The visitors one and all gave free expression to their obligations to the Appleby brethren for the very enjoyable day they had had in every degree. "The bell having tolled eleven," the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close, and the brethren separated—"Happy to meet, sorry to part, happy to meet again."

WOOLWICH.—Nelson Lodge (No. 700).—The regular monthly meeting of the above lodge took place on Wednesday, the 20th inst., at the Masonic Hall, William Street, the W.M., Bro. T. Butt, in the chair, supported by the following officers: T. Ward, I.P.M.; P.M.'s S. Goddard, W. Graham, C. Norman, C. W. Hobson, R. Bowles; S. Waters, S.W.; A. C. Woodley, J.W.; J. Henderson, P.M. and Treasurer; C. Cooke, Organist; J. Warren, S.D.; J. Wilkins, J.D.; E. B. Hobson, I.G.; W. McCoy, D.C.; and B. Norman, Tyler. The visitors included F. G. Pownall, W.M. 13 and P.M. 1536; A. Penfold, P.M. 913; J. Gaskill, P.M. 1076; G. Davies, P.M. 13; T. D. Hayes, J.W. 913; H. Syer, Secretary 13; H. F. Castellari, 391, "Independence and Philanthropy," Bengal; A. Thoms, Tyler 583, Bengal; H. Pryce, 913; N. Brown, J.D. 13; H. Webb, 13; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). The lodge having been duly opened, Bros. Grocock and Skillen were raised to the Sublime Degree in the W.M.'s usual careful and impressive manner. After resuming Bro. Waters, S.W., was unanimously elected to the office of W.M. for the ensuing year; and Bro. C. Hobson, P.M., as Treasurer, in the place of Bro. F. Dawson, who for many years held that office, but who, to the regret of the brethren, has been compelled to resign through pressure of business. Bro. B. Norman, was then re-elected Tyler. After some charitable claims had been attended to, and others acknowledged, it was proposed and carried unanimously, that a Past Master's jewel of the value of ten guineas should be presented to Bro. Butt, as an acknowledgment of his valuable services to the lodge during his year of office, and the W.M. returned thanks. It was then unanimously resolved—that a copy of the Freemason should be subscribed for out of the lodge funds, to be sent weekly to the W.M., and placed in the ante-room for the use of the brethren. The lodge was then closed and the usual festivities followed, the loyal Masonic toasts being heartily given and responded to. Bro. Ward, I.P.M., for the last time, proposed in eulogistic terms the toast of the W.M., passing him many well deserved comments for his ability and attention to the interests of the lodge, and Bro. Butt in thanking the brethren, said on retiring from the exalted position he should so soon have to give up to his successor, he left it with mingled feelings of regret and pleasure, with pleasure, because he should be able to take off the yoke that for the last twelve months had been round his neck, which, however light it might and had been made by the kindness of the brethren, had been no easy one; and regret, because he left a chair that had been to him a centre around which had gathered the respect, the power, and the wisdom of the lodge. He took that opportunity of thanking the officers, from the S.W. downwards, for the support; and the brethren for their obedience to the sound of the gavel, and the hearty assistance given at all times to him. For himself he trusted he had given every satisfaction, and if he had, he should leave that chair proud and contented. "The health of the W.M. elect" followed, and Bro. Waters returned suitable thanks. The "Past Masters" toast followed, and Bro. Ward in reply, said it gave the P.M. great pleasure to know they had the confidence of the brethren, and as their W.M. would not have an opportunity of again hearing them, he should ask them to respond severally for themselves. Bros. Goddard and Bowles having briefly acknowledged the toast, Bro. Graham said that Bro. Ward spoke as if the W.M., by leaving the chair, was coming down a step or two, but he, Bro. Graham, thought he was ascending a step or two by coming among the P.M.'s. He for one thought so when he took the proud position of a P.M. of the Nelson lodge. He regretted that ill-health had so often kept him away from the lodge, and concluded a spirited reply by assuring the brethren that the Past Masters would only be too happy to do all in their power to help any aspirant to that chair so well and worthily filled by their present W.M. Bro. Hobson said they all knew the interest he took in the Nelson Lodge from the first moment of his initiation. Both as W.M. and P.M. he had always endeavoured to exalt it among the lodges of the district, and he trusted with some success. During the whole of that time—eleven years—he had never been absent ten minutes. It was the duty of the Past Masters to be present, not only to set a good example, but to do the work of the lodge in the unavoidable absence of the W.M.; and while they, the Past Masters, did their duty, they were sure of the respect of the whole brethren. "The Visitors" followed, and Bros. Pownall, Penfold, and Castellari severally replied, the former speaking of the efforts made to get a son of our late Bro. Priestly, P.S.W. of the Capper Lodge, 1076, into the Boys' School Institution, and urged them all to assist this deserving case at the next election in October. Bro. Penfold, on behalf of the Pattison Lodge, No. 913, thanked them for their unvaried courtesy to him, and the other brethren of the lodge who so often visited them, and trusted the Nelson Lodge might always have so excellent a Master to preside over its destinies as Bro. Burt. The toast of "The Officers" followed, and after response the W.M. proposed the toast of the "Masonic Press," and coupled with it the name of Bro. C. Jolly, and thanked that brother for his many and truthful reports in the Freemason. Bro. Jolly replied, and hoped every lodge would follow the example set by them that day, and subscribe for the Freemason. The Tyler's toast concluded the business and pleasure of the evening.

WOOLWICH.—Florence Nightingale Lodge (No. 706).—The installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. W. T. Gamble, into the chair of the above lodge took place on Tuesday, the 26th inst., at the Masonic Hall, William-street, Bro. R. Croisdale was the installing officer, and well did he sustain his acknowledged reputation, by the eloquent impressiveness with which he worked the whole of the beautiful ceremonies appertaining to that office. Among the brethren and visitors present were—A. Prescott and Sydney Clark, Past Masters of the lodge; Bros. W. Griffith; G. F. Busbridge, P.P.G.A.S., Kent; F. Pownall, W.M. 13, and P.M. 1536; T. Vincent, W.M. 913; T. Butt, W.M. 700; W. Weston, W.M. 1536; F. A. White, W.M. 907; J. Rowland, P.M. 700; R. W. Govey, W.M. 704; W. St. Aubyn, P.M. 251; H. W. Butler, S.W.; and W.M. elect 913; G. Spinks, S.W. and W.M. elect 1536; S. Waters, S.W., and W.M. elect 700; G. W. Reed, S.W. and W.M. elect 13; H. Picken, J.W. 1536; A. Woodley, J.W. 700; W. Gaspey, 339 and 1073; J. Davidson, 35; R. Bowman, 206; R. J. Cook, 915, and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., Bro. G. M. Tapp, and being raised to the Second Degree, Bro. Gamble was presented for installation, and having assented to the Ancient Charges, the lodge was raised to the Third Degree, and a Board of Installed Masters was opened, and Bro. Gamble was placed in the chair of K.S., and duly proclaimed and saluted by the brethren in the Three Degrees, as before noticed, Bro. Croisdale being the installing officer. Bro. Gamble then proceeded to invest his officers as follows:—Bro. F. Sales, S.W.; Mutch, J.W.; E. Denton, P.M. and P.M. 913; Sec.; S. Clark, P.M., Treas.; J. Donnelly, S.D.; Eugene Sweny, J.D.; J. G. Alexander, I.G.; J. Black, D.C.; and —Evis, O.G. A vote of thanks to be inscribed on the minutes of the lodge, was then passed to Bro. Croisdale for the splendid manner in which he had worked the ceremony of installation, and Bro. Croisdale returned thanks. A Past Master's jewel, of the value of ten guineas, was then presented to the retiring W.M. as a token of the respect and admiration borne him by the lodge, and Bro. Gamble, in pinning it upon the breast of Bro. Tapp, wished him many years to wear it. Bro. Tapp briefly returned thanks. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to Bro. De Grey's famous hostelry, the Freemasons' Arms, opposite the Dockyard Station, where a superb banquet awaited them. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were done full justice to, and Bro. Busbridge replied to an especial toast to the P.G. Officers of Kent. The I.P.M. then said he had a most pleasant duty to perform, and that was to ask them to drink with him to the health of Bro. Gamble, their esteemed W.M., and in so doing he would ask them to give him (the W.M.) that hearty support and brotherly regard that they had invariably accorded him (Bro. Tapp) while in the chair. Their W.M. would soon realise the importance of the position that he was called upon to fulfil, and he felt satisfied that the honour and interest of the lodge was safe in his hands. He wished him (the W.M.) a happy and prosperous year of office, and concluded by proposing the toast. Bro. Gamble assured them that he regarded it as a very great honour to have to preside over such a distinguished assembly. He was proud of the position in which they had placed him. He always looked forward with pleasure and hope to the time when he should preside over such a lodge, in which existed that concord and brotherly love that should at all time characterise Freemasonry. "The Health of the Visitors" followed, and Bro. St. Aubyn and Dr. Pope replied. Bro. P.M. Prescott in response to "The Health of the Past Masters," said he thanked them as one who had worked to the position of P.M. from the door of the lodge through all the offices, and he had reason to know that if a P.M. did his duty, it was not only one of responsibility, but of many onerous and arduous duties. He considered the Past Masters the backbone of the lodge, ready and willing at all times to assist the W.M. or brethren, and proud of the opportunity of so doing. Bro. Tapp, I.P.M., said he fancied the W.M. had almost surpassed himself in the eulogy he had passed upon them. He knew that this was the time to say pleasant things of one another and of their good qualities, as they would like them to be, rather than as they really are. The W.M. spoke so highly of them, that, coming among them so recently, he was afraid that he had no right to any part or portion of their honour; but they might depend upon his deserving it if ever it laid in his power so to do. The toast of "The Officers" followed, and Bro. Sales responded. Bro. Jolly replied to a flattering reception of his name as our representative, and urged the claim of the Freemason to their attention and support. Bro. De Grey responded to a well deserved eulogy of his catering, and then the brethren separated after a most enjoyable evening.

HAVANT.—Carnarvon Lodge (No. 804).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 3rd inst., under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. J. Weeks, the following officers being in attendance, Bros. J. Clay, S.W.; T. P. Hall, J.W.; C. H. Liddell, J.D.; also Bros. H. R. Trigg, J. N. Hillman, Sec., H. Martin Green, E. Good, J. Harrison, T. Francis. P.M.'s J. Dintall, I.P.M.; and Bros. O. C. Harris, H. Kimber, Rev. T. W. Johnstone, W. Dart, and S. E. Casabianca, E.A. The lodge was opened in the First Degree, and the minutes of the last lodge having been confirmed, Bro. Casabianca was examined, and having proved his efficiency was entrusted and retired, the lodge was opened up to the Second Degree, and Bro. Casabianca was duly passed to the Degree of a F.C. by the W.M., after which the chair of K.S. was occupied by Bro. Martin Green, P. Prov. G.P., for the purpose of installing Bro. J. Clay, S.W., the W.M. elect, the ceremony being ably performed. The following visitors were present—Bros. Mark E. Frost, P.G. Treas.; J. Lind, P.M. 248; H. J. Guy, W.M. 342; H. Woodward, 1428; W. D. Parkhurst, 342; Dent, 1501; Bolton, 127; E. Smith, 342. The W.M. invested the following as officers for the year—T. P. Hall, S.W.; Liddell, J.W.; Weeks, P.M.; Treas.; Francis, P.M.; Sec.; J. N. Hillman, P.M.; M.C.; Rev. T. W. Johnstone, Chaplain, O. C. Harris, S.D.; Dart, J.D.; H. Kimber, I.G.; Clark, Steward; W. Blackmore, Tyler. Three gentlemen were proposed for initiation, after which the lodge was closed. The brethren then adjourned to the Dolphin Hotel, where an excellent banquet was prepared by Bro. Purnell, P.M.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS—Holmesdale Lodge (No. 874).—On the 20th ult. the last regular meeting of this prosperous lodge took place. Present: Bros. B. S. Wilmot, W.M.; H. Riach, I.P.M.; W. B. Bacon, S.W.; H. D. Williams, J.W.; J. F. Bates, Sec.; Ranking, S.D.; Hotchkiss, J.D.; G. Dunkley, I.A.; P.M.'s Read, Davies, and Spencer, Bros. Pelton, Ellis, Graham, and others. Visitor, Bro. Plummer. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes were read and confirmed. Bro. Deadman was examined and entrusted, after which he retired, was readmitted, and passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. The lodge being resumed in the First Degree, the ballot was then taken for Mr. Thomas Waterman, which proving unanimous, he was duly initiated into the Order, the W.M. giving the address in a most able and emphatic manner. The W.M. had much pleasure in presenting Bro. Riach with a valuable Past Master's jewel, in the name of the brethren, as a token of their esteem and the respect they felt for him. P.M. Riach suitably acknowledged the presentation and compliments. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, after which the W.M., with his genial eloquence, gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. All were warmly responded to. The W.M. then gave "The Initiate," and after expatiating on the beauties of Freemasonry, called on the brethren to give the initiate a good welcome to the Craft. Bro. Waterman suitably acknowledged the toast. Many other toasts were given and responded to, the visitor coming in for his share of honour and glory, the last being the Tyler's toast, after which the brethren separated.

LIVERPOOL.—Hamer Lodge (No. 1393).—The annual installation meeting of this lodge took place on Friday, the 22nd June, at the Masonic Hall, 23 Hope-street, Liverpool. This lodge was consecrated in 1872, by the late Bro. James Hamer, P. Prov. Grand Treasurer of West Lancashire, who was looked upon as a great authority in this province in Masonic matters, and the uniform excellence of its working has always attracted a great number of visitors, and the present occasion proved to be no exception to the rule. The lodge was opened at 2.30 p.m. by the retiring W.M. (Bro. J. McCarthy), supported by the following Past Masters, officers, and members of the lodge:—Bros. Henry Jackson, I.P.M.; R. H. Evans, P.M., D.C.; John Jones, P.M.; Thomas Sammons, S.W., W.M. elect; Thomas Large, J.W.; Charles Tyrer, Treas.; Robert Leason, Sec.; John Price, S.D.; Dr. B. Price, J.D.; W. C. Erwin, I.G.; J. Pilling, S.S.; R. J. L. Kynaston, J.S.; M. Williamson, Tyler. There was a large attendance of members of the lodge and visitors. After the minutes of last regular meeting had been read and confirmed, and the ballot taken for two gentlemen for initiation (which proved satisfactory) the

W.M. vacated the chair, which was taken by Bro. R. H. Evans, P.M., D.C., who opened the lodge in the Second Degree. The W.M. elect (Bro. Thomas Sammons) was then presented by Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G.S., and Bro. J. McCarthy, W.M., for the benefit of installation. After the usual charges had been read by the Secretary the lodge was opened in the Third Degree, when all the brethren below the rank of Installed Master withdrew. A Board of Installed Masters (numbering about thirty) was then opened, and Bro. R. H. Evans, P.M., D.C. (ably assisted by Bro. H. Jackson, I.P.M.) placed Bro. Thos. Sammons in the chair of K.S. in such a manner as to elicit the warmest approbation from those present. On the re-admission of the brethren, the newly-installed W.M. was saluted in ancient form, and proceeded to invest his officers as follows, the addresses being delivered by Bro. H. Jackson, P.M., in his usual impressive manner: Bros. John McCarthy, I.P.M.; Thomas Large, S.W.; Robert Leason, J.W.; John Price, Treas.; W. C. Erwin, Sec.; Dr. B. Price, S.D.; Jas. Pilling, J.D.; R. J. L. Kynaston, I.G.; R. H. Evans, P.M., D.C.; W. H. Jewitt, S.S.; M. Callaghan, J.S.; W. J. Pillow and G. B. Tenison, A.S.'s. On the proposition of Bro. J. McCarthy, I.P.M., seconded by Bro. W. H. Jewitt, Bro. M. Williamson was re-elected Tyler. The W.M. then initiated Messrs. F. Palliser, R. A. Lambert, and Thomas Adler into the mysteries of the Order, the ceremony being performed in a most able manner. The lodge was then called from labour to refreshment, when the brethren (numbering nearly one hundred) adjourned to the banquet hall, and, under the presidency of the W.M., partook of a sumptuous dinner, which was served up by Bro. Ball, the house steward, in his usual excellent style. The W.M. was supported by Bros. John McCarthy, I.P.M.; Henry Jackson, P.M.; R. H. Evans, P.M., D.C.; John Jones, P.M.; H. S. Alpass, Prov. G.Sec.; Geo. Turner, Prov. G. Treas.; John Pemberton, P.P.G.S. of W.; Joseph Skeaf, Prov. G.Org.; John Jones, P.M. 216; Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, S.W. 216; Henry Nelson, P.M. 673 and 1505; J. T. Callow, P.M. 674 and 1505; W. Cottrell, P.M. 823; W. Wilson, W.M. 823; G. Hutchin, W.M. 241; R. Brown, P.M. 241; Dr. McGeorge, P.M. 241; Dr. A. Samuels, P.M.; L. Ellis, P.M.; Stanton, S.W.; W. Hughes, P.M., 283; G. H. Smith, P.M.; Walter Newton, P.M., and others. On the removal of the cloth the W.M. proposed "the Health of the Queen," which was honoured by the brethren in a loyal manner. "The Health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," received a similar greeting. Bro. Thomas Large, S.W., gave "The Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro G.M., and the Officers of Grand Lodge." Bro. Robert Leason, J.W., next proposed "The Right Honourable Lord Skelmersdale, W.D.G.M. and Prov. G.M. of West Lancashire, and the Officers of the Prov. Grand Lodge," and alluded in a stirring speech to the valuable services rendered by his lordship to the Craft in general, and the active interest he has always evinced in the lodges in the province over which he presides. He next referred to the officers of Prov. Grand Lodge, and paid the highest tribute of respect to the services of Bro. H. S. Alpass, Prov. G. Sec., and Bro. G. Turner, Prov. G. Treas., with whose names he coupled the toast. Bro. G. Turner, Prov. G. Treas., in reply, spoke highly of Lord Skelmersdale's prudence and discrimination as Prov. G.M. in appointing fit and proper persons as officers of the Grand Lodge, and thanked the W.M. and brethren for the reception he always received at the Hamer Lodge. Bro. H. S. Alpass, Prov. G. Sec., endorsing the words of his predecessor, stated that the popularity of their Prov. G.M. was not confined to West Lancashire, but was as great in every Masonic circle where he was known. He congratulated the lodge on the progress which it had made towards equalising its income and expenditure, and in order to complete this recommended them to see that all arrears of subscription were rigidly looked after. With regard to the Grand Lodge he urged all Past Masters to make use of the experience which they had gained to fit themselves for its duties. He referred to the distinguishing characteristic of Masonry—charity, and recommended to the serious consideration of the brethren the educational charities, concluding by wishing the lodge every prosperity. "The Masonic Charitable Institutions" was proposed by Bro. Henry Jackson, P.M., who spoke of charity as the "Keystone of Masonry," and strongly advocated its claims, more especially in connection with the West Yorkshire Educational Institution, and the Hamer Benevolent Fund. Bro. D. McGeorge, P.M. and Treas. 241, and honorary surgeon to the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, and Bro. R. Brown, P.M. 241, Honorary Secretary of the Institution, responded to the toast, and thanked the lodge for the liberal support it had always given to the charities in West Lancashire. Bro. John McCarthy, I.P.M., in proposing "The Health of the W.M.," said:—Brethren, it gives me infinite pleasure to rise and propose the next toast, which, I think, is rightly considered on occasions like the present to be the toast of the evening, "The Health of the W.M., Bro. Thos. Sammons." It is unnecessary for me to recount his many excellences, and the active part he has taken in the duties of the lodge since its formation, as they are too well known to you already. Step by step he has filled the various offices, and to-day he has attained the highest honour it is possible for the lodge to confer upon him. That he enjoys the confidence and esteem of the brethren there is not a doubt, as he was elected by their unanimous vote at the last regular meeting of the lodge, and I am sure, by his assiduity, ability and zeal, he will prove a worthy successor to those who have gone before him. The interests of the Hamer Lodge are safe in his hands, and its reputation for excellent working will, I am certain, be maintained, and the fraternal good feeling which has hitherto existed between the Worshipful Master, and brethren, will be equal to, if it does not surpass, that of any preceding year. Therefore, brethren, as we are assembled here to-day to congratulate him upon the position he has attained, I call upon you to join me in wishing him every prosperity and a successful year of office. The toast was drunk with Masonic honours. Bro. Sammons, in responding, said:—Brethren, I thank you most heartily for the great honour you have done me in electing me to the very proud position of W.M. of this lodge—a position, I assure you, which I value more than any words of mine can express, and I thank you most sincerely for the more than cordial reception you have given to this toast. Rest assured I shall endeavour to carry out my duties as W.M. in such a manner as will meet with your entire satisfaction and will try to follow in the footsteps of my predecessors in that respect. It is impossible for me to convey my thanks to you as I could wish or to express my deep sense of the honour you have conferred upon me in the proud position I now hold, and as long as I live I shall never forget your many kindnesses to me. "Brethren, I thank you." Bro. R. H. Evans, P.M., D.C., in a lengthy speech proposed the health of Bro. John McCarthy, I.P.M., in the course of which he expressed the great pleasure it afforded him in having this toast placed in his hands, more especially owing to the close association which existed between the I.P.M. and himself. He reviewed his Masonic career from its commencement holding him up as a pattern to the officers and members generally, and attributed the present satisfactory state of the lodge to his business tact and untiring Masonic energy. That the brethren appreciated his services was a fact too well known to be questioned, for in addition to the Past Master's jewel, voted by the lodge, they were about to present him (through the medium of the W.M.) with a handsome gold watch and chain as a slight token of their esteem. The toast having been drunk with the customary honour the W.M. presented Bro. J. McCarthy, I.P.M., with a Past Master's jewel, together with a gold watch and chain of exquisite workmanship. The watch bore the following inscription—"Presented to Bro. John McCarthy, P.M., by the brethren of the Hamer Lodge, No. 1393, at the conclusion of his year of office, as a token of their appreciation of his Masonic ability and their strong personal regard.—Liverpool, 22nd June 1877." Brother J. McCarthy on rising received such an ovation from the brethren as prevented him speaking for some little time—he said—Worshipful Master, Bro. Past Master Evans, Officers, and brethren. For the honour Bro. Past Master Evans has done me in the complimentary manner in which he has placed my name before you, and the enthusiasm with which you have greeted it, allow me to thank you. I assure you the cordial reception you have given me has so completely overwhelmed me that I am scarcely able to utter the few brief words "I thank you." I should be wanting, however, in my appreciation of the high esteem in which you hold me did I not give you an assurance of the deep debt of gratitude under which you have placed me, for the kindly words spoken on my behalf, and the handsome testimonial of which I am this day the recipient. I assure you that the fulness of my heart alone prevents me couching my language in a manner that I could wish. I must, therefore, ask you, brethren, to accept the will for the deed, but be assured that wherever I go, or whatever position I may attain, the recollections of this day, and the pleasurable hours I have spent with you, will always be uppermost in my mind, and can never be effaced from the pages of memory so long as I live. Reference has been made to my associations and connections with this lodge, and the active interest I have taken in it, particularly during the past year. I need not trouble you with any remarks upon that point, as Bro. Evans has already entered so fully into it, but let me simply say that in the various offices I have filled I have endeavoured to do my duty to the best of my ability, and if I have fallen short in any way it has not been for want of zeal, and if I am to take Bro. Evans as the mouthpiece of the lodge—which I do—my conduct in the chair has been all that you could desire, and I am proud to be able to say I have substantial proof of it. I shall, therefore, conclude by thanking the Past Masters, officers, and members of the lodge for the cordial support given to me during my year of office, and the manner in which you have now honoured the toast of my health. The Secretary, Bro. W. C. Erwin, proposed the toast of "The Past Masters," which was drunk with the usual honours. Bro. John Jones, P.M., in reply, thanked the brethren for the reception they had once more given the toast of the Past Masters. The toast of "The Visitors," proposed by the W.M., was responded to by Bros. John Jones, P.M. 216; Dr. McGeorge, P.M. 241; Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, S.W. 216; H. Vaughan, S.W. 86; S. H. Smith, P.M., Lodge Union, Ashton-under-Lyne; Walter Newton, P.M., Lodge Union, Ashton-under-Lyne, and others. Bro. J. Price, Treas., proposed the "Newly Initiated Brethren," which was responded to by Bro. Adler. The Tyler's toast having been given, the lodge was closed according to ancient custom. During the evening several capital songs and recitations were given by Bros. J. Jones, J. Bushfield, J. Rees Jenkins, C. Heywood, J. Handford, H. Jackson, W. M. Asher, W. Hiles, R. Brown, and others, the musical arrangements being under the direction of Bro. J. Skeaf, Prov. G. Organist, and Bro. J. P. Bryan, Organist 203. The brethren separated at an early hour after having spent a most enjoyable evening.

HAMPTON COURT.—Era Lodge (No. 1423) The regular meeting of this prosperous lodge was held on Saturday, June 9th, Bro. E. H. Thielay, P.G.S.B. Midx., P.M. 145, W.M., presided. The work, which was done in a correct and impressive manner by the W.M., was initiating Mr. John Bartlett into the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry. Bros. W. Swindlehurst, F. F. Master Masons. On motion made by Bro. T. J. Sabine, P.P.G.S.B. Middx., P.M., S.W., and seconded by Bro. Baxter Langley, I.P.M., and unanimously resolved, that a letter of congratulation be sent to Bro. R. W. Little, on his appointment of D.P.G.M. Middx. Following in the wake of what has been done in other lodges in the province, although this Era lodge was one of the first in the province to solicit and recommend to the R.W.P.G.M. Middx., Bro. Col. F. Burdett, to confer the office of D.P.G.M. Middx. on Bro. R. W. Little, these and other acts showing how popular the appointment is in the province, and how deservedly Bro. Little is held in the estimation of all who know him. Notice of motion was given to give ten guineas to the Burdett Testimonial Fund, which amount will be supplemented by the donations amongst its members. The W.M., Bro. E. H. Thielay proved his earnestness by heading the list with five guineas, many others giving their guineas. Several gentlemen were proposed for initiation, and apologies received from absent candidates. Business ended, the lodge was closed. There were present Bros. T. J. Sabine, P.M., &c., S.W.; E. W. Devereux, J.W.; F. Walters, P.G.J.D. Middx., P.M., Sec.; S. Wolff, S.D.; A. F. Loos, J.D.; B. Wright, Asst. Sec.; J. W. Baldwin, P.D.G.P. Middx., P.M.; J. T. Moss, P.P.G.R. Middx., P.M.; W. Hammond, P.G.D. Middx., P.M.; J. Baxter Langley, P.M., and several others. Amongst the visitors we noticed Bros. A. F. Hagan, 145; W. Etheridge, 829; T. S. Gibbs, 34; T. G. Tagg, 1326. After the banquet the usual loyal toasts were given and responded to, that of the R.W.P.G.M. Middx., coming in for the lion's share of applause and appreciation. After a few well spent hours the members separated and returned to town.

The following brethren were appointed Provincial Grand Stewards: W. Wills, 299, Dartford; F. Walker, P.M. 972, Canterbury; T. Ayling, P.M. 1096, Walmer; F. Spencer, P.M. 1063, Malling Abbey; G. Payne, P.M. 1273, Sittingbourne; R. C. Burfield, P.M. 20, Chatham. Bro. W. T. Vincent then brought forward the following resolution:—It having been represented to Provincial G. Lodge that there is a desire prevalent in the Province of Kent to raise a fund for the purpose of presenting a testimonial to Bro. the Rev. W. A. Hill, Provincial Grand Chaplain, it is hereby, with the sanction and approval of the R.W. Prov. G. Master, Resolved, "That the proposed testimonial to Bro. the Rev. W. A. Hill be approved by Grand Lodge, that the Grand Treasurer be empowered to receive subscriptions, and that a committee be formed to carry out the object in view; such committee to consist of the officers of Provincial Grand Lodge for the time being, and one representative from each subscribing lodge.

In introducing the motion, Bro. Vincent said there is no need of words from me to recommend this resolution to Grand Lodge. It is sufficient to know that it has your Lordship's approval, which will do more to promote the object in view than the collective exertions of all the lodges in the Province. Our Grand Chaplain is the senior officer serving under your lordship in Grand Lodge, having been first appointed to it seventeen years ago, in the same year that your lordship was first installed G.M. of the Province. During those seventeen years his labours have been constant and earnest in promoting the well-being of our institution, and the happiness of every lodge. Whether assisting in our ceremonies, rejoicing with us in our festivals, instructing us with words of eloquent wisdom in our lodges, or joining with us in our sorrow over the grave of some good brother departed, his presence is ever familiar and welcome, and he has never deemed distance too far, trouble too great, or time too valuable, when we have stood in need of his help. Therefore it has been signified by the Grand Master of Kent that the brethren would like the opportunity of testifying, in some substantial manner, their great regard and deep obligations to our reverend brother, and hence this resolution, it having been justly deemed more in order that a provincial work of this character should not be left to individual effort, but should proceed under the stamp of proper authority.

The motion having been seconded, was put by the G.M. and carried unanimously, and with cheers.

The Rev. Chaplain in thanking the brethren said he was somewhat dumbfounded by having to rise to return thanks for the brethren's kindness, it was a private matter of which he had not had the smallest conception until by accident he heard it mooted at the Sidcup Lodge. Happily he had been associated with the Provincial Grand Lodge of Kent for a great number of years. During the time he had made several friends, who were very dear to him, and the wish was very near to his heart that he might continue on the same terms of unity and friendship with them, and that those terms might be consolidated year by year. The brethren had done him an honour which he felt most deeply, and he hoped on some future occasion he would have the opportunity of addressing the brethren better than he was now able to do.

The D.P.G.M. moved that £20 each be given to the following lodges from the P.G.L.C. Fund for the Royal Masonic Institution: 20, Antiquity, Chatham; 31, United Industrious, Canterbury; 77, Freedom, Gravesend; 125, Prince Edwin, Hythe; 127, Union, Margate; 133, Harmony, Faversham; 158, Adams, Sheerness. And £10 10s. each to the following lodges for the Boys' School: 829, Sydney, Sidcup; 874, Holmesdale, Tunbridge Wells; 913, Pattison, Plumstead; 972, St. Augustine, Canterbury; 1050, Gundulph, Rochester; 1063, Malling Abbey, Malling; 1089, De Shurland, Sheerness; 1098, Lord Warden, Walmer.

This vote having been seconded, was carried unanimously, as was also the following vote proposed by the Prov. G.M. That £105 be given from the P.G.L. Fund to the Girls' School, in the name of the P.D.G.M., to make him Vice-President of that Institution.

Lodge was afterwards called off, and the brethren, headed by the Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and Grand Officers, proceeded to the old Church of St. John, where a sermon was preached by the Rev. W. A. Hill, Grand Chaplain, from the text—"And, behold, a ladder set up on the earth, the top of which reached up unto heaven." A collection, amounting to over £14, was subsequently made, and the brethren returned to Grand Lodge, where votes of thanks to the Rev. Mr. Hardy for the use of the church, and to the Rev. W. A. Hill for his sermon, were unanimously passed.

Lodge was thereafter closed, and the brethren were entertained at a liberal banquet, in the gardens of the Pier Hotel, by the Master, Wardens, and brethren of the St. John and St. Paul Lodge.

[The proceedings at the banquet will appear in our next.]

ROYALTY THEATRE.

The pupils of Mr. Charles Sleigh gave a series of performances at this theatre during the past week. The pieces chosen for representation were "Pygmalion and Galatea," "Cyril's Success," "Morning Call," "Meg's Diversion," "Checkmate," "Area Belle," "Uncle's Will," and "Love's Sacrifice." The two best representations were undoubtedly "Checkmate" and "Pygmalion and Galatea." "Checkmate" was capably played throughout. Miss Lizzie Vaughan and Mr. Etinson were excellent representations of Martha Bunn and Sam Winkle. Mr. Graham Wentworth, if rather mechanical in the manner of speaking his lines, was a very gentlemanly Sir Everton. Miss Helen MacMahon as Charlotte Russe appeared self conscious and addressed her audience instead of her fellow actors. "Pygmalion and Galatea" was fairly played throughout. Miss E. Welshman (Galatea) and Mr. Etinson (Chryso) being particularly good. The performance of "Meg's Diversion" was greatly marred by the absence of one lady, and the incapacity of Miss Ricardo, who had undertaken the role of Cornelius. On Saturday Mr. Sleigh appeared himself in the character of Matthew Elmore in "Love's Sacrifice," but the noisiness of the audience prevented the actors from being heard.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. NEWMAN, J.P., P.M. No. 75, PALMOUTH.

On Friday, the 29th of June, the brethren of the ancient Lodge of Love and Honour, No. 75, Falmouth, assembled in full force at the Royal Hotel, where a banquet was spread in honour of the brother Pymouth delights to honour Masonically.

The Chairman was the W.M., Dr. Arthur Ben Harris, and the Vice-Chairman Bro. Harry Tilly, S.W. Most of the Past Masters were present, including Bros. Vivian, Prov. G.S.B.; Dennis, P. Prov. G. Purs.; Polglaze, Prov. G. Steward; and Michael Little. Bro. W. J. Hughson, P.S.G.D. of England (hon. member), was also in attendance, having travelled especially by an early train to take part in the interesting proceedings.

After the usual toasts had been duly given and honoured, the W.M. (Dr. Harris) proposed "The Health of their esteemed Past Master, Bro. Walter Francis Newman, P.M., P. Prov. G.D. of Cornwall," and, in a felicitous manner, described how much the lodge was indebted to that really worthy brother for his services, extending over a period of nearly eighteen years. In the name of the numerous subscribers he asked Bro. Newman to accept of the richly illuminated testimonial (which was then unveiled), and of the Past Master's jewel, and he trusted that the brethren would continue to receive the benefit of his valuable aid for many years to come.

Amid the acclamations of the brethren Bro. Newman rose to respond, and, considering the difficulties of his task, acquitted himself remarkably well. He spoke of the pleasure it gave him to see the lodge in such a flourishing and happy state, and though he acknowledged that ever since his initiation he had taken a lively interest in the welfare of their old mother lodge, yet he did not consider that anything he had done deserved such a mark of approval, and so handsome a testimonial and Past Master's jewel as had just been presented to him. He felt quite overpowered on looking at such handsome gifts, and he could only say, emphatically, that the present meeting was to him the proudest and happiest of his Masonic life.

In response to the toast of "The Past Masters," Bro. Little (the originator of the testimonial) aptly described Bro. Newman as the embodiment of "Love and Honour," and expressed the feeling of all genuine Masons when he said he hoped that the genial countenance of their friend and Bro. Newman would for long be seen at the lodge.

Later on Bro. Hughson gave a short sketch of the progress of the lodge from 1751, and stated that during the last dozen years especially the brethren were indebted to Bro. Newman mainly, and at times exclusively, for the preservation of their old warrant and its privileges.

The address, we should state, was beautifully illuminated by Lake and Lake, Truro, and handsomely framed, forming one of the most pleasing and tastefully executed testimonials we have ever seen. The Past Master's jewel was of unique design, in solid gold.

DUNHEVED MASONIC HALL, LAUNCESTON.

The new Masonic Hall, the foundation stone of which was laid last summer, will be formally dedicated next Thursday, at the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cornwall, under the presidency of the Earl of Mount Edgumbe. The building is situated a little outside the town on the Tavistock-road, and the site, which was generously given by Bro. J. C. Baron Lethbridge, commands one of the finest views to be obtained in the neighbourhood. A flight of steps at the western end of the structure leads to an open porch, within which is the Tyler's vestibule and a preparation room adjoining. The only other apartment on this floor is the lodge-room, which is 40ft. by 50ft., and proportionately high. In the centre of the floor is a pavement of tiles—white and black—with a border, and the eastern portion of the floor is raised three steps. The lodge is surrounded by a moulded cornice, with a frieze, left plain for future decoration. In the centre of the ceiling, over the pavement, is a circle 16ft. in diameter, defined by mouldings, with paintings emblematic of the sun and the constellations. There is an organ recess on the south side of the lodge, which is handsomely furnished. On the floor below the lodge are the custodian's apartments and a large dining-room with lavatories, cellar, &c., adjoining. The building is in the Italian style, from the design of Mr. James Hine, F.R.I.B.A., and although not elaborately ornamented is very complete in its appointments. Mr. W. Bart, of Launceston, is the contractor, and his work has given much satisfaction. The ceiling decorations are by Mr. Fouracre, of Stonehouse, and Mr. Hems, of Exeter, carved the window capitals. The ground around the hall has been tastefully laid out. The entrance gate to it is of wrought iron, from the architect's drawing, and is the gift of Bro. John Hawkins, the Secretary of the lodge. Bros. Trood gave the handsome tile pavement. The funds for the erection of the hall are being obtained through the exertions of the Dunheved Lodge, of which Bro. Thompson is the Treasurer. Bro. Deakin, of Werrington Park, has been one of the largest contributors.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—When rheumatism be comes chronic, and as it were fixed in a limb or part, it is truly a terrible enemy to encounter. The joints often become stiffened and excessively painful when obliged to be moved, or on exposure to changes of temperature, dampness, &c. Holloway's Ointment exercises a wonderful effect in alleviating this torture, for by its use the blood vessels of the part have their tone restored, and the irritated and painful nerves soothed and calmed. It must be persistently and perseveringly used, for the disorder is a most obstinate one, and will not yield unless resolutely attacked. These remedies will also be found to be most useful in cramps and muscular spasms.—A.M.V.

Masonic and General Tidings.

A quarterly General Court of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls will be held at Freemasons' Hall, on Saturday next the 14th inst., at 12 o'clock precisely, on the business of the Institution.

A silver tea service will be presented to our esteemed Bro. Fredk. Adlard, P.P.A.G.D. of C. for Essex, P.M. Lodges 7, 165 and P.Z. 214 at the next meeting of the Hampstead Lodge, No. 167, which will be held on Tuesday next. The presentation will be made in appreciation of Bro. Adlard's services as Director of Ceremonies for the period of twenty years, and has been subscribed for by the Past Masters and members of the lodge.

Bro. R. B. Webster intends bringing forward a motion that twenty-five additional girls be elected into the School at the Quarterly General Court of the Girls School on Saturday next.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—During the four days of the Handel Festival including the rehearsal on Friday) the total number of persons admitted to the Palace was 74,134—49,703 having been season ticket holders. Prince Leopold and Princess Beatrice were present at one of the performances.

In addressing the Grand Jury at the Hampshire Assizes Lord Coleridge said the Calendar was unusually heavy. Nearly all the cases were in consequence of disturbances begun in public-houses or actually committed there. His short experience on the Bench convinced him of the truth of what had been said by other judges, that if England were made sober nearly all the goals might be closed.

A telegram received at the Admiralty yesterday from Homburg announces that the satisfactory progress in the state of health of Bro. Ward Hunt still continues.

Lord Gifford, one of the judges of the Court of Session in Scotland, has consented to preside over the Jurisprudence Department, and the Lord Advocate over the Repression of Crime Section, at the ensuing congress at Aberdeen.

MADILE. TITIENS.—We regret to hear that since her arrival at Worthing Madile. Titien has been considerably worse. The gifted artiste, who has always had a great liking for Worthing, insisted on being removed there, but the journey appears to have been too much for her, and she is now in a very prostrate condition.—Medical Examiner.

In an age of commercial enterprise like the present, there seems really no limit to the amount of business a man may do, whatever his trade, if only he brings sufficient energy and integrity to bear on his conduct of affairs. There are few articles the consumption of which would seem to be more strictly limited than boots and shoes, as very few of us have more than one pair of feet. Yet we find that Messrs. Waukenphast and Co., who commenced business quite unknown in a small place in Pall Mall, have been enabled to open an establishment in the Haymarket, amply supplied with fitting rooms for ladies, gentlemen, and children, and certainly much handsomer than any other in the trade in London. A proof of success like this is not to be ignored, and can only fairly be attributed to the fact that Messrs. Waukenphast's customers have discovered and appreciated their undeviating principle of giving full value for money, and of making every article of the best quality.—Church Review.

THE ROBBERY OF MASONIC JEWELLERY.—At the Guildhall Police Court William Hurren, a respectable-looking young man, living at Swinton-street, Gray's-inn-road, a carpenter, was charged on remand before Mr. Alderman Staples with stealing a number of gold rings and Masonic jewellery to a very large amount from Bro. Kenning's warehouses, Little Britain.—The evidence previously given was read over, and Mr. Clark, who prosecuted, now said he wished to state that Mr. Bowman, of 193 and 291, Holloway-road, the pawnbroker with whom the greater portion of the property produced was found, had rendered them every assistance, and the prosecutor felt indebted to him for the recovery of the amount of property they were now able to produce. A quantity of Masonic and other jewellery was then produced, and identified as the property of the prosecutor.—The prisoner, who pleaded guilty, was committed for trial.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 2lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as samples, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea Dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom, must be addressed to the Secretary.

THE LAST BOYS' SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY.

Bro. Binckes may pride himself on one great, if simple fact, that he has been privileged to announce the largest amount ever sent up to our Masonic Charities, viz., £13,248 17s. 6d., and which sum will yet probably be materially increased. Such an event is the best answer to all fears and forebodings in respect of declining sympathy, all assertions of a dissatisfied Craft. When we look back on the records of our Anniversary Charitable Festivals and realize what was the amount, say 20 years ago, the returns of the Stewards' lists must appear to us all to be little less than marvellous. They remind us more than anything of those fairy tales of wondrous growth and sudden increase which delighted us when young and have not lost all relish or interest for us now that we are ageing or old. They say nothing so convincing, nothing so affects us as an apposite illustration, so as we have one ready to hand, let us use it. In 1857, only twenty years ago, when some of us were in the heyday of youth, and in the full working energy of Masonic life, what amount did we return for our charities? What a sum do our readers suppose then represented our sympathy and support in respect of our great metropolitan institutions? Well, we look back to the Freemasons' Magazine and Masonic Mirror of those hardworking days, and what do we see there inscribed in those unerring records? In the good year of light and grace, 1857, our beneficent Order sent up to the three Charities the fraternal offering of £4,658 6s. 6d., of which the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution received £1,558 6s. 6d., the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls £1,000, termed by Lord Panmure "a munificent subscription," and hailed by "tremendous cheering," while the lists of the Stewards for the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys produced £1,200. In 1877, twenty years of Masonic life and labour have moved on, and we are privileged to announce that our most benevolent brotherhood contributes to the Boys' School alone over £13,000, and that the three Festivals have produced over £35,000 for the Charities. What more need we say or can we say? Comment appears to be needless, even eulogy to be impertinent. May we not feel great pride in belonging to a Fraternity, if singular in its organisation, yet so much more singular in its charities, as nearly to equal single-handed, all the returns of all the charitable societies which meet annually in this great Metropolis to keep their festal anniversaries, and to announce their long lists of subscriptions? Indeed, when we come to think over the matter, it is one which must commend itself entirely to the sympathies of the zealous Mason, and the interest of the acute philanthropist. Our charities are the real jewels of our Order, which shine in their own intrinsic worth, and deserve and demand the heartfelt sympathy and zealous regard of us all alike. That we have seen the limit of their usefulness, or efficiency, or that we have as yet gauged the fullness of Masonic support, we do not ourselves for one moment profess to believe, but we content ourselves to day with pointing out, what a subject of intense satisfaction and no little natural pride to every one of us must be the onward progress of our great Metropolitan Masonic Charities, whether evidenced by their ever increasing blessings for those whom they personally concern, as well as by the liberal measure of Masonic support conceded to them by a kindly yet a critical Craft. Our words can, then, only be words of unhesitating congratulation and commendation. We do not think it needful to-day to weary our readers with statistical details or elaborate comparisons, as we believe they rather weary than please, —bore than edify us all; alike those who write them, as well as those for whom they are written. Indeed, we are sometimes inclined to think we have too much of this sort of "numerical jumble," which a "fellar can't be supposed to understand," and that it is, after all perhaps, not a little invidious to set provinces against metropolis, or lodge against lodge. For to say the truth, though such a calculation, (which we have often indulged in ourselves, by the way), may seem very simple and straight sailing, yet it is by no means so. Many little matters and many hidden causes affect largely this or that subscription list, and very often even a smaller return of donations shows more sacrifice, and betokens more exertions to the discerning and well-informed, than does the larger amount which is read out so eloquently, and sounds so well at the Festival, and looks so well in the Freemason. So we shall not trouble our kindly readers to-day with a comparison of figures obvious in themselves, or any repetition of trite remarks or oft-used illustrations, but simply and gladly announce how great has been the return for the last Boys' School Anniversary Festival, congratulating as we do the executive and Bro. Binckes on a result so remarkable in itself, so advantageous to the School, so significative of the true spirit of charity lingering amongst us, and, above all, so creditable to our good old Craft.

CHARITY ORGANISATION.

We wish we could think that all this superabundance of Charity Organisation enquiry and reform was doing any good. It appears to us, on the contrary, that it is now assuming the appearance almost of a hindrance to genuine charity, a parody on professions of sympathy, a stumbling-block to efforts of relief. We called attention some time back to a case which distressed all humane persons, when a poor fellow creature was "buffeted about" from office to office, in absolute want of the necessities of life, was referred here, and sent there, and, though positively starving, was smothered simply with a plethora of "red tape," and when he asked for "bread," got only a "stone" in return. We then ventured to say, in the discharge of our duty as honest journalists, that we were convinced that Charity Organisation was being carried to excess, that, as often happens here, disapproval of certain abuses (no doubt) was leading amiable and well-meaning persons into the opposite extreme of superfluous routine and superabundant circumlocution; the laxity of the past was giving way rapidly to a hyper-precisianism in the present, and that the only effect would be that while rogues and swindlers continued to ply their avocation with success, the really honest, those truly in want, would be discouraged, and suffer accordingly. And surely the case of Captain Williams is a proof of the truth of our remarks, and fears, and a sad commentary on what we may term (without offence) official "fluffiness," and an "amateur bumble-dom," which apparently are on the increase. We give every credit to those excellent individuals who have sought to remedy existing defects in our charitable system, to reform proved abuses, but we fear that in their ardour, and we must add, want of acquaintance with the real depth of the question involved, they are in practice making the word charity a misnomer, and actual relief a pompous profession. The operations of these well-meaning but unpractical persons, and of these numerous societies, appear to be drying up the sources of personal charity and direct relief, and affording a happy means of escape from a great and bounden duty, to the selfish and the sybarite, and substituting in the stead of a liberal if too sentimental charity, an enormous amount of needless officialism and hopeless technicalities. For what is the case of Captain Williams? Captain Williams was an officer and a gentleman, unable to find work, and who died in a workhouse, friendless and forlorn, too proud to "beg," but not ashamed to "dig." His wife and children followed suit, poor creatures. Though a lady, and the daughter of a clergyman, she was compelled to pawn her wedding ring to provide bread for her starving children. They applied to these charitable associations, but it seems, we are told, from some "technical difficulties," in vain, and to say the truth, whether intended or not, as some of our contemporaries have remarked, the Times and Globe, their curt and peculiar announcements would seem to imply that "there was something behind," and so close the perennial fountains of public charity and sympathy. Luckily for poor Mrs. Williams and the orphans, an independent medical man and some friendly ladies took up the case, and having by a careful inquiry ascertained that there was no truth in some foolish and some unfounded statements of some interior agents, have raised a small sum of money, taken her out of the workhouse, and have placed her and her children in a comfortable home. It is most touching to be told that one of the first acts of this benevolent committee, was to enable the poor woman to take her wedding ring out of pawn, so as to enable her to follow her poor husband to a pauper's grave. We rejoice to think that some medical men and some ladies were so sympathetic and so independent as not to be deterred by an assumed authority, or intimidated by a dogmatic officialism, as to look into the whole matter themselves calmly and reasonably, fully and dispassionately, and so be able to arrive at a conclusion, at which all who have not quite forgotten yet the sublime teaching of the great parable of the "Good Samaritan," will be glad to hear of, and be ready to endorse. In all these matters, as it seems to us, that noble profession which has rendered such priceless services to cosmopolitan humanity,—we mean the medical profession—has a great duty to perform and to fulfil. Intelligent and educated, liberal-minded and tolerant, humanitarian and religious, it ought and generally does set itself above the mere "ipse dixit" whether of sciolist or quack, the "nostrum" of the impostor or the "high falutin" of the "wind-bag." It is enabled, perhaps, better than any other profession, to discern the difference as between assumption and proof, between assertion and fact, between suspicion and certainty, between appearance and actuality, for it bases its correct Diagnosis on a skilful induction of connecting evidence, evidence which laps over, so to say, in the ever lengthening chain of scientific accuracy, and rejects what is either uncertain or incorrect, unsound or untrue per se. We rejoice, then, to think, we repeat, that amidst so much that is utterly unsound and unscientific to-day, so marked by a want of logic and the noisy utterances of "charlatanism," there are those amongst us who will manfully seek in the best interests of society, to separate the true from the false, the outside show from the inner reality, and thus are enabled alike to vindicate the dignity of a great profession and the cause of our common and suffering humanity. So important is the whole subject now, for many reasons, that we propose next week to enter into the whole question of personal charity, and we may add that Dr. Cotton, 33, Cavendish-square, will receive subscriptions for Mrs. Williams and her family, and that the "Haven of refuge" which, through Miss Rotch's kindness, has so properly given shelter to Mrs. Williams and her children, is the House of Charity, No. 1, Greek-street, Soho.

THE EARTHQUAKES IN PERU.

FROM A CORRESPONDENT.

At present everything here is in a state of excitement, owing to the late earthquakes, and tidal waves, that we have been visited with along the whole West Coast of Peru and Bolivia. No damage of any account has happened to Lima and Callao, but south of here, all along the coast, there has been a fearful cataclysm, great loss of property and life. To convey an idea of the sad catastrophes, I will give you the following extracts from W.M. Neill, of "Antofayesta," and Brother W.M. Pendaris, of Tocopilla, where we have a lodge in each place.

Bro Neill says: "Antofayesta, 12th May, 1877.—On the 9th, at half-past 8 p.m., we were visited by the most severe terremoto earthquake that has ever been felt on the coast. The old residents that are used to them say that they never felt anything like it before, and that it was far more violent than that of 1868, which destroyed Aircu and Pyniqui, which drove the U.S. war steamer Wahrei ashore three miles from the beach. I tried to get my children out of bed, and could not stand on my feet, the oscillation was so violent; however, I succeeded in getting them into the street, where there was a cry of "the Sea, the sea is coming in on us." I did not believe it at first, but, true it was, and we had to run for our lives just as we were. The excitement was frightful, the night unaccountably dark, and the shrieks of the people running away, and calling on anyone to save them, made it a scene impossible to forget. In half an hour the town was all deserted, and the hills full of people. After leaving my wife and family in the hospital, I went back to see the state of things, and found the whole of the business part of it washed away, houses lifted right up with all their contents and carried away, and, in one or two instances, some of such a size that it was almost impossible to believe or realize it. I thought it was all over, but at 11 p.m. another tidal wave, much longer, and not preceded by any shock, came in and completed the destruction, and we are left in a sad state. The upper part of the town is uninjured, but the whole of the lower is gone. If the houses had been built of stone, brick, or adobe, I am certain every one must have fallen, for not one could have stood the shocks. All are of wood, and this has saved us. Since the night of the shock, we have had at least 100 slight ones, with occasionally a sharp one; in fact, the ground is continually shaking, and what is strange, the sea has repeatedly rose and returned again, but fortunately not in sufficient volume to do any harm.

"About 150 miles from here in a direct line with this place, a volcano is in violent eruption, which has not happened for the last hundred years, and I feel certain is in direct communication with the part of the ocean where the convulsion commenced."

May 10th.—"Since my last about the earthquake, nothing from you, in fact it is some time since I have seen your welcome hand-writing, I hear that Causo has also been affected by a tidal wave; when I heard this I at once thought of your establishments, which are most unpleasantly near the beach, I hope nothing has occurred. All this part of the coast has been ruined, Pabello de Pica, Tocopilla, Cobija, and Mejellones de Bolivia completely washed away, and other ports like Antofayesta considerably damaged, every five or ten minutes there is a shock, and occasionally a pretty big one. I hope it will soon stop.

"The poor Tocopilla friends have suffered more than all, their lodge was washed away with charter, constitutions, furniture and everything, all now are gone out to sea; Pendaris is completely gone, not a vestige remains, he had time only to save life, losing instruments, diploma, medicines, &c. I at once sent him a case containing instruments, &c., which he writes has been a God-send, he also sends me the sad news that Bro. W. Wiggings, one of the founders of the lodge there, and a member of ours, has perished in a mine with seventeen others, the mine falling in on them, in addition to these fifty others were buried but got out alive, all having broken bones, these have come to me to attend, as there are no houses in Tocopilla. I am going to hold a Masonic festival service to the memory of the brethren.

"Directly I heard of the losses of the brethren of Mejellones de Bolivia, Cobija, and Tocopilla, I sent from the funds of the lodge two large cases of ready-made clothing, as none escaped with more than what they stood in, I called at once a meeting to consider what should be done, I proposed to invest all the funds of the lodge in the immediate relief of the sufferers, which was carried, and 800 dols. handed to the commissioner for this purpose, as well as a subscription list opened to assist all the inhabitants from the above mentioned places that have come to Antofayesta, which have been distributed amongst the families here. I have my house full. The loss will be fearful and it will take a long time to recover from it. Our Treasurer's house was completely washed away as he lived near the sea shore, all the books, accounts, &c., besides about two hundred dollars of the lodge has gone with the tidal wave."

A. J. ED. H. NEILL, Master.

"Tocopilla, May 17th, 1877.

To the Grand Master of Grand Lodge of Peru.

"Dear Sir and Brother,—I have the painful duty of informing you that the earthquake of the 9th inst. caused the total ruin of this most prosperous part of the whole coast. Last Wednesday night, at eight p.m., while working in lodge and all the brethren but Bro. Wiggings being present, we had a fearful earthquake which destroyed the whole town, and immediately after a tidal wave, which washed the wreck completely away."

"The mines in this district have suffered greatly, in one of the "Buena Esperanza" seventeen lives were lost, and amongst them our beloved brother William Wiggings. The dispensation of the lodge has been swept away with my house, together with all my effects, both professional and domestic, which I had therein, all the funds and charity fund of the lodge were lost with the Treasurer's house. As soon as we can write with more tranquillity I will do so at more length. For the present farewell."

"The lodge house is saved, the misery and destitution here are frightful.

Truly yours, WILLIAM FREDERIC PENDARIS.

W.M. Union and Esperanza Lodge, No. 20.

Having given you these extracts, we feel confident that our brethren at home will not forget us in our hour of need and misfortune as the hearts of our countrymen have ever been open to relieve the calamities of suffering humanity.

TALL TALK.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As a regular reader of the Freemason I have to congratulate you sincerely on the marked absence from your pages of anything like tall talk, high falutin, "bunkum" or sensationalism, which are so popular just now. Not that you are dull, or that the reader has to wade through (as Mr. Slurk had) bathos and boredom, and ungrammatical twaddle combined, but you very properly eschew that pernicious and mournful egotism which can only think, talk, or write about Number One. I am very much amused to note, when one has to deal with a very different sort of literature, how much is often made of "zero," what a great deal may be said about what "I" or "we" have done for Masonry. In nothing is this so conspicuous or so detestable, I venture to think, as in the case of the Masonic charities. With regard to these noble institutions we continually read and listen to the effusions (and such effusions) of those, who, if you believe them, have done for those valued institutions what no one else has ever done or ever thought of doing.

Now, like many very humble and modest brethren, I have for years been a zealous friend of our great metropolitan charities in my lesser orbit, but I don't think it worth while to be always proclaiming what I have accomplished. There are many of our brethren just now to whom if you listen you would suppose that until they burst into Masonic life, and adorned the festive scene, nothing had ever been done for the charities, whereas long even before they were born or thought of, good workers and true Masons had put their hand to the plough.

There is one consolation for us stout middle-aged old fogies, often walking lame, and usually somewhat bald, that even the sleekest of jackdaws can only have their day, and must, sooner or later, find their level. We, who were workers when they were troublesome little boys in bottle-green trousers and brass buttons, and may now seem to be eclipsed by their pretentious splendour, know well that, depend upon it, dear sir and brother, humbug and parade always have a Nemesis here, in that, in their turn these "tall talkers" will be succeeded by still more aspiring heroes, who will vote them "slow coaches," "bad form," "obsolete," and "out of the running."

Excuse a bad bilious attack, which threatens gout, and believe me,

Yours, always fraternally,

H. M.

CHARITY LOTTERIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your last number is a letter with the above heading, which is worthy of notice if only on account of the good taste, and absence of all acrimonious feeling, displayed by the writer in dealing with a subject regarded by him from an unfavourable point of view.

The objections entertained by "W. F." to the scheme of Bro. Constable are, in my opinion, exaggerated and untenable, and—though I entertain no hope of being able to modify or remove them—seem to me to require a few words in reply.

1. The essence of "gambling," as I interpret it, is to incur a risk of loss in the hope of personal gain, the repetition of which—whatever the issue—gradually becomes an indulgence more or less habitual, and ultimately an exciting necessity. This element is entirely wanting in such a scheme as that under censure by your correspondent. 210 brethren desire to support an institution, but their means are not equal to their desire. They deposit one shilling each. The individual shilling secures no qualification, but multiplied by 210, a governorship with two votes for life is obtained. Who is to enjoy the privilege? The question is solved in the easiest possible manner by a "draw." The winner is satisfied, and the 209 are well pleased that by a harmless combination they have contributed to the support of a deserving institution, which has "charity" for its object.

2. I do not deem it necessary to enter on the discussion of maxims, "Jesuit" or otherwise, and I contend that in the practice under consideration there is no tampering with morality, Masonic or general. The end in view is simply the organisation of a fund by small donations, which, when realised, shall be presented for a given purpose in the names of certain donors to be determined by lot. How the "laws of public prosperity and general duty" are affected by this, I confess passes my comprehension.

As regards success or non-success, the principle involved is not touched in either event. As, however, "nothing succeeds like success," it is encouraging to Bro. Constable, and gratifying to all, as evidencing the fact of considerable approval, that by the adoption of the scheme of that energetic brother the funds of our Benevolent Institution profited by £100 in 1874; of the Girls' School by £189 in 1875; of the Boys' School in the present year by £488. I could unrepiningly bear stricter censure than I feel confident "W. F." is prepared to bestow on Bro. Constable if I could point to such a result.

3. Admitted that some contributors with ample means do succeed in obtaining the qualifications in a "Charity Lottery," where is the objection? They have subscribed to encourage others to do the same, and gladly accept what honestly falls to them, and again, I am unable to recognise the "hazardous juxta position" to which "W. F." alludes. The concluding paragraph of your correspondent's letter, is couched in terms so thoroughly liberal and fraternal, that it is really a matter of regret to find oneself at issue with him. Differences of opinion must exist, and I would fain hope that none more serious than those between "W. F." and Bro. Constable and his numerous supporters may exist amongst those associated in Masonic work. However imperfectly I have expressed my opinions in reply to "W. F.," I have yielded to an inclination to say a few words on a vexed question.

In conclusion, I must in all candour admit that I have done my best to aid Bro. Constable in his arduous and disinterested labours, and ask permission to express, through your columns, my sincere appreciation of his zeal and energy.

I am, dear Sir and Brother,
Yours faithfully and fraternally,
FREDERICK BINCKES.

THE RESPECTIVE COLUMNS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

If Bro. "J. C." will look at his G.L. certificate he will see there the three columns, and at the foot of the Ionic the square; of the Doric, the level; of the Corinthian, the plumb-rule; thus showing to whom each is authoritatively appropriated; but let him more especially hear the First Lecture, Fourth Section.

Faithfully and fraternally yours,
H. S. T.

DEISM, THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE AND THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

During the last few months many letters and articles have been published in your journal, as well as in other Masonic papers, on the essentiality of the belief in God as the principal pillar in Freemasonry. If I am not mistaken, it has been proposed not to acknowledge the Grand Orient of France and its subordinate lodges in case the paragraph in question of the constitution of the alleged Grand Power should be erased.

Now there occurs something very remarkable. There is the Grand Lodge of Hungary, who have only a few months ago altered their rituals, and made them obligatory to the subordinate lodges, in such a manner as to strike out and not to leave the slightest remembrance of the Great Architect or God; neither is it to be found in the new rituals any prayer, so much so that the matter has been made an object of discussion recently in the Grand Lodge of Hamburg.

The Grand Lodge of England having only a short time ago exchanged representations with the Grand Lodge of Hungary, ought to know all that, and, therefore, without entering into the merits of the question at issue, it strikes me that something should be considered wrong in France which is right in Hungary.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
FAIR PLAY.

ENCOURAGEMENT FOR THE LADIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I see by your last issue that the ladies are rapidly rising in favour with the Craft, and the converse will assuredly as rapidly follow. Our excellent and energetic Bro. Binckes is in favour of "good innovations," and therefore introduced ladies to the last banquet. Good, say I. Bro. Binckes, however, is far outbid by some of our brethren in the north. To wit, it appears from a report in the last number of the Freemason that not only was the out-going Master of a certain lodge presented with a costly Past Master's jewel, "enriched with a diamond and specially made to order," but that the members of the same lodge were "about to present a magnificent diamond ring" to the wife of the said P.M. It is a matter for regret that your report does not state what this highly esteemed lady has done for the Craft; however, we may rest assured that she merits the distinction.

Yours fraternally, DELTA.

THE PRINTED REPORT OF THE HOUSE COMMITTEE OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL, AND THE EXPENDITURE FOR 1876.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I see no notice in your careful and accurate paper of this report, which I am told is printed, distributed, and published. I am anxious to see it, as I want to offer you a few friendly remarks respecting it. How is it that you have not yet received it?

Yours fraternally, A LIFE-GOVERNOR.

[We know nothing about it officially, and no copy of it has been forwarded to us. When we receive it we will duly notice it for our correspondent's information, and we shall be happy to publish his friendly remarks. It is, no doubt, odd that the Freemason has not received a copy of a report "printed, distributed, and published;" but then so many queer things take place that we are astonished at nothing.—E.D.]

MASONIC LOTTERIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read "W. F.'s" letter and agree with him in the main, but should like to hear what is or can be said on the other side. By the way, can you explain what is the exact proportion of the "premium" in respect of payments of prizes to tickets? I am not, I confess, quite able to master the published statements, or to understand them (probably my own fault) arithmetically.

I am, yours fraternally, T. S.

BROTHER SHAKESPEARE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As it may interest some of your Masonic archaeologists and book collectors, I beg to send you the following "cutting" from the Times of July 4.—"From the Library of Mr. W. Wentworth Buller, sold last week by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson, and Hodge, an imperfect copy of the first edition, 1623, printed by Isaac Jaggard and Edward Blount, containing the portrait by Droeshout, but the verses of Ben Jonson and a portion of the last leaf facsimiled, measuring 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. by 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ in., sold for £42; another, the edition of 1632, Thomas Cotes for Robert Allot, a fine copy, but the title in fac-simile, and the verses, sold for £8; another, printed for C.P., 1664, 'the third impression, and unto this is added seven plays never before printed in folio,' a fine copy, with portrait, and verses beneath, considered to be very rare, as nearly the entire impression was burnt in the fire of London, £28. Sir William Tite's copy of this edition sold for £79. Another, the fourth edition, printed for H. Herringman, E. Brewster, and R. Bentley, 1685; portrait, and verses beneath—£15 5s. All of these, however, were more or less imperfect. A copy of the 'Romeo and Juliet,' printed by Thomas Crede for Cuthbert Burby, 1599, the title and other parts fac-similed, sold for £6 10s. 'Much Ado about Nothing,' first edition, printed for Andrew Wise and William Apsey, 1600, title page genuine, but several leaves supplied in fac-simile—£10 15s. This copy formerly belonged to Sir W. Tite, who paid £63 for it. Mr. G. Daniel's perfect copy sold for £267 15s.

Yours fraternally, A LOVER OF SHAKESPEARE.

CONSTANCY AND TRUTH.

"As turns the needle trembling to the pole
It ne'er can reach—so turns to you my soul."

Of all the qualities woven together in the human breast none approach in dignity and power that of truth. It is, as is written, a Divine attribute—the fundamental principle of every virtue, and prevails over all things. It adds grandeur to a man's life to know that he is true, and the shafts of envy, hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness, fall impotently before it.

The ancients who worshipped their deity, Fides, knew it above all things, and it is mercifully decreed the heirloom of the rich and the poor alike, so that whether we look at the two opposite principles of truth and falsehood in a simply worldly light, or view them in a religious sense, we see how closely they are knitted into and allied with every man's existence, forming in fact the very basis of his whole conduct.

It is given as a text of diplomacy that the acmé of perfection in a good diplomat's dispatches is to clothe his expressions with the semblance of facts, but at the same time carefully conceal the truth, and by this astute and wily policy hold the vantage ground of his opponent in the finesse of governments. This plan, we regret, is not confined to official use, but permeates through all society, assuming various names and phrases as suits the wearer, being generally clothed in ambiguity or plastered on the conscience as a thing of no great harm, and only a white lie, because "it is not policy (you know) to tell the truth at all times."

The idiom that "truth is stranger than fiction" is not an exaggeration, and we may with propriety say that to the conventionalities of social life can be attributed a great amount of lying—that sort of thing which the amenities of cultivated society recognise and admit, albeit it is lying as profound as was ever invented by Lucifer himself. Such are the expressions of every day courtesy, "I am very glad to see you," and "I hope you are in good health," &c., which generally mean diametrically opposite to that they express.

As the normal condition of moral government, truth is the sole pioneer that elevates it to the standard of perfection and gives it power over the community, just as individual men are rendered happy or miserable, respected or despised, by the possession or the absence of it. The golden rule, to be contented is to be true, and every man should inscribe the legend on the lintel of his door, "Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy Country's, thy God's, and Truth's."

Everybody hates, or professes to hate, inconstancy, and therefore it would seem reasonable to suppose that all would be sincere; but, alas! such is not the case, and those who apostrophise truth the most are apt to be as wavering, insincere, and venial as those who profess not at all. There is nothing so becomes a man and elevates him in the opinion of his fellow men as the dignity of honour, and honour is the very soul of truth, for it guards his footsteps through every pathway of his life and keeps his name unblemished and unsullied. That the origin of truth is Divine is plainly shown in every page of Holy Writ, and the wonderful declaration, through the mouth of the prophet Haggai, that Zerubbabel will be made as a signet of truth, is a proof that the Most High had chosen him.

Perhaps there is nothing in language that illustrates the almighty force and power of truth so touchingly as the exquisite little poem (written by Theodore Tilton) of the King's Ring, in which was—

"Graved a maxim true and wise,
Which, if held before his eyes,
Gave him counsel at a glance
Fit for every change or chance;
Solemn words, these are they:
Even this shall pass away!"

And while we are alluding to the subject of rings, it may not be inappropos to refer to a curious gem owned by the hero of George Fawcett Rowe's American Comedy of "Brass" (which is shortly to be presented to the public), in which Walfon Stray indulges in falsehoods ad infinitum, and of so glaring a character, that the effrontery of the liar is clear to every body except himself, and thus the moral is complete.

It is related that one of the Gregory's possessed a wondrous sapphire ring which he constantly wore, and it ceased to be pellucid, and became opaque, on the approach of sickness or any danger; but it is not necessary for man to be guarded and forewarned by any earthly gem, however rare and beautiful, as he has that within—the silent monitor, the true faith and trust in God, if he lives and walks uprightly.

The circle, the level, and the perpendicular must be true, else the whole fabric of the builder is untrue and the workmen at fault; so morally men's lives must be gauged by the standards of constancy and truth or they are useless and misspent. Every man must be firm as was Cæsar when, in the Senate, close approaching the fatal moment of his murder, he declares himself to be "constant as the northern star," and dies constant too.

But the grand secret is to apply the principles of truth to every act of our daily lives, and although there be those who "assume a virtue if they have it not!" let men be sure that the talisman of truth is the only safeguard to an honourable and upright career, for it is this character in a man which will ensure his prosperity here and his eternal happiness hereafter.

It is not necessary to make vain search for truth; it is written everywhere on the face of Creation—all celestial and terrestrial things proclaim the harmony and regularity of their Divine Creator, and shall man, "vain man," foolishly turn to the path of sorrow and refuse comfort? We sincerely hope not.

The sublime beauty of truth is that it requires no herald, no adventitious aid. It is found deep in every man's heart if he will but plough down and find it, nor need he grope blindly for it "in a well."

ALFRED WELSHEN.

"The Poet's Magazine," No. 1, Vol. 2. By ARTHUR MOXON.

We are much pleased with this agreeable candidate for public favour, and think the idea a good one, per se, and one which deserves to be highly commended. There is much good poetry, and much real poetry in these pleasant pages, and we only wish that our space permitted us to give one or two extracts for our readers. We have forwarded to the editor of the Masonic Magazine one or two specimens as evidence of a felicitous muse, and we refer our readers to the work itself as very wholesome reading, amid so much that is trivial, tiresome, and uninteresting to-day. They will be pleased, we feel sure, with such welcome toil.

"English Banners and Flags," &c.

We think it right to call attention to this carefully compiled illustrated catalogue which our worthy publisher has put out, and to commend to the notice of our readers and the trade. It is admirably illustrated, and will make all who peruse it feel what an amount of energy and business transactions are included in such an "Illuminated Handbook." All friendly and benefit societies, from bleating Shepherds down to jovial Gardeners, to say nothing of Foresters, Buffaloes, Odd Fellows, and Comical Chaps, will be able to have their artistic tastes fully gratified and their decorative ambition happily accommodated.

The "Liberal Freemason," 223, Washington-street, Boston, U.S.

We have read the third number of this new candidate for Masonic support with great satisfaction, and we can safely call the attention of our readers to it. We trust that it will be well supported by our brethren in Massachusetts, and that its painstaking editor may not have to complain, as so many do, of useless labours and profitless pursuits.

The "Voice of Masonry," Chicago and New York. Edited by Bros. J. W. BROWN and ALBERT G. MACKAY.

This excellent American Masonic magazine keeps up its high reputation. We always peruse it with pleasure and profit, and we heartily wish it all success, and a remunerative circle of appreciative readers.

POLITICS AGAIN.

We read in the "Chaine d'Union" for July that the French Lodge "Orient de Gaillac," already rendered notorious by its deliberate disobedience to the Constitutions of the Grand Orient, has been closed by authority, in consequence of a very foolish and regrettable act on its part. It seems that the lodge, which must have "têtes exaltées" and "irreconcilables" in its ranks, judging from its acts, has thought well openly to express its opinions on the great political question, and openly to blame the Government of the day, though a Masonic lodge.

We need hardly point out to our readers the absurdity and illegality of such a proceeding, and can only say that, in our opinion, any lodge that so far forgets itself and the duty and teachings of Freemasonry, deserves to be closed by authority.

CONSECRATION OF THE PAXTON LODGE (No. 1686).

The Paxton Lodge (1686) was consecrated last Saturday afternoon, at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham. The Consecrating Officer was the Worshipful Bro. H. E. Frances, P.M., Past Provincial Senior Grand Deacon, Surrey. Bro. Frances was assisted by the Very Worshipful Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, Past Grand Chaplain, who acted as Chaplain for the occasion. The Senior Warden's chair was allotted to the Worshipful Bro. Magnus Ohren, Past Provincial Junior Grand Deacon, and the Junior Warden's chair to Bro. W. J. Foster, J.W. 19, Bro. F. Taylor, P.M. 933, acted as Director of Ceremonies. The list of brethren who were present at the consecration of the lodge comprised the following—J. M. Klenck, F. W. Goddard, C. H. Benham, F. J. Sawyer, W. H. Boswell, R. E. Woodhams, H. E. Francis, F. J. Lancaster, P.M. 1194; F. Taylor, P.M. 933; W. J. Foster, J.W. 19; A. M. Bethune, 1397; Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C.; R. Brooker, S.D. 1269; H. Massey, 619 (Freemason); Theo. Distin, 173; J. Latge, 771; Magnus Ohren, P.M. 33; G. W. Dodd, 171; W. Morgan, 1385; N. J. F. Bassett, W.M. 1339; H. Wood, P.M. 1269; J. W. Lassam, W. S. 742; and G. T. Carter, P.M. 145. Bro. C. S. Jekyll, P.M. 1319, presided at the harmonium, and with Bros. G. T. Carter, P.M. 145; Theodore Distin, 173; and J. Large, 771, rendered the musical portion of the service.

Bro. Frances, after opening lodge in the Three Degrees, in a few words explained to the brethren the object of the gathering, and then proceeded with the initial formalities, as far as the delivery of the oration.

The oration was delivered by the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C., who said: W.M., Wardens and Brethren,—I have accepted your very kind request to be present here to-day, and I thank you for the honour that you have done me in permitting me to officiate upon an occasion on which, looking at the situation of the lodge, many of its members being familiar faces to me, some for many years, life a peculiar interest in being present, and I greatly regret that I cannot remain till the conclusion of the day's proceedings, owing to a matter which I have mentioned to your W.M. designate. Brethren, I do not at all wonder that the lodge which meets in this place, and under the shadow of this magnificent building, should have been called by the name of one who was personally known to many amongst yourselves, and to myself amongst the number, and whose name has been, and will for ever be, associated with this great building. I think that name will supply a keynote to my humble remarks to-day. Paxton was essentially a self-made man. He was the architect of his own fortune, and was one of those men who have illustrated the theory of self-help in a very remarkable way. He has made his mark upon the generation in which he lived; he has done a work, a great work, and passed to his rest; and in doing that work I am sure my brethren who knew him will confirm my word when I say that he not only did it with all the zeal and energy of a character that was bent upon doing whatever he took in hand with all his might, but that honours never spoiled him; he was the same man till his death—the same conscientious, unobtrusive, kind, amiable character that he was when he was the gardener of Chatsworth. Brethren, I shall not dilate further upon this particular subject; but rather would I take from it this fact, that though we may not all be born to such honours as he attained to; though we may not have the great work to do which gave a signal illustration to his name, we are every one of us, under God, self-made men; in other words, we are each gifted with power, under God's Providence, to make ourselves that which we ought to be, high-minded, truthful, temperate, industrious, and noble,—minded men, doing a certain duty in this life before passing on to another. And our admirable and beautiful system supplies us by illustration with the implements by which we, as architects of our own fortunes, may work. We are told that the twenty-four inch gauge points out to us the many great duties we have as Masons, more especially our duties to God, our neighbour, and ourselves. A part of our time is to be dedicated to that exercise which naturally suggests that we are men who have a religion, and look to a Supreme God and to a life to come. But it tells us too that there is a time for labour, and we are born to labour—that we must not expect God to do everything for us while we sit with folded hands; but that we are bound to do our duty in that state of life to which he has been pleased to call us with assiduity and zeal. In that labour we have no uninstructional implements by which to work. The chisel reminds us of that education which is one of the first labours of man; and I venture here to record what I heard an ex-Lord Chancellor say who is now living: "I think that the education which my father gave me has been under God the means which has led me to this high position; and I am more thankful for that than if he had left me £100,000." Nay, brethren, I am very much inclined to think that the man who is architect of his own fortunes, and who has earned his own way to his position, whatever it may be, is more likely to use well those gifts of God in the shape of wealth than the man who has inherited them from others. I have known many eloquent illustrations of this in my short experience. But not only may the labour of education be employed, but you know, brethren, that all have labours in other directions. We have labours to be undertaken in our ordinary duties in life. We have labour in connection with our families, with those dependent upon us; and we have work to do in relation to our fellow-men which teaches us at once that we are not to live for ourselves alone but for others. But we must labour on the square, we must labour like men who honestly believe that there is an All-seeing eye, and must comport ourselves in His presence as those who will have to give an account. If we act upon that golden rule—"to do to others as we would that they should do unto us"—which is probably one of the best moral definitions of the square, I believe we shall not find ourselves far from either happiness here or in the future. And with it we must have the plumb rule, justness and uprightness of life. Without that men cannot get on; and not a day passes that the records of our public papers do not show that the absence of that justness and uprightness of life is bringing many and many a man gifted by God both with a good heart as well as with good wealth, to poverty and ruin. With the skirret indicating the line of rectitude, and that perseverance with which we should go on with the line, however long, that God gives us, teaching us the boundaries within which we should work, our labour, I say, in such a case and with such instruments, may be brought to a successful issue. But we are not only to have labour, but refreshment. Ay, brethren, a good and gracious God watches and smiles upon us, and does not wish us to be morose, to be mournful, to be sad. True religion, you and I know is the most blessed and cheerful thing in the world; and therefore it is that refreshment in the shape of innocent pleasure has been given us by a good God; and unhappy is he who preaches any other doctrine. But we must use the compass—keep within compass. There, again, another implement teaches us our duty, and every one of us pretty well know what the meaning of that term is with the many engagements we have, both from within and from without. But we are to serve a brother in distress; there is a time for that. And here, brethren, I need not point out to you how admirably our Order supplies us with the exercise of this virtue. Not only in our noble charities, but also in the walks of life, in our own lodges, in the various ways, in fact, in which we meet with our fellow men, there is always an opportunity of showing how we can serve a brother in distress; for depend upon it there are few years in our life that we have not an opportunity of meeting with brethren who need our help—I do not say pecuniary aid; but [there are many ways—a kind word, a kind act, a kind recommendation, a thousand ways in which we may assist our brethren in distress, in a world which is, alas! too full of fluctuation and misery. Depend upon it, the brother who thus has the satisfaction of helping another is not without his reward, even in the consciousness of having done his duty. And, brethren, lastly, there are the gavel and the pencil—the gavel tells us that in addition to the volume of the Sacred Law there is the light of conscience, which is a reflection of God's image in the soul, teaching us how to use every implement with which God has gifted us. This conscience that often "makes cowards of us all" is one of the grandest guides under a good Providence to lead us to the Grand Lodge above. And let us not forget the pencil that is recording in the great book that which the workmen do. If we bear that in mind, brethren, depend upon it many a word of unkindness, many a word perhaps of worse description, would be strangled upon the lips; many and many an act of either bitterness or hastiness would be at once dropped; nay, many a thought would be excluded from the heart and mind if we remembered that that pencil is recording that which is contrary to the Divine Law, and on the other hand recording what we do that is "well pleasing" to Him and storing for us that reward which shall fade not away. I doubt not, brethren, that this lodge, formed under these auspices, formed also of Masons who will, no doubt, give a tone to its future—will go on and prosper—a tone of noble and lofty sentiment, a tone suggestive of dutiful work, and a tone of that charitable and gentlemanly kind which tends to foster those amenities of life which soften our intercourse with human kind, and teach us not only how to live ourselves, but afford an example to others. I say with such a tone and such a prospect I doubt not, W.M., that the Paxton Lodge will not only endure, but flourish, from generation to generation. (Cheers.)

At the conclusion of this oration Bro. Frances proceeded with the consecration, and formally dedicated the lodge to Freemasonry. He then installed Bro. J. M. Klenck P.M., 1339, as Master of the lodge. The brethren invested as officers of the lodge were Bros. F. W. Goddard, S.W.; C. H. Benham, J.W.; Charles Hammerton, P.M. 1330, Treasurer; H. E. Frances, Secretary; F. G. Sawyer, S.D.; W. H. Boswell, J.D.; R. D. Woodhams, I.G.; and Radford, Tyler.

The S.W. proposed, and the J.W. seconded, the election of Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson as an honorary member of the lodge; and the motion having been unanimously adopted, the rev. brother said he had already trespassed so long on the brethren's attention that he would be very ungrateful indeed if he did not content himself with merely saying he appreciated the very high compliment they had paid him by electing him an honorary member. He hoped he would have opportunities afforded him by relaxation from his duties elsewhere, of attending the meetings of the lodge.

The W.M. then invested Bro. Simpson as Chaplain of the lodge, and on the motion of the S.D., seconded by the J.D., Bro. James Coward, Past Grand Organist, was appointed Organist of the lodge.

Bro. Frances read a list of brethren from whom he had received letters of apology for inability to attend the consecration of the lodge. The names of these brethren were Alderman Hadley, Dr. Stirling, Sir John Bennett, Col. Burdett, General Brownrigg, John Hervey, F. Binckes, R. W. Little, James Terry, J. E. Saunders, and Somers, the W.M. and S.W. of the Anerley Lodge, who recommended the prayer of the petition for the Paxton Lodge, and Lord Holmesdale, Prov. G.M. for Kent. The Anerley Lodge was represented by Bro. Bethune, the Sec. Bros. Grantham, R. Dodd, and N. J. F. Bassett, were proposed as joining members; and Messrs. H. Reeve, J. Smith, J. Partridge, and R. Pratt were proposed as initiates.

The W.M. said he had much pleasure in presenting the lodge with his banner. He trusted he might live to see a large array of banners in the lodge, and that in future he might, as in other lodges with which he was connected, have the pleasure of observing on the left of the W.M. many banners in succession. He happened to be one of the founders of a banner lodge, and the members of that lodge saw year after year a banner reared for the newly installed Master. They had, moreover, the pleasure of knowing that not one of those Masters had been taken away from them by death, which was a most singular instance of the good providence of the Great Architect of the Universe in that particular lodge. He hoped that the brethren who succeeded him (the W.M.) in the chair of the Paxton Lodge might also be able to congratulate some other lodge, if it was their good fortune to be present at the consecration of a banner lodge, on the same state of circumstances, and to announce publicly a similar fact to that which he had just stated.

On the motion of Bro. Frances, seconded by Bro. F. J. Sawyer, a vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to the W.M. for his handsome present.

The Rev. R. J. Simpson said that this was the first consecration which he had attended where he had not found his chief, the Consecrating Officer, elected an honorary member of the lodge with himself. While, in some respects, he regretted to hold that exalted position alone, he congratulated the lodge on having one of its own members not only willing but able, and not only able but very effectively, and with thorough zeal, to carry out the consecration ceremony. Very often it had to be done by a brother imported from some other lodge; but in the present case there was native talent that could be pressed into the service. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Sawyer said it was quite an oversight, and he would now propose Bro. Frances as an honorary member.

Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. This was served in most splendid style by Bro. Sawyer, everything in the menu being of the finest quality, and the tables being decorated in great taste with flowers and choice summer fruits. With splendid midsummer weather there was a clear view from the saloon of the lovely Kentish scenery which is visible from the Crystal Palace, and the soft, heavenly breezes blowing across it through the open windows rendered the room most comforting and refreshing to the brethren during the whole time they partook of refreshment after labour. The experience of the brethren led them to remark that the Crystal Palace was highly favourable for the holding of lodges and lodge banquets; and, certainly, taking the item of banquets alone, their verdict was unquestionable, for a repast more complete could not have been set before them.

When banquet had been disposed of, grace, "For these and all Thy mercies," was sung by the musical brethren, and the W.M. forthwith proposed the toasts which fell to him to give. The preliminary toasts of "The Queen and the Craft," "The M.W.G.M.," "The M.W. Pro G.M.," "The Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers," having been duly proposed and honoured, the W.M. proposed "The Provincial Grand Officers," which had been placed on the list in consequence of the invitations issued to the Provincial Grand Masters of Kent, Surrey, and Middlesex. The W.M. said that these brethren had not been able to be present on account of other engagements, but he hoped that in fulfilling those engagements they had enjoyed themselves as much as they would have done if they had been present at this lodge. The brethren of this lodge had made up their minds to enjoy themselves, and he thought they had done so. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Magnus Ohren, P. Prov. Junior Grand Warden for Surrey.

Bro. Magnus Ohren, in reply, said that with respect to the Grand Masters of Surrey and Middlesex, he could speak of their work with much confidence, as he had witnessed it for many years. He was not so fortunate with the province of Kent, because the rule which prevailed in Middlesex and Surrey of every member of a lodge in those provinces having a notice to attend their Provincial Grand Lodge did not hold in Kent; and, therefore, though he was, and had been for many years, a member of a Kentish lodge, he had never received a notice to be present at the Provincial Grand Lodge of Kent. He presumed, therefore, that all members of the Kentish lodges had not the same privilege of being present at the Provincial Grand Lodge of Kent as the members of Surrey and Middlesex lodges had of being present in the Grand Lodges of those provinces. He thought it was a good plan to adopt to allow all members of provincial lodges to be present in the Provincial Grand Lodges, in order that they might see the way in which work should be done. As Grand Officers, brethren had to attend and take part in the duties of Provincial Grand Lodge, and to learn their duties they should be able to see of what they consisted. In proposing the toast to which he (Bro. Ohren) was responding the W.M. had said he hoped the three Provincial G.M.'s who were not able to be present were enjoying themselves as much as the brethren who were present. He was sure that nothing would have given the Provincial G.M.'s of Middlesex and Surrey greater pleasure than to be present at this meeting, to have seen the excellent working that had taken place at the ceremony of consecration and installation, for both these Provincial G.M.'s were working Masons, and delighted in good working. The brethren had heard to-day from the Rev. Bro. Simpson that after labour they were entitled to refreshment. That refreshment had been placed before them in a very magnificent manner, and those brethren could not have helped enjoying themselves if they had been present.

Bro. Frances proposed "The Health of the W.M." He had always found W.M.'s spoken of in the highest terms. It reminded him of the question of the little girl who asked where the bad people were buried, because, looking at the tombstones, every one was well spoken of. With regard to W.M.'s, after a long experience, he was able to say that the good that was spoken of them was truth, because a man did not arrive at the position of W.M. unless he richly deserved it. The facilities there now were for acquiring Masonic knowledge were so numerous that there was no excuse for a man who did not do his work well. It had, however, to be acquired by hard work, and therefore when a man became W.M. he could not be spoken of too highly. He had often been struck, looking at the number of lodges that there were, with the fact of how few bad Masons there were. He attended Grand Lodge, and went to the Board of General Purposes occasionally, and a solitary case cropped up now and then before Grand Lodge. Sometimes the brethren went to the Grand Secretary to have the case laid before Grand Lodge; but he said what was the use of their grumbling; why should they take it before Grand Lodge, why should not they settle it among themselves? Frequently through his judicious remarks the cases were saved going before the board. Many other cases were settled by the board; and it was very few that came before Grand Lodge. With respect to Bro. Klenck, he (Bro. Frances) knew him personally; he had seen his work, and he knew him to be a good Mason. He knew he would do his duty as a Master in this lodge as he had in the Stockwell Lodge, and there was before him a very successful year of office.

The W.M. in reply said that had it been at the end of his year of office instead of the beginning, he should not have had so much difficulty in replying to the toast, because if they had then drunk his health and said they approved of his work he would have been able to say something to them as to what the lodge had done. He hoped however they would not find that the compliment they had paid him had been misplaced. He would endeavour to do his duty to the lodge as first W.M., and trusted they would be able at the end of the year to approve of his presidency. He felt somewhat proud to occupy the chair as first W.M. of the lodge, and he trusted that the brotherly love that had been exhibited that evening, and the kindly feeling which had emanated from the meeting, were an augury for the future. As far as he was concerned the happiness of the brethren would be his object; and no piques or quarrels would he be a party to; anything that was for the prosperity of the lodge would be his first care and his first design. If his brother officers would kindly keep the same object in view it would be many a day before the brethren of Paxton Lodge would have anything to regret in being associated with it. The loving cup had passed round and they had wished brotherly love to continue. He trusted that the brotherly love which had commenced might long continue, and that the Paxton Lodge, like the man from whom it took its name, might flourish.

The W.M. then proposed "The Consecrating Officers," and with reference to Bro. Frances, said the brethren owed him much. During his (the W.M.'s) short experience lodges had increased in number greatly. From 1200 when he first entered there were now 1686. This was in the short space of eight years, and it showed how marvellously the fraternity was growing. It was an evidence that respectable men, that honourable men, that men of all positions and all grades, were anxious to enter so honourable a brotherhood as Freemasonry. None had contributed more to its harmony or its development than had Bro. Frances in his day and generation. He had done a great deal to develop Masonry. He had been the accoucheur, so to speak, at the birth of some few lodges and chapters, which had not reflected any discredit on him as the medical officer. In officiating that day he had evinced to the brethren that he could do his duty well. Passing on to Bro. Simpson, he would mention that that brother had told him the reason why he was not able to stay to the banquet. He had assisted at the consecration entirely against his own feelings, as it was the anniversary of the death of his son, and for years past, since that melancholy event happened, he had kept that day in perfect silence and solitude; but to-day having been fixed for the consecration of the lodge he consented to come and deliver the oration and assist as far as he could in the ceremony. The excellent address he had delivered must have evinced to the brethren that he had great respect for the Order; and the brethren when listening to him must have seen that he felt every word he uttered, and have come to the conclusion that he was no mean man to claim as a friend and a brother.

Bro. Frances, in reply, said he had had much pleasure in consecrating a lodge bearing such a distinguished name as that of Paxton—a man who had ministered so much to the pleasures of the people. Although Paxton was not a Mason he had in him all the principles that made a Mason.

The W.M. then gave "The Visitors," to which Bros. Bassett, Taylor, Wood, Foster, Lassam, and others replied.

Bro. Bethune replied for "The Master of the Anerley Lodge," and Bro. Massey (Freemason), for "The Press." The officers of the lodge replied to the toast which was proposed in their honour, and the Tyler having given his toast the brethren separated.

A very pretty selection of part music was performed between the toasts by Bros. Jekyll, Carter, Distin, and Large.

CLOCKS.—When we seek to trace the invention of Clocks we are met with conflicting testimony, most varied, as to the date and the inventor. To Pacificus, Archdeacon of Verona in the ninth century, is attributed by certain authorities the invention, but others equally positive jump backwards four centuries, and say Boethius was the inventor. Again, another grave authority states, the most ancient clock, with any distinct account, was erected in a tower of the Palace of Charles the Fifth of France, 1364. But this is negated by the erection in England, nearly a century earlier, of a stone clock tower with clock, opposite Westminster Hall, 1288. This was the first clock made in England, and remained until the time of Elizabeth. Again, we have note of a clock in Canterbury Cathedral, 1292; and the celebrated clock at Wells Cathedral, 1340, still extant. This well known clock was the invention of a monk, Peter Lightfoot, of Glastonbury Monastery, and removed to Wells after the dissolution of the Monastery. The dial is divided into twenty-four hours, shows the motion of the sun and moon, knights tilting &c. The remarkable astronomical clock of Strasbourg Cathedral, representing the planetary system, was constructed about the year 1370. The great impetus given to clock making was the introduction of the pendulum in the 17th century, and from this invention clocks slowly but surely spread over the kingdom; and the old eight-day clock with its polished case became as much part and parcel of house-furnishing as the four post bedstead and feather bed. But passing from the centuries to the 19th we find that modern skill and enterprise have made such headway, that clocks most perfect in construction and elegance of finish are within the reach, comparatively, of all. Bro. Wehlen, of the City Clock Company 7, Cullum-street, Fenchurch-street, has for very many years made clocks a speciality. At this emporium there are upwards of one thousand clocks, of every description, to select from, with the guarantee of a two years' warranty, and the addition of a discount to brethren of two shillings in the pound, and extra discount for presentations. Bro. Wehlen is all times pleased to afford every information and submit his varied stock for inspection and approval. To those interested in clock making a visit will ensure a rich treat. The Prince Imperial Regulators are only obtainable at this establishment, and obtained the first prize at the Vienna Exhibition.

LIVERPOOL.—St. John's Lodge (No. 673).

—The brethren of this lodge celebrated the annual festival of St. John on Tuesday evening, the 3rd inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, where there was the largest and most influential gathering of the fraternity seen for a long time. The value of the meeting will be seen from the fact that no fewer than between thirty and forty W.M.'s and P.M.'s were present, and the long list of visitors showed how wide-spread is the popularity of the lodge and the W.M. elect, Bro. Henry Burrows. There were altogether about 150 brethren present, and the entire proceedings passed off with an amount of éclat which must have proved satisfactory to those who were "at the helm" of No. 673. The lodge was opened by Bro. T. Roberts, the retiring W.M., who efficiently finished his year's work by initiating three brethren into the mysteries and privileges of the Order. He was supported by Bro. J. W. Digges, P.M.; J. T. Callow, P.M.; M. Corless, P.M.; J. Thornton, P.M.; H. Burrows, S.W.; H. Nelson, P.M.; E. Kyle, P.M.; J. Hooker, P.M.; D. Jackson, J.W.; T. Clark, P.M., Treas.; W. T. May, P.M., Sec.; W. Brackenbury, S.D.; L. Herman, J.D.; J. Ledson, I.G.; T. Falshaw, S.; and R. Whitehead, Org. The members present were Bros. W. Alderson, J. K. Coxhill, J.W. 758; W. Mellor, S.D. 758; W. Cotterell, P.M. 823; J. E. Jackson, P.M. 667; J. Jones, P.M. 594; John Burgess, W.M. 1325; J. Hayes, P.M. 249; S. E. Ibbis, P.P.G.S.B.; W. Savage, 241; H. Clark, P.M., who efficiently installed Bro. Henry Burrows in the chair of W.M. for the ensuing year, valuable help in the latter part of the ceremony being given by Bro. W. T. May, P.M. The following were the officers subsequently invested:—Bros. T. Roberts, I.P.M.; D. Jackson, S.W.; W. Brackenbury, J.W.; T. Clark, P.M., Treas.; W. T. May, P.M., Sec.; R. Whitehead, Organist; L. Harman, S.D.; J. Seddon, J.D.; T. Falshaw, I.G.; J. T. Callow, P.M., D.C.; T. Smyth, S.S.; C. Marsh, J.S.; H. Marshall, A.S.; and W. H. Ball, Tyler. Before the close of the lodge the newly-installed W.M. presented Bro. T. Roberts, I.P.M., with a valuable P.M.'s jewel, in recognition of his excellent services to the lodge during his year of office. The brethren subsequently dined in the large banqueting hall, and during the evening the W.M. felicitously proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. The annual picnic excursion of the lodge took place on the following day, and it certainly proved one of the most successful and enjoyable which has ever taken place. No fewer than about 300 ladies and brethren started from the Liverpool landing-stage, and proceeded to Monks' Ferry, from whence they proceeded by special train to Ruabon. By the kind permission of Bro. Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, Bart., M.P., R.W.P.G.M. of Shropshire and North Wales, who is known as an earnest Mason in his own and other provinces, Wynnstay Park, in pleasant walking distance of the town, was thrown open to the picnic party, and no more pleasant spot could possibly have been found. A large tent was erected in the park adjoining the house, which proved quite sufficient to accommodate at dinner all who were present. After a delightful walk through the avenue of splendid oaks, the picknickers were permitted to view the lovely pleasure grounds, and a short musical service in Sir Watkin's private chapel (Bro. J. Skeaf, P.G.O., presiding at the organ) formed no small item in the day's excursion. The party was afterwards allowed to have a run through the house, and the splendid decorations and rare collection of family and other pictures were the subject of universal admiration. A capital dinner was provided in the large tent by Bro. Murless, of the Wynnstay Arms, Ruabon, and the afternoon was pleasantly spent in dancing, games, &c., while some enjoyed walks in the neighbourhood, so charming and attractive. The "special" left shortly before nine o'clock, and the company arrived safely at the stage about half-past ten o'clock, every one seemingly satisfied with the day's delightful excursion.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge (No. 1002).

—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 3rd inst. There was only a small muster, owing to a variety of other engagements elsewhere. The following were present:—Bros. W. Taylor, W.M.; W. Shilton, P.M., P.P.G.S.B., as J.W.; R. Robinson, P.M. and Treas., P.P.G.S.D.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Organist; W. F. Lamonby, P.M. and Secretary (Freemason); T.

Bird, S.D.; C. Gibson, I.G.; J. Raine, H. Peacock, T. C. Robinson, and W. Potts, Tyler. Bro. R. W. Robinson, Domestic Lodge, No. 177, London, was also present as a visitor, and kindly took the chair in the West. Bro. Rule being unavoidably absent for the Third Degree, Bro. R. Robinson explained the First and Second Tracing Boards, after which Bro. Lamonby moved, Bro. Shilton seconded, and it was unanimously agreed, "That in accordance with Article 3, page 93, and Article 8, page 64, of the Book of Constitutions, the regular place of assembly of Skiddaw Lodge be removed to the new rooms in Station-street." It was also resolved that the lodge stand adjourned till the first Tuesday in September, in order to facilitate the fitting up of the new lodge premises in Station-street, in time for consecration, on the occasion of the forthcoming Provincial Grand Lodge festival. The lodge was then closed in form.

GRIMSBY.—St. Alban's Lodge (No. 1394).

—The brethren of the above lodge celebrated the festival of St. John the Baptist on Monday evening, the 25th ult., in their lodge room at the Royal Hotel. After the lodge had been opened by the W.M., Bro. John Nelson, Bro. P.M. Anderson Bates delivered a lecture on Freemasonry in Grimsby, from its introduction to the fall of the Apollo Lodge. He stated that in the beginning of this century, on Grimsby opening the Old Dock, and recovering from a long commercial depression, some Hull Freemasons came to reside here and formed a lodge. They worked under a warrant originally granted to the Urania Lodge at Brigg, in 1792, and met at the Freemasons' Tavern, which then stood on the site of the shop of Mr. Frith, fish and game dealer, Victoria-street. About 1806 or 1807 David Simpson built a lodge-room (which now forms the chambers of two cottages) behind his own house, near the New Market-place, and there the brethren located themselves. It was in this room that Dr. Oliver, in 1810, first presided over a lodge of Freemasons as Master. In 1812 Stephen Kitching built for the brethren the Apollo Lodge-room, which, in 1813, was opened with great ceremony. This place stands near the music hall, and now belongs to Mr. Thomas Brown, druggist. Bro. Bates described the internal Masonic decorations of these rooms; gave some very interesting facts relating to Masonry; mentioned several of the prominent brethren of the time, and briefly noticed the way in which they conducted their meetings and passed their social evenings. He also referred to an error on the tablet to the memory of Dr. Oliver in the Pelham Pillar Lodge, on which it was stated that the doctor introduced Masonry into Grimsby in 1811; and then traced the decay of the lodge until its dissolution and sale of its effects in 1833. The warrant was returned by Dr. Oliver to the Grand Lodge in 1834. At the close of the lecture Bro. John Sutcliffe highly complimented Bro. Bates on the success which had attended his efforts to collect a record of the facts concerning the once illustrious Apollo Lodge, and proposed a vote of thanks to him for the industrious researches he had made. Several of the brethren spoke in support of the motion, which was passed with acclamation, and a unanimous desire was expressed to Bro. Bates that he would permit the lecture to be published in order that the landmarks of the Order in Grimsby might be preserved.

PLYMOUTH.—Lodge Prudence (No. 1550).

—The annual meeting of the members of this lodge was held at the Huyshe Temple, on Saturday, the 23rd ult., for the purpose of installing the W.M. elect, Bro. Charles Philp. There was a large attendance, and the Past Masters present comprised Bros. J. E. Curteis, P.M. 189, P.G.S.W.; Isaac Latimer, P.M. 189, P.P.G.J.W.; E. Aitken Davies, P.P.G.S.W.; J. J. Avery, P.M. 1550, P.G. Treas.; T. Hicks, W.M. 1529; J. H. Toms, P.M. 1091; R. B. Twose, P.M. 105; J. Rendle, P.M. 1247; J. T. Avery, P.M. 156; L. D. Westcott, P.P.G.S. Wks.; J. B. Gover, P.M., P.P.G.D.C.; R. G. Bird, P.M. 1550; and S. H. Earle, P.M. 1255. There was a large number of other brethren present. Bros. Rendle and Holt acted as Organists, and the ceremony of installing the W.M. was admirably performed throughout by the retiring Worshipful Master, Bro. J. P. Rogers. After the W.M. had been duly installed he proceeded to invest his officers for the ensuing year. The following were appointed:—Bros. J. P. Rogers, I.P.M.; J. G. Kevern, S.W.; A. S. Stuart, J.W.; J. Y. Avery, Treas.; R. G. Bird, Sec.; R. G. Tippetts, S.D.; W. Garland, J.D.; J. Webber, I.G.; J. G. Lane, Org.; Cloke, Deputy-Organist; Shillabeer, Asst. Steward. Bro. R. G. Bird was elected as the representative of the lodge to the Committee for Petitions. When the appointments had been made the W.M. proposed that a vote of thanks should be given to Bro. Rogers for his highly valued services while he had been the W.M., and that those thanks should be conveyed to him on vellum. The proposal was seconded and cordially supported by several members, and a committee appointed to carry it out. The question as to the most convenient day for the members of the lodge to meet was considered, and eventually it was determined to ask every member and to request his answer in writing, so that a time might be agreed upon that would be most generally suitable. At the close of the business the brethren adjourned to Farley's Hotel, in Union-street, to dine. The banquet was all that could be desired. The W.M. presided, and there was a large attendance. He was supported on his right and left by several of the Grand Officers of the Province, Past and Present, and by the Past Masters, whose names have been already mentioned. There were also several Cornish brethren present. The W.M. gave several of the toasts, and in response to that of the health of the Grand Master of the Province, the Rev. John Huyshe, and the D.P.G. Master, L. P. Metham, V.W. Bro. Curteis expressed his great regret at the long-continued and severe illness of their most excellent chief, and also of his Deputy, both of whom he eulogised in the warmest terms. Much sympathy was felt for the Grand Master, whose illness has been long and severe. The customary toasts were given and responded to, and a very pleasant day was spent.

INSTRUCTION.

LIVERPOOL.—Merchants' Lodge (No. 241).—A special meeting of the Lodge of Instruction in connection with the Merchants' Lodge, No. 241, was held on Tuesday evening, the 3rd inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, for the purpose of hearing a lecture from Bro. Younghusband, P.M., P.Z., P.P.G.J.W., on the emblems upon the ancient chairs belonging to the lodge. Bro. Younghusband was the founder of this Lodge of Instruction, and the lecture, as might have been expected from his standing and experience in Masonry, proved most interesting and instructive, and was duly appreciated by the brethren.

Red Cross of Constantine.

PORTSMOUTH.—Naval and Military Conclave (No. 35).—The quarterly meeting was held at the Masonic Hall on Tuesday, the 26th inst. The N.P.S., Sir Kt. Jn. Harrison, was supported by Sir Kts. Dr. C. Knott, I.G., Hants; J. Clark, D.I.G.; G. A. Green, Eus.; C. G. Adames, S.G.; W. Tuck, J.G.; J. Clay, P.S. Treas.; A.R. Robinson, P.S.R.; Skeens, S.B.; Past Sovs. W. Sharp, C. Croom, B. Sinister, and others. The conclave was duly opened and minutes of last convocation unanimously adopted. The ballot was then taken for P.M., Bro. W. C. Redward and Bro. Jn. Brickwood, and proved unanimous in favour of each candidate. Bro. J. R. Crook (an accepted candidate) was then introduced, installed and proclaimed, and the Hist. Oration delivered by the Viceroy in his usual masterly style. Bro. Brickwood was then announced at the portal, introduced, installed and proclaimed, when the Sir Kts. had the second opportunity of appreciating the eloquence of the acting H.P. P.S. Clay then requested, in the name of a few subscribers, that the M.P.S. would kindly oblige the admirers of their old friend and N. Comp. P. S. Groom, by presenting to him a P. Sov. jewel, at the same time stating he was one of the earliest installed members at the revival of the Red Cross Order, under Lord Kenlis some years since, and so to speak, a veteran of the degree. M.P.S. Harrison said it afforded him great pleasure to be the medium of conferring this token upon P.S. Groom, and he sincerely hoped he would be long spared to continue his membership of the conclave, and transmit this mark of their kindly feeling to his son. In reply, P.S. Groom stated, with evident emotion, that he was more than grateful for this handsome mark of their appreciation of his humble services, and although he had done little in the past, it would be an incentive to him to do all that he possibly could in the future for the furtherance of the beloved Order, and so continue to merit their approval. The conclave was closed in solemn form until Tuesday, 25th September next.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF KENT.

The Prov. Grand Master, in returning thanks for the toast of his health, which was proposed by Bro. J. S. Eastes, said: "We have now met together for a good many years, and I am glad to see that the cordiality with which this toast is greeted has not diminished. I should be sorry if it were, because I should feel then that in failing to keep your regard and esteem I was doing harm to the Craft in the province. Having at my heart the wish to forward the welfare of the Craft in the province, nothing can be more grateful to me than to see as years go on your reception of me becomes not less. Believe me, brethren, on these occasions when we meet together for social conference and for provincial festivities, it is very pleasant indeed to be so received; and, as my Deputy was good enough to say, if you were good enough to endorse the sentiment, that he wished me many years of health and strength to preside over you, so wish I; and if by God's blessing I have the health and strength to bear the care of the province, I hope to do so, and to receive from you approbation expressed in the same cordial manner. Then we shall go on as a flourishing and united province, and that is the object of my visits on these occasions. And now, brethren, I do not undertake at these meetings to make many remarks about Freemasonry in the province; it is so thoroughly understood that I make them at the preliminary meetings that we have for business, when we have the Masters and Wardens of the lodges assembled. Those remarks are conveyed by those brethren to the other members of their lodges. I have been slack, I confess, in past years to refer to the subject I am now going to mention, but I see that it has been done in other provincial lodges. In some quarters some importance is attached to brethren appearing at the Prov. Grand Festivals not in proper costume. Now, I know that evening costume is laid down in the regulations as the proper costume; but I do not think it necessary that we should have it. Most of us who attend Provincial Grand Lodges have to leave our homes to come here at a very early period in the morning, when evening costume is out of place, and I, myself, who live in London, if I wore it in the morning might be asked if I was not returning from some late festival of the night before. Even if we were to start from our homes in morning costume, and dress after we got to lodge, we might not find places of accommodation for the purpose, and there would be serious inconveniences, and we might have, perhaps, the sad spectacle of one brother leaving with another brother's pair of trousers. What I would recommend is that we should appear in morning costume, with a black coat, a black or white waistcoat, and black trousers. I think we should then be more in conformity with the words of His Royal Highness the Grand Master. It is but a small point, but it is a small point which adds more dignity and seemliness to our meetings, which we are all so anxious to maintain. With regard to other matters of the Craft, I have said I have no intention of making any long remarks. Suffice it to say the members of the Craft have not diminished, they have increased, during the last year. It has been my study to maintain the position of the Craft, and I am glad to see that with the increase in the numbers of the Craft there has been no degeneracy. We are strong enough now in numbers in the province of Kent to look less to the increase in the numbers of the brethren than to maintaining our respectability, not that I wish to see the numbers flag in any degree. The impulse given to our progress by the Prince of Wales becoming Grand Master is an undoubted fact; and as this circumstance has led to the addition of new lodges to the roll, it is my duty in this province to scrutinise carefully the grounds on which the petitions are based, and to see whether they are such as in my opinion are likely to promote the true interests of the Craft. Wherever I find in an important and populous district there are those who if they joined our Order were a lodge established in their neighbourhood would be likely to do honour to the Order, I have little difficulty in recommending a new warrant. I have been glad to recommend two such warrants in the past year; and from what I saw when I attended the consecration meetings of those two lodges, I think the province of Kent will have no reason to be ashamed of the new additions. On the contrary, I think they will find that these lodges will add considerably to our strength, and even perhaps more than that, to the position the Craft now holds in the province. But I do entreat the brethren not to allow themselves to be carried away by the ambition of making their lodges the largest in numbers. We can afford now to pick our recruits. As in time of war, the standard by which men are chosen in the army goes down, so it is in Freemasonry. In times of peace the standard in the army goes up; and in Masonry, whilst we are in a good position, let us maintain a high standard. Then I shall have no fear that the recruits brought into the Order will be a credit to it. Those two pieces of counsel are the only two I wish to give. We are met for pleasure. Seldom have we met on a more pleasant or agreeable spot, and if we could not carry out the whole of the ceremonies of the Craft in the building we are now assembled in, we have perhaps some consolation from the circumstance that the abundance of openings have conducted to our physical comfort. And so, brethren, hoping that as years go on these annual meetings of pleasure may continue to be as enjoyable as the present (I cannot say more enjoyable), that each brother in the Craft may enjoy himself as much, and that each new recruit to our ranks may be as creditable to the Craft as those who are now in it, I have only to conclude by thanking you for the warm and cordial way in which you have honoured this toast.

The Prov. G.M., in proposing "The Deputy Prov. G.M. and the rest of the Grand Officers," trusted that the brethren who had been invested that evening would, at the end of their year of office, bear as pleasant recollections of their year of office as those brethren did who had been in office during the past year.

Bro. J. B. Eastes, who was the first to respond, after thanking the Prov. G.M. for the honour he had conferred upon him, said that though when he was first entrusted with the duties appertaining to the possession of the Deputy Prov. G.M.'s collar, he had felt some diffidence, he had none now. Three years ago he was able to say he had visited every lodge in the province. Unfortunately, through illness, he had not been able to do the same in the last year; but he trusted that no brother and no lodge could say that the interests of the one or the other had been in any way neglected. He had endeavoured to the utmost of his power to recommend to his lordship every brother who was entitled to promotion, and he trusted that what he had done had been satisfactory. He could not hope to satisfy everybody, but he hoped that he had satisfied the larger number. All his energies would be devoted to the interests of the Order. He loved Freemasonry from the bottom of his heart, and not only to the general interests of Freemasonry in the province, but to incite the brethren to do all they possibly could for the charities of the Order, he should use his best efforts.

Bros. Douglas and Spurrell also responded.

The Rev. W. A. Hill, Prov. G. Chap., responded to a special toast proposed in his individual honour. After touching lightly on the subject of the proposed testimonial to him, he referred to the progress made by the Order, and said that the brethren should bear in mind that with prosperity dangers occurred. Let them keep to the good old landmarks. Most of them, no doubt, read the Freemason. He had been invited to take the paper in, and he did; but he was mortified at seeing many things in the paper, more especially with reference to other lands. What had they to do with Milan and the Pope? They looked beyond their own little frith, the silver streak bordering this province, on to the continent, across the Alps into the glorious realm of Italy, and saw things which did not satisfy them. They might take objection to what the town of Milan and the Roman Catholic Church did with regard to Masonry; but, although knowing how Masonry had been attacked and cruelly used by that body, it was contrary to the principles of Masonry to interfere and get up a cry against the religious worship of the Catholic body. Let a cry be got up against it if they liked, but let them not bring Masonry into it. We have seen also in connection with the Grand Orient of France very sad quarrels, which we must look upon as very unsatisfactory, and we should take them as a warning to ourselves, and say "Let brotherly love continue." We should be on terms of friendship with each other, Masonry acting with us as the genial oil which ran down

Aaron's beard even to the skirts of his garments. But they might bear in mind that it had been proposed by the Grand Orient that the Masonic candidates should no longer be bound to their vows upon the Sacred Law. If that sort of tone was carried out here the people of England might think Masons atheists. Masons left men free, but it required them to honour God and be loyal to their Sovereign. If we seek the annals of Freemasonry we should find it had always been so. If we took the time of the Virgin Monarch, whose life was something like the life of Queen Victoria, except that Queen Victoria was the loving mother of a splendid family, we should find that there were many Masons, and Queen Elizabeth wishing to know something about them requested Archbishop Parker to ascertain what sort of people the people the Masons were. The Archbishop was made a Mason and of course saw the proceedings. He reported to Her Majesty, and what was the report he made? Not that they were disloyal to Her Majesty. He said "They are an honest and respectable body of men, loyal to their Sovereign and attached to God." It was the same now, and if they kept to the old lines and the old landmarks they would always be so. If they were they would be ready at any time for removal to the Grand Lodge above.

Bro. Thorpe, Treasurer, in replying to the toast of "Treasurer and Secretary," remarking on the progress Masonry had made in the province, said that when he first became its Treasurer the Provincial dues were in the year £26 14s; but in the last year they were £400.

Bro. Spencer, Secretary, asked but three things of the brethren; first to be attentive to the necessary communications to the Prov. Grand Lodge; secondly, for each individual lodge to be careful whom it admitted; and thirdly, not to form cliques.

The Prov. G.M. proposed "The Lodge of St. John and St. Paul, the entertaining lodge."

Bros. Dr. Spurrell, Knight, and Andrews responded.

The Prov. G.M. proposed "The Masonic Charities," charities being the raison d'être of Masonry.

Bro. James Terry replied. Kent had in the present year contributed £1229 16s. 6d. to the three institutions: £493 3s. to the Benevolent; £175 4s. 6d. to the Girls; and £561 9s. to the Boys. But Kent had ten boys in the Boys' School, who cost £42 a year each (£420); ten old men on the Benevolent Institution, at £40 a year each (£400); six widows at £32 each (£192); and two widows receiving half their late husbands' annuities (£40), or £632; and five girls in the Girls' School at £36 each (£180). So that Kent was receiving yearly from the three institutions £1232, or £2. 4s. more than she had contributed in the present year. Kent was not such a large and important province as West Yorkshire, or East or West Lancashire; but it had contributed to the charities a sum of which it might well be proud when comparing what it had done with what had been done by those important centres of Masonry. Looking at what it had done, every candidate it put forward was entitled to be successful.

The brethren shortly afterwards separated.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CORNWALL.

The annual Provincial Grand Lodge and General Communication of the Freemasons of the Province of Cornwall was held on Thursday, 5th inst. The place of meeting was Launceston, or Dunheved, or Llanstephadon, as that ancient corporate township is variously recorded in its early history. Launceston stands on the main coach road through the centre of Cornwall, but from one of those odd changes effected in railway times by the innovations of the iron road is now difficult of access from the greater part of Cornwall. Notwithstanding that inconvenience, there was, however, a large attendance of the officers of the Province at Thursday's meeting, many of them having slept at Plymouth or Tavistock the previous night. Over four hundred were present.

The room was tastefully fitted up with the banners of the Order, the usual Masonic insignia, national colours, and festoons of foliage.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened at the Western Subscription Rooms, at 10.30 a.m., by the R.W. the P.G.M., the Right Hon. the Earl of Mount Edgemore, supported by the acting officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge, of whom the following were in their places: R.W. The minutes of the last meeting of the P.G. Lodge, held at Falmouth June 22nd, 1876, were read by W. Bro. R. John, and confirmed.

At that meeting it was resolved—"That the brethren of the Prov. G. Lodge desired to record their gratitude to the Great Architect of the Universe for the safe return of their Most Worshipful Brother his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of England, from India;" and the Secretary was directed to communicate that resolution to his Royal Highness.

Bro. John read the following letter in reply from Sir William Knollys: "Marlborough House, Pall Mall, S.W., July 8th, 1876.—Sir William Knollys is desired for the Prince of Wales to thank the P.G.M. and the Free and Accepted Masons of the Province of Cornwall for the address of welcome and for their congratulations on his safe return from India. It is a source of great thankfulness to his Royal Highness that he has been enabled by a visit to one of the most important possessions of the British Crown to acquire a personal knowledge of its characteristic features, its interests, and institutions, and to promote, by intercourse with all classes of its inhabitants, the friendly feelings which it is so essential should subsist between the mother country and every part of her vast empire.—To the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe."

The reply was received with warm appreciation, and direction given to record it in the minutes.

The annual statement of the Prov. G. Treasurer was read by the Treasurer (W. Bro. W. Tweedy). It showed on receipts for the year balance from last account, £58 6s. 10d.; collection in church after sermon at Falmouth, £15 8s. 4d.; fees, £17 6s. 6d.; dues from lodges, £153 8s. 6d.; dispensations, £2 5s.; total, £246 15s. 2d. Expenditure for the year, £160 6s. 4d. Balance in hand, £86 8s. 10d.

W. Bro. R. John read the following Secretary's report:—"Province of Cornwall.—Number of lodges in the province, 27. For the year 1876—Number of initiations, 155; joining members, 40; previous members, 1272; total, 1467. 1875—Number of initiations, 167; joining members, 64; previous members, 1202; total, 1433. Decrease in 1876 as against 1875, 12 initiations; ditto decrease joining members, 24; increase of membership to carry on, 70; clear increase during the past year, 34. I must congratulate the province on the fact that the returns for the past year still show an increase in our ranks, and from what I have been able to collect from those returns I should certainly gather that the advice of our Provincial Grand Master has had its effect, and that the new additions during the last year are, taken altogether, an evident improvement. I much wish that in each year every Master and Secretary of his lodge on leaving office would be good enough to hand over at once all papers and returns to their successors, so that unnecessary correspondence and delay may be saved.—E. T. Carlyon, P.G. Sec."

Both reports were unanimously received and adopted. Bro. J. C. R. Crews, the Assistant Secretary of the Cornwall Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund, read the report of the Committee of the fund. It stated: Receipts—Balance from last account, £123 17s. 6d.; donations and subscriptions for the year from the lodges and brethren, £154 14s., a decrease of £4 2s. 6d. from the results from the like source in the previous year; vote of Prov. Grand Lodge, £25; part of collection at church, £6 3s. 4d.; interest on Cornwall Railway Stock, £20 4s. 5d.; Great Western ditto, £9 17s. 6d.; Russian bonds (since sold), £9 17s. 6d.; Debenture Trust Fund, £7 8s. 2d.; Pennsylvania mortgage bonds, £5 18s. 6d.; total, £239 3s. 5d. Result of sale of Russian bonds, £456 19s.; total, £819 19s. 11d.; expenditure, £49 3s. 3d.; purchase of £600 of the West Hartlepool Railway four per cent. stock, £612 8s. 6d.; balance on account of the trustees at the Cornish Bank, £158 8s. 2d.; total, £819 19s. 11d. Two vacancies for annuities had been declared, and there were two candidates for election, one from the Love and Honour Lodge, Falmouth, the other from the Peace and Harmony Lodge, at St. Austell. The Committee appointed at the last Prov. Grand Lodge meeting to revise the rules of the fund had met, and the alterations suggested by them had been forwarded to each lodge, and would be submitted for the approval of the Grand Lodge. The report was adopted, and W. Bros. J. M. Thomas and H. G. Colvill appointed scrutineers of the votes at the election for the annuities. The result was that both candidates were elected, one by 507, the other by 506 votes.

A communication was received from Bro. Reginald Rogers, D. Prov. Grand Master, stating his inability from severe illness to fulfil the duties of Treasurer to the Annuity and Benevolent Fund, and requesting the acceptance of his resignation. He thanked the brethren for the previous kind confidence they had placed in him for so many years, but stated his belief that his labours for Masonry were over, and that he did not believe he should meet in the lodge again. The resignation was accepted, but great regret expressed at the declining health of Bro. R. Rogers, and a vote passed to that effect, which was desired to be communicated to him. The P.G.M. undertook that fraternal office.

W. Bro. W. Tweedy was elected Treasurer to the fund. The Secretary, Bro. T. Chirgwin, whose absence was apologised for by Bro. T. Hughan, was re-elected, and W. Bros. J. M. Thomas and Capt. H. G. Colvill elected the Auditors.

The whole of the proposed alterations in the rules of the Annuity and Benevolent Fund recommended by the Committee were unanimously adopted without discussion.

W. Bro. W. Tweedy read the report of the Committee of Relief, which stated that during the past year two brethren had been relieved. Petitions had been received from two brethren of Lodges 450 and 699, and two widows of Lodges 977 and 450, and finding that the bye-laws had been complied with in each case, and that in the opinion of the Committee the cases were very deserving, it was recommended that gratuities of £8, £10, £5, and £10 be respectively granted. The Committee would hope in future that applicants for relief being widows would not look on that as the only fund, but would make application to the Cornwall Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund also.—Adopted.

W. Bro. Hughan read his report on the management of the votes of Cornwall for the great Masonic Charities of London. He begged to thank the P.G.M. and P.G. Lodge for their kindly placing the sum of twenty guineas in his name on the list of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys (for which he was acting as Steward) in lieu of payment of his out-of-pocket expenses, which he declined. It increased his list as Steward in a very pleasant manner, and raised the total to over £450, which was the largest single list in England for 1876. They had no candidate for the Royal Masonic Institutions for Girls or Boys at the October and April elections for 1876-77, so the votes for those charities were utilised for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and secured the election of the brother who was a candidate for that charity. They had now four of those annuities, and from that fund they were receiving £152 per annum. They had also a girl in the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls. He was glad, also, to state that at the present the province owed no votes to any one. They had votes to receive from the P.G.L. of Devon in April, 1878, having assisted that province to the utmost in obtaining the election of their candidates, and whenever the province of Cornwall wanted to borrow a thousand votes its credit was sufficiently good to be able to get them.—That report was received and adopted.

The P.G.M. said it was a most satisfactory report, and did great credit to Bro. Hughan, for the assiduity, zeal, and success he exhibited in the matter.

The Committee of Relief was elected, on the proposition of Bro. John Thomas, W.M. 589, in an appropriate speech, and was constituted as follows:—Bros. E. D. Anderton, P.M. 331, P. Prov. G.W.; S. Holloway, P.M. 131, P. Prov. G.D.; C. Truscott, P.M. 496, P. Prov. G.S.B., and Prov. Grand Treas.; and Sec., Bro. Hughan.

Bro. W. J. Hughan brought forward the proposition to increase the fees payable to the Provincial Grand Lodge to 5s. instead of 3s. on the initiation of a candidate. The former, he said, was the general fee paid in other provinces, and although a trifle to each lodge, it would amount in the aggregate to a sum worth obtaining. Cornwall has been very successful with the charities, but to keep up that prosperity it was necessary to maintain its character for contributions to those, and this money would become useful in increasing them. The proposed increase of fee on a brother joining a lodge, he said, he must withdraw, as it was found to clash with the present rule of Grand Lodge.

The propositions were seconded and unanimously adopted.

On the question of the grants to the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund, and the Great Masonic Charities, £25 was voted to the Cornwall Fund, and Bro. Hughan renewed his advocacy of the Great Masonic Charities being liberally supported by Cornwall, on account of the amount that province was receiving from them.

The P.G.M. said perhaps it was advisable that he should take a Stewardship for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Fund, and stated his intention of so doing. £50 was voted to the charity, and Bro. Hughan hoped that the P.G.M. would succeed so well in his Stewardship that his list on the occasion would be second to none in England.

This concluding a large portion of the business, the lodge proceeded in procession, in full regalia with banners and emblems displayed, and headed by the Launceston Volunteer Band, to the church of St. Mary Magdalene, where an eloquent sermon was preached by the Rev. J. B. Jones, M.A., to a crowded congregation, on the text 1st Epistle of Peter, ii. chap., 17th verse. An offertory was made, £12 14s. 0d., the proceeds of which was appropriated, in accordance with former custom—two-fifths to a local charity (the Rowe Dispensary), two-fifths to the Benevolent Fund, and one-fifth to the clergyman for charitable distribution.

The brethren then returned in procession to the Subscription Rooms. Redruth was selected as the next place of meeting, and the following officers were invested for the ensuing year:—

From the Subscription Rooms the Prov. Grand Lodge then proceeded in procession to the "Dunheved Masonic Hall," where the P.G.M. consecrated that building in due form to the purposes of Masonry. The hall is a handsome and substantial building, erected by the Dunheved Lodge in the environs of Launceston, on the Plymouth-road. Bro. Hine, of Plymouth (a member of the lodge), was the architect. The new lodge room is very handsomely fitted up, and provided with a convenient alcove in the south-east angle as an organ chamber.

W. Bro. W. W. Dymond, P.P.G.O., with the assistance of W. Bros. J. Rendle, T. Goodall, and Bro. G. Firks, of Plymouth, rendered the musical parts of the consecration. At the close of the consecration the Prov. Grand Lodge was closed in the new hall in due form.

A large party of the brethren then adjourned to dine at the Central Subscription Rooms, where the P.G.M. presided until 5.30 p.m.

A bazaar was held during the afternoon and evening in the grounds of the Castle in aid of the building fund of the New Masonic Hall, and continued the next day.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF SUFFOLK.

The annual Grand Lodge of the Province of Suffolk was held on Friday, the 29th ult., at Hadleigh, under the banner of Lodge Virtue and Silence. The preparations for the reception of the brethren were admirably carried out, and the inhabitants had done their utmost to put on the appearance of geniality.

Grand Lodge was opened in due and ancient form in the old Town Hall, the chair being taken by the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Brother Lord Waveney.

The minutes of the late Provincial Grand Lodge and the opening of the new lodge at Gisleston were taken as read and confirmed.

The obligation attached to his office was taken by the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, he having been appointed to that office upon the death of the Rev. E. J. Lockwood.

Bro. Lord Henniker made a suggestion that a committee should be appointed in the province which would have the government of the votes of the various lodges and members. The centralisation of the votes in this way would be far more advantageous to such candidates as were selected by the committee than the present method. By centralising the votes exchanges could be made with the committees in other provinces by which the election of one or more candidates from each province could be ensured.

A long discussion ensued, in the course of which some brethren expressed themselves in favour of the scheme, while others thought that any other plan than the present would prevent individual members or lodges taking that interest in the charities which they now did.

Eventually a proposition was made by Bro. Lord Henniker, and carried, "That a committee of six be appointed to take various schemes into consideration, and report to the Board of General Purposes. The lodges afterwards to discuss the recommendations of the Board and the scheme reconsidered for decision at next year's Grand Lodge."

The representatives of lodges in the province stated the position of their lodges, which were considered extremely satisfactory.

The report of the Board of General Purposes stated that the balance in hand was £73 18s. 1d., as against £70 last year. The report, with a proposition of Bro. W. T. Westgate's, that no brother below the position of W.M. should take office in Provincial Grand Lodge, was carried.

The R.W.G.P.M. alluded in feeling terms to the loss the province had sustained by the death of the late Deputy P.G.M., expressions which the brethren fell in with heartily.

The nomination and investiture of officers for the ensuing year was then proceeded with as follows:—
W. P. T. Phillips..... Prov. G.S.W.,
Eltham..... Prov. G.S.D.
Wrightson..... Prov. G.J.D.
W. Clarke..... Prov. G.D. of C.
Paine..... Prov. G.A.D.C.
Whitmore..... Prov. G. Purs.
Rev. J. T. Hassall..... Prov. G. Chaplain
Laughlin, Dodd, and W. B. Jeffries... Prov. G. Stewards
Huddleston..... Prov. G. Treas.
Dyer..... Prov. G. Tyler.

Lodge was then closed in the usual manner, after a sitting of about three hours.

Among those present at lodge were—Bros. the R.W. P.G.M. Lord Waveney; the D.P.G.M. the Rev. C. J. Martyn; Lucia, Secretary; J. Terry, Secretary Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution; Lord Henniker, 555; T. J. Huddleston, P.G. Treas.; W. Boby, P.P.S.G.W.; J. H. Bevan, P.G.S.W.; W. Clarke, P.G.D. of C.; W. D. Paine, P.A.D.C.; W. Hart, P.P.G.J.D.; W. T. Westgate, P.P.G. D. of C.; W. W. Walesby, P.P.G.S.W.; Rev. A. Tighe Gregory, P.P.G.C.; F. Spalding, P.P.S.D.; J. A. Pettitt, P.G.S.W.; B. Head, P.G.D.; H. Diaper, P.G.S.; W. Wilmhurst, P.P.G.S.B.; W. Gardiner, P.P.G.D.; J. R. Thompson, P.G.S.B., and the brethren representing the various lodges of the province.

An interval was made in the proceedings of the lodge, when a procession was formed, and the brethren attended St. Mary's Church. The banners were not carried in the procession, but the Freemasons appeared in their full Craft clothing. The Worshipful Prov. Grand Master, Lord Waveney, and other officers of a superior grade, occupied positions near the pulpit. The sacred edifice was well filled. Service commenced with the hymn "When I laid the foundations of the earth the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy." The usual afternoon service was then performed, with the exception of the Psalms, which were special for the occasion. The anthem, "Behold how joyful," was well sung by the choir. The prayer before the sermon was appropriate to the occasion. An admirable sermon was preached by the Provincial Grand Chaplain, the Rev. J. T. Hassall, rector of Wattisfield, who took for his text the 8th verse of the 6th chapter of the Book of the Prophet Micah—"And what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly."

The organ was played by Bro. G. Hardacre, formerly of Hadleigh, P.P.G. Organist Oxford, who played a voluntary as the procession entered the church, and again as it went out.

A banquet took place at the Town Hall, and was admirably supplied by Bro. Aldous, of the White Lion Inn. The chair was taken by the R.W.P.G.M., who was supported on his right by the D. Prov. G.M. and on his left by the Prov. Grand Chaplain. Several Past Provincial Grand Officers also occupied seats at either hand of the Right Hon. Brother. Grace having been said by the P.G. Chaplain,

The Prov. G.M. gave the first toast of the evening, "The Queen," which was responded to very heartily.

In giving the toast of "The Grand Master of England, the Prince of Wales," the Prov. G.M. referred to the great interest His Royal Highness took in the Craft.

In giving "The Pro. Grand Master of England, the Earl of Carnarvon," the Chairman asked the brethren to honour the toast Masonically, as the hon. gentleman was one who spared a great deal of his time as a statesman to benefit the Craft.

"The D.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers, past and present," was next given, coupled with the name of W. Bro. Head. The Prov. G.M. expressed the pleasure felt when Grand Officers came amongst them to diffuse their knowledge of Masonry.

Bro. Head, in responding, thanked the brethren for so warmly receiving the toast, and for the invitation given him to be present on the occasion, associated as he was with Suffolk—his native place. He had been a true Mason for 50 years, and on no occasion had he regretted it, and could assure the brethren that the same might be said by themselves the longer they were in the Craft.

The R.W.P.G.M. gave "The Charities," and illustrated their advantages.

Bro. Terry, Secretary to the Benevolent Institution, in responding, said the three charities were prospering in a manner which was never expected by their projectors. Since February last no less a sum than £36,000 had been received, a larger sum than ever previously was announced. With this large sum, though, there was the reverse side, the expenditure. He said it was a great pity that with the large number of applicants it was impossible to elect a larger number, but at present such a thing could not be done. With regard to the Old People's Institution at Croydon, it was impossible to extend the building, and now a large sum was expended as annuities to old people who were allowed to reside in their own homes. He next alluded to the contribution sent by the province, comparing it with other provinces, and appealed to the brethren to do more for the noble work.

Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn proposed the toast of the evening, "The health of the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master (Bro. Lord Waveney)." He said the province was increasing, under his lordship's direction, in as prosperous a manner as possible, and paid a high tribute to his Lordship's interest in the Craft. He thought the province should be proud in having his lordship as their head. The toast was drunk in Masonic style with cheers.

Lord Waveney thanked the brethren for the hearty manner in which they had responded to the toast. He quite agreed with Bro. Terry in his remarks as to the province and the charities, and hoped the brethren would take the matter into their deep consideration. He could not say more than he had on previous occasions. He was under a great debt to the brethren for the way in which they supported him. The officers who were always appointed were such that would be of credit to the province, and he had no anxiety as to their competence. He had a Deputy whom he could with confidence leave in charge of the province, as was shown by the manner in which the proceedings connected with the Gorleston Lodge were carried out. He was sure the future would be as glorious as the past in prosperity. He sincerely thanked them for their response to the toast.

Lord Waveney gave "The Health of Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn."

The D.P.G.M., in responding, thanked the Chairman for the many kind things he had done for and said of him. He felt very proud of the position given him by his lordship. The presence book, which he had just seen, showed that in 1856 he attended the Provincial Grand Lodge at Hadleigh, and he little thought at that time he would attain his present position. With God's grace he would carry out his appointment to the utmost.

Bro. the Rev. J. T. Hassall replied to the toast of "The P.G. Chaplain and the Clergy of the Province."

To "The Past Officers and Wardens of the Province," Bros. Wright and Boby responded.

The remainder of the usual Masonic toast list having been gone through, the meeting concluded.

The vocalists were Bro. Hitchcock, of Hadleigh, and Bros. Large and Lawler, from Westminster Abbey. A choice selection of music was excellently rendered by these gentlemen, Bro. Hardacre presiding at the pianoforte.

MDLLE. TITIENS.—We regret to learn from Worthing that Mdle. Titens shows little, if any, sign of improvement.

Manell, 1374; W. Herbison, 1374; T. Coker, 1374.

The District Grand Lodge was opened in due form at 6.30 p.m.

The District Grand Master in the chair addressed the District Grand Lodge, and said—Worshipful Brethren, before we proceed with the ordinary business of this District Grand Lodge, I wish to execute a trust which has this evening been reposed in me. Amongst Freemasons art has at all times held a high place, and I am certain that the work of art now before you, and which has been entrusted to my care for presentation to you, will be fully appreciated. Bro. Marshall Wood, of Lodge "St. Andrews," No. 256, E.C., London, an eminent sculptor, of whom doubtless most of you have heard, has sent you this bust of his Royal Highness, our Most Worshipful Grand Master, and in Bro. Wood's name I now present it to you. It is, I am sure, needless for me to suggest to you that the thanks of this District Grand Lodge should be conveyed to the brother who has sent you this beautiful gift. He is unable to attend District Grand Lodge this evening, and he has therefore commissioned me to place his gift before you.

Bro. T. Jones, D.G.S.W., moved that a special vote of thanks of this District Grand Lodge, for the handsome gift of Bro. Marshall Wood, be conveyed to him, and that the same be engrossed on vellum. Seconded by Bro. F. Jennings, P.D.D.G.M., and carried unanimously.

W. Bro. J. B. Roberts, P.D.D.G.M., enquired of the District Grand Master in the chair by whom the District of Bengal was being ruled, W. Bro. J. B. Knight, D.D.G.M., having left the district. The District Grand Master in the chair said he had intended to refer to the subject at the time when such matters were usually entered upon, namely, when the Presiding Officer, according to the agenda paper, would "address the District Grand Lodge," that is to say, immediately after the confirmation of the minutes of last communication; he, however, had no objection to give the information at once, and accordingly announced that W. Bro. J. B. Knight, the Deputy District Grand Master, who had been in charge of the district, had left for England yesterday, having previously made over charge to W. Bro. J. Pitt-Kennedy, P.D.D.G.M. W. Bro. Kennedy was unable to preside in District Grand Lodge that evening, being out of town, and he (Bro. Locke), at his request, and as next on the roster of Deputy District Grand Masters, now occupied the chair.

W. Bro. W. H. Fitze, D.G. Treas. moved, and W. Bro. W. G. Amos, P.D.G.D., seconded—That the minutes of the Quarterly Communication of the 27th day of December, 1876, having been printed and circulated, be taken as read.—Carried.

W. Bro. P. C. Dutt, P.D.G.A. Dir. of Cers., moved, and W. Bro. J. H. Turner, D.G.S.D., seconded—That the minutes of proceedings be confirmed.

W. Bro. W. B. Mactavish, P.D.G.S.W., moved—That the protest regarding the minutes of the 22nd September, 1876, referred to in the speech of the Acting District Grand Master, ought, in common fairness to the writer (who was absent), to be published in the proceedings of the December meeting, or, if not, that the remarks of the Acting District Grand Master should be expunged. The motion having been seconded by Bro. H. R. King, S.W. 825, and W. Bros. F. Jennings, P.D.D.G.M.; J. B. Roberts, P.D.D.G.M.; T. Jones, D.G.S.W.; and W. H. Fitze, D.G. Treas.; and the proposer and seconder, respectively, having addressed the District Grand Lodge upon the subject of the motion, and the proceedings and letter to which the same had reference, the motion was put to the District Grand Lodge and was declared to be lost.

The proposition moved by Bro. P. C. Dutt, P.D.G.A. Dir. of Cers., and seconded by W. Bro. J. H. Turner, D.G.S.D., was then put to the vote and declared carried.

The District Grand Master in the chair addressed the brethren as follows:—

Worshipful brethren: According to the agenda of business the officer acting as District Grand Master should now address you. I regret very much, however, that I am not in a position to put before you any information as to the condition of Masonry in the province, having been dissociated from any executive work in District Grand Lodge for some time past, and having had no communication made to me of the affairs of the past quarter or the state of the district, beyond the fact that there is one exclusion to be reported to you this evening. I have already informed to you of the departure of Bro. Knight and the consequent change in your ruler.

The report of the Committee of General Purposes, having been printed and circulated, was, on the motion of W. Bro. F. Jennings, P.D.D.G.M., seconded by W. Bro. W. H. Jones, P.D.G. Treas., taken as read.

W. Bro. J. Mumford, W.M. 67, moved, and W. Bro. Jones, P.D.G. Treas., seconded—That the accounts, as exhibited in the abstracts contained in the report of the Committee of General Purposes, be accepted as correct and passed.—Carried.

W. Bro. W. B. Mactavish, P.D.G.S.W., moved, and W. Bro. A. L. LeFranc, P.D.G.D., seconded—That the report of the Committee of General Purposes be adopted and recorded.

The District Grand Master in the chair drew attention to the last paragraph in the report of the Committee of General Purposes, relative to the duties of Lodge Pioneer, No. 1490, and pointed out that the procedure adopted in that case was not in accordance with the resolution of this District Grand Lodge, passed at a communication held on the 24th day of March, 1874, whereby the Suspense Account which had theretofore appeared in the District Grand Lodge accounts was abolished. The District Grand Master in the chair read from the report of proceedings of the communication of the District Grand Lodge, held on the 21st March, 1874, the following extract from the report of the Committee of General Purposes, dated the 16th day of March, 1874, explanatory of the resolution:—"The Committee further recommend the abolition of the Suspense Account, from which many inconveniences have been found to arise. They are of opinion that all moneys paid into District Grand Lodge should be at once credited under the several heads of account, in respect of which they purport to be rendered. Provision has been made in the form referred to in the preceding paragraph for showing any errors of short or excess payments, and any such inaccuracies can be as easily rectified under the system of accounts now proposed as when the whole sum paid in by a lodge is kept 'in suspense' until every mistake of the smallest kind in its return is purged. Under the present system the usufruct of considerable sums is lost by District Grand Lodge and the Fund of Benevolence, while no useful end appears to be served, the 'Suspense Account' being, it is believed, as distasteful to the lodges as it is unthrifty towards ourselves."

The District Grand Secretary said, that after carefully reading the resolution and the above extract from the report of the Committee of General Purposes, he must acknowledge that the procedure adopted by him with reference to the dues of lodges, the returns accompanying which required revision and correction, had not been in accordance with the resolution, but promised that in the future the resolution should be fully carried into effect.

The motion of W. Bro. W. B. Mactavish, P.D.G.S.W., seconded by W. Bro. A. L. LeFranc, P.D.G.D., was then put to the District Grand Lodge and carried.

W. Bro. F. Jennings, P.D.D.G.M., moved, and W. Bro. W. H. Nelson, W.M. 1374, seconded—That the report of the Grand Committee Bengal Masonic Fund of Benevolence, having been printed and circulated, be taken as read.—Carried.

Wor. Bro. W. H. Fitze, District Grand Treasurer, moved, and Wor. Bro. I. J. Whitty, D.G.J.W., seconded. That the report of the Grand Committee of the Bengal Masonic Fund of Benevolence, be recorded.—Carried.

The District Grand Master in the chair said, with reference to the notice of motion standing on the agenda paper in his name, that as he was not present at the last communication of the District Grand Lodge, the motion should not have been postponed, but should then have been allowed to fall through. It would be illegal for him now to move on the original notice of motion. When he should again desire to move the matter he would give due notice.

The undermentioned brethren who were respectively appointed to the office mentioned opposite their respective names, but who in consequence of their absence from the communication of this District Grand Lodge, held on the 27th December, 1876, were not then invested with the collar and jewel of their respective offices, were conducted to the east and invested by the District Grand Master in the chair.

C. F. Egerton Allen, W.M. 109 ..... Dist. G.D. of C.
F. C. B. Siddons, 67 ..... Dist. G. Stwd.
E. G. Sinclair, 229 ..... Dist. G. Stwd.
Thos. Duke, 392 ..... Dist. G. Stwd.

The District Grand Secretary reported the receipt of apologies from several brethren for unavoidable non-attendance that evening.

The District Grand Secretary, referring to the letter received by him from the Grand Secretary of the United Grand Lodge of England, in October last, requesting him to communicate with the several lodges in the District, and to ascertain for the information of the Most Wor. the Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, their views, as to the appointment of a successor to Wor. Bro. J. B. Roberts to the office of District Grand Master for Bengal, said, that in accordance therewith, he had immediately after the receipt of that letter, issued a circular to all the lodges in the district, and that to date he had received replies from eleven of the 28 lodges in Bengal; five lodges expressing a desire to have Wor. Bro. J. Pitt-Kennedy, P.D.D.G.M., appointed to the office; two lodges desiring the appointment of Wor. Bro. T. Jones, D.G.S.W.; two Mofussil lodges desiring to delegate their respective votes to the District Grand Lodge; and two other Mofussil lodges intimating their inability to express an opinion on the subject, being unacquainted with any brethren eligible for the office. The District Grand Secretary also reported, that he had communicated the above information to the Grand Secretary of the United Grand Lodge of England, and had promised to advise him of any further replies to the circular, as received.

The District Grand Master in the chair enquired of the District Grand Secretary whether any circular on the subject had been addressed to the W. Masters of the lodges in the district, subsequent to the circular referred to as having been issued, immediately after the receipt of the letter from the Grand Secretary of the United Grand Lodge; and, upon receiving a reply in the negative, he directed the District Grand Secretary at once to refer to the Deputy District Grand Master in charge, relative to the advisability of issuing a second circular upon the subject. The District Grand Master in the chair thought that a second circular had been rendered the more necessary by reason of two circular letters, regarding the nomination of a brother to fill the office of District Grand Master, which had been very irregularly issued by a brother who appended to his signature the word "Chairman, Committee of Masters;" a body wholly unknown to the Constitutions, and in no way authorised to address the W. Masters of lodges. The circulars so irregularly issued were, generally, mistaken for official communications from District Grand Lodge; and they had had the effect of altogether paralysing the action of many of the Mofussil lodges.

W. Bro. J. W. Browne, P.M. 218, said that the circulars referred to by the District Grand Master in the chair had been issued by him; but that before dispatching them to the W. Masters of the lodges in the district he had shown them to the Deputy District Grand Master then in charge of the district, and had obtained his sanction to their issue.

There being no further business to be brought forward, the usual collection was made for the Fund of Benevolence. The amount collected was announced to be Rs. 68-8, and was made over to the District Grand Treasurer.

District Grand Lodge was then closed in form, and the brethren were dismissed by the District Grand Master in the chair with the following exhortation:—"Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace, and the God of Love and Peace shall be with you."—2 Cor., xiii., 11.

FREEMASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

The triennial convocation of the Grand Encampment of the United States of America (Sir James H. Hopkins, Grand Master; Sir T. S. Parvin, Grand Recorder); will be held at Cleveland, Ohio, on Tuesday, August 28th, 1877. The Grand Commandery of Ohio has appointed a Committee, of which Grand Commander Sir Chas. C. Kieffer, of Dayton, is Chairman, and Sir Samuel Briggs, of Cleveland, Secretary, with local sub-committees in Cleveland, to secure quarters and accommodations for visiting commanderies and Knights. Philadelphia Commandery, No. 2; St. John's, No. 4; and St. Mary's, No. 36; have already signified their intention to participate, and are making all the necessary arrangements to ensure this pilgrimage an enjoyable one. Full particulars will be published at an early date.

NEW YORK.—Saturday evening, the 16th June, Republic Lodge, No. 690, met at the large Templar Hall at the Temple for the purpose of conferring the Third Degree of Masonry in full form, and when the ceremonial began there were present more than five hundred brethren, probably the largest gathering of Craftsmen ever met together under the auspices of a single lodge. Among those present were Grand Master Couch, P.G. Masters Thorne of New York, and Pembroke of New Jersey; D. Deputies Conant, Addoms, Ehlers, and others; Grand Marshal Jas. E. Morrison, Chas. D. Brown, Robert Boyneage, William T. Woodruff, some twenty-five Masters of Lodges, and delegations from Washington, Ohio, Lafayette, Jersey City, Pioneer, and Joppa Lodges of New Jersey, and Beacon Light, Hiawatha, Altair, Montauk, Bedford, Brooklyn, and Adytum Lodges of this jurisdiction. All the distinguished visitors and delegations were received with the honour and courtesy due to their positions, and the scene was largely inspiring as the evidence of good-fellowship and wide-spread interest in the workings of the Craft. Of the work done we need not speak, the fame of the Republic Lodge being already established, and its Past Masters remaining as active at labour as when they respectively held the gavel of command. The committee previously appointed a series of touching and appropriate resolutions on the death of the late Bro. Irah Chase, who was an honorary member of this lodge, which were unanimously adopted, and we may sum up the whole in the words of our caption, as a most noteworthy meeting.—Keystone.

COLORADO.—The fraternity of Georgetown, Colorado have established a Masonic Cemetery. It illustrates the mountainous character of the surroundings, to say that the only level place that could be secured is four miles down the valley, at the head of which the city is located. There the fraternity have laid off a showy site, covering about five acres. The plan embraces a circular plot, planted with ornamental trees, and to which all the alleys in the cemetery point. About $1200 have already been expended in this "city of the dead" since its consecration in 1869, and several craftsmen are now lying there "between that evergreen sprig" awaiting the resurrection.

The number of Colorado Lodges at present is nineteen, the largest membership (125) being No. 5.

Many a story is told of the difficulties the old Masons encountered in holding their lodges securely for want of suitable halls. In Boulder City a log cabin is still exhibited where the first meeting in that vicinity was held. Two Tylers were found necessary to keep off "cowans and eavesdroppers," and satisfy the just scruples of a suspicious circle of Masons.

At Georgetown the lodge is held at a point 8120 feet above the sea level. This is probably nearest heaven than any terrestrial lodge. It will be a pity indeed if any of the good fellows whom I met in that enthusiastic band should fail by neglect of privileges to reach heaven at last.—Masonic Journal.

TENNESSEE.—In looking over the proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Tennessee for 1857, we notice that the subject of forming Grand Lodge Libraries was agitating the Masonic mind. Virginia commenced forming a library in 1855, by the purchase of a copy of the Universal Masonic Library. North Carolina did the same thing. Missouri commenced by asking donations of books. Massachusetts was reported as having 196 bound volumes on hand. Iowa had 100 volumes. Tennessee had nothing, but agreed to commence the formation of a library. Arkansas, Maryland, Kentucky and Wisconsin had small libraries. In all fourteen Grand Lodges had concluded up to that date to have a Masonic library. Now there is not a Grand Lodge in America but what is forming a library. The older jurisdictions are adding year by year to their already large collections. In a literary point of view, Grand Lodges are improving their standard for intelligence.—Masonic Jewel.

FREEMASONRY IN SOUTH WALES.

Last week we published a rumour which had been for some time past current that Sir George Elliot had offered the honourable and important office of Deputy Provincial Grand Master of this province to Mr. Marmaduke Tennant. We are now able to state that Mr. Tennant has determined to accept the office and the onerous duties imposed thereby, and in doing so we sincerely congratulate Sir George Elliot on the choice which he has made, as one certain to conduce to the interests of the province, and highly acceptable to the brethren generally. Mr. Tennant is well known as an accomplished Mason, and he has done good service to the charitable institutions in connection with the Order. The members of the "Afan" Lodge may look with pardonable pride upon the circumstance that from their ranks have sprung a Provincial Grand Master and Deputy Prov. G.M. of the Province of the Eastern Division of South Wales, and that a member of the lodge is also the Provincial Grand Treasurer.—Central Glamorgan Gazette.

MASONIC BETTING CARDS.

Does the bare mention of such a state of things take away the breath, almost, of some of our readers? Well, we can only assure them of the fact, and propose, on the present occasion, to call the attention of our Craft to the subject. Betting clubs and betting cards are an institution of the day, and constitute one of the greatest sources of temptation and causes of wrong-doing, especially among domestic servants, young clerks, and a large portion of the criminal population. Ask any detective officer in Scotland-yard or the City, and he will tell you at once that few people, except themselves, who have to deal with it hourly, can form any conception of the prevalence of the nuisance, of the serious forms of evil it assumes, and the wide extent and spreading growth of this plague spot, this running sore, in our social existence to-day. Many a happy home is broken up, many a promising career is blighted, much and enduring sorrow falls to the lot of the innocent and the helpless, when some confidential clerk, some rising young cashier, some hardworking bread-winner, is lured into the fatal vortex of this betting maelstrom, and is whirled, here and there, in its dangerous eddies, until in a dark moment he robs his employer, in order to find "grease" for the wheels, or "grist" for the mill. That is to say, in plain language, he steals his employer's goods or money, in order to fulfil his engagement of dishonour (not honour), at the betting club, with the Vendor of this baneful poison. Perhaps at first he is undiscovered, and so he is tempted to repeat the easy process, until, emboldened and hardened, he sins, with a high hand, is detected, is exposed, and finds himself in the hands of the police and in a cell at Newgate. What wretchedness he has brought on his wife and children, how he has blighted a fair fame, and thrown away an honest career, it needs not for us to say here. Suffice it to add, that hardly a day passes but our police reports tell us of this great and growing evil. Indeed, it is a hard task to attempt to gauge the depth and width of this cancerous disorder, eating out honesty, confidence, morality, and sobriety amongst us, and making all serious persons feel how alarming is the epidemic, and how needful is a remedy. Can nothing be done to restrain the evil tendencies of these illegal associations? Will no words of kindly warning arrest the young in their downward course, alarm the middle-aged, or even affect the old, for betting cards and betting clubs are no respecters of persons or of age? If, as has been truly said, the "Love of money is the root of all evil," so surely this inordinate desire of hasty gain is both a sad spectacle and a regrettable malady, inasmuch as it betrays a very unhealthy state of moral perception, and too often proceeds from ill-regulated minds and ill-conducted lives, licentious habits, ill-omened connexions, for which money has to be got somehow, if not by fair means by foul. It is often very alarming for the philanthropist and the moralist to catch glimpses of the corruption underlying outside show and general reputation, and to know and believe that there is, as it were, a growing tendency in all the "strata" of society alike, to seek for unrighteous gains and illegal successes, and to subordinate everything, honour, duty, principle, and religion, to a determination to obtain money for their own unhallowed gratification or debasing habits, at any cost, at any price. And if this be true, as we fear most true it is, in the body politic at large, what can we say of Masonic betting cards but that they are opposed to every principle of Masonic teaching, every axiom of Masonic duty? To realize the fact, that in defiance of the laws of the land, which, as Masons, we profess to obey, betting cards are issued by Masons with Masonic emblems upon them, which are bought up by the young, the unwary, and the credulous, is, indeed, a sad satire on Masonic profession! How far such conduct renders the vendor or distributor of such cards amenable to the Board of General Purposes may be a matter of question, but of this we feel certain, that if any lodge, after due trial and proved delinquency, expelled a brother from its ranks, as acting contrary both to the laws of the land and the morality of Freemasonry, and the credit of the lodge, for the traffic in betting cards with Masonic emblems, such expulsion would be upheld by our Masonic authorities. As Freemasons we are bound to obey the "ordinances of the realm," both in the letter and the spirit, and our constitutions assume, as a matter of fact, as the common law of Masonry, that we do not disobey in any particular, directly or indirectly, the decisions of the Supreme Legislature. We deeply regret to call the attention of the Order to this subject, but our excuse must be that the effects of this hurtful system have recently come before us in sad reality, and we think it our bounden duty, in the interests of that great Order for which we write, to protest against the evil of Masonic betting cards, per se, and the degradation to Freemasonry, involved in the fact that its signs and symbols may be seen on such illegal documents, alike, as we believe, hurtful to morality and a dishonour to the Craft.

CHARITY AND RELIEF.

Perhaps this is one of the most difficult questions of the day, the problem most hard to solve, whether we consider it in the interests of society or for the welfare of the individual. The giving of charity and the administration of relief to the poor and needy are most largely affected by two opposing principles of action, neither of which, in our opinion, is perfect, per se. The one is the absolute gift to the applicant, without regard to ulterior effects, the other is the refusal to give without inquiry, and the laying down of certain artificial tests of the abstract characteristics of true poverty. No one can defend indiscriminate almsgiving, without inquiry or consideration, because the use becomes an abuse, and true charity is meant to be intelligent charity, and there may actually be times when it is the truest charity not to give at all. To contend that you are bound to give, simply because you are asked to give, and that the act of giving is sufficient in itself, without reference to any other consideration, is not warranted either by the Bible or reason. If we understand rightly the principle of giving, laid down by the Best of all Teachers, charity implies thoughtful consideration and careful treatment. Therefore we by no means join those who declare that in the mere act of almsgiving is to be found either its real essence or its true spirit. But, on the other hand, we cannot agree with those who seek to multiply unnecessarily artificial tests as to the condition of poverty and the claims of the poor, for we feel sure that they will only serve to augment, extend, and prolong the malady. As regards Poor law relief, for instance, we have long felt that though the workhouse test may be necessary, it may be equally too much pressed into the administration of relief, and we are convinced of this, that not only has it not diminished pauperism, but it has even in some cases tended undoubtedly to increase the pauperization of the people. We are going to assert not a paradox, but a conclusion of careful thought and study and administration for years, when we say that the real aim of all poor relief should be to keep people out of the workhouse, not to force them in. As once in, once imbue them with the idea that they are provided for by the State, they will remain paupers in mind to the end of their days, and never seek to regain either the consciousness of independence or the virtue of self-respect. Hence we are against all extremes in such matters, as the "workhouse test" in its abuse, is only the consequence of a reaction against indiscriminate outdoor relief. The technicalities and difficulties of our Charitable Reform Societies will not keep away the rogue or the vagrant, but will only affect "honest poverty," and we therefore deprecate the excess, (on this side somewhat rampant), just as we give up the excess on the other. There is, as usual, a via media in this, as in all other matters here, which we deem worthy of note, and certainly of travelling by, if we wish to make our relief and charity a reality and a blessing. We must have enquiry, fair, proper, courteous enquiry, but we also require the granting of temporary relief, not the forcing of a person into the workhouse, not the mistake, too often committed, of ignoring the commendable independence in English women and English men and the dislike to seek the workhouse unless in absolute necessity. We have known a most useful charitable society, where the active agent was empowered, having ascertained the truth of the statement, to grant temporary relief, and that is the system we wish to see adopted, instead of the superabundance of enquiry, but the negation of relief now in fashion. There is no reason why the two systems should not work together, and we trust ere long to hear of a needful reform in this respect. But in the meantime let none of us be ashamed to give, when we feel convinced that the case is a good one, and that a little timely help may aid a poor brother or sister in the hour of need. The gentle and genial teaching of Freemasonry bids us compassionate the wants of a suffering brother or sister of the dust, and provided the applicant has a "fair claim" on our consideration, and we feel sure is but a too true emblem of "honest poverty," then may we well call to mind language familiar to us all, that charity is twice blessed, in that it blesses him who gives as well as him who receives.

PERFECTLY RIGHT.

A worthy correspondent, signing himself "Delta," whose letter we published last week, seems rather to object on grounds of "Masonic service" to the presentation of a diamond ring by some brethren of a lodge to a fair sister of ours. We are always willing to recognize Masonic services and Masonic merit, but we do not see what they have to do with the matter in the case before us, as the presenters offered the valuable token of regard to the gentle "presentee" offered it on no such grounds, and for no such reasons, we may well believe. Whatever may have been the reason which prompted this act of Masonic gallantry, it clearly could have nothing to do with Masonry proper, and therefore we think, in the first place, that our excellent brother, the complainant, is "nonsuited," and completely "out of court," and in the second place we venture to hold that such presentation was in very "good form," and reflects no little credit on the sound sense of those who stepped a little out of routine to offer a token of regard and affection to their sister. We often, it appears, to us, ignore too much, not only how friendly our lady friends are to Freemasonry, but how much they do for it, in various quite feminine ways. Some wives could tell a tale of latish hours, &c., but they are most discreet, and say nothing. Not a few might fairly complain of solitary evenings, when Bro. Jiggins is illuminating the lodge with his wisdom, when Bro. Horner is charming it with his song, and when Bro. Jackson is returning thanks for the "dear creatures." As a rule ladies are most interested in Masonry, (as all sensible women should be), and often display the warmest and kindest feelings towards the lodge of which their husbands, or brothers, or cousins—yes—and "young men"—form a part. In one good lodge we could name, (and the list could soon be lengthened), much of the workable furniture of the lodge was prepared by the ready hands of kindly sisters. When this last presentation was made and we think wisely, it was no doubt the consequence of some prevailing feeling on the part of the donors. Perhaps those good brethren thought the gift to the wife would give pleasure to the husband. Some husbands like presents to their wives. Perhaps those good brethren themselves had pleasing memories of that gracious hospitality which woman always so charmingly dispenses, and could recall many evidences of interest in them, and, many pleasant days of yore, many long hours of Masonic acquaintances. So as those brethren, like their worthy P.M., valued aright "animæ dimidium suæ," they very properly presented that good lady with a diamond ring in token of brotherly regard and Masonic good-will. And, pace our good friend "Delta," we think that such an example deserves to be followed, rather than to be found fault with. Such an act merits praise rather than criticism. We know not a few fair sisters of ours who like Freemasonry, and do not object to Freemasons; and we can conceive no better development of the chivalry of our young Masons, than to offer to those smiling faces, those warm hearts, and those taper fingers, the Masonic souvenir of a diamond ring, which we trust to be able to record in the friendly pages of the Freemason, from time to time, as a proof, if proof be needed, that woman's grace and woman's friendliness, and woman's goodness can still find grateful brethren to recognize their worth, and blessing to our good old Craft.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.—OUR LUNCHEON.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

For the information of your readers, and, I also trust, to lead to an improvement in future in respect of courtesy to the ladies, allow me to trespass upon your valuable space.

On Monday, June 25th, the Stewards and friends visited our Masonic Boys' School, for the purpose of witnessing the examination of the boys, distribution of prizes, &c.

That all present were delighted with the improvement and great progress the boys have made under their excellent master, Dr. Morris, there is no doubt. That brother deserves the warmest thanks for his great care in not only educating, but in the production of happiness to our dear orphan children ("May Heaven bless and prosper them," I heard a lady say; and another "How well they look—happy, cheerful, and full of life.")

To this I could only say Amen, and may their after course in life be marked by honesty and perseverance, never forgetting in their prosperity the institution that reared them.

But I am diverging from my subject—"Our Luncheon."

On the occasion of the annual visit of Stewards the fair sex, consisting of wives, daughters, mothers, and sisters of Masons, form a large majority, and properly so, for there are few opportunities in Masonry for the ladies to take any share in the pleasure of work and interest, and knowing how full the heart of a good woman is of charity, we cannot, as Masons, show her too much of the excellent working of our institutions.

Now it must be admitted that however well the management of our institutions may be, without the annual Stewards, who work hard, the receipts would be very different. Therefore, I think that no trouble should be spared by all concerned to endeavour to make the ladies welcome.

On the annual visit a quiet and inexpensive luncheon is prepared (and properly so) for the ladies, &c. This luncheon could be prepared by the permanent staff of cooks, who every day have to provide for over 200, including boys. Last Monday, after a rush, we are seated at a table, with plenty of good things, including empty glasses for champagne, hock, &c. (no ale glasses). I was seated opposite some ribs of lamb, which I immediately carved for the ladies, and the meal commenced, without a sign of drink. A small card now showed itself, headed "Institution, &c.—Wine List—Bertram and Roberts," which informed us, Moët's champagne, 9s., and Bertram and Robert's (very kind of them to send their own), 6s.; Claret from 3s. upwards, and lemonade (Taylor's) only 6d. per bottle; ale, 1s. and 6d. per bottle. There was also a room in the playground, where you could obtain refreshment at similar prices.

Now, Mr. Editor, I have told all, and it is off my mind. What do you think of it? Why not get a wine merchant's licence, and make our dear Master not only Head Master, (a position never better filled) but our Wine Steward. See what a profit we can make.

Let me repeat, as this gathering is for the ladies, I think that this is a very uncomfortable state of things, and ought to be differently provided for, as it is both annoying to our fair sisters, and places many of us in an invidious position. Cannot the Stewards on some future occasion provide the small quantity of wine needful for the ladies, without causing the gathering to assume the appearance of an outing to a "restaurant?" or are there no brethren to be found in this age of chivalry who will readily assume the part of special ladies' Stewards for the day? I believe that no want of volunteers would be found in so good a cause.

Yours fraternally,

A SPECIAL STEWARD.

(Summoned at three o'clock.)

MASONIC LOTTERIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read Bro. Binckes's letter with the attention it deserves, and hasten to send to you a few friendly comments upon it. I hope to write in the same spirit as he has written, and I shall be glad to think that we shall, (let us hope), carry on a fraternal controversy in that kindly temper which especially becomes Freemasons. He, like myself, has frequently heard the same remark, "You are wonderfully fine fellows for talking about 'brotherly love,' but whenever you get into print you are no better than other people." Indeed, I think you become the most uncharitable dogs I know of anywhere." For once let our astute censors be proved to be mistaken.

Bro. Binckes, though he deems my views "exaggerated and untenable," admits them to be honest in themselves, which they certainly are, and did I not think that there certainly was something in them, I would not obtrude them on your readers. But I know that many of my brethren, equally with myself, have looked with regret on this growing combination of charity and chance.

If I understand Bro. Binckes aright, he objects to the term "gambling," as applied to Bro. Constable's lottery, on account of the absence of actual personal gain. I admit that there is some difference apparently, as between the man who at Monaco puts down one Napoleon, and hopes by so risking a small sum to obtain a large one, and the Mason who pays one shilling and obtains a life-governorship, value £10—200 times in excess of his original stake. But the difference is very small, practically, the essence of the act is the same; is an appeal to a risk on "chances," and for the purpose of winning a sum of money. For though Bro. Jenkins, who has drawn a lucky number, does not get the money paid to him, he receives what is worth £10 for 1s. by a "fluke," to use a common expression, and three votes for life.

Surely on every ground this looks like the principle of gambling, though I do not use the word offensively. For it is a great gain, as I have before said, which the winner in Bro. Constable's lottery obtains, though there is no considerable personal gain to himself. And if that be the true test of gambling, I fear that, logically, Bro. Constable's lottery can hardly be upheld, as it will require a very fine-drawn discrimination indeed to separate it from any common lottery forbidden by the law on this very ground, that the excitement of the principle of cupidity is prejudicial to the body politic, as well as to the individual mind. Whether the gain be more or less, direct or indirect, material or positional, matters nothing for the purpose of my argument. Charity, which is based upon the double principle of personal benevolence and self-abnegation, has nothing in common, and ought never, in my opinion, to be associated with the principles of a lottery, which only appeals positively, (regard it as you will) to the individual love of gain—the selfishness, actually, of the "homo."

I do not mean to say—Heaven forbid—that all who bought shilling tickets in Bro. Constable's lottery were actuated by a desire of gain, or any such ignoble aim, but I am objecting to the principle of a lottery as applied to the Masonic Charities, and I am constrained to repeat that, defend it as you will, uphold it as you may, (because directed to a good cause), it does not in any sense harmonise with the true teaching and action of genuine charity—which gives as a duty, and gives on principle.

II. Bro. Binckes very properly gives up at once "the end justifies the means" argument, so I will not prolong the discussion on this head, though I believe he rather makes the end of the lottery take the "support of a deserving institution which has charity for its object," and this is surely a gentle assertion of the old formula that you may "do evil" to bring about "good." I have heard this defence made for the lottery system, and so I thought it needful to deal with it.

III. I am not myself much concerned with the question of "success" and "non-success" further than this—that it is to the growth of the lotteries that I object, for one, and I know with many more, and I cannot see without alarm the extension of a principle of action which I deem equally unsafe and unsound.

IV. I confess that Bro. Binckes's argument, however able, does not remove my objection to the lottery system as a matter of policy. Many of those who gain £10 for one shilling and three votes for life are quite able to pay £10, and I fear that the increase of the lottery system will make many say, "I will run my chance by paying one shilling rather than qualify by paying £10." But I do not wish to take an exaggerated view of the whole question, and least of all to find fault with zealous exertions. I am only anxious to call attention to what I think unsound and questionable as regards the great principle of Masonic charity. I for one equally object to the "pious raffle" and the "Masonic lottery," and though not actually, perhaps, of any great consequence, yet they constitute, in my humble opinion, an unsound manifestation, whether as relates to principle or practice.

I have said my say, "quantum valet," and leave it to the friendly criticism of my courteous opponent and your readers. I quite agree with Bro. Binckes that Bro. Constable's exertions are alike remarkable and meritorious in the highest degree. I note that he sent in a list of £1200, and as that represents £800 for his list over and above the lottery, it necessarily represents an enormous amount of labour, and points out Bro. Constable as a most successful pleader in his own lodge and elsewhere for the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

W. F.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I think Bro. W. F. deserves our thanks for his letter in your paper of the 30th ult., his remarks seem to apply directly to a conversation I had with a brother a member of our own lodge, a few days after the drawing. I was asked the question if the Life Governors of the Boys' School were not confined to Freemasons, and if anyone outside the pale of Freemasonry could become a Governor of one of our noble institutions, of course I answered that the institution was purely Masonic. To my surprise I was told that the fortunate holder of the ticket, No. 4540, was not a Mason, nor had ever subscribed to any lodge, but that some friend had persuaded him to purchase a shilling ticket (only a shilling), and that he had a post card sent to him after the draw, informing him that he was one of the Life Governors of the Boys' School. The end may justify the means, and it is right to help them anyway we can, but I certainly think that our brethren should refrain from asking outsiders to take a chance of becoming a Life Governor in one of our schools for the sake of selling a ticket.

I may add that this has been written under purely Masonic motives, and not from any spirit that would tend to mar Bro. Constable's undertaking.

I remain, yours fraternally,

ANCHOLME.

ANALYSIS OF STEWARDS' LISTS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I warmly support your objection to give an analysis of the Stewards' Lists for the charities by provinces or in any other way, save by individuals, because the figures prove a snare to any would-be analytical editor or writer. Each Steward does his best, and procures subscribers from all parts of the country if he be a London Mason, and from any friends in London if he be a country Mason, so that frequently the names of provinces omitted have done their part, though unrecognised, as was the case of my province (Somerset) quite recently.

Yours fraternally,

J. T. C.

VOTES FOR THE MASONIC CHARITIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

You have done well as Editor to ventilate the question of our voting Masonic Charities, and have earned the thanks of all practically acquainted with the subject. I know several most willing to support you, and Bro. Hughan (P.G.D.) is ready when needful to give facts illustrative of the value of the present system, indeed he has promised so to do, if anything turns up by way of objection of a character requiring attention and consideration.

Yours truly,

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.

BOYS' SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your leading article of last week you state "Bro. Binckes may pride himself on one great, if simple fact, that he has been privileged to announce the largest amount ever sent up to our Masonic Charities, viz. £13,248 17s. 6d." Will you permit me to state this is scarcely accurate?

While sincerely congratulating my good friend Bro. Binckes on so splendid a result, I am bound in justice to the Board of Stewards who worked so zealously for this Institution in February last, to inform you that the total amount brought in by them was larger than that you justly take pride in placing to the credit of the Boys' School, viz., £13,368 and there are five lists to come in.

Will you kindly insert this in your next, and oblige, yours truly and fraternally,

JAMES TERRY, Sec. R.M.B.I.

THE PRESENTATION OF DIAMOND RINGS TO LADIES BY MASONS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I notice that Bro. "Delta" seems to object to such a presentation, but why? Surely it is a very fraternal proceeding, and is a little "variety" in our Masonic routine. A visit to your worthy publisher's "Emporium" would enable any chivalric brethren to gratify their own taste and that of the fair presentee at the same time.

I for one quite approve of the idea, and Jones of "ours" adds that it is one of those things which a "fellar can understand."

Yours fraternally,

SPOT.

THE ANCIENT CORNISH TONGUE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As I think the enclosed cutting may interest some of our Cornish brethren, I beg to forward it to you.

"Next year (1878) being the 100th year since the date when, as is commonly supposed in the West of England, the Cornish language actually ceased to be spoken, through the death of the last person who could converse in it fluently—an old woman of Mousehold, near Penzance, who used the language chiefly for the purpose of swearing in it—it has been proposed to commemorate the "centenary" by holding at Penzance or at Truro—probably at the former—a congress of Celtic scholars. At this congress papers will be read and discussions invited upon the history and affinities of the ancient and now extinct Cornish language. Although this language has ceased to be vernacular for so long a period, yet it is well-known that there still remain a number of manuscripts which were written in it, and some of which have been recently translated and published. For instance, sundry of the old Cornish Scriptural dramas, the 'Origo Mundi,' the 'Passio Christi,' and the 'Resurrectio Christi,' by Mr. Norris, and the 'Beunands Meriasek,' by Mr. W. Stoke. It is expected that other similar manuscripts will also shortly see the light under the auspices of the 'Cornish Manuscript Society;' and it may be added, as a connecting link with our own times, that not a few old Cornish words are still embedded in the modern Cornish dialect. The celebration of this forthcoming 'centenary' is expected to prove the occasion of a re-union, in one of the westernmost towns in the kingdom, of some of our leading Celtic philologists and antiquaries; and the gathering, if it should be held, will be one of the results of the interesting congresses of the British Archaeological Association held in Cornwall in August last."

I am, yours fraternally,

ARCHÆOLOGIST.

SHAKESPEARE AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Do any of your readers interest themselves in the question, whether Wm. Shakespeare was a Freemason or no? To all such I call attention in your pages, to some remarkable lines in King Henry VI., part iii., act 2, sc. v., which appear to me very Masonic, so much so that, in my humble opinion, Shakespeare's quotation and our Masonic verbiage have a common origin.

"When this is known, then to divide the times;

So many hours must I tend my flock,

So many hours must I take my rest,

So many hours must I contemplate,

So many hours must I sport myself."

Perhaps some Shakespearian brother can "cap" this interesting passage.

A LOVER OF SHAKESPEARE.

A RELIC.

A "correspondent of the "Masonic Record of Western India" writes:—

I have in my possession a very interesting relic of Freemasonry in the shape of a "List of Regular Lodges according to their Seniority and Constitution: printed for and sold by J. Pine, Engraver, Little Britain and in Aldersgate Street," and bears date 1729. As a short description of the work may interest your readers who have antiquarian tastes, I venture to send you the following notes:—

On the top of the first page is a male figure, clothed in the flowing robes in which the Apostles are usually depicted. He has in his right hand a square, and with his left he points to a plan of which he probably represents the architect. Opposite to him, crowned, and in the costume of a Roman Emperor, stands a figure which appears to be giving instructions regarding the plan. Behind the latter are discovered two Roman soldiers, clad in armour and bearing sabres. The background of the picture is formed by columns and round arches through which the facade of the temple is discovered. Below this is an engraving of the arms of Lord Kingston, Grand Master. On the four next pages is a list of the lodges, fifty-four in number. Their names are not given, but the dates of constitution, the days of meeting in each month, together with the names of the streets and engravings of the signs of the various taverns in which they are held, are given in parallel columns. Without some special research, which I am not at present in a position to prosecute, it would be difficult to identify the several lodges enumerated in the list, many of which have probably changed their names. This is actually the case with the very first one mentioned in the list, i.e., the world-famed "St. Paul's Lodge," then meeting at the Poker and Gridiron, St. Paul's Churchyard, and now known as the Lodge of Antiquity, No. 2.

It was in this lodge that the famous resolution was passed in the year 17—, to the effect that Masonry should from thenceforth cease to be operative, and should become speculative. Although the lodge in question is now described as dating from time immemorial, still I note that the actual date of its constitution is given in the list curiously enough as 1692. Lord Kingston appointed George Pomfret the first Provincial Grand Master of Bengal in 1729, and having resigned in favour of the Duke of Norfolk in 1730, became the first Grand Master of Ireland in the year following. Findel, I notice, describes him as Viscount Kingston, whereas in my list he bears the title of Baron Kingston. In conclusion, I may mention that besides lodges in London, the list refers to others at Bath, Bristol, Norwich, Chichester, Chester, Carmarthen, Gosport, Tottenham, Salford, and Warwick, and even one at Madrid. This latter must, in my opinion, be the one which Lord Coleraine, who was the immediate predecessor of Lord Kingston as Grand Master in 1728, founded under the name of the Lilies, and I am fortified in this opinion from the fact that the sign of the lodge in my list is that of an escutcheon bearing three fleurs-de-lys. The lodge, however, which Lord Coleraine founded in 1727 at Gibraltar appears to have been but short lived, as it is not mentioned in the list.

On the last page is a table showing the number of lodges meeting on the same day of the week. The result is as follows:—

On Monday 13, on Tuesday 7, on Wednesday 11, on Thursday 10, on Friday 5, on Saturday 13, and on Sunday 1.

FREEMASONRY IN THE PUNJAB.

"A Past Master" sends the following to the "Masonic Record of Western India":—

I must send you a few lines regarding a most successful meeting of the District Grand Lodge of the Punjab, held last evening. You may not, perhaps, be aware that our new Lieutenant-Governor, the Hon. R. E. Egerton, is a Past Master of the Lodge Hope and Perseverance, No. 782, at Lahore, consequently the members of the Craft were most anxious to present him with an address of congratulation on the honour it had pleased the Empress of India to confer upon him, and to our great satisfaction he was kind enough to attend the meeting of District Grand Lodge to receive the same. Lodge was opened at a quarter before seven, and at seven his honour arrived, and was received by a deputation consisting of the District Grand Master, his Deputy, the two Wardens and Deacons, and conducted to a seat on the left of the throne. He was received with acclamation, and, on silence being obtained, the District Grand Master welcomed him in a few well-chosen words, and read the address prepared for his acceptance. W. Bro. Egerton then responded and retired, being unable on account of a previous engagement to remain to banquet.

There were present some fifty or sixty brethren, many of them came from out-stations on purpose to be present on so auspicious an occasion, as this is the first time District Grand Lodge has been honoured by a visit from the Lieutenant-Governor of the province. Sir H. Davis was a member of the Craft, and a Life Governor of the Punjab Masonic Institution, but never attended a meeting of District Grand Lodge; in fact, being a Fellow Craft only, he could not have obtained admission.

I was not at all astonished to see that, at last, our brethren of the N. W. P. are going for a District Grand Lodge of their own. Alas! poor Bengal, it will be further deprived of nine lodges, only let me give the brethren one piece of advice, apply for a District Grand Chapter at the same time, and do not follow in the footsteps of the Punjab in that respect, and put off for a year such an application. If this one is granted, the other will be also; for I know for a fact, when the District Grand Master of the Punjab, in 1875, applied for a District Grand Chapter, the only question that arose was, why it had not been granted when the District Grand Lodge of the Punjab was sanctioned. We in the Punjab will heartily welcome the new District Grand Lodge, and wish it all success; I feel certain the more local heads there are the more will the Craft flourish; take our D. G. Chapter—it started in February, 1875, with five R.A. Chapters, and we have now nine in full working order and doing plenty of work. That shows what a little energy and a hope of the honours of the purple will do.

I have no doubt you will in due time receive a copy of the proceedings of the special meeting of District Grand Lodge, with a copy of the address and its reply, and so I will say no more.

BRO. GEORGE KENNING'S ANNUAL EXCURSION.

On Saturday last the whole of the hands employed on Bro. George Kenning's establishment had their excursion for 1877. Bro. Kenning engaged the Citizen steamboat "R." to convey the party to Hampton Court, and by 9 o'clock about 200 persons embarked at Paul's Wharf Pier. Bro. Kenning, who defrayed the entire cost of the day's amusements, accompanied by Mrs. Kenning and the Misses Kenning, Miss Hayward, Bro. Wood, of the Liverpool house; Bro. Bickerton, of the Glasgow house; Bro. H. Massey and Mrs. Massey, Bro. D. W. Pearce, Bro. B. Wright, Mrs. Wright, Bro. H. Cox, Bro. F. A. Kelly, Bro. Toye, with the heads of the different departments, received the party on board, and to the strains of an excellent band of music, led by Mr. Stuart Dudley, the boat proceeded up the river. The journey was a very pleasant one, and to while away the time the party engaged in dancing and singing, which was kept up with unflagging vigour. The passage occupied nearly four hours, but the beautiful scenery of the Upper Thames and the numerous boating parties of ladies and gentlemen afforded a fund of enjoyment which made the time pass rapidly. Arrived at Hampton Court the party proceeded to the Cardinal Wolsey, where they sat down, headed by their worthy entertainer and family, to a bountiful dinner, to which ample justice was done, the ride up having given all a keen appetite. At the conclusion of the repast the holiday makers were left to follow their individual inclinations, some engaging in sports on the commodious green in front of the Cardinal Wolsey, and some (Bro. Kenning and family among the number), selecting the objects of interest in Hampton Court Palace for the afternoon's occupation. After spending three hours among the pictures, the tapestry, and the gardens, and some of the party having ventured on solving the intricacies of the world-famed "Maze," and others the wonderful grape-vine, they returned to the Cardinal Wolsey to tea, which was announced for five o'clock, and to this meal again the visitors applied themselves with the business-like air which is usually attributed to hunters. As the voyage occupied a considerable portion of the day there was not much time to be devoted to many outdoor amusements after tea, and therefore by half-past six o'clock every one was again on board the steamer and the vessel under way. Dancing and singing were of course the main portion of the entertainment on the passage down to London, and these were kept up without any cessation till the boat neared Paul's Wharf at a quarter past ten o'clock. Bro. Kenning had arranged for no speeches to be delivered at the dinner or tea, or, as is the custom on these occasions, some one would have called on the company before re-embarking on the boat to give three hearty cheers for the host of the day. However, as this item had been omitted from the programme to give the pleasure seekers as much time as possible to devote to their al fresco pleasures, the band on passing under Blackfriars Bridge struck up the tune "For he's a jolly good fellow," which the company, without exception, accompanied by giving the words, and concluded with vociferous hurrahs. Before the party separated "God save the Queen," was sung and played, and when they wished each other "good night," expressed their great satisfaction with the cheerful and pleasant day they had spent. These entertainments are given every year by Bro. Kenning, who selects a different spot and a different mode of conveyance to and fro on each occasion. The reunion is always a most enjoyable one, and we need not say that it is looked forward to by both young and old with the greatest confidence in its success. The heads of the different departments, both male and female, exert themselves to the utmost to give zest to the meeting, and to infuse a spirit of cordiality and friendship amongst the numerous members of the establishment. Amongst the leading figures of the party we must not omit to mention Bro. Kenning himself, Bro. Wright, Mrs. Wright, Bro. Cox, and Bro. Kelly, the last of whom had the management of the weightier portions of the programme, and the general supervision of the arrangements. Bro. George Baker and Mrs. Baker, Bro. Reeves, jun., and a few others went by rail to Hampton Court, and joined the party on the arrival of the boat.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The monthly meeting of the General Committee was held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on Saturday the 7th inst. Present: Bro. Benjamin Head, in the chair; Bros. S. J. Row, A. Durrant, John W. Dennison, Jesse Turner, C. F. Matier, R. B. Webster, S. Rosenthal, W. Hyde Pullen, E. C. Massey (Freemason), F. Binckes, Secretary.

The minutes of the last General Committee were read and confirmed. The minutes of the last House Committee and of a Special Committee were read for information. The Secretary, Bro. Binckes, stated that he had addressed a letter to the Grand Secretary in reference to the resolution at last meeting on the subject of the insufficient office accommodation afforded by Grand Lodge for the Secretary of the Institution for Boys, and he believed that similar communications had also been sent in from the Secretaries of the Girls' School and the Benevolent Institution. He had not as yet received any reply, but it was within his knowledge that a committee was sitting at that moment to consider the subject. He, however, had not any hope that Grand Lodge would be able to afford the increased accommodation required, there not appearing to be available space for the purpose, and he thought it not improbable that the three Institutions would have to fall back upon their own resources in dealing with the question. He added that it was absolutely necessary that larger offices should be provided, for with the continual increase of their annual festival it was becoming utterly impossible to carry on the business of the Institution in such confined offices as they had at present.

After some conversation, it was moved by Bro. Head that two members of this committee be appointed to confer with two members of the Girls' School Committee, and two members of the committee of the Benevolent Institution on the subject.

This motion having been seconded, was carried unanimously, and Bros. B. Head and R. B. Webster were nominated to carry out the object of the resolution, and to report.

The petitions for placing thirteen candidates on the list were then read, and some of the children were passed; but three were sent back for better reading.

Bro. Binckes stated that there were 33 unsuccessful candidates at last election, that the petitions already accepted and that the number of candidates, with the ten accepted at this meeting, amounted to 66, and that, making allowance for the boys leaving the school up to March next, the available vacancies were only nine.

After some conversation as to the outlay (about £2000) required to increase the accommodation at Wood Green, to enable them to raise the number of boys admitted to 200, it was proposed by Bro. Turner, that the House Committee be requested to reconsider this question. Carried unanimously. A sum of £5 for outfit was voted to each of the following boys who had left the Institution. F. R. Matthews, Doncaster; Abraham Overend, Leeds; and Frank Harding, shipped to Australia.

Bro. Binckes called the attention of the committee to the services rendered to the Institution by Bro. Constable, who at three Festivals had brought in sums amounting in all to £2000, his list on the last occasion amounting to £1226; suggesting that such services should not pass unrecognised; and it was decided to give notice of motion to the General Purposes Committee, with a recommendation of this Committee that the rank of Hon. Vice President be awarded to Bro. Constable.

Bro. Binckes announced that a sum approaching £13,400, was the result of the late Festival and votes of thanks were passed to Bro. Beach and the Stewards.

Bro. Binckes said that their thanks were also due to Mrs. Monckton for her very valuable services in connection with the amateur performance, the proceeds of which had been divided amongst the Institutions. He did not know the total sum realised, but the sum handed to the Institution for Boys was £115 10s.; whereupon it was resolved that some suitable acknowledgment should be made to Mrs. Monckton.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the proceedings.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—In spite of all competition or opposition, the sterling qualities of these remedies have caused them to maintain the first position as curative and alleviating agents. No other remedies so quickly and effectually cure diarrhoea, cramps, dysentery, and all bowel complaints of a similar character. In the most acute and violent attacks it will be found that no matter how severe the vomiting and pain may be, that the brisk and frequent friction of this Ointment into the pit of the stomach and abdominal surface will allay the irritability of the stomach and soothe the pain. As soon as the vomiting, &c., has ceased, the Pills should be taken internally, to remove away any irritant matter.—Advt.

The brethren adjourned for refreshment when a very elegant cold collation was served, which reflected great credit on the culinary resources of the Portsmouth Lodge, No. 17.

After this the usual toasts were offered and responded to with great cordiality, and the brethren separated for another year's work with the hope of similarly successful results.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 2lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as samples, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea Dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom, must be addressed to the Secretary.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of this Institution was held on Wednesday afternoon, in the library, Freemasons' Hall, Col. Creation in the chair. There were also present Bros. N. G. Phillips, Benj. Head, S. Rawson, Hyde Pullen, Raynham W. Stewart, Thomas W. White, Griffiths Smith, J. A. Farnfield, W. Hilton, W. Hale, Thomas Cubitt, John Newton, Charles James Perceval, C. F. Hogard, Joshua Nunn, H. Massey (Freemason), James Terry (Secretary), and George Knill (Collector).

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, Bro. Terry announced the death of two male and three female annuitants; the males after having received £722 in annuities, and the females £384.

The Warden's report informed the Committee that Dr. Strong, the Honorary Surgeon of the Institution, had presented about a thousand flower plants to the Asylum, and had sent his gardener to plant them.

On the motion of Bro. Griffiths Smith, seconded by Bro. J. Newton, a vote of thanks was passed to Dr. Strong for the present.

Bro. Terry read the following report:—

The Finance Committee beg to report that they have examined the accounts from the 1st of April to the 30th June, 1877, inclusive, and do find the same correct.

The Chairman having mentioned to the Committee that the sum of £50, which the Secretary hitherto had been allowed to have in his hand for petty cash, was on account of the great increase in the business of the Institution insufficient to meet petty disbursements, on the motion of Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, seconded by Bro. Griffiths Smith, the sum was increased to £100.

A cheque for £106 17s. 9d., for balance of Messrs. Patrick and Sons' account for repairs to the asylum, was ordered to be signed and forwarded to that firm.

Two men and two women were placed on the list of candidates for next election.

The Chairman gave notice of motion for next meeting, That in acknowledgment of the zeal and energy so successfully exerted by Bro. John Constable, P.M. 185, in connection with the various charities, more especially with the festival of this Institution he be enrolled as an Hon. Vice-President of the Institution.

Bro. Terry informed the Committee that the visit of the Stewards of last festival to the Asylum would take place on Thursday, at which he would be happy to see any of the brethren.

The Committee then adjourned.

The visit of the Stewards of the last festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution to the Asylum at Croydon, was made on Thursday. The Stewards, accompanied by Bro. Terry, the Secretary, and several members of the Committee, went to Croydon by train, and after a careful inspection of the building, and visiting the individual inmates, expressed themselves much pleased with the arrangements made for the comfort, health, and happiness of the inmates, and with the recent repairs effected in the buildings. The gardens, which are now in beautiful order, were also much admired.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF THE WEST INDIA ISLANDS.

At a Quarterly Communication held on Wednesday, June 6th, 1877—the Provincial Grand Master in the chair—the Provincial Grand Master laid before the Provincial Grand Lodge a letter to him from Bro. David Murray Lyon, the Proxy Provincial Grand Master, dated 31st March last, wherein Bro. Lyon, after mentioning his promotion to the office of Grand Secretary Grand Lodge of Scotland, says—"This will necessitate my resignation of the Proxy Prov. Grand Mastership of the West India Islands, which I now do, thanking you for the high honour of being your representative in that capacity," whereupon it was resolved that Bro. Lyon's resignation be accepted. On the motion of Bro. Wm. McCall, seconded by Bro. J. W. Elliot, the following resolution was passed unanimously, viz.:—"This lodge, in view of the eminent services rendered to it by Bro. David Murray Lyon during his tenure of office as Proxy Prov. Grand Master, and of the manner in which he sustained the dignity of the office, the resignation of which has been rendered necessary by Bro. Lyon's promotion to the office of Grand Secretary of Grand Lodge of Scotland, desires to record its high appreciation, not only of Bro. Lyon's services as Proxy Provincial Grand Master, but of the manner in which he has upheld the dignity of the office, and while expressing its sorrow on the severance of the tie, wishes Bro. Lyon every success in his new office." That copy of this resolution be forwarded to Bro. Lyon.—Scottish Freemason.

FAREWELL TO THE OLD ROOMS.

The following lines were written by Bro. Thomas Blair, P.M. Wentworth Lodge, No. 1339, and were recited by him at its regular meeting held on the 2nd inst.

The Wentworth Lodge, of which Bro. S. B. Ellis is W.M., was the first lodge to meet in the new building of the Sheffield Masonic Hall Company.

The "old rooms" alluded to are the temporary meeting place of the lodges during the re-building of the hall, &c., adjoining, they will now be used as Tyler's Rooms, &c.

The new hall is on the site of the old one, and the very stones of which have been used in the new edifice.

Well; here we are at last, and soon 'twill seem
That our long exile was a summer's dream;
How oft we've wished for this long coming day,
When from that dim retreat we'll wend our way.
Oft by the light of taper or wax-match
Glimpses of grandeur we have striven to catch,
And venturous spirits in the unfinished halls
Have gazed with longing on slow-growing walls.
Still, while the months have dragg'd their weary train,
The inconvenience was not all in vain.
There many a brother first beheld the light,
And learnt the mysteries of our ancient rite.
Sufficient this,—discomfort set aside—
Those walls to honour, if for naught beside.
'Twas their Masonic birthplace, and their home,
To which their thoughts will turn, where'er they roam.
Home of our childhood! how affection clings
And hovers round thee with her seraph wings.
Dearest thy hill, though clad in russet brown,
'Than fairest summits which the cedars crown.
There o'er our duties, many hours were pass'd
And the long evenings only flew too fast:
—Our labours done, a later hour would bring
To those small tables the accustomed ring.
And while each brother at the festive board
Join'd hand and heart in jubilant accord,
O'er outside cares, forgetfulness was flung,
And friendship loos'd the jesses of the tongue.—
The banquet o'er, the dishes cleared away,
Some singing brother tuned his plaintive lay,
"Mavourneen Darling," "Waterloo," "King Cole,"
"The Sexton," "My Old Wife" (with lengthy roll).
"Albert the Good," or "Woodman spare that tree,"
"Tell me the Sign, John," "Jolly dogs are we."
So happy, happy, we our evenings spent,
And happy, happy, went away content.
To-night, with some regret, we'll say "farewell"
To the old house we've loved—ah, pretty well.
Yet recollecting many a jovial night,
And coming here with undisguised delight,
In glad anticipation of the joys before us,
We won't speak lightly of the bridge that bore us
From old to new—and though to part resigned
No shame to cast "one lingering look behind."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Extract from "INDIAN ECONOMIST."

"We direct the attention of the medical men to a fact observed some years since by ourselves, and corroborated by our subsequent experience, that Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is in many cases of Low Fever immensely superior to Quinine in curative power. We cannot persuade ourselves that the true value of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is yet properly appraised in India. It may be given with absolute safety even to a child three days old. Were medical men but to make a fair and exhaustive trial of it we are persuaded that it would work a revolution in the treatment of two-thirds of the diseases to which children are subject. Its curative power is simply amazing."

"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon. F.R.C.S., England,

Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-Spasmotic and Sedative. I have tried it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From JNO. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship Great Eastern.

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmotic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysterical Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOULTON and Co., Hornsea.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent Sedative and Anti-Spasmotic. It seems to allay pain and irritation in whatever organ, and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See "Times," 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

WOOLWICH.—Union Waterloo Lodge (No. 13).—The installation of Bro. G. Reed, W.M. elect, in the chair of the above lodge took place on Tuesday, the 10th inst., at the Masonic Hall, William-street, and was well attended by the brethren of the district, where the spirit of emulation is so strongly manifested that the installation ceremony is keenly watched and criticised, and as in nearly all cases the retiring Master makes it a point to install his successor, the criticism is keen, and the result is as near as possible perfection. From the acknowledged ability of Bro. F. G. Pownall, the retiring W.M., a Masonic treat was anticipated, and indeed partaken in by all who heard the eloquent manner in which he worked the beautiful ceremony. The lodge was opened at one p.m. precisely, and, after approval, Mr. E. G. Westlake was initiated. Bros. Chasteaufort and Hiscock were passed to the Second Degree, and then Bro. Reed was presented for installation, and, according to ancient custom, placed in the chair of K.S., and duly saluted by the brethren. He then invested his officers as follows:—J. P. Moore, S. W.; T. Hutton, J.W.; J. Henderson, P.M., Treas.; H. Syer, Sec.; N. Brown, S.D.; G. Masters, J.D.; T. Hosgood, L.G.; T. Hassell, Stwd.; and B. Norman, Tyler. The usual addresses were then most impressively rendered by the Installing Officer, and the ceremony closed. A Past Master's jewel of the value of ten guineas, being one of four specially prepared by Bro. George Kenning for the lodges in this district, was then presented to Bro. Pownall and it was unanimously carried that a vote of thanks should be presented to him, and as well inscribed upon the minutes of the lodge, for the manner in which he had that day fulfilled the duties of Installing Officer. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the New Falcon, Bro. Lockey's hostelry at Gravesend, where a well served banquet awaited them. Among the visitors were Bro. E. West, P.M. 1076, 1472, 1437, and P.P.G. Herts; T. Butt, W.M. 700; W. Weston, W.M. 1536; W. T. Vincent, P.M. 913; W. Gamble, W.M. 706; R. Croisdale, P.M. 706 and 1536; A. Penfold, P.M. 913; G. Andrews, P.M. 871; Dr. A. Prescott, P.M. 706; S. T. Finch, P.M. 898 and 861; the Rev. Holding, W.M. 1653; G. Spinks, S.W. 1536; A. W. Tattershall, P.M. 140; G. Picken, J.W. 1536; H. Aden, P.M. 1653; T. Day, P.M. 1076; J. R. Waller, W.M. 898; T. D. Hayes, S.W. 913; W. B. Lloyd, J.W. 913; M. Sherwood, Org. 1076; W. Holliman, 1536; B. H. Swallow, 1653; E. J. Scott, 1653; A. Woodley, J. W. 700; J. F. Randall, 1089; W. Chalk, 1559; C. Jolly (Freemason), and others. Among the Past Masters of the lodge present were Bros. W. Appleby, C. Young, E. Mills, C. F. Hills and G. Davies. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, Bro. Pownall proposed "The Health of the W.M.," and in so doing hoped he might have a happy and prosperous year of office. He, the W.M., went into the chair that day with the confidence and good wishes of every member of the lodge, and if he only did his duty, he would not only retain their good wishes and confidence, but would as well earn their lasting gratitude. (Cheers.) The W.M., in returning thanks, said he should always work for the benefit of the lodge, and would carefully listen to every suggestion that might be made for the welfare of it, and for the comfort and prosperity of every brother of it. (Applause). After the health of the initiate had been drunk, and responded to, the W.M. gave that of "The Visitors" saying that the Union Waterloo was always best honoured when it was most visited, and upon that occasion it was a great pleasure to see so many brethren of influence and eminence in the Craft present, some of whom had come long distances especially to do him and the lodge honour. (Much applause). Bro. P.M. Tattershall, in reply, spoke of his former connection with the lodge, and of the pleasure he felt in seeing Bro. Reed in the chair, and it was a proud reflection for him to know that three of the officers that day placed in important positions in the lodge were initiated into Masonry by himself. (Cheers.) There were some old faces that he missed from among them, but regret was tempered by seeing so many new and happy ones present. He was glad to see the old lodge doing so well, and spoke in terms of great admiration of the splendid work done by Bro. Pownall that day. He said it was a pleasure to sit under such a master of his art, and trusted the lodge might long have so good a stay and support as that brother was, and would be. (Cheers.) Bro. Butt replied on behalf of the "Nelson Lodge," which he designated the oldest offshoot of the grand old mother of the district, the Union Waterloo, and thanked the brethren for the continued kindness always evinced by them to the brethren of No. 700. (Cheers.) Bros. Gamble, Hayes, Holding, Weston, Day, and West as well responded. To the toast of "The Past Masters," Bro. Pownall replied in a speech full of feeling and eloquence, thanking them for their magnificent present, and above all, for the affectionate regard and esteem they had at all times evinced towards him. Bro. Henderson as well replied, and after Bro. Moore had responded to a flattering reception of "The Officers," the National Anthem closed a gathering that will be long associated with many pleasant memories. A quartette party, under the direction of Bro. W. Sallenger, 913, contributed much to the enjoyment of the occasion by their excellent singing.

MIDDLETON.—Imperial George Lodge (No. 78).—The last monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, June 28th, at the Assheton Arms. There was a good attendance both of brethren and visitors. Bro. George Bradbury, W.M., presided, and was assisted by Bros. D. Reid, I.P.M.; J. Wood, P.M., P.G.A.D.C.; Harvey Heywood, P.M., Treas.; S. H. Cheetham, P.M.; W. Percival, S.W.; F. Fothergill, J.W.; J. Hatton, Sec.; S. Lawton, S.D.; J. Millhouse, J.D.; F. Hooper, Org.; and J. Kent, Tyler. The visitors' list included the names of Bros. J. Salmon, P.M. 163; W. H. Warburton, W.M. 163; J. Compton, W.M. 1387; and C. Cooke, W.M. 1588. The lodge having been opened with the formalities of the Craft the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The ballots, taken separately, were declared to be unanimous in favour of Messrs. T.B. Smith and O. A. Jowett. They were therefore duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of the Order; the former by Bro. J. Crompton, whose impressive and graceful delivery was much admired, and the latter by Bro. J. Wood in a most efficient manner. The working tools were presented by the J.W. Bro. Fothergill next moved the resolution of which he had given notice, viz., "That the lodge do adjourn from June 28th to September 27th." This being seconded by the W.M. was carried unanimously. "Hearty Good Wishes" were accorded from Lodges 152, 163, 324, 1034, 1213, 1387, and 1588. One candidate was proposed for initiation, after which Bro. D. Reid, I.P.M., gave some information respecting the library scheme. Charity being attended to, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet table. "The keen demands of appetite" having been satisfied, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and cordially responded to. "The Initiates" were then toasted, and the newly-made brethren briefly responded. Bro. Harvey Heywood, P.M., in proposing the toast of "The Visitors," expressed his gratification at seeing so many of them sitting at the festive board. It was not often they were favoured with such a goodly number, and in a small country place like Middleton they could not provide on sudden emergencies to the extent that they could elsewhere. He hoped, however, they would take the will for the deed. He could assure them they were heartily welcome, and he trusted it would not be long before they paid the lodge another visit. The visiting brethren responded, and all expressed the gratification they felt at their visit to the lodge. During the evening some excellent songs were given by Bros. Reid, Greenwood, and Salmon. The last toast was given by the Tyler, and the brethren separated, well pleased with a delightful evening's reunion, which had been so agreeably spent.

ST. HELIER'S (Jersey).—Yarborough Lodge (No. 244).—This lodge held its sixty-sixth anniversary on Monday, the 2nd inst., at the Masonic Temple, St. Peter's-road. Bro. J. T. Du Jardin, the Deputy of the States, and P.M. 244 and 590, W.M., presided, supported by the following officers and brethren, viz.:—Bros. P. W. Benham, I.P.M. 244, P.G. Treas.; L. H. P. Hespiradaux, B.A., S.W., P.G. Stwd.; J. Baker, P.M., J.W. (in the absence, through illness, of Bro. J. F. Le Gallais, J.W., P.G. Stwd.); W. T. Davey, Sec.; S. Gilley, Organist (acting), 491; Thos. Leat, J.W. 245, acting as S.D.; J. Gray, S.W. 245, acting as J.D.; J. Marett, I.G.; George Rogers, P.M. 1003, P.G.T., Tyler; E. Leigh Bennett, P.M. 244, P.P. S.G.D.; P. Oarly, P.M. 590 and 958, P.P.S.G.W.; W. H. Chapman, W.M. 958, Asst. G.D.C.; G. C. Renouf, P.M. 590, P.P.S.G.W.; J. O'Flaherty, P.M. 958, P.P.G.D.; W. Metherell, P.M. 1003, P.G.S.B.; P. Bois, W.M. 1003, P.G. Stwd.; Jno. Kuelin, J.W. 1003, P.G. Stwd.; St. Hurst, S.W. 958, P.G. Stwd.; S. Gilley, S.W. 491; B. Roberts, P.M. Zetland Lodge, 1005; M. Murphy, 244; Thos. Palmer, 1003; A. Vile, 359; Thos. Palmer, 958; J. Hardy, 1003; J. T. Le Geyt, 245; F. Noble, 1003; C. Blampied, 244; W. Fox, 244; C. Statt, 244; C. Bisson, I.G. 491; and others. The W.M. (Bro. J. T. Du Jardin) opened the lodge punctually at five o'clock in the First Degree. The minutes of the last regular meeting were read by the Secretary, unanimously confirmed, and signed by the W.M. Bro. C. Statt was passed to the Fellow Craft Degree in an efficient manner. The ceremony of passing at end, the W.M. informed the brethren that his term as the ruler of the Yarborough Lodge had expired, and that the next business before them was the installation of their new W.M. for the ensuing twelve months. Their happy choice had fallen by an unanimous vote during their last regular meeting on Bro. P. Hespiradaux, their active and amiable S.W. for the last year. He could but congratulate them on their election, as he had always found Bro. Hespiradaux a very zealous and enthusiastic Mason, ever ready to assist in some office or other in the sister lodges of their province, and he was sure he (Bro. Hespiradaux) would be an ornament amongst the rulers of the Craft. It was, therefore, a pleasure to him to leave the chair in his occupation for the ensuing year. Bro. P.W. Benham took the chair as Installing Master, and at his request the W.M. elect was presented by Bros. J. T. Du Jardin and W. H. Chapman. The customary preliminaries having been gone through, the ancient charges read and assented to, the lodge was opened in the Third Degree, all the brethren below the chair retired. A board of fifteen Installed Masters was then formed, and Bro. Polick Hespiradaux was, according to ancient custom, installed in the chair of K.S. After the board had been closed, the brethren were re-admitted, and having saluted the new W.M., the Installing Master proceeded with the rest of the ceremony, and delivered the usual addresses. The following appointments were made, Bro. Benham investing and addressing each officer in a very appropriate manner:—Bros. J. Marett, J.W.; Chas. Blampied, J.D.; M. Murphy, S.D.; W. Fox, Dir. of Cer.; Geo. Rogers, the onerous and very responsible post of Tyler. Bro. W. Adams, P.M., Prov. Board General Purposes, was appointed Treas.; Bros. W. T. Davey, Sec.; J. F. Le Gallais, S.W.; C. Statt, I. G.; and Campbell and McKee, Stewards, and will be invested at the next monthly meeting. After the closing address of the P.M., Bro. Polick-Hespiradaux rose to say that he had not fully overcome the emotion of his mind, caused by the impressive ceremonies of his installation as their W.M. When one's heart was overjoyed, as his was at the present moment, one's words were not always on the tip of his tongue, he would not, therefore, give them one of his usually long speeches, suffice it this time to acknowledge his sincere and deep felt gratitude for the honour bestowed upon and the confidence placed in him by the brethren of the Yarborough Lodge in electing him unanimously as their head and ruler during the ensuing twelve months. He was fully aware of the onus that thus fell on his shoulders, as also of the responsibility resting on him in his new capacity. Being, however, surrounded as he was by the most able and experienced Past Masters in the province, he should find his task neither a difficult nor a heavy one. He was determined to discharge his important duties as their W.M. with as much energy and perseverance as possible to him, and would try to please every brother in the province to the utmost of his ability. He, therefore, appealed to the Past Masters and officers of the Yarborough Lodge to be always punctual in their attendance and energetic in the execution of their duties in the lodge; the members he would remind of their C.T.'s length. The visitors he would on this occasion invite to assist as often and as numerous as possible at either their regular monthly or emergency meetings. A vote of thanks to the retiring W.M., Bro. J. T. Du Jardin, was then proposed, seconded, and unanimously carried. All lodge business being ended, it was closed at a quarter-past seven o'clock in perfect harmony, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet room, beautifully decorated for the occasion, and nearly sixty brethren sat down to refreshment (a cold collation served with tea and coffee), provided by Bro. G. Rogers, the present Temple keeper, in his usual excellent style, which gave great satisfaction, and pleased every one. The W.M. presided. The cloth having been withdrawn, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. "The W.M." was warmly received, as well as that of "The Retiring W.M." and that of "The Installing Master."

LIVERPOOL.—Everton Lodge (No. 823).—The installation meeting of this lodge took place at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street Liverpool, last Wednesday afternoon, the 18th inst. and the annual picnic at Hawarden Castle on the following day. A full report of both interesting and highly enjoyable events will appear in our next issue.

PLUMSTEAD.—Pattison Lodge (No. 913).—The installation meeting of the above lodge took place on Thursday, the 6th inst., at the Lord Raglan, Bro. Tucker's house, in Burrage-road, and was largely attended, several of the brethren and visitors wearing the purple, adding much to the coup d'oeil presented when the W.M., Bro. W. T. Vincent, opened the lodge in due form, and with solemn prayer. Among the visitors present were Bros. Dr. Spurrell, W.M. 615, and P.G.J.W. Kent; Rev. W. A. Hill, P.G. Chap. Kent F. G. Pownall, W.M. 13, P.M. 1536, and P.G. Supt. Wks. Kent; T. Hastings, W.M. 822, and P.G.P. Kent; R. Pidcock, P.M. 916, and P.G.A. Supt. Wks. Sussex; W. Weston, W.M. 1536; W. T. Gamble, W.M. 706; T. Butt, W.M. 700; F. A. White, W.M. 907; C. Penney, W.M. 1089; E. W. Young, W.M. 704; J. Caviel, P.M. 147; T. Whitmarsh, P.M. 1150; Sydney Clarke, P.M. 706; Dr. A. Prescott, P.M. 706; G. W. Tapp, P.M. 706; J. Rowland, P.M. 700; G. Spinks, W.M. elect 1536; H. Shaw, S.D. 1536; H. DeGrey, 706; W. Blane, 907; J. T. Pilditch, 1420; J. H. Williams, S.D. 1056; D. Campbell, 33; J. Davidson, 33; W. H. Roberts, 700; W. Denison, 1541; G. Beaver, 700; J. Watkins, 1536; and C. Jolly (Freemason). The following Past Masters of and belonging to the lodge were present: Bros. Coupland, P.P.G.J.W. Kent; T. Smith, P.P.G.P. Kent; E. Denton, Sec. and P.P.G.P. Kent; A. Penfold, J. McDougall, C. Ellis, and Payne. The lodge having been opened in the Second Degree, Bro. H. Butter, W.M. elect, was presented for installation, and having assented to the ancient charges, the lodge was opened to the Third Degree, and a Board of Installed Officers to the number of 22 was opened, and Bro. Butter was placed in the chair with the usual formalities. The brethren were then admitted, and saluted the W.M. in the three degrees. Bro. Vincent, following an almost universal custom in this district, installed his successor, and well did he sustain the high prestige of the lodge by his excellent and admirable working of the impressive ceremony. The W.M. then proceeded to invest his officers as follows:—T. D. Hayes, S.W.; W. B. Lloyd, J.W.; A. Jessup, Treas.; E. Denton, P.M., Sec.; Jas. Chapman, S.D.; R. J. Cook, J.D.; C. Cooke, Org.; H. Mason, I.G.;

Randall, D.C.; Edmonds, W.S.; and R. Lester, Tyler. A letter was then read from the representatives of the Pattison family, thanking the lodge for its sympathy with them in their late bereavement, as well as one from Bro. Major Pattison, desiring to become a joining member of the lodge, so that the family might still have its name identified with it. Bro. Coupland therefore gave notice that, at their next regular meeting, he should have the honour of proposing that Bro. Pattison become a member of the lodge. A Past Master's jewel was then presented to Bro. Vincent, the I.P.M., for his services to the lodge during the last twelve months. It was then proposed and carried that a vote of thanks, to be inscribed upon the minutes of the lodge, should be presented to Bro. Vincent for the admirable manner in which he had performed the ceremony of installation that day, and for both the vote and jewel Bro. Vincent returned thanks. The lodge was then closed and the brethren adjourned to Bro. Bray's house, the Bull Hotel, at Dartford, where a banquet awaited them. The cloth having been cleared the W.M. gave "The Queen and the Craft," and "The Earl of Carnarvon, D.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers." Lord Holmesdale, G.M. Kent," was then most enthusiastically received, as was the name of Bro. Eastes and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers. The W.M. in giving the toast spoke pleasingly of the "deep blush of purple" that had pervaded the lodge that day, there being no fewer than four Present Grand Officers as well as several Past Provincial Grand Officers with them, and after expressing the pleasure every brother felt at seeing their esteemed Chaplain, Bro. Hill, amongst them, and congratulating Bros. Spurrell, Pownall, and Hastings upon their well won honours, he concluded by proposing the toast. Bro. Hill in responding regretted not being able to be present at the installation of their esteemed W.M., because the name of Bro. Butter had been indelibly engraved upon his memory through having been present when Bro. Butter was elected W.M. last month, and the continual cry of the then W.M. of "Bro. Butter, Bro. Butter," had been so intermittent, that he felt he should never forget Bro. Butter as long as he lived. He wanted to see Bro. Butter in the chair, and now that he had that pleasure, he knew that their unanimous vote was one deeply founded upon their knowledge, and conception, that in Bro. Butter they had a ruler who would do honour to Masonry and the lodge. He then, in the course of a lengthy and eloquent address, spoke of the Caxton celebration, and of the great good done to civilisation and Christian progress through the press, but did not think every writer who chose to discuss Masonry in the columns of the daily papers was always qualified to do so. The Daily Telegraph of the 4th of June said they were a philanthropic, and convivial body. He gloried in the philanthropy, and enjoyed the conviviality, if by that was meant "refreshment after labour." Their charity was as universal as the wind of heaven, and brought help and comfort to many a desolate home. And why should they not, upon such occasions as this, after a year of good hard work of love and charity, partake of the corn and the oil and the wine in sociality and moderation? The Rev Chaplain then concluded a brilliant address by thanking them for the toast. Bros. Spurrell, Pownall, and Hastings also briefly responded. To a loud call Bro. Coupland also responded. The I.P.M., Bro. Vincent, then rose to propose "The Health of the W.M.," and in so doing wished him a prosperous year of office. He did not wish him a very great lodge, but he did wish him a thoroughly united and happy one. As Lord Holmesdale had said the day before, they did not want recruits, they were strong enough; what they wanted was to keep Masonry a corps d'élite. He therefore trusted their W.M.'s year of office would show that it was not the strength of a lodge but its honour that made its reputation stand high among the lodges of both the province and district. The W.M., in response, thanked the brethren sincerely, but felt that he was in a position where he had not been tried enough yet to feel easy under the responsibilities placed upon him, or to receive without some doubt, the flattering reception they had given him in response to Bro. Vincent's wishes, but he would try to make himself worthy the confidence they had so unanimously reposed in him. He hoped as they had taken him on trust that there would be a good record of results. One might have the very best intentions, and yet give pain and dissatisfaction, and if he had unintentionally wounded the feelings of any brother, or might do so, he trusted that brother would believe him that it had been, and would be, done unintentionally, with but one desire, to sustain the honour and the reputation of the lodge intact, and to further its interests in every way compatible with the grand principles upon which all true Masonry was founded. After a few further remarks upon the beautiful tenets of Masonry, Bro. Butter resumed his seat amid tenets of applause. The toast of the "Past Masters" followed, and Bros. Vincent and Ellis responded. To that of "The Visitors," Bros. Pownall and Penney replied, and after Bros. Hayes, Lloyd, and Cook had returned thanks for "The Officers," and Bro. Bray for "The Host," the brethren separated, after a most interesting and enjoyable event. The musical portion of the entertainment was under the direction of Bro. Lawler, sen., assisted by Bros. Lawler jun., Carter, and Large.

EGREMONT.—Kenlis Lodge (No. 1267).—The festival of St. John the Baptist was observed by this lodge on Tuesday, the 10th inst., when Bro. Jonas Lindow Burns-Lindow, S.W., of Inton Hall, High Sheriff of Cumberland, was duly installed W.M. for the ensuing year. The lodge was opened in the well-appointed Odd Fellows' Hall, at 2 p.m., when the following officers, past officers, and members were present:—Bros. E. Clarke, W.M.; Rev. C. Strickland, Chap.; W. Armstrong, Sec.; Muncaster, P.M.; Eilbeck, P.M.; Nelson, Selkirk, Smith, Leech, Spiers, Fearon, Cooke, Satterthwaite, Macaulay, Douglas, Charteris, Bland, Woosnam, Goldie, Baxter, Lamb, Reay, Dyson, Chapman, Dobbin, and Braithwaite, Tyler. The visiting brethren were as follows:—Lodge 119, Whitehaven: Bros. W. B. Gibson, P.M., P.G. Sec. C. and W.; J. L. Paitson, W.M.; W. Alsop, P.M.; E. W. Henry, P.M., P.P.G.J.W.; W. Sandwith, P.M.; J. Barr, P.M., P.G.S.D.; E. Fearon, P.M.; J. Montgomery, S.W.; J. Rothery, and MacArthur. Lodge 371, Maryport: Bros. T. Carey, W.M.; and A. Walters, P.M. Lodge 872, Whitehaven: Bros. J. Cowman, W.M.; J. J. Robinson, P.M.; Braithwaite, S.W.; Curtis, Hodgson, and Nicholson. Lodge 962, Workington: Bros. J. Wood, W.M.; J. Irving, Sec.; Reed, and Coverdale. Lodge 1002, Cockermouth: Bros. W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Org.; W. F. Lamonby, P.M. and Sec. (Freemason); Evening, S.W.; and H. Peacock. Lodge 1400, Harrington: Bros. J. W. Young, P.M.; and J. Hardie, J.W. Lodge 1660, Frizington: Bro. W. Martin, J.W. Lodge 699, Cornwall: Bro. Chappell, W.M. Lodge 1190, West Yorkshire: Bro. Barton, W.M. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, Bro. Burns-Lindow, the W.M. elect, was presented to Bro. Clarke, who, on this occasion, for the first time, too, assumed the responsible and onerous office of Installing Master. Although a great undertaking for so comparatively young a Craftsman, suffice it to say that Bro. Clarke worked the whole ceremony, from first to last, without any assistance whatever, and with an ease, effectiveness, and eloquence that would put many of the older hands completely in the shade. It is so seldom that a retiring W.M. essays the duty of installing his successor, that we trust, now that the ice is broken, the veterans who for many years have performed the office, and consequently fairly earned retirement, will do everything to encourage so desirable an innovation. We may add that the Board of Installed Masters numbered close upon a score, and Bro. Clarke informed us it was his intention to have opened and closed the Board in full ritual, had he been at all aware there were two or three Past Masters present to fill the officers' positions. This is another improvement, common enough in some provinces, it is true, but almost entirely unknown to Installing Masters in Cumberland. Anyhow, the full working of a Board of Installed Masters gives a completeness to the ceremony of installation, and we hope this innovation—for innovation we may style it in the benighted north—also may become general. The newly-installed W.M. appointed his officers, and they were invested as follows:—Bros. Edward Clarke, I.P.M.; Rev. E. Strickland, S.W.; Armstrong, J.W.; Chapman, Treas.; Robson, Secretary; Calderwood, S.D.; Kirkconnell, J.D.; Woodburn, I.G.; Towerson, D.C.; Mathews, Organist; Wilson, and Smith, Stewards; Braithwaite, Tyler. The lodge was then closed in form, and Bro. Clarke, the Installing Master, received congratulation, all round for the admirable manner in which he had discharged the most important duties of the day. Subsequently, the brethren, to the number of seventy, were invited by the High Sheriff to partake of banquet, at the Globe Hotel, which was sumptuously served. Bro. Burns-Lindow presided, faced by his Wardens, Bros. Rev E. Strickland and Armstrong. The Chairman having given the loyal toasts, Bro. Henry proposed "H.R.H. the M.W. Grand Master of England," with "The M.W. Pro Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers." Bro. Henry alluded to the dispute taken before a court of law for settlement, the other day, but referred, by the advice of Mr. Justice Field, to the M.W. Grand Master, who, he was glad to hear, had decided the matter to the satisfaction of both sides. This showed, in no little measure, the value and usefulness of their dear old Craft. Bro. Alsop next proposed "The Earl of Bective, M.P., R.W. Provincial Grand Master of Cumberland and Westmorland," and in doing so, reviewed the great services rendered by his lordship to the Craft since he succeeded the late Bro. Dykes, about ten years ago. His lordship not only took a most active part in the affairs of Craft Masonry, but likewise interested himself in the prosperity of the Royal Arch, the Mark, and Red Cross degrees. The brethren would never forget the princely entertainment given by their Provincial Grand Master at Kirkby Lonsdale last year. Bro. Gibson, Prov. G. Sec., replied on behalf of the Prov. Grand Officers. Bro. Muncaster then proposed, in graceful terms, "The Health of the Newly-Installed W.M. of the Kenlis Lodge," which was received with the greatest cordiality. He thought the members of the Kenlis Lodge ought to be proud of their being presided over by the representative of Her Majesty. Bro. Burns-Lindow, in response, assured them that he valued no little the great honour conferred upon him that day, inasmuch as he felt deeply, and was confident of his inability to do justice to the office. He hoped, however, nay, he could promise faithfully, in the words of the exhortation addressed to him that day, that he would never disgrace the Order; but, on the contrary, it should always be his unspeakable willingness and pleasure to advance the best interests of the Craft, in the hope that it would lead to further attainments. He was sure he had appointed a staff of officers who would do their best to assist him in maintaining the good and welfare of Kenlis Lodge. It was his wish, and he would put forward his best endeavours, to further the objects of Freemasonry. The remainder of the toast list was made up as follows:—"The Newly-appointed Officers," by Bro. Barr, responded to by the S.W. and J.W.; "The Immediate Past Master and Installing Master, Bro. Clarke," by the W.M.; "The W.M.'s, P.M.'s, and Officers of Lodges in the Province," by Bro. Chapman, responded to by Bro. Paitson, W.M. 119; "The Visiting Brethren," by Bro. Calderwood, responded to by Bro. Barton; "The Masonic Charities," by Bro. Strickland, responded to by Bro. Gibson; "All Poor and Distressed Masons," by the Chairman. The proceedings were much enlivened by the following musical brethren:—Bros. Matthews and Lewthwaite, as pianists; Bros. Paitson, Hodgson, Lamonby, Gibson, Armstrong, Bland, Moffat, Macaulay, and Baxter.

LIVERPOOL.—De Grey and Ripon Lodge. (No. 1356).—The annual celebration of St. John's festival in connection with this very numerous lodge took place on Wednesday afternoon, the 11th inst., at the Masonic Rooms, North Hill-street, Toxteth-Park, Liverpool. There was a very large and influential gathering of the fraternity. The lodge was opened by the retiring Master, Bro. Thomas Horne, and there were also present Bro. J. Bell, P.M.; Bro. B. B. Marson, P.M.; Bro. S. E. Ibbs, P.M., P.P.G.S.B.; Bro. Rothwell, P.M.; Bro. Thomas Nickson, S.W. (W.M. elect); Bro. J. W. Williams, J.W.; Bro. Edward Paull, Treasurer; Bro. A. Woolrich, Secretary; Bro. Charles Arden, J.D.; Bro. J. Keet, I.G.; Bro. Larsen, P.M., Tyler, &c., and a number of visiting Past Masters and Provincial Grand Officers. Two brethren were initiated, and the chair was taken by Bro. B. B. Marson, P.M., P.Z., P. G. Steward W.L., to whom the Worshipful Master elect (Bro. T. Nickson) was presented by Bros. Horne, P.M., and Bro. John Dewaynes, P.M. 667; and the ceremony of installation was performed in a manner which drew forth warm encomiums from all present. The usual Masonic honours having been heartily accorded, the W.M. proceeded to invest his officers as follows, the address being given by Bro. Marson: Bros. T. Horne, I.P.M.; J. W. Williams, S.W.; A. Woolrich, J.W.; Joseph Bell, P.M., D.C.; Edward Paull, Treasurer (re-elected); C. Arden, Secretary; James Keet, S.D.; Edward George, J.D.; W. Evans, I.G.; H. P. Squire, S.S.; and J. Parrington, J.S. Bro. Larsen, P.M., was re-elected Tyler. A vote of thanks was passed to Bro. S. P. Gore for the presentation of a handsome W.M.'s gavel to the lodge, and to Bro. Marson for the efficient manner in which the ceremony of installation had been performed. The brethren adjourned to the Adelphi Hotel for the banquet. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, being "The Provincial Grand Officers," responded to by Bro. S. Ibbs, P.M., who expressed a wish that Lord Skelmersdale might be long spared to watch over the interests of Freemasonry in the province of West Lancashire. "The Worshipful Master" was proposed in eulogistic terms by Bro. Horne, I.P.M., and responded to in appropriate words by Bro. Nickson, W.M., who also presented a handsome Past Master's jewel to Bro. Horne on behalf of the lodge, and spoke in high terms of his valuable services. Bro. Horne spoke of the kindly feeling of the brethren in heartily having supported him during his year of office, and thanked them for their cordial co-operation. "The Past Masters," "Installing Master," &c., followed, the former responded to by Bro. Evans, P.M. The proceedings were enlivened by a number of songs, recitations, &c., by Bros. L. Courtney, Constantine, J. P. Bryan, Robert Robertson, &c., and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

PLUMSTEAD.—United Military Lodge.—(No. 1536).—"There was a sound of revelry" on Friday evening, the 13th inst., at Bro. Plaisted's house on Anglesea Hill, and "bright the lamps shone" on some seventy brethren of the mystic Craft, who had assembled to witness the elevation of one of their most esteemed members to a position that he had long and steadily worked for, and to which he will, we have every confidence, add dignity to wit the chair of the above lodge. Bro. Weston, the retiring W.M., was the Installing Officer, and well did he sustain the trust placed in him by the lodge. His manner of working the ceremony was at once careful and intelligent, and won the highest encomiums from all who had the pleasure of witnessing it. Bro. G. Sprinks who as S. W. gained the best wishes of every Mason in the district, having been with all due solemnity placed in the chair, invested his officers as follows: W. Dickens, S.W.; H. Shaw, J.W.; Rev. E. A. Solbe, Chap.; W. Murphy, Treas.; F. G. Pownall P.M., P.M. 13, and P. G. Supt. Works Kent, Sec.; J. M. Caffery, S.D.; Lieut. J. Ritchie, R.A.J.D.; W. Harding, Organist; D. Deves, I.G.; Wilding and Wright, D.C.; Brooks and Holliman, Stewards. The usual addresses were then delivered by Bro. Weston, and after that brother had had, amid the applause of the lodge, a really handsome Past Master's jewel, of the value of ten guineas, pinned upon his breast by the W.M.; and had, as well a vote of thanks passed to him, to be inscribed upon minutes of the lodge for performing the installation ceremony, the lodge was closed and adjourned to a banquet, which was served shortly after. Upon the reassembling of the brethren, the fine hall presented a sight at once pleasing and exhilarating. The tables were lovingly decorated with choice bouquets and flowering plants, not sparingly, but in profusion, the many colours of which were interminably reflected back from the glittering plate and crystal around, while the scarlet and blue uniforms of the military brethren shone out in pleasing contrast to the sombre evening dress of the civilian element interspersed among them. The menu was a triumph of Bro. Plaisted's art, being simply perfection; and the service, thanks to Bro. Moulder's generalship, beyond criticism. The toasts were as usual most loyally drunk, indeed our military brethren not only serve Her Most Gracious Majesty, but from the elan with which her health, and that of her son, the Prince of Wales, our beloved Grand Master, was received by them, "brave hearts and strong hands" are still as of old, ready to do and die for her and her throne. The enthusiasm was most catching, and the roof shook to "God Save the Queen," and the Prince's hymn. Our Provincial Grand Master, Lord Holmesdale, is, we know, well and worthily honoured in Kent; his flattering recognition of the importance of this lodge, as shown by the elevation of its popular first Master, Bro. F. G. Pownall, to the purple, at the last provincial meeting, has endeared him to the brethren, especially in Plumstead, and so "in bumpers" he had his reward. "Bro. Eastes, and the rest of the G. and Officers," were worthily represented by Br. Dr. Spurrell, P.G.J.W., who returned thanks for the honour done him and them. Br. Weston's jovial face beamed with pleasure as he asked the brethren to drink the W.M.'s health, and the cheering was loud as that brother finished a masterly response to the toast, in which he assured the brethren that his year of office should see no new or sensational policy inaugurated, but that he should uphold the sociable, charitable, yet economical policy carried out by his predecessor with so much honour and credit to the lodge, and its position in the district (loud cheers). They had taken him on trust, and if they would only extend to him that generous indulgence they had ever shown to those who preceded him, he hoped, as they had done, to merit their respect and approval. The toast of "The Visitors," coupled with the name of Bro. Butter, W.M. 913, brought out the mind of that brother in felicitous and pointed sentences. He spoke of the wonderful precision and decision with which every act of Masonic duty was done in that lodge. Told of the novel sensation he and a brother experienced on their first visit to the lodge, when, to their application for admittance, they got a stern but decided refusal from the O. G., who said, "No, it is against my orders," and resolutely denied them admittance. "Oh," then said the brother, who was a P.M. of a neighbouring lodge, "I will admit myself," but the way in which the O. G. went and took up his sword, and the cool, determined, yet experienced manner with which he handled it, made them stand aside till the good brother had got an order for their admission (cheers and laughter). He had been as well struck by the splendid working of even the subordinate officers. He found that there were even at the social board brethren who were constantly going round asking him and the rest of the brethren if they "wanted anything." Of the grand ceremony so impressively worked that day by the I.P.M. Bro. Weston, he could not find words sufficient to express his admiration; it and the whole of the work was a credit to Masonry, and a pattern to the district (loud cheers). He then told them of a conversation he had had with a distinguished officer, who, although not a Mason himself, had known of much good done, and of many lives saved, and comforted, in and after battle, by brothers, who, foes in arms, were yet Masons in heart, and after invoking that benign spirit of charity which is the star of Masonry to bind them in one bond of brotherly love together; concluding a brilliant address by feeling assured they would all do their duty when called upon for their lodge, their Queen, and the Craft (loud cheers). Bros. Henderson, Gamble, and Parish as well responded. Of course the Past Masters were toasted, and Bro. Weston replied; as did Bro. Shaw for the officers. Bro. Jolly returned thanks to an enthusiastic reception of the Freemason, and Bro. Plaisted modestly responded to a warm eulogy of his liberal and most enjoyable catering, and then the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close. The visitors present included, Bro. Coupland, P.M. 913, and P.P.G.J.W. Kent; Bro. Capt. C. Phillips, P.M. 706; R. Croisdale, P.M. 706; and H. Bryc, 913, who are as well members of the lodge; Bros. H. Spurrell, W.M. 615, and P.G.J.D. Kent; W. J. Blackey, P.M. 159, and P.P.D.C. Kent; T. Butt, W.M. 706; W. Gamble, W.M. 700; H. Butter, W.M. 913; W. G. Parish, W.M. 1604; W. T. Vincent, P.M. 913; J. Henderson, P.M. 13, &c.; T. G. Day, P.M. 1076; J. A. Bates, P.M. 1424; A. Penfold, P.M. 913; J. McDougall, P.M. 913; T. D. Hayes, S.W. 913; W. B. Lloyd, J.W. 913; J. Mutch, J.W. 706; J. Donnelly, S.D. 706; E. Palmer, 913; D. C. Capon, 913; F. W. Corder, 913; W. Lomax, 913; W. H. Keen, 1604; J. Harper, 1604; and C. Jolly (Freemason) 913.

LIVERPOOL.—Liverpool Lodge (No. 1547).—The brethren of this lodge met for installing purposes at the Masonic Hall, Liverpool, on Wednesday, the 11th inst. Bro. Councillor Forrest, the retiring W.M., presided at the opening, and the usual Masonic business having been gone through, the chair was taken by Bro. J. W. Baker, P.M. 241, who proceeded to instal Bro. John Marshall, Worshipful Master elect, in a very impressive manner. The following officers were invested:—Bro. Wm. John Lunt, P.M., D.C.; Bro. John H. Parker, S.W.; Bro. J. W. Cave-Brown-Cave, J.W.; Bro. Roger Warriner, Secretary; Bro. Jas. A. Forrest, I.P.M. and Treasurer; Bro. John Duncan, jun., S.D.; Bro. Wm. Ladyman, J.D.; Bro. James C. McGuire, I.G.; Bro. Charles J. Caddock, S.S.; Bro. Edward Walker, J.S.; Bro. W. H. Ball, Tyler. After the lodge had closed the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was served by Bro. Ball, and the usual toasts were proposed. "The Provincial Grand Officers" was responded to by Bro. M'Muldrov, P.G. Purst, and Bro. Skeaf, P.G.O.; "The West Lancashire Educational Charities," proposed by Bro. Forrest, was responded to by Bro. Lunt, P.M. "The Worshipful Master" was proposed by Bro. Forrest, and enthusiastically received. The Worshipful Master responded in suitable terms. A jewel was presented to Bro. Forrest by the Worshipful Master as a token of esteem from the brethren of the lodge on completing his year of office. The Worshipful Master thanked the brethren, proposed "The Health of the Installing Master," and presented him with a beautiful combination of staff and telescope, and Bro. Haynes, P.M., with handsome smoking paraphernalia, in acknowledgment of their assiduous support since the formation of the lodge. The musical arrangements were under the management of Bro. Skeaf, P.G.O., assisted by Bros. Busfield, T. J. Hughes, John Hill, and others.

LEYTONSTONE.—Guelph Lodge (No. 1685).—Two meetings of this lodge took place last week at the Hall of the Red Lion, Leytonstone (Bro. T. Barford's). The first meeting was an emergency, called for Friday evening, for the express purpose of initiating Capt. William Joseph Wheratt, of the merchant navy, who was about to proceed the following day to India and China. The captain was initiated by Bro. Edwin Bare, W.M. of the lodge, who was supported by his officers. The brethren afterwards sat down to supper, and in toasting the initiate wished him a happy and prosperous voyage, which would extend over about fifteen months. The following day, the first regular meeting of the lodge was held, at which there were present the following brethren:—Edwin Bare, W.M.; Walter C. Claridge, S.W.; Ebenezer Skelt, J.W.; Edward Brown, Treasurer; J. B. Shackleton, Sec.; J. W. Francis, S.D.; R. Vincent, I.G.; D. Sayer, D.C.; Robert F. Hogg, J. W. 1595; H. W. Godbold, 1595; W. Christian, W.M. 1662; H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason) and Thomas Barford, P.M. 55. After the reading and confirmation of the minutes of previous meetings, the brethren having balloted for the candidates for initiation, the following gentlemen were initiated by the W.M.:—Messrs George Chew, Edward Gayton, Robert Warner, Ed. Maulton Odams, and Wm. Cripps. Afterwards the W.M. invested Bro. J. B. Shackleton, P.M., with the collar and jewel of the P.M. of the lodge. The draft of the bye-laws of the lodge were produced, and on the motion of Bro. Vincent, seconded by Bro. Francis, the same were remitted for settlement to a committee consisting of the W.M., the S.W., the J.W., Bro. Chew and Bro. Cripps. The brethren then closed lodge and adjourned to a choice banquet provided by Bro. Barford, when the beautiful display of flowers and fruit at the installation banquet a month previously was repeated. After doing ample justice to the elegant repast the brethren honoured the usual list of toasts. The introductory toasts having been disposed of, Bro. Shackleton, as the P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M." The W.M. was better known to the brethren of the lodge than they were to him, Bro. Shackleton; but he, (Bro. Shackleton) knew enough of Freemasonry to be sure that Bro. Bare would not have been chosen to occupy the W.M.'s chair if it had not been thought he would do credit to the office. He was positive he would do credit to the Guelph Lodge, as would also every officer of the lodge, and every member of the lodge, all of whom most heartily wished the W.M. a prosperous year. He could confidently tell the initiates that they could not have a better example in Freemasonry than the W.M. It was only 15 months since he first saw Masonic light, and he had achieved a position which many men worked zealously for 10, 20, or 30 years to attain. The offices in Freemasonry were ordinarily only to be obtained by a constant attendance at lodge and a faithful discharge of the various duties attached to the different offices, and it was considered the highest privilege a brother of a lodge could acquire to become the Master. The toast having been heartily received, the W.M. said that so far as Masonry was concerned anything which promoted its welfare would always have his most sincere and unqualified support. He believed in Freemasonry; he was certain that it would make a man a better man if he understood it. From a very early age he had been taught to think very seriously. Freemasonry had helped to deepen in him the interest he took in the things of this life and those pertaining to a future life. He had to thank the brethren for the very kind manner in which they had responded to the toast, and begged to say it should always be his most sincere desire and earnest wish to promote the prosperity of the Guelph Lodge. After a short interval the W.M. proposed with a great deal of pleasure "The Health of the Initiates." The brethren knew that unless they had fresh material brought into the Craft, in a given time everything Masonic must cease. The lodge had that night initiated the maximum number they were allowed to make at one meeting, except by special dispensation. They had been promised a dispensation for a sixth, but on the whole they had thought it best to initiate one of the number at an emergency meeting the night before. Speaking in the presence of those who were initiated that evening, he hoped that they, and he who had been initiated at the emergency, might long be spared to take delight in labouring in the works of Masonry in all its branches. Bro. Chew responded for all the initiates. The brethren would not expect him to say much about Masonry because, as they were aware, he knew but little of it at present. However, he thanked the brethren most sincerely for the cordial way in which they had received the toast, and he could assure them for himself and his brother initiates that they would do their best to be good Masons. When they contemplated entering Freemasonry they believed they would enter a society of good and true Englishmen. From what he had seen he believed they had entered such a society. It had always been his desire to carry out, as far as he could, matters which were for the benefit of common humanity. That carried with it the sentiments of good Masons; and whatever the initiates could do in this direction they would always be ready to do. The W.M., in proposing "The Officers of the Lodge," said he was very much indebted to the officers for the able assistance they had rendered. They were officers who thoroughly understood their duties, and with their aid he was in hopes of making the lodge a thorough success. Bro. Claridge, S.W., replied. The Guelph Lodge was a little hobby with them; and he was sure the brethren would believe him when he said that they would not ride it to death. They would endeavour to make the Guelph Lodge one of the best in the east of London. The W.M. next proposed "The Health of the Visitors." Bro. Christian, W.M. Beaconsfield, No. 1662, in replying, said that the Guelph Lodge had also been a hobby of his. When it was first proposed he was quite with the W.M. Bro. Barford was also in favour of it, and he thought that if it was possible for the Ley Spring Lodge to produce officers who could carry on a lodge, they ought to have a lodge to carry on, and that all brethren should give them their support in getting a warrant. They all knew the success of the Ley Spring Lodge, and that evening he might say he was very much pleased to see how the Guelph Lodge had been worked. He flattered himself that he had been instrumental in producing this lodge. Since he had been a resident in Leytonstone he had done his best in forming a lodge of instruction, and in giving brethren instruction in such a lodge, and also in his private capacity. Therefore for him to see the Guelph Lodge in prosperity was very pleasing indeed, for it made him feel that he had done something for Masonry in that district. Bro. Hogg also responded, and said that he had the pride and satisfaction of knowing that he initiated the W.M. in Masonry, or, at any rate, raised him to the Third Degree. It was also a great satisfaction to him to know that all the officers had so well equipped themselves for a Masonic campaign as they had done that evening. He hoped they would go on as well as they had begun. Bro. H. Massey was also called upon to respond, and after a few words from him, Bro. W. Steedman gave the Tyler's toast, and the brethren separated.

FIRE AT ROSSIE PRIORY.—On Tuesday, the 17th inst., a serious fire occurred at Rossie Priory, the seat of Bro. Lord Kinnaird, P.G.M. Banffshire, and before it was extinguished the coachhouse, stables, buildings, and clock tower, in which there was a fine peal of bells, were reduced to ashes. No one can explain the origin of the conflagration, but immediately it was discovered the servants and tenantry did all they could to subdue it. With the assistance of the Dundee brigade, who were summoned by telegraph, the splendid residence was saved. At one time it was in jeopardy, the flames frequently reaching almost to the picture gallery, and the room in which there is one of the finest collection of Sevres ware in the kingdom. The bells are much damaged, one of them being partially melted. Damage to the extent of several thousands has been done. Lord and Lady Kinnaird are at present in England.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF LEICESTERSHIRE AND RUTLAND

The half yearly general Communication of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Leicestershire and Rutland was held on Wednesday, the 11th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, under the banner of St. John's Lodge, No. 279. Amongst those present were R.W. Bros. the Right Hon. the Earl Ferrers, Prov. G. Master, and W. Kelly, P.P.G.M.; W. Bros. the Rev. William Langley, P.P.S.G.W., as D.P. G.M.; S. S. Partridge, P.S.G.W.; T. Maccaulay, as P.J. G.W.; Rev. F. Richardson, P.G. Chap.; W. B. Smith, P.G. Treas.; G. Potter, jun., P.G. Sec.; F. Grant and T. Worthington, P.G. Deacons; C. E. Stretton, P.G. S. of W.; C. D. McBride, as P.G.D.C.; R. Boughton Smith, as P.G.A.D.C.; C. E. Willoughby, as P.G. Org.; S. Weaver, P.G.P.; and Bros. C. Gurden, P.G. Std. Br.; W. Balmforth, E. C. R. Cust, and J. F. Rolleston, P.G. Stwds.; and Bembridge and Dunn, Prov. G. Tylers. Visitors: W. Bros. G. Powell, P.M. 142; Rowley, P.M., and Sec., and others.

The St. John's Lodge having been opened, the Prov. Grand Master entered the lodge-room, accompanied by his Prov. Grand Officers, and was received with the customary honours.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was then opened in due form, and after calling the Roll of Lodges (which was duly responded to by accredited representatives from all except No. 1265) the Roll of Prov. G. Officers, reading the minutes of the last general meeting and disposing of the other routine matters, the special business for which the lodge had been more particularly summoned was proceeded with. This consisted of the presentation to Bro. George Toller, jun., P.M. 523, and Past Senior Grand Warden of the province, of an address of congratulation on his appointment by H.R.H. the M.W. Grand Master, as Grand Sword Bearer of England. The Prov. G. Master, in presenting the address, passed a high eulogium on the Masonic zeal and abilities of Bro. Toller and expressed on behalf of the lodges and brethren of the province the high esteem in which he was held, and their appreciation of the well-deserved honour which had been bestowed on him by the M.W. Grand Master. The presentation also included a complete set of full and undress Grand Lodge clothing, together with a Past Grand Sword Bearer's jewel, and on Lord Ferrers investing Bro. Toller with the handsome regalia of Grand Lodge, the worthy recipient was greeted with the heartiest acclamations.

Bro. Toller, in a most effective speech, returned his thanks for the hearty congratulations of the brethren, and expressed himself as quite overwhelmed with the unexpected form their recognition of his appointment had taken. In itself he considered that the office was an honour in which any one might feel the greatest pride and pleasure, but its value to him was infinitely enhanced by the hearty and spontaneous manner in which it had been endorsed, and, in conclusion, he expressed the hope that although this was the first Grand Lodge appointment ever given to a member of this province, the like honour might in future years fall to the lot of other Leicestershire brethren.

The preparation of the address was entrusted to Bro. Wm. Millican, P.M. 523, by whom it was most beautifully and elaborately illuminated, and enclosed in a massive frame, bearing appropriate emblems, and also designed by the same brother.

The address was in the following terms:—

"To the Worshipful Brother George Toller, Jun., P.M., P.P.S.G. Warden of Leicestershire and Rutland, Grand Sword Bearer of England. We, the Provincial Grand Master, Past Provincial Grand Master, Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Officers and Brethren of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of Leicestershire and Rutland, in Provincial Grand Lodge assembled, desire to offer you our warmest congratulations on the dignity conferred upon you by the M.W. Grand Master in calling you to rank and office in the Grand Lodge of England. Your appointment has given universal satisfaction to the brethren of the province, as it is well known by all of us that no brother has more warmly and heartily devoted his services to the best interests of the Craft than yourself, and that in every way you have endeavoured to carry out the principles upon which our institution was founded. We hope that for very many years to come you will have health and strength, and that as in the past, so you will continue to lend your valuable assistance to the Rulers of the Province, and that when you wear the clothing and jewel of the office to which you are honourably entitled, and which the lodges in the province now offer for your acceptance, you will ever remember that you do so with the hearty good wishes and kindly feeling of the brethren of your native county."

(Signed), FERRERS, P.G.M.

WM. KELLY, P.P.G.M.

H. ST. JOHN HALFORD, D.P.G.M.

The election of two members to represent the Provincial Grand Lodge on the Committee of the Leicester Freemasons' Hall, then took place, and Bros. C. Stretton, P.P.G.W., and Dr. Hunt, P.P.G.A.D.C., were unanimously elected.

Bro. S. S. Partridge reported to Provincial Grand Lodge the result of his Stewardship for the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and tendered his thanks for the liberal way in which the brethren had responded to his appeals on behalf of that charity, thereby enabling him to take up the very handsome sum of £400 18s. 6d. and placing his list as Steward at the Festival on June 27th, highest but two in point of amount on that occasion.

Apologies for absence were read from the D.P.G.M., Sir Henry Halford, and other brethren, after which the Provincial Grand Lodge was duly closed.

The usual banquet afterwards took place at the Hall, under the management of the Stewards of St. John's Lodge, Bros. M. A. Cooke and G. H. Stonehall, whose admirable arrangements gave the greatest satisfaction. The banquet was presided over by the R.W. Provincial Grand Master.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF MONMOUTHSHIRE.

The Provincial Grand Chapter of Monmouthshire was held at Newport, at the Masonic Hall, on Wednesday, 11th July, at 3 p.m., when, in the unavoidable absence of Lieut.-Col. Lyne, P.G. Superintendent, the Chapter was presided over by Capt. S. Geo. Homfray, P.G. Standard Bearer of G. Chapter and P.G.H., assisted by Comp. J. Middleacre, P.Z., as P.G.H., and Comp. W. Pickford, P.Z., as P.G.J. There was a very good attendance, and the chapter having been opened in due form, Capt. S. Geo. Homfray then explained to the companions present the progress that R.A. Masonry had made in the province. Since they had last met he had consecrated the Kennard Chapter at Pontypool, and during the year had himself exalted many worthy companions. The appointment of officers then took place, when Comps W. Pickford, P.Z. Silurian Chapter, and one of the oldest Masons in the province, was duly appointed and obligated as P.G.J. for the ensuing year, the following other appointments were made:—

There being no other business the chapter was duly closed.

Capt. S. G. Homfray then proceeded to open a chapter of emergency of St. Woolos, which was called under dispensation from the P.G. Superintendent, in consequence of the death of Comp. W. H. Wickey Homfray, M.E.Z. of this chapter, to instil Principals, also to exalt any duly qualified brethren. Capt. Homfray then exalted three worthy brethren, and about four more were proposed for exaltation on a future occasion. He performed the ceremony in his usual efficient manner, and then proceeded to instil as Principals Comps. W. Watkins as M.E.Z.; and Hiscox as H.; and the installation of the third Principal was deferred until the next chapter meeting.

The chapter was then closed in perfect harmony.

THE DEPUTY GRAND MASTER AND THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SHOW.

Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M. of England, P.G.M. of Lancashire, president for the past year of the Royal Agricultural Society, was entertained at a splendid banquet, given by His Worship the Mayor (Mr. Alderman Walker) at the Town Hall, Liverpool, on the 11th inst., in connection with the "Royal" show in that town.

Amongst those who accepted his lordship's invitation were his Excellency the Hon. H. B. Loch, C.B., Lieutenant Governor of the Isle of Man; the Earl of Bective, the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, Viscount Bridport, Lord Chesham, Earl Cathcart, the Earl of Ellesmere, Lord Feversham the Duke of Manchester, Lord Winmarleigh, Sir Joseph Whitworth, Bart., M.P.; Sir Thomas Christopher Booth, the Hon. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P.; the Hon. A. Nelson Hood; Sir T. Edward Moss, Bart.; Sir Gilbert Greenall, Bart., M.P.; Sir A. E. Ramsey, Bart.; Admiral Hornby; General Fairchild; Mr. J. Torr, M.P.; Mr. Edward Greene, M.P.; Mr. Albert Peel, M.P.; Mr. M. White Ridley, M.P.; Mr. Clair S. Read, M.P.; Mr. C. Brocklehurst, M.P.; Col. Ireland Blackburne, M.P.; Mr. Bernhard Samuelson, M.P.; Professor J. B. Simonds; Professor Brown; the Mayor of Beverley; the Mayor of Southport; Mr. W. Warrington Wood, &c.

The Mayor, in proposing the principal toast of the evening, said—I am sure that we all felt that a great honour was conferred upon our town when Liverpool was selected for this year's meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society; and it affords me very great pleasure indeed, personally as well as in my official capacity as Mayor of Liverpool, to give a hearty welcome to the noble lord the president of the society, and to the various members under whose guidance the proceedings are being conducted. Liverpool is more the centre of commerce than of agriculture, but it is, at the same time, the business centre of a very important agricultural district, which will be largely benefited by the valuable information and instruction placed within easy access by the holding of the Royal Exhibition in this town. I have now very great pleasure in proposing the toast of the "Royal Agricultural Society," and in associating with it the name of Lord Skelmersdale, the president, to whom we give a hearty welcome, not only on account of the high position which he occupies in the council of the society, but for the great esteem in which we hold him as a worthy son of Lancashire, and a deservedly popular neighbour, always ready to take an active part in every movement having in view the protection and promotion of our local interests. (Applause.)

Lord Skelmersdale said that it was with some diffidence that he rose to return thanks for the toast just proposed. He was a comparatively a young member of the society, but at the same time he felt that it was a great honour to him to stand there in his own county, as president of the Royal Agricultural Society. In the name of the society he most heartily thanked the Mayor and people of Liverpool for the cordial welcome which they had given to the society. (Applause.) There was a time—a dread time—when there was a prospect of the show not being held. He was happy, however, to say that the show was an insured success. Notwithstanding the month's delay, which might have been fatal to it, owing to the great exertions of the local committee no bad effects had resulted from that delay. (Hear, hear.) The cause of that delay gave not only to himself but to every breeder in the country a pang of dread that the whole of their cattle might be swept away from them as they very nearly were a few years ago. Thanks, however, to the precautions taken, and thanks to the energetic strictness that was shown by the authorities, the danger had been averted. (Applause.) He thought they might congratulate themselves on that fact, because it showed that should the disease break out again they had the power to stamp it out. (Hear, hear.) He ventured to express a hope that at some not very distant period the hoof and mouth disease might be treated in the same manner as the cattle plague had been. (Hear, hear.) It was quite as pernicious, if not more so, than the cattle plague, and it was more dangerous, because, as farmers did not think so much about it, it was allowed to spread. He only wished that they thought more about it, and that some stringent regulations were taken, so that they might be able to stamp out that disease. (Applause.) The show, he thought, was a great success. But, he would ask, what had Liverpool undertaken that was not a success? (Hear, hear.) Everything undertaken by this great town was a success; and with the cordiality with which the Mayor had received the society, such a success was to be expected. He only hoped that the prospects of that day might be thoroughly carried through. (Hear, hear.) The society had certain objects in view; some of them had been mentioned by the rector, but there were others which were more especially perhaps within the province of the society, namely the improvement of farm produce and the improvement in agricultural machinery. Those were the great objects of the society, and he thought that Liverpool was very intimately connected with those objects, because the society offered prizes not only to this country, but to North America and Canada, and to the whole world; and everything which came to the show from abroad came through Liverpool, and must surely do Liverpool some good. Referring to the import of dead meat from America, he understood that it was a great success; and he thought there was no reason why it should not go on. And so much the better. He himself was a shorthorn breeder; and he saw a great opening for the exportation of male animals to America. This country wanted dead meat; and America would require the best cattle of this country to improve its stock. Therefore Liverpool, as the port both of import and export between here and America, was most intimately connected with the agricultural interests of the kingdom. That day they had had at the show, although he was incog., a most eminent person, the Emperor of Brazil. He (Lord Skelmersdale) was with the Emperor only a short time, but he understood that his Majesty spent three hours in the show, and examined everything most attentively, and expressed the most intense satisfaction with everything he saw. He (Lord Skelmersdale) thought that the visit to the show of a great sovereign like the Emperor of Brazil was a very important thing in the interests of the society and of agriculture generally. With regard to the success of the show, he might mention that on the last occasion when the show was held in this town the space occupied by it was about seven acres, and he believed he was correct in stating that the present show covered 70 acres. (Applause.) He concluded by asking the company to drink the health of the Mayor, whose hospitality was known to most of those present.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 2lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as samples, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwar street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea Dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom, must be addressed to the Secretary.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

On Wednesday last the summer entertainment to the inmates of the Asylum for Aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons, was given on the premises at Croydon, and was attended with even more than the ordinary success. The periodical amusements for the old people were established by Bro. Terry, the Secretary of the Institution, shortly after his election to the office, when they were instituted as a tentative scheme, which it was thought by that energetic brother, would be acceptable to the Craft at large, who are strong supporters of this, as well as the other Masonic Charities. The first little fete was so successful that Bro. Terry considered the scheme fairly launched, and when he made his second proposition to the Committee for the use of the hall at the Asylum, it was received not only with as much readiness as his first request, but with an amount of warmth which showed that the brethren were determined to work hand in hand with him to afford the annuitants a change in their life at Croydon, which they might look forward to with pleasure. As time has gone on, thanks to the widespread popularity of the Craft, there has been but little difficulty in finding brethren and ladies willing to give their assistance in making up a programme of entertainments acceptable to those who partake in them, while they are always diversified and free from a set form. Consequently no one can say that a forthcoming entertainment will be in any respect similar to a former, and the certainty that something new will be given furnishes a charm to the diversion which a set entertainment would not possibly have. At times dramatic readings have been given; at other times there have been magic lanterns, and dissolving views, with panoramas and instructive lectures; entertainments exclusively musical have at other times been given; and at all times a hearty social reunion in which the brethren who support the Institution and the ladies of their families spend a few hours of friendly intercourse with their brethren and sisters, and strive to make this sublunary sphere as enjoyable as under the circumstances it can be rendered. On Wednesday last, Bro. Terry's programme was strictly musical, and to carry it out he secured the valuable services of Madame Thaddeus Wells, (whose feelings are so strongly Masonic that she may be identified with Masonry,) and Bros. Seymour Smith, T. Lawler Junr., and George Weige. The South Eastern Railway kindly put on a special saloon carriage to the 3.38 p.m. train from Cannon Street, and landed the party at Croydon in twenty-two minutes, the party consisted of the following ladies and brethren: J. Terry, Sec.; Dr. H. J. Strong, Hon. Surgeon to the Institution; Mrs. Strong, Mrs. Terry, Mrs. Newton, Mrs. Constable, Bro. Newton, Miss Terry, Bro. Bowyer, P.M. 1580; J. Stock, S.D. 1178; J. Newton, R. Percy, S.D. 228; R. H. Halford, S.W. 228; T. Cubitt, P.G.P.; C. Reece, 228; Mr. J. E. Terry, Bro. L. H. Webb, J.D. 174, J.W. 1607; Mrs. Lacy, Bro. E. G. Legge, S.W. 1196, Treas. 1607; C. J. Perceval, S.D. 1607; C. Lacey, P.P. G.D. Herts; W. W. Morgan, jun.; H. Massey (Freemason), G. Knill, Mr. G. Recknell, Bros. W. H. Stevens, J. J. Berry, Mrs. Berry, Bros. S. Smith, T. Lawler, jun., G. Weige, J.W. 860; Mrs. Newton, Mrs. Bowyer, Mrs. Legge, Mrs. Percy, Mrs. Newton, Mrs. Halford, Mrs. Reece, Miss Constable, Miss E. R. Reece, Mrs. Stock, Bro. J. Constable, and Bro. J. Stevens.

On arriving at the building a general inspection of the place was made by the visitors, and it was universally admitted that it had never, within the memory of the present supporters of the Institution, presented such a favourable appearance. The reason of this was speedily made known. Finding that some repairs were required to the premises, the committee early in the year resolved to call in an architect to advise them what was required to be done, and it was on that brother's report that the committee gave directions for the entire place to be put in a thorough state of repair. Messrs. Patrick and Son were employed on this work, and after a few months again handed the building over to the Institution. The way in which all the work has been done reflects credit not only on the builders, but on the chairman of the committee, the committee, and the Secretary, who have followed the progress of the builders with a very scrutinising eye. The Craft may rest assured that they took a wise step in having the repairs done as soon as they did, for if they had not then taken it the small cost which has been incurred would have been rendered very heavy. In addition to the pleasant appearance presented by the buildings another beautiful sight met the visitors' view as soon as they entered the gates. The gardens were beautifully laid out, and the recent handsome gift of flowers by Dr. Strong, chronicled by the Freemason last week, was noticeable as adding much to the charming scene. It was also observable that an addition had been made to the grounds, for at the northern end was a large kitchen garden, well stocked with vegetables, and we were informed by the Secretary that the slip of land between the railway and the grounds no longer is traversed by the persons who had formerly a right-of-way to the fields at the extremity of the gardens. Of the different proceedings necessary for the acquisition of these additions the Freemason has given full account in its reports of the meetings of the Committee of the Institution, and it is not therefore necessary that we should now repeat the steps that were taken. After partaking of tea the entertainment to the old people was given, and it lasted for more than three hours. Everybody experienced great pleasure at the entertainment, although there was a universal feeling of regret that the space afforded by the hall was so confined. For these entertainments it is totally inadequate; and, as, with a very small expense the hall might be made nearly double the size it now is, it is to be hoped that the Craft, whom we heartily wish would go down and see the place to form their own opinion on the subject, will shortly sanction a small outlay, by which means accommodation will be given to enable the well-wishers of the Benevolent Institution to extend the numbers to whom invitations to these small fetes may be issued. Madame Thaddeus Wells, Bro. Seymour Smith, T. Lawler, jun., George Weige, John Constable, James Stevens, J. J. Berry, C. J. Perceval, Mrs. Strong, Miss Terry, Miss Reece, Miss E. Reece, and Miss Constable threw their heartiest efforts into the entertainment, and gave vocal and instrumental performances. Among the pieces were Bro. Seymour Smith's "opera" "Brown's Dinner Party." Among the other pieces were "Jack's Yarn," "Never mind the rest," "Coming through the Rye," "Nancy Lee," "Polly," "Just another Glass," "Cherry Ripe," "Nothing like Leather," "The Women of our Native Land," "The Singing Lesson." During the intervals between the songs and performances the old people were regaled with wine and cake, and all the fruits that are in season; and besides this every old lady was presented with a pound of tea, and every old brother with a pound of tobacco, the gift of the Supreme Council. Before the party separated, Dr. Strong proposed a vote of thanks to Madame Wells, and the professional brethren, as well as to non-professional ladies and brethren who had given their services; and in doing so he said that all who were present knew what a sacrifice it was to the professional artists to devote an evening away from their engagements. He thought that every one had spent a very pleasant evening; that every one enjoyed the songs, and that no one could go away and forget the charming style in which Madame Wells had given "Cherry Ripe," and "Coming through the Rye." "Cherry Ripe" was a very old-fashioned song, but of all the numerous songs which had been written since, there was not one which eclipsed it. Having alluded then to the professionals, they must not forget the amateurs, who had also contributed to the evening's entertainment, and he hoped there would be many future occasions when the brethren and the rest of the company would enjoy a similar treat.

Bro. Seymour Smith responded, and expressed the extreme satisfaction of all the artists that their efforts to please had been so eminently successful. On behalf of himself and the others he thanked the company very much, and as often as Dr. Strong prescribed a similar treatment for the old people, the artists would be too happy to repeat the dose. Bro. Smith concluded by proposing thanks to Bro. Terry, who was the originator of these periodical entertainments.

After singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," the brethren listened to Bro. Terry, who said it was no small pleasure to him to be recognised among those who had ministered to a few hours' enjoyment of the inmates of the asylum. He was very much pleased that some brethren who had never been in the building before had come down that day, as it would enable them to speak with a practical knowledge of the Committee whenever any questions arose. The brethren would go away with the satisfaction that they had endeavoured to render the old people happy. Bro. Terry concluded by personally thanking the professional ladies and brethren for the entertainment they had given; and he added that as years went by he hoped these pleasant reunions would be frequently repeated.

The party broke up after wishing each individual inmate good night, and returned to town by the South Eastern Railway's special saloon.

TESTIMONIAL TO BRO. TWEDDELL.

Mr. William Andrews, F.R.H.S., of Hull, the Hon Sec. to the Testimonial Fund now being raised to present Bro. George Markham Tweddell with a purse of gold, has received the following excellent letter from a gentleman well known as one of the most gifted of the Yorkshire Poets, but who has for many years been resident in Devonshire:

"Elmfield House, Exeter, June 10th, 1877.
"DEAR SIR,—A day or two ago I received a circular announcing that it was proposed to present a Testimonial to Mr. G. M. Tweddell, of Stokesley, having had some personal knowledge of his literary labours, and the reverses he has encountered, I must ask you to add my name to the list of subscribers, to the amount of the enclosed cheque (£5). Whether from not being much of a man of business, a thing not uncommon among authors; or from having 'too many irons in the fire,' or from an over sanguine temperament, Mr. Tweddell has encountered these reverses, he is not the less entitled to the sympathy of those who appreciate literary industry and a perseverance in self improvement in the face of any disadvantages.

"I am Sir, yours faithfully,

"WILLIAM DANLEY."

A new Masonic Hall was opened at Sheffield on Wednesday, 18th inst., by Bro. Sir Henry Edwards, Bart., Prov. Grand Master West Yorkshire. There was a large gathering of brethren from all parts of the country, about 250 being present. The hall has been erected at a cost of about £6000. It is in the Classical style of architecture. The lodge room, the chief feature of the building, is upwards of 50 feet long, and is magnificently decorated. At the conclusion of the opening ceremony the brethren dined at the Cutler's Hall.

Bro. Sir John Bennett was entertained at a dinner on Tuesday, the 17th ult., at the City Terminus Hotel, by his friends and supporters, in celebration of the result of the recent election for the ward of Cheap. Mr. Goschen, M.P., who presided, alluded to the opposition to Bro. Sir John Bennett's return, and remarked that members of Parliament would be very uneasy indeed if they were to be held personally or morally responsible for all the proceedings of their over-zealous friends.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The W.M. (Bro. R. Sharpe) and brethren of the Royal Gloucester Lodge, Southampton, at their last meeting were visited by the W.M. (Bro. E. Le Feuvre, Prov. Sharpe being the Secretary of the new lodge. Under the auspices of the Masons of Southampton residing in the district, and encouraged by the Dep. Prov. Grand Master (now the I.P.M.), the lodge is making excellent progress. "The Visitors" during the evening included Bro. ## A CONTRAST.

We fear that the contrast we are about to essay to draw, if with feeble pencil, will not be the most agreeable or welcome of topics to some of our courteous readers, and we, therefore, in the outset, recommend those who are not particularly anxious to study Masonic ethics, to spare themselves the perusal of lucubrations which possibly may go much "against the grain" with them. At the same time we beg to say that we do not wish to appear to write too sternly, or in any spirit either of complaining criticism, but only desire to "point the moral" for all who, like ourselves, believe in Freemasonry, and consider that it has something more to boast of than the mere social gathering; something in it about which we may be both pleased and proud that we are permitted to announce ourselves to be Freemasons. After this little prologue our readers will, perhaps, be wondering what it is we are, as the Irish say, "afther." At this period of the year we are struck by the constant commemorations of summer St. John's, and we can call to mind numerous pleasant gatherings at which our good brethren are neither conspicuous for defect of attendance or for want of appetite. All, in fact, goes with them merrily and cheerfully as a "marriage bell." We can even well remember the "menu" so artistically arranged, the "bouquet" of that last bottle of dry champagne still lingers with us contentedly. And then the friendly conversation; the gay banter; Pigwiggin's little story; and Duxbury's charming song; the beaming smiles of the best of W.M.'s; the assurances of the most correct of Treasurers; the pathos of that indefatigable Secretary; the "old, old story" of that excellent P.M.; the premises of assiduous officers, and the thanks of contented visitors! All these float before our peaceful vision at the hour we write, surrounded as it were by a wreath of savoury vapours, composed of cigarettes and full flavoured Havannahs; the sweet scented rose-water, and the titillating lodge snuffbox. Well, all this is very agreeable and very enjoyable while it lasts, but there comes a time, as good Bro. Balasso may one day realize, when all these pleasant things will cease to charm us; when we become cold to the assurance of a "good muster," of a "first-rate dinner," of Pigwiggin's proper story, of Duxbury's entrancing song, when even the "chorus" ceases to exhilarate us, and "Worthy Freemasons all" has lost its ancient spell. But do not suppose that because we are old and weather-beaten, and that the infirmities of the flesh make us eschew all such "poms and vanities," that, therefore we wish to denounce or disdain such needful relaxation from the laborious moments of the lodge. Far be from us any such unwise asceticism, any such un-Masonic churlishness. We, on the contrary, would say to all who read these lines, that we sincerely trust they will enjoy these gatherings now, as we did those grateful hours we still can pleasurably remember and keep before us. For many of us can find, in our lodge social circle, all those refreshing moments which true-hearted friendship and genial association offer us, which are good, we may believe, to the sympathetic mind and need of gregariousness of man. But a question may fairly come in, whether in all these respects we do not a little overdo it. When we, on the other hand, remind ourselves of the struggles of Masonic literature and the paucity of Masonic readers, we cannot help asking ourselves very often—do we not sacrifice too much of our time and attention, and active energies to the material and corporeal, and put on one side the spiritual and the intellectual? It is a very sad fact to realize how few Masons read, and how still as a closed book is Masonic literature to the many. As regards Masonic archæology and study we can count up those in England who, amid our 100,000 members, interest themselves in such things at all, and in no other jurisdiction is it any better. Without then presuming to lecture or dogmatize too much, may we not justly say that the contrast, as between refreshment and literature, the "knife-and-fork" degree and Masonic intellectuality, is a very striking, and we must add, a most regrettable one? But, having said this, we pause. Though friendly Mentors, we are not spiritual directors, and we dislike confession just as much as we object to Popes of any kind, lay or spiritual. We may however be permitted to express the hope that the "tide is turning" somewhat now, and that the generation which will succeed us will be as famous for their love of Masonic literature as their punctual attendance at a good dinner, and that while they do not neglect the wants of the body, they will also bear in mind the as important needs of the mind.

THE LAST QUARTERLY COURT OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

A long and important meeting was held on Monday, under the very able presidency of Bro. John Symonds, at which a great deal of business was transacted. A prolonged discussion took place as to the report of the House Committee for increase of accommodation, which it was understood at last was not a report at all, but a statement, and the meeting received an assurance that a distinct and amended report would be presented through the General Committee to the Quarterly Court in October. As Bro. Symonds very pertinently declared, a taint of informality seems to affect the whole proceedings, "ab initio," but it appeared to be the general opinion that it would have been better had the statement been sent on to the Quarterly Court, and not circulated until that course had been taken. If, however, we all get into the right way at last, we shall be able to overlook slight informalities. A most important discussion arose about several of the candidates, two were not elected, and another was withdrawn. There seems to be some legal doubts as to whether the Quarterly Court can do more than elect—almost as a matter of form—and whether it can reject, which course it is contended by the laws belongs to the General Committee alone. If, however, the Quarterly Court has power to "elect," it would seem "ex-necessitate rei," to have authority also to "reject," or else a "reductio ad absurdum" might easily be brought about. If the limited view be correct, (a good deal turns on the clause on the power of the General Committee and on the actual meaning of the words "shall elect,") a case might inadvertently get on the list through an innocent "malfeasance" of duty on the part of the General Committee, and there is no power to remedy such a direct contradiction of our laws. A case was mentioned, as bad as well can be conceived. A brother subscribes one-and-a-half or two-and-a-half years, goes out of Masonry for six years, dies out of Masonry, but his child is put on by the votes of influential brethren at the General Committee, in defiance of the express law on the subject. There is no power in the Quarterly Court to take such a case out of the list, it is asserted. It seems a very hard case; and to say the truth, one likely to do harm to the Institution, and as a precedent, open to grave abuses, and we wish here to impress upon our brethren the injustice to the Boys' School, and other meritorious brethren, which accrues from the action of those who, in defiance of the plain words of the laws, for sentimental or other reasons carry candidates on the list, even where, as we said before, the wise laws of the Institution declare such cases, "ipse facto," ineligible. We think, therefore, that power should be given distinctly to the Quarterly Court, to affirm or refuse the recommendation of the General Committee, as it seems to be a farce, if the Quarterly Court has the power to elect that it is unable to reject also, and put a stop, at once, to a clear contravention of the rules of the Boys' School. Though there was, (owing no doubt to the weather), a small meeting, it was very a satisfactory one, and too much praise cannot be accorded to the patience and courtesy of Bro. John Symonds, always a most careful and conscientious chairman. A committee was very properly appointed to consider about a testimonial to Mrs. Monckton, and Bro. Constable was elected honorary Vice-Patron. We regret to add that there were sixty-three candidates announced for October, and only nine vacancies.

THE FIRE AT ST. JOHN'S.

DEAR BRO. KENNING.—

I feel certain that you will require no apology from me in calling attention, through your widely-read paper, the Freemason, to the dreadful disaster which has fallen on New Brunswick. Every feeling of English humanity, and every sentiment of English benevolence will concur with this seasonable reminder, as I venture to deem it, of a great disaster, and of a national calamity. For though the matter be foreign, perhaps, to Freemasonry proper, (hence an apology, apology be needed, for its appearance in your cosmopolitan pages), yet it is a subject which affects deeply the undying heart of human sympathy, and fraternal concern. That distant land is bound to us by many and enduring ties. Its people are "bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh," and all emotions of patriotism, as well as many considerations of unsevered interests, would bid us feel for their calamities as for our own; "to rejoice with them that do rejoice, and to weep with them that weep." Perhaps a more startling and stunning disaster has seldom fallen upon a peaceful, industrious and prosperous community! We are told that "this disastrous fire began on the afternoon of Wednesday, June 29th, in a building on the south of York Point Slip. In a few minutes after the first outbreak it had already passed beyond control, and in half an hour's time it was threatening the entire town. Although the firemen got to work right speedily, both sides of Union-street were soon in flames, and the conflagration, proceeding along Smyth-street in a southerly direction, soon reached Nelson-street and the South Wharf. With the strong wind from the north-west, the entire wharf was soon in a blaze. All Wednesday night and during the whole of Thursday the flames swept onwards, and ceased only when there was nothing left for them to feed upon. The greater number of the public buildings, churches, and newspaper offices were destroyed and the bulk of the inhabitants were left without food and shelter." We are also informed that "the loss of property is estimated at about 20,000,000 dollars, and the insurance amounts to about 6,000,000 dollars. The saddest part of all is the loss of life. Our people feel deeply gratified for the very tangible feelings and expressions of sympathy that are showered upon us from all quarters, and the suffering of the poor and homeless is fast being alleviated. Rebuilding has already commenced in some quarters, and we think that the energy and pluck of our business men have not been extinguished, but that in a very few years, by the blessing of Providence, our city will rise up from its ashes, and that we will be again a prosperous people." In the United States great sympathy has been manifested, and considerable sums have already been forwarded for the sufferers, at Liverpool £5000 have been already raised, while in London a subscription has been opened at the Mansion House by the Lord Mayor. It appears to me, though I speak deferentially, that it is a good opportunity for our Grand Lodge to come forward and aid, by a liberal grant to the Lord Mayor's Fund, in this great work of needful assistance. I admit at once that it is not strictly Masonic, but it is most certainly humanitarian, and fully in harmony with the most genuine tenets and teaching of our kindly and philanthropic Order. Why should not a special Grand Lodge be summoned and vote, with hearty unanimity, a liberal grant to this most pressing claim and this most national object? I can conceive of no objection, at least not of any valid one, and I feel sure, from what I know of the praiseworthy liberality and striking large-heartedness of our fraternity, that neither an adherence to routine nor technical difficulties will prevent them manifesting now, as ever, that they are always sensible to the claims of suffering fellow creatures, and the dictates of the greatest of all virtues, true Charity.

SHAKESPEARE AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It is always unadvisable to weaken a cause by advancing a plausible but sophistical argument, and such I conceive to be the illustration adduced to day by "A Lover of Shakespeare" in support of his proposition that the great poet was a member of our divine Craft. An analysis of the twenty-four hours of the day has always been a favourite subject of intellectual exercise. The poets of the Augustan age of Latin literature indulged in these diversions. The monks and learned writers of the middle ages followed their example, and here, par parenthèse, let us remember that Henry, he within the "holy shade," whose great educational monument I am writing, who is supposed to apostrophise time in the lines quoted, was said to be more of a monk than a monarch—more fitted for a cowl than a crown—as his consort, the so-called "She Wolf of Arjou," was reputed to be better qualified to strike with the sword than to save with the sceptre. What more likely then than that the devout and contemplative king should, in his acute misery, recall some of the exertions over which he had pored in the cloister? If this hypothesis be adopted, what a much higher estimate do we arrive at of the—I really want an adjective—may I say sublimely intuitive genius?—of our divine bard, who puts into the mouth of a character he has wonderfully elaborated, not only the utterance of the reflections that might occur to any afflicted potentate stricken from his high estate, but reflections the very form and direction of which history and literary enquiry prove that the mind and memory of this particular monarch must have been charged with.

With that "great upheaval" as Lord Bacon calls it—the Reformation—the outcome of which, in the shape of the printing press, we are this year celebrating as a quarter-century—the speculations perpetuated in the elegant Latin of Virgil, and Horace, and Propertius, and in the barbarous jargon of the monks of the middle ages, became the common literary property of the Anglo-Saxon race, by their reproduction in a tongue "understanded of the people." There exist many examples of this curious indulgence in metaphysical analysis. The one that occurs most readily to my mind, although I do not guarantee its accuracy, and quote only from memory, is said to be by the great Lord Coke—so-called—properly speaking, Sir Edward Coke, the "Coke upon Littleton," righteously abhorred by the drudges of the Temple, and runs as follows:—

"Six hours to sleep, to law's great study seven, Eight to the world devote; and—all to heaven!"

The comprehensive peroration may be said to render detailed examination unnecessary, yet I venture a little surmise. The eight hours devoted to the world I take to indicate the time to be allotted to "necessary labour." The three hours not specifically accounted for, it is not, I think, very extravagant, to attribute to the needs of "refreshment," including in that term the necessary recreation which may almost be said to be its equivalent. To give point to this argument, however, it is necessary to indicate that nobody (so far as I am aware) has ever asserted that the learned author of the above lines was a Freemason, and yet an allusion, obviously Masonic, will, in the last four words, strike every brother who can recall the address made to him on the presentation of the W.T., during the ceremony of his initiation.

Where I am rusticated I have not at hand the "New Shakespearian Dictionary" by my friend (not as yet a brother), G. Somers Bellamy, Esq., published in 1875 by the Charing Cross Publishing Company, and, if I mistake not, favourably reviewed in your columns at the time of its appearance.

I hate anything having the appearance of calling attention to one's friend's talents; but, like the officer who was so notoriously brave that he could afford to be called a coward, I will risk the imputation of puffing by referring "A Lover of Shakespeare," and any other brother who feels an interest in the discussion, to that very exhaustive work—it is in my library in London, but that is not here. Perhaps when I have had an opportunity of consulting it, you will let me bore your readers again.

I am quite sure the correspondent whose interesting communication has evoked this epistle will recall Brutus's protestation of his love to Caesar, and do me the credit of believing that, if he loves Shakespeare, I love him no less. A Mason the "Swan of Avon" undoubtedly was at heart and in soul, whether affiliated to a regular lodge or not. My opinion is—and therein I agree with your correspondent, though I do not admit the force of the special proof he adduces, but base my theory upon other illustrations which I propose to postpone presenting for the present—that he was regularly initiated and passed; whether raised or not is an enquiry involving "vexatio quæstio" with a discussion upon which I do not wish at present to trouble your readers. However, notwithstanding my mental conviction, the subject must be admitted to be obscure, and I do hope that you will afford facilities for its discussion in your columns, and, as any materials for elucidation must be valuable, allow me to quote the name of another friend, perhaps the most reliable of Shakespearian authorities, a gentleman—also alas! not a Freemason—my learned friend William Lowes Rushton, Esq., of 2, Plowden Buildings, Temple, E.C., resident however in Liverpool. Many works on Shakespeare have proceeded from his pen, and his illustrious position as the English corresponding member of the great German Shakespearian Society, whose head-quarters are at Berlin, of course indisputably attaches considerable weight to his theories and speculations. I purpose writing to him on this most interesting subject, and pending his reply will refer to his published works. When I have done that and heard from him, I shall be in a position to communicate with you again if you will allow me a little space.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

Datchet Common, near Eton, July 14.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In the last number of the Freemason a brother asks if Shakespeare was a member of our ancient Order. I think he was; I remember once seeing an old book in which it stated he was, but I forget the name of it. Our brother inserts a few lines in support of his argument. The following few quotations will (if not written by a Mason) easily be understood by one, viz. :—

"Who builds stronger than a Mason?"—Hamlet, a. 5, s. 1.

"The labour we delight in physics pain."—Macbeth, a. 2, s. 2.

"We cannot all be masters, nor all masters cannot be truly follow'd."—Othello, a. 1, s. 1.

"Friends now fast sworn whose double bosom seem to wear one heart."—Coriolanus, a. 4, s. 4.

"Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all."—Troilus and Cressida, a. 3, s. 3.

"Even from the east to the west."—Ant. and Cleo. a. 4, s. 2.

"And thus our life exempt from public haunt finds tongues in trees, books in the running brook, sermons in stones, and good in everything."—As You Like It, a. 2, s. 1.

"Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge."—Titus Andronicus, a. 1, s. 1.

"The quality of mercy is not strain'd, it droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven upon the place beneath. It is twice blessed, it blesseth him that gives and him that takes; 'tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes the throned monarch better than his crown."—Mer. of Ven., a. 4, s. 1.

I could quote several other passages from Shakespeare that point to Freemasonry, but am afraid to trespass on your valuable space and patience.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, obediently and fraternally yours,

STEPHEN C. HEATH, W.M. 797.

LITTLE BRITAIN.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I think that your worthy publisher may like to know the history of the street to which he has given a cosmopolitan renown.

Henry Thomas, in his valuable and careful "Ancient Remains, Antiquities, &c., of the City of London, &c.," 1830, states that "Little Britain was formerly the residence of the Duke of Bretagne, whose Palace was near St. Botolph's Church; one of the Earls of Bretagne, Alan, surnamed the Red, married Constance, daughter of William the Conqueror; Alan Geoffrey Plantagenet, fourth son of Henry II., who married Constance of Conan, was the father of the unfortunate Prince Arthur, Duke of Bretagne, presumptive heir to the throne of England, but prematurely murdered by his uncle King John, whose tragic history has been immortalised in the pages of our 'divine bard' Shakespeare."

In Little Britain also were situated the mansions of the Earl of Peterborough and Lord Montague, whose name is yet preserved in the Court.

About two hundred years ago and later Little Britain was celebrated for the booksellers of various kinds who lived there, and sold and issued their works. Many books of all kinds, as collectors well know, were printed at the Pelican and other signs in Little Britain.

I think this may interest Bro. Kenning.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

ARCHÆOLOGIST.

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I venture to send you a few lines to day, as I see with great regret that the discussion in the Times already over-passes, in my humble opinion, the limit of fair play to the authorities. Many of the writers who declaim so dogmatically seem to forget in their zeal that there is such an axiom in personal and public ethics as "audi alteram partem." I do not blame the Times for its insertion of such a plethora of excited appeals, for if it did not do so "Othello's occupation" would be "gone;" but I do blame some of the writers who are masters themselves, forgetting that by the tone of the letters (like Mr. Butler, of Winchester) they are throwing the greatest impediments in the way of school administration, and making the responsibility of the authorities, great as it is, still greater in the eyes of the public, by interjecting doubts as to the school government and the like.

I cannot help being amused, especially with Mr. Butler's letters from Winchester School. One would think that he had never heard of a "Prefect's licking." One cannot help feeling, and I hope he will pardon the expression of my opinion, that had he had one himself it would have done him a great deal of good, and taught him to write a little more moderately than he has been pleased to do.

But the main object of my letter is this. Two very worthy brethren of ours are connected closely with the administration of the school, Bro. Derby-Allcroft and Dr.

Brette. Mr. Bell, the late master, says that only two of the masters are resident, the head master and the French master, hence much imperfection of discipline is, in his opinion, unavoidable. The Times instantly improves upon this by stating that the French master is a "personage, though by no fault of his own, not always the most successful in commanding the boys' respect." It is quite clear that the writer of that article is ignorant of the true facts of the case, as none of the masters of Christ's Hospital ought and can command more of the respect of the boys than our good Bro. Dr. Brette. To all who know Bro. Allcroft and himself I will only add, that two more humane and kindly-hearted persons, or more respected, whether in public or private life, do not exist, and that everything they can do to promote the material comfort or intellectual improvement of the boys will be carried out, all may rest assured, with freedom, fervency, and zeal. I therefore think it well to call the attention of your many readers to the "bad form" of much that is so hastily advanced against the school authorities, and ask them fraternally to suspend their opinion until the proper enquiry has taken place. As Freemasons and citizens of the world we ought above all things always to keep before our minds a truth which some of us like often, apparently, to forget, that there are "two sides" to every question in this world of ours.

All the suggestions of reform and improvement do not enter into this special discussion, and while we shall all deeply deplore the fate of the unfortunate boy, we yet very well believe that no pains are spared by the authorities to make the boys happy and contented, and to render that great foundation worthy of the City and the Country.

Yours fraternally,

CIVIS.

WEST YORKSHIRE AND THE BOYS' SCHOOL. To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am truly glad to observe that my province, West Yorkshire, is so well represented in the Stewards' Lists, and I am especially pleased to note that Bro. S. B. Ellis, of Sheffield, has been enabled to send up so goodly a sum as £661 10s., the whole contribution of West Yorkshire being £766 10s. Of course this is nothing to former efforts, but then West Yorkshire has done well for the Boys' School. This return is a very striking proof to my mind, and that is the gist of my letter, that, despite some most regrettable and injudicious proceedings in respect of the Boys' School, there are those in West Yorkshire who will always support that useful and excellent institution.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

WEST YORKSHIRE.

A CORRECTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you kindly permit me to point out a slight inaccuracy in the interesting report of the proceedings of the District Grand Lodge of Bengal, which appeared in your issue of the 14th inst.

The District Grand Master in the chair (speaking of Bro. Marshall Wood, the eminent sculptor, who presented the bust of H.R.H., the Most Worshipful Grand Master to the District Grand Lodge) is reported to have alluded to him as a member of the St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 256.

Allow me to say that it should have been Lodge of Unions, No. 256, as I had the pleasure of witnessing the ceremony of Bro. Marshall Wood's initiation, admirably performed by my excellent friend, Bro. Charles Birch, I.P.M. of the Lodge of Unions.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, faithfully and fraternally yours,

R. R. DAVIS, P.M. No. 256.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

You were kind enough to insert in your issue of June 23rd long extracts of a letter which I had addressed to the Chaine D'Union of Paris about a month earlier.

As the author of that letter, I feel bound and indeed pleased to thank you for the kind remarks you inserted in your excellent paper in reference to it.

This correspondence will be continued, and as both English and French brethren are greatly interested in the point at issue, perhaps it is not asking you too much to further notice it when an opportunity occurs.

I remain, dear Editor, yours fraternally

LEON CLERC.

ENCOURAGEMENT TO THE LADIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read a letter in your last issue under the above heading, and also the report on which that letter was founded, with, I must confess, feelings of humiliation. Our keystone is charity, but do we make this manifest by our "works?" If we wish to do honour to a brother why not connect his name with the charities? If we wish again to do honour to a brother's wife, although it is past my comprehension to understand a lady's relation to Masonry, "do likewise." We should deprecate the sacrifice of charity to vanity. The Book of Constitutions defines the "regulation" jewel, and says it is "to be in silver." In my opinion the "ring" presentation is calculated to bring ridicule upon our Order, while the expenditure of lodge monies, or monies contributed for Masonic purposes, in such presentations, is open to grave question.

Yours fraternally,

A LIFE GOVERNOR.

[We entirely disagree with our worthy correspondent.—Ed.]

HAMPSHIRE AND THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Having seen an analysis of the subscription list to the Masonic Institution for Boys, which credited "one lodge in Southampton (394)" with contributing to the total, will you allow me to say that I believe it will be found 394, which numbers about fifty members, contributed ten guineas, whilst the two other Southampton lodges placed on the list of the Deputy Prov. Grand Master fifty guineas, viz., the Royal Gloucester (the mother lodge of the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, and of which he is the P.M.) about eighty members, twenty-five guineas, and the Peace and Harmony, about 110 to 200 members, twenty-five guineas.

Fraternally yours,

A SOUTHAMPTON MASON.

THE CASE OF CAPTAIN WILLIAMS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

You made some remarks with reference to this subject in your last Freemason, and I think it well to call your attention to the following two extracts from the Times, which serve to place the incomprehensible conduct of the Society for Organising Charitable Relief in a remarkable light:—"Mr. C. S. Loch, Secretary of the Society for Organising Charitable Relief, sends us what he describes as 'a short but necessary statement of facts' in relation to this very sad case:—'I am desired by the Council of the Charity Organisation Society to forward you a brief statement of their conduct in the case of the late Captain Williams. They regret that in doing this they are obliged to mention some facts that they would wish to have omitted, but the charges made against the society in the newspapers make it necessary to state certain reasons which have influenced them in their decision. Captain Williams's case was, on the 11th of April, brought under the notice of the St. Saviour's Committee of the society, by a clergyman who had several times assisted him, and who was anxious for further information. The more recent facts of the case are as follows:—In June, 1873, Captain Williams obtained a situation in an insurance company. He resigned his post in the summer of 1874 on being appointed to the Gold Coast Constabulary, from which force he was dismissed in March, 1876, for insubordination. In April, 1877, a re-engagement was offered to him by the same company on condition that he consented to pay off a sum of £18, overdrawn by him when in their employment in 1873-4. This sum they offered to deduct by easy instalments from his salary. It appears that the claim was acknowledged by him, as, before leaving for the Gold Coast, he had given an order for the amount, which was, however, not honoured, as the gentleman upon whom it was drawn had no longer any funds of Captain Williams's. There was apparently, therefore, no reason why he should not have recommenced his work at any time in April, May, or the early part of June, during which period he represented himself as being in want of immediate assistance and employment. The fact that throughout the inquiry a situation was open to Captain Williams is of itself, in the opinion of the Council, a sufficient ground for the rejection of the case. From the circumstances above stated, they have no reason to believe that a more suitable opening—always difficult to procure—would have been obtained. The society is obliged to limit its assistance to those cases in which there is a reasonable prospect of such assistance being of permanent benefit. The Council desire to express their regret that, owing to the delay in obtaining replies to letters of enquiry, the investigation was not sooner completed; and that Captain Williams was not informed at an earlier period that no assistance would be given him, though a statement that this would be the probable result was, soon after the enquiry commenced, made to the clergyman who was interested in him. In conclusion, I may say the Council deplore the circumstances of Captain Williams's untimely death; and hope that this short, but necessary, statement of facts may not cause needless pain or injury to his wife and children, whom they are sincerely anxious to assist.'"

In the Times of July 7th, the following letter also appears, which is worthy perusal:—Mr. R. Gibson Brown writes to us from 144, Brixton-road, S.W.:—"The letter from the Charity Organisation Society contains one grain of fact to two of fiction. It is true that Captain Williams was dismissed from the Gold Coast Constabulary, but when the facts are considered I do not think the public will judge his to be such a very heinous offence. After he had been there a short time, an officer, who was his junior, was sent out to take the command. This officer exercised a certain amount of harshness, which culminated in ordering Captain Williams to a very unhealthy station 200 miles up the country. Captain Williams objected on account of his health, was ordered home, and on his arrival was dismissed. After sifting very fully all the circumstances in connection with Captain Williams's character this is the darkest blot I can find upon it; and when we remember that he was in a climate in which the liver plays an important part, and that he had a large proportion of Spanish blood in his veins, we must not be surprised at the result. I do not palliate, I only extenuate. As regards the £18 alleged to have been overdrawn by him, it appears that he was in the habit of deducting his commission from the premiums he received, and no objection to his accounts was made in any way until he resigned his appointment. The secretary says 'it appears that the claim was acknowledged by him, as he had given an order for the amount which was not honoured.' I cannot better refute this than by quoting two extracts from a letter written by the gentleman (a solicitor) upon whom the order was alleged to have been drawn: 'Captain Williams certainly never drew any order on me for payment of any money to the —, nor did I ever dishonour such cheque, on the ground that I did not know him;' and further, 'I subsequently called at their office and went into the question of their alleged claim, and having come to the conclusion that it was an unjust claim and not legally due, I advised Captain Williams not to pay it, and to leave England without troubling about it; and I told the person I saw at the office that if they wanted to take any proceedings to recover the amount I would accept service for him. I heard no more about it.' The secretary says that they are sincerely anxious to assist the widow and children. We are much obliged to them; but, thanks to a generous British public, we shall be able to do without them, and they can devote the amount to some more deserving case. The following committee has been formed to administer the sums subscribed on behalf of Mrs. Williams: Dr. Cotton, Colonel Russell, Captain the Hon. R. R. Best, Mr. W. Elwyn, and myself."

Comment seems superfluous.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

TRUE CHARITY.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The Quarterly Court of Subscribers and Governors of this Institution was held last Saturday in the board-room, Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Lieut-Col. Creaton, V.P., in the chair. The other brethren who attended were Bros. J. Symonds, B. Head, T. W. White, A. H. Tattershall, G. Smith, R. W. Stewart, T. J. Sabine, J. A. Rucker, J. Terry, J. J. Berry, T. Massa, H. A. Dubois, R. B. Webster, W. Downing, W. F. Denman, A. J. Beckwith, H. Massey (Freemason), A. H. Diaper, C. F. Matier, I. Russ, F. Binckes, H. Potter, E. H. Finney, J. Blyth, W. Mann, B. Picking, W. F. C. Moutrie, P. De L. Long, and Bro. Hedges, for Bro. Little, who is, we are happy to say, recruiting his health at Bournemouth.

After the minutes had been read and confirmed, Bro. R. C. Webster brought on the motion of which he had given notice, for the admission of twenty-five to the Institution, in addition to the ten for whom there will be vacancies at the October election. He said as the new buildings for the accommodation of more girls than the 160 at present in the school were completed, or would be completed and ready for occupation long enough before the time when the candidates who would be successful at the October election were taken in, there was no reason why the additional space afforded by these new buildings should not be utilised. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart seconded the motion, as he was entirely with Bro. Webster, and wished to have the subject discussed.

The Chairman asked whether any brother had anything to say on the matter.

Bro. John Symonds said that Bro. Webster had said that the buildings would be ready for occupation. He supposed that was the case, and would ask the chairman if it was so.

The Chairman said the buildings were ready, and he believed everything would be completed by the end of September; at all events in January, which was the time for taking in the successful candidates at the October election, everything would be ready for as many children as were elected.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart observed that if that was the case, then, he thought, they should pass this resolution. He understood from the Treasurer that the funds of the Institution had come in so abundantly that the capital of the Institution had not yet been touched. That being so, it would be a great thing to meet the wants of the Craft, by admitting more children to the school. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Thos. J. Sabine said that all who took an interest in the Institution ought to support the very moderate proposition Bro. Webster had placed before the Court. He would have been quite prepared to support Bro. Webster had he proposed to admit forty additional girls; but, perhaps, it would be best, under all the circumstances, to place the number on the list that were named in the notice of motion, and at some period next year still further to increase the number, as he understood the additional accommodation which had been provided would meet the accession of a much greater number of children than were on the list. Then, again, he was quite sure, in every part of the country from whence the Institution drew those wonderful supplies which had poured in, where the brethren were looking forward to an increase in the number of children to whom the benefits of the Institution were extended, but who at present, he thought, were somewhat disappointed that the proposed increase had not been adopted earlier, the step they were proposing to take would be received with the utmost satisfaction. Carrying the present motion would be a graceful compliment to pay all those who had raised the funds, and he hoped it would be carried unanimously.

Bro. Symonds wished to know how many children in the ordinary course of events would be elected in October if Bro. Webster's motion had not been brought forward.

Bro. Hedges read the proposition on the minutes, which had been confirmed, declaring 50 candidates and ten vacancies for the October election.

Bro. H. A. Dubois asked whether he understood the chairman rightly, that the newly-elected children would be received in January. He should like to know the extreme limit of time when the House Committee would be prepared to admit them.

The Chairman said he had told the brethren already that the place would be finished so as to receive the children in January. The only question that remained was with regard to the staff being prepared for the additional number. But then there were now six months to make preparations.

Bro. J. A. Rucker was among the number of brethren who wished to see the Institution utilised to the very greatest extent; and he believed every brother was actuated by the feeling that the buildings should be occupied to their maximum receiving power with the least possible delay. But he thought that the course which was proposed by Bro. Webster would be somewhat forcing matters on. For himself he very much doubted whether the buildings would be in such a state of completeness by January as to be fit for the reception of any number whatever of children. He was opposed, and always had been opposed, to the infirmary being even temporarily used for the purposes of the school. He should have no objection at all to increase the number in the school at the proper time; but to admit them now, especially such a large number as an additional 25, at the present time, he thought would be unwise. He was desirous to see extra children in the new buildings as soon as they could reasonably be allowed to go; and the brethren might have a memorandum placed on their minutes that the children were to be received as soon as the medical officer could certify that they could with safety be housed. To load the staff with the care of an additional 35 children would be to place on them a burden which they would not be able to bear. The brethren owed a debt as much to the staff as to the children coming into the school. However, if the children were elected, whether the school was prepared to receive them or not, they must go in on a certain day. He would vote most strongly that the building should be utilised as soon as it could be done with propriety and success; but he did not think it would be fair to the staff to throw 35 additional children on their care all at once. Let the Craft know that the Institution was prepared to utilise the new building as soon as possible, but he thought there should be an intimation that it would be referred to the medical officer to say when the proper time had arrived for the new buildings to be occupied.

Bro. John Symonds would like to know what was the actual condition of the building at the present time.

At the request of the Chairman, Bro. Massa (Architect) explained that the building itself was erected, and had been so for a considerable time. It was, so to speak, dry, though not completely; but by artificial means it could be made perfectly dry, though the walls were of considerable thickness. By artificial means it could be made quite ready for habitation by January.

Bro. Symonds thought that if it was only by artificial means the building could be ready by January, Bro. Webster should modify his motion, and not tie down the House Committee to admit the additional children in January. The ten children might be admitted, because in the ordinary course of events there would be room for them, but it might be left to the discretion of the House Committee, without any detriment to the additional children, to say when afterwards they should be taken in. If they thought the buildings were quite ready in January they would admit the 25 extra children; if not, they would admit them as soon as possible afterwards. He hoped Bro. Webster would agree to this view.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, as the seconder of Bro. Webster's motion, objected to any modification of it. If the brethren proposed to take in 25 additional children, let it be a bona-fide thing, and not encumbered with any qualification. There were six months yet for the staff to get prepared, and the Architect and the Chairman said the building itself would be ready.

Bro. A. H. Tattershall moved as an amendment to Bro. Webster's motion "That vacancies for ten children more than those recommended at the last meeting of the General Committee be declared in October next, making altogether 20 children to be elected, and that the number so elected be received into the Institution so soon as the House Committee is prepared to receive them." Bro. Tattershall said he thoroughly endorsed all the remarks which had been made by Bro. Rucker.

Bro. Benj. Head seconded the amendment. The addition of 25 children all at once was too much for the staff, and too much for anybody. Let additional children be taken on by ten at a time. No doubt it was desirable to take them on as fast as possible, but he thought that it might be done by adding ten at each election.

The amendment being put by the Chairman there were but nine hands held up in its favour, while the supporters of "the contrary" were numerous.

Bro. Symonds, before Bro. Webster's motion was put, proposed as a rider "Or as soon thereafter as the House Committee can conveniently admit them."

Bro. H. A. Dubois seconded the addition.

Bro. Sabine opposed it, as this would be to hand over the powers of the Governors to the House Committee. If the House Committee did not think in January that the buildings were ready, there was a Quarterly Court on the second Saturday in the month (which was earlier than the day appointed for taking in the candidates), and if the House Committee came to the Court for authority to postpone the receiving day, the Court would give them power to postpone it.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart was surprised to find the House Committee raising any objections. He fully expected that they would have done their utmost to meet the wishes of the Quarterly Court.

Bro. Webster's motion was then put and carried, and the meeting closed with the usual compliment to the Chairman.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The Quarterly Court of the Governors and Subscribers of this Institution was held on Monday last, in the Board-room, Freemasons' Hall. Bro. John Symonds, Vice-patron, presided, and the other brethren present were Bros. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, Col. Creaton, H. Massey, (Freemason), Capt. J. Wordsworth, W. F. C. Moutrie, C. F. Matier, J. Terry, F. Adlard, W. Roebuck, and F. Binckes, (Sec.)

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, The Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, in reference to the report of the House Committee on the subject of affording increased accommodation at the School at Wood Green, said he wished to say a few words. With all submission, to the Chairman, it appeared to him that the brethren had been getting a little out of order with regard to the way in which they had been transacting their business. It had been referred to the House Committee to consider the subject of extension, and the Committee were to report to the Quarterly Court through the General Committee. The report had been made and submitted to the General Committee; but what this Court had to consider was, had the House Committee reported to the Quarterly Court. At the last Quarterly Court it was stated that there was no report before it. But the brethren had just heard read from the minutes that the General Committee, without any reference to the Quarterly Court, had remitted the report to the House Committee for further consideration, and by so doing had hung up the report for three months. Now, he submitted that in doing so the General Committee had exceeded its powers. The House Committee was directed to report through the General Committee to the Quarterly Court, and therefore with the Quarterly Court rested the ultimate consideration of the matter. The General Committee had, no doubt with good intentions, dealt with the matter as an ultimate court of appeal, and had ordered the report to be printed and referred it back again to the House Committee. The proper course, in his humble opinion, would have been for the General Committee to have passed it on to the Quarterly Court with such remarks as it thought fit. The only body to deal with the report was the Quarterly Court, and through its not having been submitted to them they were the only body which knew nothing of the report. It had been printed and circulated as "The report of the House Committee," but it had never yet come before the Quarterly Court at all. With all deference he thought it was a very informal way of doing the business. He had had something to do with societies of various kinds, but he had never known a subordinate committee take upon itself a power which belonged to the superior body. If the report was not complete it might, after being sent to the Quarterly Court, have been referred back through the General Committee to the House Committee. Bro. Raynham W. Stewart proposed, and, he himself, seconded, the motion which referred the subject to the House Committee; and he could tell the brethren why they put in that portion directing the report to be sent through the General Committee. They might have referred it to the General Committee, but they considered that the House Committee had more practical information about the building. It would not have been in order for the House Committee to have reported direct to the Quarterly Court, and, therefore, they took the courteous course of having it reported through the General Committee. The Quarterly Court which referred the matter to the House Committee never intended the General Committee should have the arbitrament of the whole question. As he had said before, he thought the proceedings had been rather informal, and he ventured to submit that the attention of the General Committee should be called to the fact that the report ought to be sent through them to the Quarterly Court.

The Chairman said that as he understood the question at the last Quarterly Court, the House Committee did not consider it their definite report. They had brought it before the General Committee somewhat informally, perhaps, and the General Committee had ordered it to be printed. But it was thought by the General Committee, and by the House Committee themselves, that the House Committee had power to reconsider the report, and it was on that ground it did not come before the last Quarterly Court. It now occurred to him, in point of fact, that the whole matter was somewhat informal. The reference from the Quarterly Court to the House Committee (who were not appointed by the Quarterly Court) was out of order. The Quarterly Court should have directed the General Committee to instruct the House Committee to make the report. He did not think because there was that amount of informality it would justify this Court taking notice of what the General Committee had done, or of what the House Committee had done in not reporting definitely to the Court. As he understood, the House Committee did not consider their report final. The General Committee had thought the report should be printed and circulated, but for all that the report was in abeyance, having been referred back to the House Committee. The objection came a little too late. The report was to have been brought forward at last Quarterly Court, but having been sent back to the House Committee there was no report then to submit to the Quarterly Court.

The Rev. A. F. A. Woodford said the brethren were in a great difficulty at the last Quarterly Court. He pressed the matter, and the brethren were told there was no report whatever. The minutes of the General Committee which mentioned the report were only read for information, and no report was submitted. The report was simply to the General Committee. Six months had now elapsed since the resolution of the Quarterly Court, and there was no report before it, and he thought a report ought to be sent directly to the Quarterly Court. Let them remember what the resolution was. The House Committee were to recommend. They had not done anything of the kind; they had reported to the General Committee, which had nothing to do with the matter, and the General Committee had authorised Bro. Binckes to have the report printed and circulated.

Bro. Binckes said the report was simply a tentative report. The House Committee declined to take any responsibility upon themselves, as the report stated. They said there was a power of extension, and a capability of extension, if the Craft would give the brethren the amount to do it with. The amount was estimated and named, and the General Committee thought the amount too large to be laid out at the present time. They said "Wait and see what is the result of the festival, and what funds we have at our disposal." When he reported the result of the festival to the General Committee on Saturday week it was said that something could be done to increase the building to some extent for the admission for another 14, 15, or 20 boys. The House Committee were asked to consider their report, and it would be read at the meeting of the House Committee on Friday next (yesterday). The House Committee would then consider the matter, and make a report, and that report would go to the Quarterly Court in October. The thing was as simple as it possibly could be.

The Chairman thought that if it was understood that the last report was only in abeyance, it ought not to have been printed and circulated among the Craft generally.

Bro. Binckes said the House Committee were bound to embody their views in the report, and they did so, and they said they would not incur the responsibility of enlarging the school until the Craft gave them the power. It was with the intention of obtaining assistance from the Craft that the report was circulated.

The Chairman observed that the report was withdrawn, so to speak, and the House Committee would, on next Friday (yesterday), take the subject afresh into their consideration; after which they would report to the General Committee, and perhaps a Special Court would be summoned to consider it. He would venture to make a suggestion now to Bro. Binckes that he made some time ago, that whenever a Special Court was summoned to consider the report they should endeavour to obtain the presidency of Bro. Plucknett, the Treasurer, whose practical views on the subject of the extension of the building would be found to be very valuable, and they should try to fix the Special Court at a time that would suit his convenience.

Bro. Binckes said that Bro. Plucknett was ex-officio a member of the House Committee.

After a short general discussion on the subject of the report, the matter dropped, on the understanding expressed by Bro. Binckes.

The list of candidates for next election was then brought forward, and after some debate the list was settled at 63—nine to be elected.

The next business was to consider the subject of a testimonial to Mrs. J. B. Monckton, in recognition of her services to the Institution in the amateur performances lately given, by which a large sum of money was divided between the Boys' and Girls' Schools.

Col. Creaton moved, "That in the opinion of this Court it is desirable that a testimonial, in recognition of the services of Mrs. J. B. Monckton, should be presented from this Institution."

The Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, seconded the motion, which was then put to the meeting, and carried unanimously.

Col. Creaton also moved, "That it be referred to a sub-committee of three brethren, with power to communicate with any sub-committee that may be appointed by a General Committee of the Girls' School, to consider as to the nature of such testimonial, and to report thereon, through the General Committee, to a Quarterly Court."

The Rev. A. F. A. Woodford seconded this motion also.

The motion having been carried, Colonel Creaton, Capt. John Wordsworth, and Bro. Benjamin Head were appointed the special committee on the subject.

Colonel Creaton moved—"That in acknowledgment of the zeal and energy so successfully exerted by Bro. John Constable, P.M. No. 185, in connection with the recent festival, the result being an addition to the funds of £1226, he be enrolled as an Hon. Vice-Patron, with the full privileges of that rank." He said that very few words from him would suffice to tell the brethren, for they all knew, what Bro. John Constable had done for the Institution. Part of what he had done was communicated to the brethren in the words of this motion, of which notice had been given. His services had been very valuable, and he was entitled to some recognition of them.

Bro. W. Roebuck seconded the motion. He had seen Bro. Constable several times in Masonry; and he could say that a more energetic and hard working brother he had never met with.

The motion having been put and carried unanimously, a vote of thanks was passed to the Chairman, and the brethren separated.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Bad Legs.—Any unnatural discharge from the skin is at all times disagreeable, but in hot weather it becomes irritating—sometimes offensive. Bad legs, old wounds, scrofula, and scrofulous eruptions are cooled, soothed, and cured by Holloway's ointment. It at once arrests all diseases of the surface by purifying and regulating the circulation in their neighbourhood, by giving energy to the nerves of the affected part, and by expelling all poisonous and noxious matters. It ejects the seeds of all virulent eruptions and ulcerations, and thus cures a partial or temporary bony, but a complete and permanent cure. By means of these remedies all sufferers may aim at attaining health, and will invariably succeed.—ADVT.

SLIGHT* SCIENCE FOR LEISURE HOURS.

By Our "V.P.C."
Series I; Vol I; Part I; No. I."He is the oft the wisest man, Who is not wise at all."

That's Me! as I often tell Jones. Yes! I mean "Me" and not "I," for although I don't want to "trench" on the worthy Archbishop's (not Felton's) specialité I think I do know something of my "Word's worth," and I maintain that a good round solid "Me" describes me far better mentally as well as physically than a poor meagre "I." Not that, as a rule, I attach much importance to mere words, for although "words are wise men's counters"—but that savours of "shop," so I'll c'en go back to my "Muttons," as we said "abroad," where I used to take my Watts's walks—no, I mean works. Let me see, I was talking about what I said to Jones, who was always urging me to write a book. "You know, old fellow, what a splendid degree you've got—'pages of low degree'—nay volumes, why don't you write what you know?" "Well" I've always said, "and what if I have, is that any reason why I should be bothered with those critic fellows who are eternally cockroaching (no! I'm thinking of crickets), I mean encroaching—on the inmost recesses of our hearths—hearts I should have said." Jones always teases me, I believe out of spite, on account of the letters I am entitled to put after my name, and the way I got them was this. Some months ago a most learned American was lecturing at our Institute upon the Psycho-Zoe and Cooke-Maskylenic Spiritualistic Transmutation of Biologic Metals, and selected me out of the numerous and enlightened audience to assist him in his demonstrations. His astounding experiments were a complete success, especially one that he said was a proof that gold was a good circulating medium, in which five sovereigns that I lent him were put into a sand and water bath connected with a galvanic battery. When I could get my hands out again we found that all the gold of the sovereigns had been absorbed in the bath, and there was nothing left but a small, residuum like quicksilver (not half so rapid by the way as the gold), which the professor demonstrated to the satisfaction of the audience to be the alloy out of the sovereigns. Of course they had gone, but at the close of the lecture the professor conferred on me, (on behalf of his University), in consequence of my evidently scientific proclivities, the degree of D.U.F.F.E.R. ("Doctor of the Universal Fraternity of Free and Enlightened Rurality.") However, if it's only to spite Jones I've determined to commit to paper some of my observations of the Science of Nature. Now, although I know something of Nature (not that I am a "natural"—much obliged, "O.P.D.," for the suggestion), I had some misgivings about the Science, and so I asked my old friend Robinson how to acquire a little, when he promised to introduce me to a well-known Professor.

Accordingly the other night I put on a spread in my own private sanctum (my "library" or "study" I call it indiscriminately. Mrs. P. Pry-Smith speaks of it most disrespectfully as "Yours going, I suppose, into your—Pough!" this as through the opening door she catches a whiff of the incense of my best Virginia. Our domestic "genius" talks of it as "Marsurshum"). In this blissful abode then of Science and Smoke, at a table laid for three, sit Jack Robinson, Professor Konx, and your humble servant myself. After supper we are to have the first preliminary lesson in "Science," of which Jack says the professor is a master—"practical, you know," says he—"knows how to double you up before you can utter my name." The professor has brought a bag of apparatus with him, with which I am to be instructed in the preliminaries; this, which Robinson most irreverently calls "his tackle," the professor won't allow me to see as yet. "Harter supper, Sir," he says "Harter supper, not afoore." "Strange that the professor should have such an odd, not to say vulgar, way of pronouncing his words," I remark aside to Jack. "Sh.!" he says, "its only his modesty; trying to bring himself down to the meanest capacity." So I am content, but anxious to begin my studies, although I must say I can't help feeling certain qualms much like I did on the night that I was in—, but there's the bell, and "Pleasant Bwoyurwaitun," says Rosinella-Susan. It's "O.P.D.," and as I know our "Headman" I daren't keep him a moment, so I can only stay now to say that he, i.e., the "Headman," is like

Inexorable Fate, with her snapping shears,
From the swift distaffs which hurtle,
Cuts off the thread of my innocent discourse,
Like the jaws of a snapping-turtle.

There's Archaeological Science and "Natural" History combined; but wait patiently for the professor's lecture, for this is

The grants of last meeting which required confirmation (£70) were first confirmed; after which the brethren proceeded with the consideration of the new cases, of which there were twenty on the list. After a long sitting, eighteen of these were relieved with the total sum of £274, consisting of two of £30 each (£60); six of £20 each (£120); three of £15 each (£45); four of £10 each (£40); one of £5 (£5); and two of £2 each (£4).

The Lodge of Benevolence was then closed.

Reviews.

"Tales, Poems, and Masonic Papers," By Bro. EMRA HOLMES.—Stokesley: Tweddell and Sons.

We have received this little work, and hasten to call the attention of our readers to it, having perused it with pleasure and profit ourselves. It may be well first of all to give its "raison d'être."

Bro. Emra Holmes (a well-known member of the Civil Service and of our Order) has long been popular as a public lecturer and reader, generously giving his services to the mental improvement of others in various parts of England. He has also, for several years past, been favourably known as a contributor to the metropolitan and provincial press; but his "Tales, Poems, and Masonic Papers" have hitherto been so scattered through a variety of magazines and newspapers, that many of his admirers have expressed a wish to see a collection of them published in neat and handy volumes, each forming a complete book in itself. To meet this desire a selection of the best of these contributions is now being offered to the subscribers; Bro. Holmes kindly proposing to present any pecuniary profit that may be derived from the publication of these volumes to a brother Mason who has been unexpectedly plunged into poverty in the declining years of his life, and who, we betray no secret in saying, is Bro. G. M. Tweddell, of Stokesley.

Thus our readers will note that this literary venture is also an effort of fraternal kindness to a less fortunate brother Mason, and, we may observe, that a Masonic memoir of the author has been written specially for the work by Bro. G. M. Tweddell, author of "Shakespeare, his Times and Contemporaries," "The Bards and Authors of Cleveland and South Devon," &c., &c., which adds much to its interest and completeness.

We can cordially recommend the volume to our readers, not only because it is likely to be the means of aiding a deserving, if suffering brother, but, also, because the stories and poetry reflect credit on the taste and talent of our zealous Bro. Emra Holmes. He is well known to many of our readers as a very frequent contributor to the pages of the Masonic Magazine, and occasionally to the Freemason, and we are all aware also, that his writings display not only literary powers far above the average, but bespeak a considerable amount of "geist" and culture, a power of winning the attention and attracting the interest of his readers. Alike in prose and poetry he commands both a facile and a correct pen, and we may fairly assert that his works are full of promise of even better and greater things to come. We would call on all our brothers who are wishful to encourage a Masonic writer, and help a worthy brother, to purchase the little work. It is a very good half-crown's worth, indeed, notwithstanding that we live in an age of cheap literature and countless publications. We also wish to add that the work is well printed and neatly got up.

Any orders sent to Tweddell and Sons, Publishers, Stokesley, Yorkshire, will be gladly and promptly attended to.

THE CRUSADERS LODGE (No. 1677).—The members of this new lodge, the consecration of which we fully reported on June 23, held an emergency meeting on Wednesday, the 18th inst, the following brethren being present: Bros. Jarvis Maples, W.M.; Dr. W. J. Hunter, J.W.; F. Rothschild, J.D.; Davis, I.G.; J. S. Knight, D.C.; A. Millward, W.S.; W. C. Gay; Cummings, S. S. Bacca, Manns, J. D. Loverdo, F. Goode, W. Goode, Taylor, Stuckall, and J. G. Defriez, Sec. This lodge is much to be congratulated on the success it has already achieved. The want of a new lodge in Clerkenwell has been long felt and several energetic brethren, after a great deal of preliminary discussion, necessary upon an undertaking of this sort, constituted themselves as founders, and petitioned Grand Lodge for a warrant. The simple fact that, prior to the grant of the warrant, there were on the lists fifteen candidates, demonstrates sufficiently that a new lodge was really needed, and that the founders have rendered a service to Freemasonry in establishing the Crusaders Lodge. The members are also to be congratulated upon the place they have chosen for their new lodge. No spot could possibly be more appropriate than St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell, an edifice as full of historical associations as it is unique in London. It is the only relic of the Priory of St. John of Jerusalem, the members of which, the famous Knights Hospitallers, are so closely identified with the history of the Crusades. This society was founded in the year 1100, by Gordan Bristet and Muriel his wife, persons of rank, and received its consecration from Heraclius, Patriarch of Jerusalem. Meek and humble at first, they soon became arrogant and proud. They received vast endowments and the great riches they enjoyed infected their manners and mode of living. They had as many as 19,000 manors in different parts of Christendom. In the beginning of the 14th century the immense revenues of the English Knights Templars were bestowed on them, and this increased their importance to such a degree that the prior assumed the dignity of "first baron of England." So widespread was the knowledge of their luxury that the rebels, headed by Wat Tyler, burnt the priory to the ground, only however, to rise again in greater splendour. As is well known, the property of this great society was confiscated by Henry VII., the last prior, Sir William Weston, receiving a pension of £1000 a year. The vicissitudes of "The Gate" have been many. Sylvanus Urban made it his home and printing office, and from here was issued the first number of the Gentleman's Magazine, Johnson, Goldsmith, Burke, Reynolds, Garrick and others were frequently the guests of Mr. Urban at "The Gate," where some of them wrote their contributions to the Magazine. The place was afterwards neglected until it fell into the hands of Mr. Ben Foster, a man of considerable archaeological and literary attainments, who improved its condition, and made it the centre of some excellent literary societies, as well as Masonic lodges. The Urban Lodge, and the Urban Club, hold their meetings here, and now the Crusaders Lodge has found a home within the walls of the ancient and venerable building. The chief business of the evening of the 18th inst. was to initiate the following gentlemen: Messrs. Thos. M. K. Gilbert, William F. Garrad, Samuel Rushton, M. Moorhouse and B. Jackson. The balloting being in their favour they were regularly initiated into our mysteries, the ceremony having been very ably performed by the W.M., who was efficiently assisted by his officers. The bye-laws were then read and passed with the exception of the initiation fee, which was raised from five to seven guineas. The lodge closed, the brethren adjourned to the hall, where a supper was prepared by Bro. W. C. Gay. The usual loyal toasts were proposed by the W.M., the brethren responding musically. The toast of "The Initiates," then followed and the W.M. remarked that it would be useless for him to dilate at any length upon their merits, as they were all well known to the Crusaders. At the same time he would add his testimony to the excellent recommendations given by the proposers and seconders, by expressing his confidence and reliance as to the high character borne by each initiate. He hoped they would all endeavour to the best of their ability so to distinguish themselves as Masons that their appointment to the chair he had the privilege to occupy, a position which must for ever be regarded as the blue ribbon of all Masons, would be but the natural reward of their labours and the sweet fruit of their endeavours for the preservation, continuance and glory of Masonry. The initiates responded to the effect that they were grateful to the W.M. for the kind expressions he made use of, and also to the Crusaders for the honour they conferred upon them by electing them as members. They would always use their best endeavours to prove worthy of the confidence reposed in them and of one day rising to the exalted post so honourably occupied by the W.M. Bro. Rushton added that for a long time it had been his ardent desire to join the ranks of Freemasonry, and hearing that a new lodge was to be established in his neighbourhood he immediately expressed his wish to Bro. Dr. Hunter, his proposer, to belong to it. He was thoroughly impressed with the solemn beauty of the ceremony through which he had to go, and although he was not as yet in a position to say much with regard to Freemasonry, yet he had seen enough to induce him to believe that it is an institution eminently calculated to promote the welfare and happiness of mankind. The health of the W.M. was feelingly proposed by Bro. Defriez, and was suitably responded to by the W.M. The next toast was that of "The Visitors," to which Bros. Manns, Loverdo, and Bacca replied. The toast of "The Officers" then followed, the W.M. passing a high eulogium upon them for the very able manner in which they performed their duties. This well-merited tribute was received with great applause. Some very excellent music was given during the evening by Bros. A. Millward, Rushton, Knight, Jackson, Rothschild and Davis, the last of whom created great laughter by the humorous mimicry with which he delivered an Irish song by Lover. The Tyler's toast brought to a close a very interesting, very pleasant, and, in all respects, an exceedingly harmonious evening.

WOOLWICH.—Nelson Lodge (No. 700).—The last of a series of brilliant gatherings in this district took place at the Masonic Hall, William-street, on Wednesday, the 18th inst., the occasion being the installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. S. Waters, into the chair of the abbe lodge, and truly the universal verdict "magnificent," pronounced by all who heard Bro. T. Butt, W.M., install his successor may be recorded in the annals of the Nelson Lodge as evidence of a triumph of studious research, and unflinching decision; not a word or action was omitted that could bring the beautiful sentiments of that superb ritual home to the hearts of his hearers, but vividly and pathetically eloquent; Bro. Butt went through his work to the end, and hearty and spontaneous was the applause that greeted him when he for the first time took his seat on the left of the chair. Among the brethren present were Bros. R. Russell, P.M. 299, and P.P.D.C. Kent; G. Spinks, W.M. 1536; W. Gamble, W.M. 706; W. Steel, W.M. 1472; J. Dorton, W.M. 1076; W. B. Holliday, P.M. 1076; J. White, S.W. 1076; F. Brien, J.W. 1076; Manning, S.W. 1472; W. B. Lloyd, J.W. 913; T. Hutton, J.W. 13; A. Jessup, Treas. 913; H. Balls, 77; E. Farwig, 180; G. R. Nichols, 1567; C. Jolly, (Freemason) 913; and others. The following Past Masters of the lodge were also present: J. Rowland, G. Crawford, F. G. Dawson, W. Graham, E. Bowles, S. Goddard, C. Norman, C. M. Hobson, and J. Henderson. The lodge having been opened and the minutes of the last meeting confirmed, Messrs. Wright and Harris were, after approval, initiated into Freemasonry; and Bro. Epsom passed to the Second Degree. Bro. Waters was then initiated with the usual ceremonies, and duly honoured; Bro. Butt, as before observed, filling the position of Installing Officer. Bro. Waters then invested his officers, as follows: A. Woodley, S.W.; J. Warren, J.W.; C. M. Hobson, P.M.; Treas. J. Henderson, P.M.; Sec. J. Wilkins, S.D.; E. B. Hobson, J. D.; W. M'Goy, I.G.; G. Beaver, D.C.; and B. Norman, Tyler. The addresses having been delivered, it was proposed by Bro. Butt, I.P.M., and seconded by Bro. W. Graham, P.M., that the sum of ten guineas each be given to the Boys and Girls School Charities, and carried unanimously. Bro. Butt was then presented with a handsome Past Master's jewel and it was resolved that a vote of thanks be presented to him, and that the same be inscribed upon the minutes of the lodge, for his masterly performance of the installation ceremony that day. After Bro. Butt had returned thanks, the lodge was closed, and the brethren sped away to Gravesend, where at Bro. Lodgey's house, "The New Falcon," a superb banquet awaited them, splendidly served and in profusion. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were honoured most cordially, and in proposing that of the W.M., Bro. Butt compared him to a ship captain just about to sail forth upon the broad ocean, his craft freighted with many cares and responsibilities, but they one and all wished him a safe and prosperous voyage, and that when once again he returned into port, might he be loaded with all that was good and creditable both to himself and his owners, the brethren of the Nelson Lodge. They had seen Bro. Waters in the minor offices, and from what he knew of him he believed Bro. Waters would faithfully and honourably carry out the duties of the office in which they had placed him. (Applause.) Bro. Waters briefly replied, asking them to help him to carry out his duties, and assuring them of his sincere desire for their prosperity and comfort. "The Health of the Initiates" followed, and was responded to severally. The toast of "The Visitors" was responded to by Bros. Gamble, Spinks, Hutton, Jessup, Farwig, and Pillar. Bro. Spinks saying that it was a matter of hearty congratulation that so good a feeling existed between the United Military Lodge and the Nelson. At the winter banquet of the latter he could not help noticing that a large number of the guests were military brethren, and upon enquiry he found that, with but few exceptions, they were individual invitations from the Nelson brethren. That would at least show that a close bond of social union existed between the brethren of the two lodges. (Loud cheers.) Bro. Butt excused himself from replying for the "Past Masters," having been such a short time among them that he hardly knew or felt the responsibilities of the office yet; but they had among them an old Past Master, who would speak for them from the experience of many years. He alluded to their senior Past Master, Bro. J. Rowland. (Cheers.) Bro. Rowland said the Past Masters looked upon the chair with a deal of jealousy. It was a position they had all filled with credit, and they wished to see the Masterahip of the Nelson Lodge retain its ancient prestige in the person of good men and good Masons. (Cheers.) The brother who had just vacated it had added, if possible, new honour to it by his firm and determined, yet courteous rule. (Applause.) The incoming Master they felt sure would never suffer those glories to grow dim; and when his day shall have come, they would welcome him among their ranks with the same pleasure they had that day received the I.M. (Loud cheers.) To the toast of "The Officers" Bro. Woodley briefly responded. The W.M. then gave the toast of "The Masonic Press," coupled with the name of Bro. Jolly, who he said had by his reports made their lodge known all over the world. The toast was most enthusiastically received, and Bro. Jolly returned thanks, and then the Tyler's toast wound up the meeting. Several of the brethren on their way from the Grand Provincial R.A. meeting at Chatham gave a call, and were received with ecclat, notably Bros. Coupland, Pownall, Denton, Penfold, and Hayes, all of whom are of eminence both in the Province of Kent and Woolwich District.

LIVERPOOL.—Everton Lodge (No. 823).—

The members of this "crack" lodge, which is one of the most numerous and flourishing amongst the strong representatives of eighty in the Province of West Lancashire, met on Wednesday for the purpose of assisting at the installation of the W.M., elect, which took place at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool. The popularity of the W.M. elect (Bro. John Houlding), the respected vice-chairman of the West Derby Board of Guardians, the ecclat which has marked the year's office of Bro. Wm. Wilson, the retiring W.M., and the prestige which rightfully belongs to the "Everton" were clearly shown by a large and most influential attendance of visitors, among whom were a good sprinkling of P.G.L. officers. John Houlding as W.M. for the ensuing year. The major part of the ceremony was performed by Bro. Wilson, in a masterly manner, the concluding portion being entrusted to Bro. W. Boulton, P.M. The following were invested by Bro. Houlding as his staff of officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. W. Wilson, I.P.M.; H. Ashmore, S.W.; J. S. Cuthbert, J.W.; W. J. Jones, P.M. 216; J. Busfield, 216; and T. J. Hughes, 216; Bro. J. Skeaf, P.G. Organist, presiding at the harmonium. As the first act of his official year in the chair, Bro. Houlding, W.M., initiated several candidates in a manner which clearly indicated the experience and aptitude which he brought to bear on his important position. At the close of this section of the business, a valuable P.M.'s jewel, along with a handsome clock and bronze figure en suite, were presented to Bro. Wilson, I.P.M., as a token of the esteem of the brethren and in recognition of the excellent services he had rendered to the lodge during his Mastership, and also while he had held various offices in the lodge. The good wishes of numerous lodges were conveyed to the W.M., there being a large representation of brethren connected with the West Derby Board of Guardians, of which Bro. Houlding is the Vice-Chairman. The brethren subsequently banqueted under the presidency of the W.M., and the usual loyal, Masonic, and charitable toasts were given and responded to during the evening. In continuation of the celebration of the festival of St. John, the Evertonians and their fair friends held their annual picnic on the following day (Thursday), within the grounds of Hawarden Castle, which, by the kindness of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M.P., were most courteously thrown open for the special occasion. A special train, starting from Lime-street shortly before ten o'clock, conveyed about 250 to the scene of the day's festivities, and the outers were increased by the arrival of others at a later stage of the day's pleasant proceedings. The weather looked rather threatening, but, beyond one or two slight showers, there was nothing in this direction to mar the complete enjoyment of the Everton picnic. On arriving at Queen's Ferry, specially hired vehicles conveyed a large section of the party to Hawarden, while others preferred to walk the pleasant two-mile road which led them to the village. Amongst those present were Bros. J. Houlding, W.M. of the lodge; W. J. Lunt, P.M.; Treas.: T. Ashmore, P.M.; W. Boulton, P.M., D.C.; W. Cottrell, P.M.; T. Shaw, P.M.; W. Wilson, I.P.M.; nearly the whole of the officers, and a large representation from other lodges, including Bros. H. Liversage, 1299; E. Dutch, 1393; J. Jones, P.M. 216; and others. According to previous custom, on arriving at the prettily situated village of Hawarden, the ladies and brethren proceeded to the church, where all joined in singing "The Old Hundredth," Bro. J. Jones, P.M. 216, presiding at the organ. The Rev. Stephen Edward Gladstone, rector of the parish, who kindly granted the use of the sacred edifice for this appropriate portion of the day's proceedings, was present, and at the close of the short service of praise, he gave a brief address to those who had assembled. He said they would not expect from him in that place the fuller and more cordial greeting which he would otherwise have given them to Hawarden, but in God's name he welcomed them to that place, and in God's name he was able to assure them that the praises which had been sung that morning, if from the heart would be heard in heaven. They had come to that place of worship to sanctify the proceedings of the day, and he need not say that by that act of worship they all intended the day should be one of holy pleasure. Pleasure had two aspects; it had its earthly and temporal aspect, and it had also its heavenly and joyous aspect. If the people of this world had only the wisdom to see that true pleasure was to be found in the latter aspect, the earth would be a far purer place than it is. In God's name he greeted them in His house, and he rejoiced that they had commenced the day in that becoming manner. The service was closed with prayer by the reverend speaker. The party then left the church and proceeded to a large tent erected within the castle grounds, where dinner was served. In the afternoon the ladies and gentlemen had the privilege of going through the grounds of Hawarden Castle, and by the kindness of Mr. Gladstone the private green within the ruins was placed at the disposal of the pleasure seekers. Bro. Captain Vickers, the agent of Mr. Gladstone, was present during the afternoon, and did all in his power to promote the enjoyment of all who were present. An inspection of the ruins, which included the magnificent view from the summit, a glance at the wonderful subterranean passage leading to Ewloe Castle, a ramble through the grounds with their magnificent trees and walks, and a visit to the orphan asylum, which is one of the special features of Mrs. Gladstone's benevolence in the neighbourhood, constituted the chief features of a most enjoyable visit to Hawarden Castle. Dancing on the green in the old castle ruins was also kept up till about five o'clock, when the Evertonians returned to tea in the tent at the village. The return train started from Queen's Ferry about half-past eight o'clock, and arrived in Liverpool shortly before ten o'clock.

LIVERPOOL.—Prince of Wales Lodge (No. 1035).—The annual picnic in connection with the Prince of Wales Lodge, which meets at the Masonic Hall, Kirkdale, Liverpool, took place on Wednesday, the 18th inst. The brethren, with their lady friends, left Exchange Station shortly before noon for Rufford, where a substantial dinner was provided by Bro. Ashcroft, at the Hesketh Arms Hotel. The travellers afterwards adjourned to the park, where, by the kind permission of Sir Thos. Fermor-Hesketh, Bart., they spent a pleasant afternoon in going over the grounds, conservatories, &c., and in dancing to the strains of the police band, conducted by Mr. Beardhall. Bro. Willis, W.M., presided at the dinner, and was supported by the Past Masters and officers of the lodge. The brethren, after a substantial tea, spent the evening in various amusements, and returned to town, after spending a most enjoyable day. It was generally acknowledged that this was one of the most successful of the Prince of Wales picnics.

SANDGATE.—Sandgate Lodge (No. 1436).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Sandgate, on Monday, the 9th inst. The officers present were Bros. R. H. Pledge, W.M.; F. H. Field, S.W. and W.M. elect; A. Keeler, J.W.; J. Dickson, S.D.; B. Simmonds, J.D.; J. Cain, I.G.; R. Butcher, Tyler; also Bros. R. H. Fynmore, I.P.M.; C. Gosby, P.M., P.G.S.B.; E. Sheppard, P.M.P., District Gd. D. Madras; J. English, P.M.; J. Bray, J. McGonagill, T. Moore, R. W. Duncan, J. Hodgson, J. McGovern, F. Norris, C. Grimwood, T. G. Lockyer, A. Keeler, J. Syson, and J. B. Candell. Visitors: Bros. Spencer, P.G. Sec.; R. White, P.M. 1331, P.P.G.P. Hants and Isle of Wight; L. Earnshaw, W.M. 558, P.P.G.J.D.; Kennett, 558, P.P.G.O.; Stock, P.M. 558, P.P.G.S.W.; Evenden, W.M. 125; W. H. Hoad, Andrews, Klatt, Tiffen, Josephs, 558; Busby, Cullen, Minnie, Noakes, 1043; Steele, 177; Pulley, Elms, 1201; Sneeby, and several others. The business of the meeting was the initiation of Mr. A. Taylor, passing Bro. Grimwood, and installation of the W.M. elect. The ceremony of initiation and passing was ably performed by the retiring W.M., Bro. R. H. Pledge, after which Bro. F. H. Field, S.W. and J.W., of 558 and 1331, was presented for the benefit of installation. After the customary obligations had been made, all brethren below the rank of Installed Masters retired. A Board of Installed Masters was then formed (there being eleven present), when Bro. Field was duly inducted in the chair of K.S., the ceremony of installation being performed by Bro. R. White, P.M. 1331, P.P.G.P. Hants and Isle of Wight, and it has seldom fallen to our lot to witness the ceremony so ably and impressively performed. The brethren below the chair were then re-admitted, when Bro. Field was successively declared W.M. of the Sandgate Lodge for the ensuing twelve months. The W.M. then invested his officers as follows, viz.: Bros. R. H. Pledge, I.P.M.; Adam Heeler, S.W.; J. Dickson, J.W.; R. Jenner, P.M., Treas.; Gosby, P.M., Sec.; J. B. Caudell, S.D.; J. McGonagill, J.D.; J. Hodgson, I.G.; and Butcher, Tyler, accompanying each investiture with a few appropriate remarks. The Installing Master then delivered the customary addresses, which met with unwonted applause from the brethren present. Heartly good wishes having been offered by the visiting brethren, the lodge was closed about five p.m. The brethren, to the number of 51, then adjourned to Bro. A. Keeler's, Kent Hotel, where a most recherche banquet had been provided in a spacious marquee on the lawn, facing the sea. After substantial justice had been rendered at the banquet table, the W.M. rose to propose the toasts, the whole of which were prefaced by a few apt remarks. In reply to the toast of the Prov. Grand Officers, Bro. Spencer, P.G.S., stated, in responding, that it was very gratifying to see such an important gathering in so young a lodge. He was sure that every brother present gave the Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Viscount Holmesdale, credit for having the true interests of Masonry at heart. Never on any occasion did he omit forwarding anything which tended to benefit Masonry, especially in the province of Kent, but he thought it as well to state that he could but repeat the words of the P.G.M., that Masonry having received such a stimulus through the Royal patronage, it behoved the brethren to be especially careful whom they recommended for admission into Freemasonry. The province was now in a flourishing condition—good men and true ranged under its banners—and it was incumbent on the masters of all lodges to exercise the utmost care to preserve the tone of the Order, so that it might not be entered with a view to personal benefit or self-aggrandisement on the part of new initiates, but rather in conformity with the tenets of the Craft, each candidate having a sincere wish to render himself more extensively useful to his fellow creatures. On behalf of the Prov. Grand Officers, he thanked the brethren present very heartily for the kind manner in which the toast had been proposed and coupled with his name. The toasts of The Installing Master, P. Masters, W.M., Officers, Visitors, Masonic Charities, &c., having been severally proposed and responded to, the Tyler's toast brought a very enjoyable evening to a close about 10 p.m.

TWICKENHAM.—Francis Burdett Lodge (No. 1503).—The summer meeting of this highly prosperous lodge was held on the 11th inst. at the Albany Hotel. There were present, amongst others, at the opening of the lodge, Bros. C. Horsley, P.P.G.R. of Middlesex, who officiated in the unavoidable absence of Bro. W. H. Saunders, P.G.S. of Surrey, W.M.; S. H. Knaggs, S.W.; Court, J.W.; Tomlinson, P.P.G.S.D. of Norfolk, Treas.; Taylor, S.D.; Vaughan, J.D.; Court, jun., Asst. Org. The I.P.M. and Sec., Bro. Wigginton, P.G.S. of Wks. Middlesex, was present later in the evening. Bro. Buckland, P.M. Dobie, &c., was a visitor. The minutes of the last regular meeting and an emergency meeting of June 11th were read and confirmed. The principal officers present on the latter occasion were Bros. Saunders, W.M.; Knaggs, S.W.; Court, J.W.; Wigginton, I.P.M. and Sec.; Tomlinson, Treas.; Taylor, S.D.; Vaughan, J.D. The two candidates for passing—Bros. Taylor and Clarke—were impressively inducted by Bro. Horsley. A financial question having been satisfactorily disposed of, the lodge was closed, and the brethren partook of a collation. The preliminary toasts having been duly honoured, the acting W.M. proposed, in happy terms, "The Health of the R.W.P.G.M." The toast of "The R.W.D.P.G.M., and the rest of the P.G.O.'s, Past and Present," followed, and gave Bro. Wigginton, P.G.S. of Wks., an opportunity of making a very excellent reply. "The Health of the W.M. and his deputy that evening," was proposed by the I.P.M., and drew from Bro. Horsley, P.M., a characteristic response. "The Visitor" came next, and having been warmly received, Bro. Buckland duly acknowledged the compliment. In consequence of the lateness of the hour the remaining toasts were quickly disposed of. Bro. Wigginton replied on behalf of "The Past Masters," and Bros. Tomlinson and Knaggs for "The Officers."

WHITEHAVEN.—Sun, Square, and Compasses Chapter (No. 119).—The quarterly convocation of this chapter was held on Friday, the 20th inst., in the Freemasons' Hall, College-street, Whitehaven, where the companions mustered at four o'clock. There were present Comps. John Barr, P.Z., P.M. 119; W. Sandwith, H., P.M.

119; J. J. Robinson, as J., P.M. 872; E. Tyson, Scribe E.; J. D. Thompson, Scribe N.; W. F. Lamony, P.S., P.M. 1002 (Freemason); J. Rothery, 1st Assist. S.; J. W. Young, 2nd Assist. S., P.M. 1400; G. Fitzgerald, Janitor; W. Armstrong, P.M. 371; T. Dixon, W.M. 1400; T. Atkinson, P.M. 872; Rowland Hill, jun.; J. R. Banks, J. S. Wilson, W. F. Hunter, C. Hooper, J. W. Miles, J. R. Smith, J. S. Braithwaite, F. Hodgson, D. Reece, T. B. Roxby, T. Wood, J. W. Meredith, H. Waiting, W. A. Smith, and John Smith. In the unavoidable absence from Whitehaven of the M.E.Z., Comp. E. Fearon, P.M. 119, Comp. Barr, P.Z., took the presiding officer's chair. After the minutes were read and confirmed, two candidates for exaltation, out of four on the agenda paper, presented themselves, and were duly exalted to the degree of R.A., the M.E.Z. in the chair performing the long and beautiful ceremony (including the mystical lecture) with that correctness and effect for which he is so well and favourably known in the north. Comp. Sandwith, H., also delivered the historical and symbolical lectures in capital style. The next business was the election of officers for the ensuing twelve months, which was conducted by ballot, and proved a lengthy operation, on account of the keen contests (in two cases ties), the final results being as follows:—Comps. W. Sandwith, Z.; E. W. Henry, M.D., H.; W. F. Lamony, J.; E. Tyson, Scribe E. (re-elected); J. J. Robinson, Scribe N.; J. Rothery, P.S.; J. M'Kelvie, Treas. (re-elected); and G. Fitzgerald, Janitor (re-elected). Comp. Rothery announced his intention to appoint his assistants at the installation convocation. The Past and Present Principals and Scribes were then appointed a committee to audit the accounts, after which Comp. T. Dodgson, P.Z. Furness Chapter, 995, was proposed as a joining member, as also a brother of Lodge 962, Workington, as a candidate for exaltation. The chapter was then solemnly closed. Subsequently the companions adjourned to the banqueting hall, where a couple of hours were harmoniously whiled away in toast and song, under the presidency of Comp. Barr. Sun, Square, and Compasses Chapter is now one of the strongest and best worked in the North of England, having largely increased in membership during the past three years. Apropos of Royal Arch Masonry in the province of Cumberland and Westmoreland, petitions have been sent to the Supreme Grand Chapter for the formation of a Provincial Grand Chapter, which will, no doubt, be granted, seeing that there are seven chapters in the two counties.

HAMPTON.—Era Chapter (No. 1423).—A convocation of this newly constituted chapter was held at the Island Hotel on the 14th inst. There were present, amongst others, Comps. Sabine, P.Z., P.G.P.S., M.E.Z.; Thielley, H.; Smeed, P.Z., acting J.; Dubois, M.E.Z.; Lebanon, Treasurer; F. Walters, P.Z., P.P.G.A.S., S. E. Mason, P.Z., S.N.; T. C. Walls, P.S. 185, First Assistant; Faulkner, Second Assistant; W. Hammond, P.Z., P.G.A.S., D.C.; Baldwin, M.E.Z. Mount Lebanon, W.S.; Gilbert, Janitor. The minutes of the previous convocation and emergency meeting having been read and confirmed, the M.E.Z., assisted by Comps. Smeed and Walters, exalted Bros. T. W. Ockenden, D.C. 1512, and Sec. 1656; Tagg, 1326; and Austin, 1567, to the Sublime Degree of the R.A. very impressively. The draft bye laws were then read, and each clause having been thoroughly eliminated, they were passed. The convocation having been closed, the companions adjourned to an excellent collation, well served by Comp. Tagg, in a marquee erected in the grounds. This al fresco arrangement was somewhat marred by the too liberal favours of Jupiter Pluvius, and brought the proceedings to an early termination. The preliminary R.A. toasts having been duly honoured, the M.E.Z. proposed "The Health of the Exaltees." In the course of his remarks he congratulated the chapter upon the admission of three such excellent Masons, who would, he had no doubt, in the end also prove worthy members of the R.A. Order. Having been well and worthily recommended, they had successfully passed the threshold of the Sublime Degree, and he personally was delighted that they had been received into so newly a constituted chapter as 1423, and in conclusion he wished them long life, and every domestic and Masonic prosperity. Comp. Ockenden, in reply, said that from the moment he had entered Freemasonry he had experienced a great veneration for the ancient science, and that feeling he hoped would ever continue. In concluding he stated that he had been highly impressed with the whole degree that he had passed that day, thanks to the able way he had been inducted. Comps. Tagg and Austin having replied in similar terms, Comp. F. Walters proposed in very felicitous language "The Health of the M.E.Z." In the course of his remarks he stated that he had initiated Comp. Sabine in 1863 and was greatly pleased at having been the means of introducing so excellent a Mason as their M.E.Z. had proved to be. He, Comp. Sabine, had filled the chair of his mother chapter with great success, and he believed that he would give equal satisfaction to the discharge of his duties in No. 1423. This toast having been well received the M.E.Z. made an excellent reply. He stated that he was a great admirer of the charitable principles of the Order and that he had never turned a deaf ear to the sacred calls of charity. He hoped that they would pardon his mentioning that in 1869 he had served the three institutions, and taken up nearly £1000, thanks to the hearty support he had received from his brethren and friends. (Hear.) Fourteen years was a very considerable time to be devoted to Freemasonry, but he had not, and he hoped he never would begrudge any time so spent, and concluded by forcibly remarking that he had always endeavoured to do his duty not only in Masonic but also in social life. The remaining toasts, "The Second and Third Principals" and "The Officers," were given briefly, and responded to on behalf of all absent and present by Comp. Thielley. Comps. Tagg, Walls, and Thielley vocally entertained the companions, who separated at 8 o'clock.

MIDDLESEX.

On Wednesday afternoon the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Middlesex was held at the Town Hall, Twickenham, under the presidency of Col. Burdett, Provincial Grand Master. Bro. F. Davison occupied the G.S.W. chair, and Bro. H. G. Buss that of G.J.W. There was a crowded attendance of brethren, amongst whom were General Brownrigg, Prov. G.M. for Surrey; Col. Wigginton, Major Shadwell Clerke, W. Hyde Pullen, H. C. Levander, H. A. Dubois, Lord de Clifford, T. J. Sabine, Dr. Ramsay, Sir C. Bright, Captain Reginald Williams, G. A. Smith, W. H. Green, A. H. Tattershall, Lieut.-Col. James Peters, J. Lewis Thomas, E. Kimber, Thos. Massa, W. H. Pearce, W. Hammond, J. M. Stedwell, and H. Massey (Freemason).

Lodge having been duly opened, the minutes were read by Bro. H. Levander, Prov. G. Sec., and after their confirmation, the balance-sheet of the province was submitted to the brethren. This showed a balance in hands of the Treasurer of £200 9s. 5d., a result which was hailed with much cheering by the brethren.

Bro. Levander, after the balance-sheet had been received and adopted, by direction of the P.G.M., read the patent of appointment of Bro. R. W. Little as Deputy Prov. G. Master, and Bro. Little having been formally obligated, was invested by Col. Burdett with the clothing of his rank, the ceremony being accompanied with hearty signs of approval by the Grand Lodge.

The appointment and investiture of Provincial Grand Officers followed, Bro. H. G. Buss, Prov. J.G.W., being first unanimously elected as Provincial Grand Treasurer, amidst loud cheering. The following is the list of the new appointments:—

Lord B. de Clifford, Sir Chas. T. Bright, G. C. Rushworth, Frank Green, B. Sharp, and W. H. Saunders...	Prov. G. Stewards

On the motion of Col. Burdett, seconded by Bro. T. J. Sabine, the following sums were voted by Provincial Grand Lodge:—£10 10s. to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls; £10 10s. to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys; and £10 to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution.

Col. Burdett then left the chair, while Bro. Little proposed, and Bro. Buss seconded, "That the sum of £10 be voted towards the Burdett Testimonial Fund, and that all expenses of printing, postage, &c., connected with the testimonial be defrayed out of the funds of the province."

This comprised the whole of the lodge business, and Bro. Levander having announced that letters of apology for absence had been received from Col. Creton, Maxwell Close, Jas. Terry, J. C. Parkinson, F. Walters and others, lodge was closed and the brethren proceeded to the Greyhound, Richmond, to banquet. At this banquet Col. Burdett presided and he was supported by forty other brethren. The toasts were afterwards proposed in regular order, and Bro. Hyde Pullen responded for the toast of the Earl of Carnarvon, Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers.

Bro. H. G. Buss, Prov. Grand Treasurer, proposed "The Health of the Prov. G. Master." After apologising for Bro. Little, D.G.M., not being able to propose the toast on account of the state of his health, he said that the brethren all knew Col. Burdett so well, and the ability with which he had always discharged his duties since he had been G.M. of the Province of Middlesex, that it would be unnecessary to say much in proposing the toast of his health. Col. Burdett was the first Grand Master of Middlesex, and had travelled with it from its foundation through all the difficulties and dangers which must attend a newly formed province. He had weathered all its storms and breezes, and had succeeded in bringing about a happy result. No province could possibly exhibit a better phalanx of Masons than the Provincial Grand Lodge of Middlesex. They were all happy and united together, and, he believed, no province could pay a greater amount of respect or honour to its Prov. G. Master than Middlesex did to Col. Burdett. The Colonel was always among them at their meetings, no matter where they were assembled. He was always willing and anxious to assist them, and in all their undertakings they never found him flagging. When they had a Prov. Grand Master who showed a determination and energy to promote the interest and welfare of the Masonic Order, the brethren could not but set a high value on him. In fact he did not know where a better Prov. Grand Master could be found. It had been his (Bro. Buss's) peculiar pleasure to hold the office of Treasurer of the province ever since its establishment, with the exception of last year, when the honour of wearing the Prov. Junior Grand Warden's clothing had been conferred on him by Col. Burdett; and in the position of Treasurer he had had occasion to refer very frequently to the Prov. G.M. Whenever he did so a letter always came in by return of post. This showed the thorough business-like way in which he performed his duties with regard to the province.

Col. Burdett, in reply, said he felt very much gratified by what Bro. Buss had said, and he was delighted to find by the heartiness with which those sentiments had been received, that the brethren appreciated his endeavours to advance the interests of the province. They might depend upon it that he would exert himself on behalf of the province, and, as far as he was able, of the brethren. He had been ably assisted by the brethren of the province, who had endeavoured to raise the province high among the list of provinces. Though it had only been established seven or eight years, it was able now to hold up its head and say that very few provinces in the South of England were able to compete with it in any way whatever. He believed there were no better set of officers or working Masons to be found in any province in the South of England, or in the north, or any part of the country. He said this not only from hearsay, but from his own experience, derived from visiting lodges in his province. As far as he was able, he visited every lodge. He was always most hospitably received, and he was much gratified at the way the work was conducted. There were some lodges which did not perform the work so well as others, but he was convinced they could come up to the same degree of excellence as the majority. It was the admirable way in which the work was done which gave him his pleasure in visiting the lodges.

Col. Burdett then proposed "The Prov. Grand Master of Surrey."

General Brownrigg, in reply, said that Col. Burdett and he held nearly the same date in the army as they did in Grand Lodge, and when they went into Grand Lodge they usually walked side by side, "shoulder to shoulder," and as soldiers they knew the meaning of that expression, and also of the expression "knee to knee." When the infantry went shoulder to shoulder, and the cavalry knee to knee, they never feared the results. Surrey and Middlesex would always be so, and would assist each other as they should. He would answer for the province of Surrey, and Colonel Burdett could answer for Middlesex. He would tell them now what took place before Surrey and a sister province a little north. Surrey and Berks and Bucks met before the election for the charities and compared notes and assisted each other. The first year this was done Berks and Bucks had a boy they wanted to get into the Boys' School, and Surrey had a girl they wanted to get into the Girls' School. Consequently Surrey gave their boys' votes to Berks and Bucks, and Berks and Bucks gave their girls' votes to Surrey. Both were successful. Bucks and Berks wanted to get an old man into the Benevolent Institution. Surrey wanted to get an old woman in. By an exchange of votes both candidates were got in. So many of the brethren of these provinces belonged to London lodges that they furnished stewards for the festivals and so got more votes. He wished Middlesex to join in the convention between Berks and Bucks, and he threw the hint out for consideration, thinking it would be a profitable arrangement for all.

Col. Burdett proposed "The Health" of Bro. Little, Deputy Provincial Grand Master. Every brother was quite aware of what the services of Bro. Little had been to the Province. He had been the instigation of this province, its mainstay, and had placed it in the position it now occupied. On account of the state of Bro. Little's health he would not trouble him to respond to this toast. It would cause him great exertion, and it would be out of a feeling of kindness to him that he wished to spare him the fatigue of replying. Throughout his life Bro. Little had exerted himself in the cause of Masonry, particularly during the last few years, and more especially for the Province of Middlesex. He did not believe any brother could have done more than Bro. Little had done for Middlesex, for it was to him that Middlesex owed the proud position she now occupied. He would ask the brethren to thank Bro. Little in silence for what he had done.

The toast having been duly acknowledged by the brethren,

Col. Burdett proposed "The Visitors." Among the visitors they had brethren who were very severe critics in Freemasonry, brethren who would perform Masonic duties in the most energetic and perfect manner. In their ranks Bro. Major Shadwell Clerke held a front place; and although that brother might not perhaps think the Province of Middlesex had yet reached the point of excellence it ought to have reached, yet he must remember that the province was a young province. He would however confess that the province was very favourably progressing, and that it had worked satisfactorily and well.

Major Shadwell Clerke replied, and said he had for many years been invited to attend the meetings of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Middlesex, but unfortunately he had been unable to accept the invitations. It had been a great pleasure to him to be present that day, for he had met several very old personal and dear friends. Also he had seen the working of the Grand Lodge, which although the Prov. Grand Master had somewhat apologised for, was a model to all lodges in England. It was the youngest of the provinces, but it was equal to the oldest and largest. It was very good of the Prov. Grand Master to speak of him (Bro. Shadwell Clerke) in the way he had spoken, and he could assure the brethren that any service he could render to Masonry was a labour of love to him. He might tell the brethren that they were most fortunate in having such a Provincial Grand Master at their head. At the same time they were most fortunate in having such a Deputy Provincial Grand Master in Bro. Little. It was a great pleasure to him (Bro. Shadwell Clerke) to see his old friend and schoolfellow elevated to the position of Deputy Prov. Grand Master of Middlesex, and he hoped he would long be spared to hold that high and honourable office. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. F. Binckes proposed, by request, the toast of "The Masonic Charities," and told the brethren that up to the present time over £36,000 had been received by the three Masonic Institutions this year. He believed that the greater part of this sum had been taken up by new Stewards for new lodges; and, if so, it showed that the new lodges were started, not for the aggrandisement of the brethren, but for the promotion of the welfare of the Institution. The new lodges had done their duty nobly. Looking around the table he could see a large number of brethren who had served the office of Steward. The brethren were not yet "weary in well doing," and when they saw the officials of the Institution exerting themselves to the utmost on behalf of their respective charities, it was, perhaps, somewhat of an incentive to them to exert themselves. He called on Bro. J. Lewis Thomas to reply.

Bro. J. Lewis Thomas having responded to the toast, Col. Burdett proposed "The Provincial Grand Officers." Dr. Ramsay replied, and the Tyler's toast having been drunk the brethren separated.

During the evening a beautiful selection of music was performed under the direction of Capt. Reginald Williams, by Mesdames Thaddeus Wells and Barnett, and Bros. Thurley Beale and H. Parker.

MONMOUTHSHIRE.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Monmouthshire took place on Thursday, the 19th of July, at the Masonic Hall, Newport, under the banner of the Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, Lodge, No. 1429, when Bro. Lieut.-Col. Lyne, P.G.M., presided, supported by Bro. Capt. S. G. Homfray, P.A.G.D.C. of England, and D.P.G.M. Monmouth; W. Pickford, P.G.S.W.; H. Gratte, P.G.J.W.; Rev. J. Osman, P.G. Chap.; C. Rowe, P.G. Sec.; and many other distinguished brethren, including Bros. D. Watson, W.M. of Glamorgan Lodge, 36; J. Hopkins, W.M., and W. Davis, P.M. of Bute Lodge, 960.

The lodge being opened, the Prov. G. Treasurer's accounts were passed, showing a balance of £148 17s. 0d.

The following officers were then appointed:—

G. A. Brown .....	Prov. G.S.W.
H. Griffiths .....	Prov. G.J.W.
Rev. J. Osman .....	Prov. G. Chap.
C. Rowe .....	Prov. G. Sec.
W. Pickford .....	Prov. G. Treas.
W. Parfitt .....	Prov. G. Reg.
J. Piggford .....	Prov. G.S. of Wks.
M. Jones .....	Prov. G.S.D.
R. Spencer .....	Prov. G.J.D.
F. Orders .....	Prov. G.D.C.
S. Gorvin .....	Prov. A.G.D.C.
H. J. Groves .....	Prov. G. Org.
Jos. Gibbs .....	Prov. G.S.B.
W. Dovey .....	Prov. G. Pura.
L. Preece .....	Prov. G. Tyler.
H. Fletcher .....	Prov. A.G. Tyler.
Wills, Golding, Hermessen, and Martin .....	Prov. G. Stwds.

V.W. Bro. Capt. S. G. Homfray, P.A.G.D.C., and D.P. G.M., having served the office of Steward for the Girls' and Benevolent Institutions, and having taken up over £500 and qualified himself as Vice-Patron, was then presented with the charity jewel by Col. Lyne, P.G.M., on behalf of the province, who hoped that he would live for many years to wear it.

Bro. H. Griffiths, on behalf of the Kennard Lodge, proposed that something more substantial should be given to the D.P.G.M. for the valuable services rendered to the province.

Bro. Capt. S. G. Homfray thanked the brethren, and hoped that he might always maintain the same good opinion they had formed of him. When he undertook the office of D.P.G.M., about seven years ago, the province had scarcely any votes for either Institution, and now they had over 130 for the Benevolent, ninety for the Girls, and about seventy for the Boys, and he should never rest until this number was largely increased.

The P.G.M. then stated that it was his intention to act as Steward for the next Boys' School festival, and qualify himself as a Vice-President, he being already Vice-President for the other Institutions, and hoped that when the time arrived the brethren would send him up with a good list.

The business of the Prov. G. Lodge was then suspended and the brethren, to the number of over 150, formed procession, headed by the band from the Industrial Schools, Caerleon, and the Prov. G. Lodge, preceded by the Volunteer Rifle Corp Band, and marched to St. Woolos Church, where a most excellent sermon was preached by the Rev. J. Osman, Prov. G. Chaplain, and a collection made. The procession was then re-formed, and the brethren returned to the Masonic Hall, when £10 10s. 0d. was announced to be the amount collected, which the brethren very generously voted towards the New Organ Fund for St. Woolos Church. A vote of thanks was passed to the Rev. Canon Hawkins for the use of the church, and also to the choir for their valuable assistance.

The Prov. G. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet at the King's Head Hotel, which was presided over by Bro. Lieut.-Col. Lyne, P.G.M., supported by Bro. Capt. S. Geo. Homfray and several distinguished visitors, amongst whom were J. Challinder, Lodge 679, E.D. of South Wales; E. Hamer, Lodge 1072, W.D. of South Wales; and Rev. — Laton, of Gloster. The usual Masonic toasts were given, and some excellent harmony was given by the Newport Glee Society, and the P.G.M. thanked Bro. F. Orders, the W.M. of Albert Edward, Prince of Wales Lodge, for the excellent arrangements he had made throughout the day.

SHAKESPEARE AND FREEMASONRY.—A letter on this subject, from the able pen of G. Somers Bellamy, Esq., will appear next week.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF MIDDLESEX AND SURREY.

The annual meeting was held at the New Town Hall, Twickenham, on Friday, the 13th July, 1877.

The New Town Hall is a most handsome, elegant, and spacious building, and was kindly lent for the purpose by C. J. Freake, Esq., who, with great liberality, placed the building at the service of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and must have put himself to much trouble and expense in completing the building for that day.

Prior to the opening of the Provincial Grand Lodge the Francis Burdett Mark Lodge, No. 181, was opened, and the ceremony of advancement was duly rehearsed.

At three o'clock the Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in due form. The officers present were the R.W. Prov. G. Master, Bro. Col. Francis Burdett; the V.W. the Deputy Prov. G. Master, Bro. F. The minutes of the previous meeting, held at the Masonic Hall, Air-street, Regent-street, in March last, having been read and confirmed, the roll of lodges was called over by the Prov. Grand Secretary, Bro. W. G. Brighton, whose report thereon was received with much satisfaction, the returns being now regularly made by each lodge (with one exception only), the number of members being further increased, and three new lodges having been consecrated in the province within the last year, viz., the Studholme, No. 197, the Croydon, No. 198, and the Duke of Connaught, No. 199.

Provincial Grand Lodge was then called off to Divine service at the parish church, where evening service was kindly conducted by the vicar, the Rev.—Limpus, and an excellent sermon was preached by the Rev. Ambrose W. Hall, who took for his text Ezekiel chap. xlv., 5th verse—"And the Lord said unto me, Son of man, mark well."

On returning Provincial Grand Lodge was resumed, and the warrant of re-appointment of the Prov. G. Master was duly read, upon which the brethren saluted Bro. Col. Burdett in due form. The Provincial Grand M.M. then re-appointed Bro. F. Davison his Deputy Prov. G.M.M., and the brethren thereupon saluted Bro. Davison in due form, after which the Prov. # FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

Two lodges have quite recently been added to the roll of the Grand Lodge of England—Lodge "Remuera" was opened on the 11th of April, in Bro. Cunningham's Newmarket Hotel, Newmarket. This lodge was started to meet the requirements of many brethren resident in Newmarket, Remuera, Epsom, and adjoining suburban districts, who found considerable difficulty in attending their respective lodges in Auckland city at all seasons. Bro. M. S. Leers was the acting D.P.G.M., and presided with his accustomed ability. After the consecration ceremonies Bro. Leers installed Bro. Lodder, P.M. of 689, E.C., as W.M. The following is the roll of office bearers:—Bros. H. Reece George, S.W.; H. Haase, J.W.; W. Rattray, Sec.; W. J. T. Bell, F. M. Hewson, S.D.; C. T. Saxton, J.D.; J. Martin, I.G.

The banquet was a great success, toast and song alternating till past midnight.

Lodge Remuera has been inaugurated under very favourable auspices and ought to be a success, most of the leading Freemasons in and around Auckland being present at the opening.

Lodge "Rodney" was inaugurated on the 3rd of May. Bro. Leers again presided as D.P.G.M. This lodge is held in Waskworth, the township of the rapidly rising settlements of Mahurangi, some forty miles north of Auckland. The steamer "Annie Millbank" was specially chartered to convey the brethren from Auckland, and a goodly number availed themselves of the opportunity to assist at the opening ceremonies. On the lodge being opened the usual formalities and business matters were complied with, and after the installation of Bro. W. P. Moat as W.M., the officers were duly installed in their respective chairs. Inclement weather interfered with part of the arrangements, but the banquet and ball were held and were very much enjoyed by those in attendance, dancing being kept up till past three o'clock a.m.

NEW MASONIC HALL AT ONEHUNGA.

The members of Lodge Manukau, 586, S.C., have greatly distinguished themselves by the building of a most respectable Masonic Hall, and have outstripped the older and more numerous scions of the Order which are located in and about the City of Auckland. The Building Committee were appointed but a few months ago, and are to be congratulated upon the speedy and very successful issue of their enterprise. The gentlemen forming the committee are:—Bros. J. W. Waller, W. Dunwoodie, J. R. Hendry, P. Clarke, and T. G. Blakey. The building is situated upon a piece of ground fronting the main street, and within a few minutes' walk of the railway station. The hall has added considerably to the substantial appearance of Queen-street, which has of late years received the addition of several two-storied shops and dwelling-houses. The want of a well arranged public hall has long been felt in Onehunga, and the originators of this Masonic Hall Company had in view to supply the want. The enterprise will thus prove a public boon, and will no doubt be largely patronised by the inhabitants of this rising township. The hall is 72 feet by 36 feet, and is 24 feet high clear from floor to ceiling. On entering the hall from the front there are rooms on each side to be used as dressing rooms. The plan of lighting is similar to that of the Choral Hall, the windows being placed at the top of the walls. The style of finish inside is remarkably neat and striking. The walls are panelled, inside the panels being papered with green tinted paper having gold borders, and the proscenium is being finished to match. The stage is ample, and altogether the effect of the internal arrangement is most pleasing to the eye. Everything is done to suit the eye of the most fastidious, and the result will prove equally satisfactory to caterers for public amusement, as to the audience, who will not have to rest their eyes on rough beams nor rugged lengths of scantlins, nor the overlapping edges of the weather boarding, sights which greet the eye in most of our newly built edifices. On the contrary, here, every inch is carefully lined or papered, or painted, regardless of trouble or expense, and with an artistic display of taste which bespeaks a well-cultured mind on the part of the architect, shewing that he is likewise aware of the pleasure afforded to an intelligent mind by being surrounded with objects of beauty, and well-contrasted shades of colour. The interior of this hall is perfect of its size and kind, and we learn that the committee are thoroughly satisfied with their building, which reflects great credit upon the architect, Mr. Bartley. The first mayor of Onehunga will sit majestically within the graceful arches of the proscenium as he presides over the first public meeting held in the new building, and his worship's manly bosom will inflate with honest but pardonable pride as he gazes on the interior of the Onehunga Masonic Hall.

The consecration had for some time past been looked forward to as an event of interest by the Masons of Auckland and their friends.

On the 15th May close on a hundred brethren assembled within its walls to assist at the dedication. Amongst others Bros. G. B. Pierce, Provincial Grand Master I.C.; Leers, D.P.G.M. of the E.C.; Bro. Wade, and other officers of the Royal Arch Chapter; Bro. Burns, &c., from the Mark Masters Lodge; Bro. Walker, R.W.M. of Lodge St. Andrew, and all his officers, except the J.W., who was laid up through an accident; Bro. Warren, W.M. Lodge Waitemata; Bro. Clayton, W.M. Lodge Prince of Wales; Bro. Redfern, W.M. Lodge United Service; Bro. Robinson, I.P.M. Lodge Ara, &c.

Apologies were given for the unavoidable absence of the W.M. of Lodge Remuera, and other brethren who were unable to be present.

Bros. Rees, Haywood, Gordon, Brock, P.M.'s, were also in attendance.

At half-past four Bro. Niccol, 330, the R.W.M., took his seat and opened the lodge with the following officers: Bros.

Walker, P.M.W.D.M.; Hardington, S.M.; W. Dunwoodie, S.W. As Bro. Hendry's duties as Director of Ceremonies prevented him from filling the Junior Warden's chair, Bro. J. H. Burns, P.M., very kindly and ably filled the vacant seat. Bros. Codlin, Treas.; J. W. Waller, Sec.; C. T. Saxton, Org.; Capt. Mason, Swd. Br.; Thos. Collings, Bible Bearer; Schofield, S.D.; Austin, J.D.; Clark, I.G.; and Robinson, Tyler.

The lodge being duly passed and raised, was called off for the purpose of attending Divine service, and the brethren marshalled by the D.C. in the usual order.

The procession marched to St. Peter's Church, when, opening right and left, the officers marched through the centre, and filing in, all entered the church. The evening service was read by Bro. the Rev. Dr. Purchas; the lessons by the incumbent, Rev. Mr. Tomlinson. The sermon was preached by the Chaplain of Lodge Union, 154, Mark, E.C. Bro. the Rev. C. M. Nelson. Miss Wayland presided at the harmonium, and the choir of the church rendered the musical portions of the service very efficiently. Bro. Nelson having offered an appropriate Masonic prayer, preached an eloquent sermon from the words, "Be kindly affectionate one to another, in honour preferring one another."—Romans, xli. chap. 5th. verse. At the conclusion of the service a collection was taken up on behalf of the Onehunga Benevolent Society, the amount collected being £5.

The procession was re-formed, and marched back to the hall. The brethren having resumed their places, the lodge was called on, and the consecration ceremonies began.

The ode "Master Supreme, accept our praise," being sung, Bro. Walker, W.D.M., expressed the desire of the brethren to have the hall consecrated. Bro. Waller, chairman of the directors, gave up his working tools, plans, &c., and the R.W.M. declared that he was satisfied that the building was suitable for Masonic purposes, and called on the Chaplain to invoke the Divine blessing.

This done, the lodge altar was uncovered, and a procession of the various officers was formed, and, after verses of the ode, "Genius of Masonry, descend," the hall was successively dedicated to Freemasonry, Virtue, and Universal Benevolence, with the usual oblations of corn, wine, and oil, and accompanied with grand honours, music, and singing.

After another prayer by Bro. Nelson, Bro. Niccol, in an able and explicit manner, explained the nature of the consecration ceremonies.

During the whole of the services Bro. Saxton presided at the harmonium, and the brethren being supplied with copies of the odes, were enabled to join in the singing. This, with the intoning of the responses, added very much to the effectiveness of the whole ceremony.

The representatives of Lodges Ara, I.C.; St. Andrew, S.C.; Waitemata, E.C.; United Service, I.C.; Sir Walter Scott (Thames), S.C.; Prince of Wales, E.C.; St. John's, S.C.; Rodney and Remuera E.C.; and last but not least, Bro. P.M. Wade, for the Mark Masters, having offered their hearty good wishes and congratulations to Lodge Manukau, thanks were voted to the Rev. Mr. Tomlinson for the use of St. Peter's Church, and the Rev. G. Brown, M.A., of the Presbyterian Church, for the use of his communion plate, &c. The lodge was lowered and closed with the usual ceremonies.

A concert, in which the leading local and Auckland talent assisted, and a ball wound up the opening of the Masonic Hall, Onehunga.

Reviews.

"The Canadian Craftsman."

We have received the number for June of this valuable publication, and regret to note that Bro. Mason retires from its editorship, after his continued and creditable labours. His, alas, is the usual complaint, albeit 'stereotyped' now in Masonic literature that he has not been duly supported, or Masonically appreciated. We greatly regret to lose the important services to Masonic literature of so conscientious and intelligent a confrere. We trust that all "good fortune" will attend the efforts of his successor, Bro. Berry, and that the "Craftsman" may yet succeed in gaining the hearty support of an increasing circle of readers. We are amused at the reappearance of a "petit sujet" in its pages—a little "bantling" of our own. The "History of the Unfledged Bantam" is not a little striking. One of the Staff of the Morning Post kindly sent it to us from the Correspondence Scandinave. We printed it in French, the Monde Maconique reprinted it from us and it has been retranslated from the Monde Maconique, has appeared in journals, Masonic and profane. But such is the way of the world. We wish the Craftsman success.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Ever useful.—The afflicted by illness should look their diseases fully in the face and at once seek a remedy for them. A short search will convince the most sceptical that these noble medicaments have afforded ease, comfort, and oftentimes complete recovery, to the most tortured sufferers. The Ointment will cure all descriptions of sores, wounds, bad legs, sprains, eruptions, erysipelas, rheumatism, gout, and skin affections. The Pills never fail in correcting and strengthening the stomach, and in restoring a deranged liver to a wholesome condition, in rousing torpid kidneys to increase their secretion and in re-establishing the natural healthy activity of the bowels. Holloway's are the remedies for complaints of all classes of society.—Adv.

GRAND LODGE OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

We have received the following official circular relating to the late fire at St. John's.

Office of Grand Secretary,
Saint John, 7th July, 1877.

Right Worshipful and dear Brother,—

The telegraph wires and the public newspapers have announced to the world the terrible calamity which befel the City of Saint John on the 20th day of June ultimo, by which the largest and most valuable portion of our city was reduced to ashes, and the majority of the inhabitants rendered homeless—very few of them saving even a portion of their personal or household effects.

Among the victims was a large portion of the Masonic fraternity.

In order to aid and shelter our suffering brethren, a General Masonic Board of Relief has been organized, composed of the city members of the Board of General Purposes of Grand Lodge, and the presiding officers of the Masonic bodies of all grades.

Thus composed, the Board extends its helping hand to the sufferers of all degrees of Masonry, and ensures a regular and systematic mode of dispensing the funds placed at its disposal.

The officers of the Board are—M. W. Robt. T. Clink, Grand Master, Chairman; V. W. James McNichol, Jun., Grand Treasurer, Treasurer; V. W. William F. Bunting, Grand Secretary, Secretary. M.W. Bro. Clink is authorised to receive all contributions it may please our sympathizing brethren to remit.

I remain, dear Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,
WM. F. BUNTING, Grand Secretary.

VISIT OF THE PUPILS OF THE GIRLS SCHOOL TO WIMBLEDON.

On Friday last such of the pupils of this Institution as are remaining there during the holidays received an invitation to visit the camp of the Victoria Rifles at Wimbledon Common. On their arrival they were courteously met, and after being conducted round the entire camp, were most hospitably entertained at tea, the tables groaning beneath the weight of fruit and other edibles provided by Bro. H. Smith, Prov. G. Sec. West Yorkshire, Vice-Patron of the Institution; Capt. Tomkins, of the Victoria Rifles, and of the Victoria Lodge, 822; Quarter-Master Serjeant Block, of the same corps and lodge; Serjeant-Major Abbott, of the same corps, and Sec. of 822; Lieut. Halkett, of the Victoria Rifles, and by other members of the corps, rivaling them in their endeavours to make the pupils' visit a feature, and a pleasing reminiscence.

The competition for the "Loyd Lindsay prize" was a source of inexpressible delight; the children, under the charge of Miss Shepherd and Miss Triggs, of the Institution, Miss Castle, an ex-girl and visitor, accompanied by Bros. Edward Cox, P.M. 657, Prov. G.S.W. Norths, and Hunts., and Mrs. Cox, viewing the contest from the grand stand, erected as a vantage ground for the accommodation of the magnates of the camp and their friends when viewing the athletic sports appointed to take place on the last day of the meeting. After making a tour of the camp and camping ground, and inspecting the prizes won by the various competitors, the pupils took leave of their generous entertainers with a hearty expression of thanks, and grateful recognition of the kindness exhibited towards them.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of the Subscribers to this Institution met on Thursday afternoon in the Board Room, Freemasons' Hall. Bro. J. A. Rucker presided.

There were also present Bros. Col. Creaton, A. H. Tattershall, Joshua Nunn, Benjamin Head, H. Browne, H. Massey (Freemason); John Boyd, W. F. C. Moutrie, J. W. Faulkner, Peter de L. Long, Thomas Massa, W. Paas, R. W. Little (Secretary), and R. W. Hedges.

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, Bro. Hedges read a letter from Grand Secretary, stating that, looking to the increase of the Craft, the Premises Committee could not find further space for the office accommodation of the three Masonic Institutions.

The Chairman said it was quite impossible that the work of the Secretaries of the Charitable Institutions could be carried on in the confined space afforded by the present offices. Three rooms at least were required for each Institution; one room for the Secretary; another for the clerks, and another as a waiting room.

Bros. Nunn and Tattershall were then appointed to confer with the brethren already nominated by the committees of the other Institutions, and to co-operate with them on the subject.

Col. Creaton then brought forward the subject of the testimonial proposed to be presented to Mrs. Monckton, in recognition of her services to this Institution. He said that at the Boy's School Quarterly Committee it would be resolved that some recognition of Mrs. Monckton's services should be made, and he (Col. Creaton) undertook to bring the matter before the General Committee of the Girls' School. He did not require to be asked to do so, because he had intended to do it of his own free will. He would therefore move "That in the opinion of this Committee it is desirable that a testimonial in recognition of the services of Mrs. J. B. Monckton should be presented from this Institution."

Bro. Joshua Nunn having seconded the motion was carried unanimously.

Col. Creaton then moved, that it be referred to a sub-committee of three brethren, with power to communicate with any sub-committee that may be appointed by the Boys' School, to consider as to the nature of such testimonial and to report thereon through the General Committee to a Quarterly Court.

Bro. Head said he had seen Mrs. Monckton and had ascertained that a portrait of her would be most acceptable to the family.

Bros. Rucker and Nunn were appointed as a Committee on the subject, and the proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

NEW MASONIC HALL IN NORWICH.

On Tuesday an influential meeting of the Freemasons of Norfolk and Norwich was held at the office of Bro. H. J. Barwell, the Prov. Grand Secretary, under the presidency of the Grand Master, Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Suffield. He was supported by several other Pro Grand Officers, Colonel Duff, M.P., Sir Francis Boileau, Colonel Lestrangle, Colonel Bignold, Major Penrice, Bros. Ray, G.M. Perseverance, J. H. Browne, Kennett, J. W. Lacey, Orams, Big Ben, and many others of position and influence, as well in the Masonic as in the outside world. It was duly resolved that the Masons form themselves into a Limited Liability Company with a large subscribed capital (to be forthwith paid up) in shares £1 each, so that the poorest brother can be a shareholder. The following brethren were appointed a committee to subscribe the articles of association and carry out the undertaking at once, namely, Lord Suffield, K.C.B., Col. Duff, M.P., Colonel C. E. Bignold, Colonel Lestrangle, Major Penrice, O. D. Ray, and J. H. Browne (architect), with Bro. H. G. Barwell, of course, as secretary. As the hall is to be built according to the designs of Mr. J. H. Browne (who has so justly obtained a high reputation for his designs as architect to the School Board) we can congratulate Norwich on soon being the possessor of a noble hall, which will be a boon to all Freemasons' hopes, and a great gain to the city for concerts, parties, and balls—especially as the company has resolved to purchase the property known as "Kett's-yard" in St. Giles's-street, as the site for the new institution. There is a rumour, however, of another site—in the Haymarket.

It is so far advanced that it will, I hear, be opened for traffic in a few weeks. It is proposed that for a week the ferry shall be thrown open gratuitously to the public, who will thus have an opportunity of testing its convenience. The sooner it is opened the happier will be the fate of those who have to cross London Bridge at those hours of the day when 'busses, cabs, and carts most do congregate.

That a sum of 100 guineas be granted from the funds of Grand Chapter towards the relief of the sufferers by the fire at St. John, New Brunswick.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 1lb. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as samples, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark-street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea Dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea, throughout the kingdom, must be addressed to the Secretary

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JULY 28, 1877.

OUR GREAT METROPOLITAN CHARITIES.

By a somewhat remarkable coincidence the last Freemason contains reports of all our three great Institutions, and we are glad to be able to congratulate the brethren on their unexampled prosperity. Never at any time in their history were their position so healthy—their prospects so good, their need so evident, and their usefulness so marked as to-day. If any doubts had ever existed in the minds of some of us as to their necessity or their blessing to our Order, the events of the last few years must have dispelled them for ever, and we think that all will admit that Freemasonry has in them the truest exposition of its tenets, and the most practical commentary on its professions. Time was, when some Freemasons looked rather coldly on these, our great institutions, but prepossessions and prejudices yield mostly here to the onward course of events, to practical realities and prevailing needs; and the undeniable usefulness, value, and necessity of our great charities have long been heartily acknowledged and fraternally realized by us all alike. The only objection which ever has been made, and which requires some consideration, is this, that they tend to make Freemasonry in England "a great benefit society," and that they even offer a premium to a condition of "Masonic pauperism." But, on careful consideration, we do not find that such assumptions can be brought to a logical conclusion. It is true that, at present, the actual benefits of Freemasonry in England are very great, and are becoming greater day by day, but, so far, there is no evidence that we have forgotten the great and essential difference as between Freemasonry and any other benefit order. Neither can it be said, we think, fairly that the charitable efforts of Freemasonry tend to create a condition of "Masonic pauperism," because, if such an argument be sound, all eleemosynary institutions must be placed in the same category. We hold, on the contrary, that reasonable and well conducted charitable institutions are the best antidotes against pauperism, inasmuch as they serve to diminish the always pauperizing tendency of extended parochial relief. But leaving these questions for the time, let us devote ourselves to a short view of the actual position and work of our three great Metropolitan Charities. The first fact connected with them, which strikes us necessarily, and which is one calculated not only to offer a subject of proud congratulation, to us as Freemasons, but materially to impress the world outside Freemasonry, is, namely, that in 1877 we shall have collected close on £36,000 for our three charities. As regards the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons, it is in a state of wonderful financial prosperity, and much practical utility. Never, at any time, were its benefits so marked or so widely extended, and we express the aspirations of all our brethren when we say that we hope its future may be even still more brilliant, alike in its abounding value and blessedness to many poor brethren and sisters of ours. We are somewhat sorry, we confess, as we said before, that the governing body did not see its way, amid its unexampled prosperity, to make 1877 an exceptional year, and place all the candidates on its books. Such an act of large-hearted liberality on the part of the Institution would undoubtedly have greatly pleased the subscribers and the Order, and the Committee would have been "recouped," we feel sure, for its fraternal munificence by the returns of 1878. Too much praise cannot be accorded for the admirable manner in which its affairs are carried on, to the proper authorities, and above all to Bro. Terry. As regards the Girls' School, it has before it, in future, as in present and past, a very great career of usefulness and success. It perhaps is an institution "suigeneris," without an equal in the country, either in respect of the education it imparts and the tone it gives to its pupils, and we always feel what a debt of gratitude we owe to those who so carefully and economically manage its prosperous revenues. Thanks to the wise plans of our worthy Bro. Colonel Creaton, the Girls' School is now receiving considerable enlargement, and ere long 200 orphan daughters of Freemasons will receive there an admirable and befitting education. We trust that all of good will attend the school in its onward progress, and that our excellent Bro. R. W. Little will regain that activity of health and strength, which will enable him to continue to work for Freemasonry, and for the school, with that zeal and kindness which have rendered him so useful and so respected a member of the Craft. The Boys' School is equally going on manfully "to the fore." It can boast in 1877 of having the largest income ever raised for a Masonic Institution. £13,500, and there can be little doubt that it is now doing a good work. The Boys' School has been somewhat unlucky in previous scholastic arrangements, but under Dr. Morris, it seems to be acquiring a character for steady "all round" work, which we venture to hope will long cling to it. We feel strongly that the festival of 1877 is the best reply to hasty allegations and unwise contentions, and we cordially wish all success to the labours of the governing body and the active efforts of Bro. Binckes. To suppose that the school can continue at its present number is, we apprehend, out of the question, whether that fact be for good or evil. If owing to its happy return for 1877 the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys is enabled by a slight addition to fill up the School to 200 we fear we cannot hold out any hope that such enlargement will last for long, and we are convinced that we must calmly make up our minds to the increase of the School to 300, and the eventual erection of a preparatory school for 100 or 200 boys, as near Wood Green as can be. If our brethren will bear in mind, that our Craft is rapidly increasing, and that many lodges are admitting members, in our opinion far too promiscuously, so to say, each year, as it passes over our heads, will produce new orphans, and new claimants on the Boys' School. We have now before us sixty-three applicants, and nine vacancies in October, what will be the state of the case in April 1878? What, moreover, humanly speaking, must be the proportion, as between received and disappointed candidates then? It is always better to look difficulties fairly in the face, and we feel that we are exercising a wise discretion in thus stating fully, our clear if humble opinion to the subscribers of the School and our munificent order at large.

THE NEW MASONIC HALL AT SHEFFIELD.

A report elsewhere, which will be read with much interest, and for which we thank an ever friendly correspondent, testifies effectively to the zeal and energy of our good brethren in Sheffield. We think that they deserve great "Kudos" for their most successful undertaking, which is not only a credit to the town and to Yorkshire, and to Masonic Archaeology, but will, we trust, be a great boon as well as an honour to Freemasonry in general.

THE SURREY MASONIC HALL.

We call attention to an able letter in another column which deals effectively with this very serious, and, to say the truth, distressing question. We do not now go into the well-known or latent facts of the case, which will be duly considered, no doubt, at the meeting on the 30th, but we think it right to express our earnest hope that an attempt will be made by the Order to come to the rescue of the Directors. It would seem to be a great reproach to Metropolitan Freemasonry if such a bonâ fide venture should fail for want of Masonic support, and if so important a property, so needful an adjunct to our Masonic lodge life in London should be allowed to pass into non-Masonic hands. We have been declaiming for years about the importance and value of Masonic buildings, of Masonic centres, of existence, work and usefulness, and is the only result of all we have thus loudly proclaimed, but the giving of the cold shoulder to the efforts of the zealous, and the sacrifices of the enthusiastic? We do not believe this, and, therefore, in the interests of metropolitan Freemasonry, and of Freemasonry generally, we trust that a goodly attendance on the 30th will manifest the zeal of the Craft, and enable the directors to carry on the Surrey Masonic Hall, not only as a valuable Masonic adjunct to this great metropolis, but as a successful business undertaking.

FREEMASONRY IN DISPERSION.

At the time we write our metropolitan lodges are in a state of somnolence and separation. The lodge room is deserted, and even the good old Tyler is gone off by a cheap excursion train. Our brethren are scattering, and are even scattered in all directions, getting away from the dog days and the hot and crowded streets of London to country homes and sea breezes. Bro. Higginson, who is the best of mortals and Masons, has, of course, a very charming wife, and an interesting collection of "olive branches round about his table." Mrs. Higginson—sister Mary Jane, as some young members of the lodge call the agreeable life companion of their worthy P.M.—has, of course, in cabinet council, as Secretary of State for the Home Department, expressed her opinion to Bro. Higginson that the "children want change of air." "For herself," she adds, "she is happy anywhere with him. But Edward Thomas has come back thin from school, Emily has not quite recovered from her weakness in the whooping cough, Robert is looking pale, and Fanny is a little feverish, while the twins are somewhat fractious, and baby is teething, and so she thinks that a change is needful for the family Higginson." Bro. Higginson, amiable fellow as he is, always obeys his wife, for, as he says in the "Megatherium Lodge," amid a quiet conversation and a consoling cigar, "she is, sir, a first-rate woman, and a capital wife, for she talks for two, and does everything for everybody, and she is so economical and so very particular; and then her intellect is very remarkable, and she is so genuine and affectionate," &c., &c. Now we do not blame Bro. Higginson for being proud of his wife, and even talking about her, when just now the morality of young married men, and that we should say it, of old married men, is much "beneath par," but we mention a familiar occurrence of domestic history to account for the rural peregrination of so many of our most distinguished brethren. For the Higginsons are only types of many Masonic husbands and many Masonic wives; and well it is, we think, that it should be so. We, who stay in London, and keep to work, can sincerely wish them all happiness in their "outing." For it is a good thing, in our opinion, this domestic life of Englishmen and Englishwomen which takes them away with their children to enjoy the green fields of the country or the glad ozone of the sea shore. No doubt we can see the same sight across the Channel at Trouville, and Deauville, and countless other well-known spots, but it appears to us as if English domestic life was a closer and more intimate life, most good for all, than in any other country. When then to-day our lodges are closed, and our good brethren are dispersed, wandering here and there, or settled down cosily somewhere for the time on attractive sands, or on breezy hills, with their "Lares and Penates," and what Jones of "ours," irreverent dog, terms their impedimenta, "nurses, children, bandboxes, and perambulators ad libitum," we trust that they are enjoying their "exodus" from the little village, and that when next we meet our brethren in our well-known lodge, we may find them "all to the fore," fresh and genial and hearty as ever.

If life, as it leaves us weary and often lamenting at the bottom of the "everlasting hills," seems to pass from us, with few glad memories, and fewer enduring associations, let us trust and believe, that the true-hearted sympathies of personal attachment and honest-hearted friendship, of genial companionship, and of family affection, are destined yet, when they leave the changing and failing attributes of mortality, to become themselves intensified, fragrant and deathless in the "beatific mansions" of another and a better scene.

Prince Albert Victor continues to progress favourably.

MASONIC UNCHARITABLENESS.

We are often struck—perhaps our readers are too—with the great uncharitableness displayed by us Freemasons, in our words as regards others, in the pages of the Freemason. In a recent correspondence one of the writers actually prides himself on the fact that neither he nor Bro. Binckes will forget that they are brethren and Freemasons, or are likely to degenerate into the too common uncharitableness of Freemasons. Surely this is not as it should be, and is a great reflection on our words and acts, our professions and our practice. It would almost seem as if the uncharitableness of humanity were so ingrained in us all alike, that the moment either our "amour propre" or our interests are excited, we open the floodgates of passion and personality. Let us all try and amend our ways in this respect, and let us no longer remain open to the "profane" charge that our precepts and practice are in utter contradiction. And it is not only in public that such remarks seasonably apply, for in private, in domestic life, how uncharitable and censorious we are, utterly inconsiderate of the good name and untarnished reputation of some whom we call our "brethren in Masonry." But if we once get on this topic we shall never stop, so we hasten to return from our little digression. After all, of how little value is controversy, "per se," except in eliciting the truth, and even at the best how worthless, as Lord Macaulay has sung, is the "Victor's prize." We think that the following "morceau" of true philosophy about hating people is so true that we transfer it bodily to our pages, and conclude our "Sermonette" with it to day.—"Hate not. It is not worth while. Your life is not long enough to make it pay to cherish ill will or hard thoughts towards any one. What if that man has cheated you, or that woman played you false? What if this friend has forsaken you in your time of need, or that one having won your utmost confidence, your warmest love, has concluded that she prefers to consider and treat you as a stranger? Let it all pass. What difference will it make to you in after years, when you go hence to the 'undiscovered country?' All who treat you wrong now will be more sorry for it than you, even in your deepest disappointment and grief, can be. A few more smiles, a few more tears, some pleasure, much pain, a little longer hurrying and worrying in the world, some hasty greetings and abrupt farewells, and life will be over and the injurer and the injured will be laid away and ere long forgotten. Is it worth while to hate each other?" Let us learn, all of us, then, to be confiding and charitable, lenient and forgiving, hating slander, and putting our foot on detraction.

OPENING OF THE NEW MASONIC HALL AT SHEFFIELD.

On Wednesday, the 18th inst., the new Masonic Hall, erected in Surrey-street, Sheffield, was formally opened. The leading Provincial members of the Masonic fraternity were present, the chair being occupied by the R.W. Bro. Lieut.-Col. Sir Henry Edwards, Bart., D.L., Prov. G. Master of West Yorkshire.

The new hall fronts to Eyre-street and Surrey-street (standing on the site of the old hall) it is built entirely of dressed stone, partly of that of the old building. It is in the classical style of architecture, of a neat and substantial character, the decorations being quiet, yet including the conventional "square and compasses," &c.; the tout ensemble, though suggestive of durability, is pleasing. The new building contains a lodge room and a banquetting room, and there is a spacious cellar. The banquetting room, which is on the ground floor, is 51 feet long by 26 feet wide by 15 feet high, it is lighted by double windows of plate glass, the inner ones being ornamented with Masonic emblems embossed thereon. A serving window gives direct communication with the kitchens, which are extensive and fitted up with all modern requirements. The furniture of the banquetting room can be readily lowered into the cellar, which extends the full size of the building.

The lodge room, which is over the banquetting room, is 51 feet long by 26 feet wide by 24 feet high, having an arched roof springing from a cornice running round the room, ornamented with moulded ribs and panels, and carved bosses. The walls are relieved with columns, which have foliated capitals springing from ornamented car-bels, from which the ribs in the roof form one continuous line. The whole of the fittings are of polished pine, slightly stained and varnished, which produce a very pleasing effect. The east end is occupied by a dais of three steps, along the north and south sides runs a raised platform, so that a double row of chairs can be placed, enabling the brethren occupying the back seats to see and hear with comfort. At the west end is an organ, built expressly by the firm of Messrs. Brindley and Foster, of Sheffield, the following is the specification:—

GREAT ORGAN, compass CC to G 3. 1. Open diapason, metal, 8 feet, 56 pipes; 2. Lieblich Gedact, wood and metal, 8 feet, 56 pipes; 3. Dulciana, zinc metal grooved into No. 2 in bass, 8 feet; 4. Flauto Traverso, wood and metal, 4 feet, 56 pipes.

SWELL ORGAN. 5. Violin diapason, zinc metal, H bass to CC, 8 feet, 56 pipes; 6. Salicet metal 4 feet, 56 pipes; 7. Oboe, metal, 8 feet, 56 pipes.

PEDAL CCC to E, Couplers. 8. Bourdon wood, 16 feet, 29 pipes, two composition pedals; 9. Swell to Great; 10. Swell to Pedal; 11. Great to Pedal.

The appearance of the lodge room when illuminated is brilliant, and when the promised decorations have been completed there is little doubt about its being one of the most beautiful Masonic temples in the provinces. We are glad to hear that the main part of the work of an ornate nature has been reserved for the interior. Both rooms are lighted by very chaste gaseliers, and are warmed by hot water on the most improved principles; the ventilation is on Tobin's system. In addition to these two large rooms there are, on the ground floor, a club room, commodious kitchens, lavatory, &c.; on the first floor, one small lodge room and a convenient cloak room; a wide passage with a broad flight of stairs leads to the lodge room; on the second floor are several rooms, affording accommodation for a resident Tyler. The acoustic properties of all the rooms, we are happy to say, are perfect. The entrance to the hall is made through the adjoining premises, which we have already described; the arrangements are such that, at any future time, these can be pulled down and more spacious premises erected in the same style as the new hall; when this is done there will be not only spacious offices, &c., necessary for the lodges, but plenty of accommodation for a club. The whole of the properties are freehold, and are owned by the Sheffield Masonic Hall Company, Limited, the shares of which are held solely by the lodges or brethren—virtually, therefore, they are their own tenants—a move in the right direction (though it is only fair to say that it is many years since a Sheffield lodge met in a public-house), and we trust the day is not far distant when every brother will realise the fallacy of the poet's lines, where he goes on to say that he "May sigh to think he still has found

His warmest welcome at an inn."

Tempora mutantur; to day every lodge may, and should, meet under its own roof, or, at least, in a room set apart for the purpose, yet in no way connected with a public-house. Practice ever being preferred to precept we feel bound to point to Sheffield as an example we would urge upon others to follow. To the true Craftsman there is nothing, in our way of thinking, so undignified as the association of a lodge with a public-house—if our Constitutions were more studied the very significant article No. 4, page 62, would cause many a brother to think, and—verbum sat sapienti.

At a quarter-past one o'clock the ceremony of formally opening the hall was commenced.

Sir Henry Edwards, Bart., said: Brethren, in addressing this brilliant assembly of the members of the Craft in West Yorkshire the first part of my agreeable duty to-day is to acknowledge in the most cordial manner your hearty reception of your Provincial Grand Master. I am again reminded of the welcome this Provincial Lodge met with in October, A.L., 5875, from the Wentworth Lodge, No. 1239. To that admirable and select lodge I expressed my obligations and those of this Provincial Grand Lodge for the use of a building accorded to that gathering of Freemasons, but which was not a Masonic edifice. I ventured to remark that I trusted that the lodges in Sheffield might at no distant time be able to hold their meetings, as well as their invitations to Provincial Grand Lodge, in commodious premises of their own, dedicated solely to Freemasonry, and befitting the status and increasing influence of the Craft in this busy town of mechanical industry. Allow me, as the next part of my duty, to thank the Britannia Lodge, No. 139, the second oldest in the province under whose banner we labour to-day, for their invitation to inaugurate the completion of an important work, and for the excellent preparations the brethren here have made for the reception of this Provincial Grand Lodge. Our meeting to-day is the completion of the hope expressed in the Wentworth Lodge in 1875, the construction of a Masonic Hall well worthy of the Craft in Sheffield, and we congratulate the united lodges on their energy, their wealth, and their skill, which, in two years, have produced this magnificent temple, fraught as I believe such a work must be in advantages and benefits identified with the future of this district. It would border on ingratitude and negation if I did not embrace this opportunity of personally offering my tribute of praise that the aspirations of 1875 have become practical realities in 1877. The auspicious occasion which has brought us together in these new walls would be incomplete without some brief mention of the circumstances which have led to their reconstruction, and the history of Freemasonry in Sheffield, the statistics for which have been kindly supplied me by my worthy Deputy, and other members of the Craft in Sheffield. Sheffield has a Masonic history of which the members of the three lodges may feel proud. The history is not of yesterday. It extends over a series of past years; and this history is associated with Masonic events and transactions, both of imperial significance. The brethren of Hallamshire have for many generations, by the magnitude of important mechanical industries, earned enduring honour by building up England's greatness. Your mighty appliances for heavy works have elicited the admiration of foreign critics, and your machinery and adaptable architecture have equally gratified the visitor, whatever may have been his tastes, feelings, or proclivities. The Masonic bodies in Sheffield consist, I may say for the information of the Craft in general, of three Craft lodges, Nos. 139, 296, and 1239, numbering about 300 brethren, including 25 Past Masters. There are besides two Royal Arch Chapters and a Rose Croix Chapter, a Mark Mason's Lodge, a Preceptory of Knights Templar, a Conclave of Knights of Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, and a Sanctuary of Knights of the Holy Sepulchre and St. John the Evangelist, together with a Priory of Knights of Malta. There are two remarkable coincidences of similarity in connection with the meeting places of the two oldest lodges in West Yorkshire, one which in July, 1738, met at the Crown and Rose, Halifax; and "The Britannia," under whose banner we meet to-day, which on 19th April, 1765, was first unfurled at the Rose and Crown, Sheffield; and it was called "The Rose and Crown," but changed its name to "Britannia" on 8th April, 1795. With the exception of the first two years the minutes of this lodge are perfect. In 1861 it established itself in a hall devoted exclusively to Freemasonry, and upon the old foundations the present magnificent edifice has been rebuilt for the Masonic Hall of the united lodges. The Royal Brunswick Lodge was constituted in due form 28th July, 1793. The ceremony of dedication concluded with a liberal subscription to the Poor Girls' Charity School. On the 4th October, 1798, the Britannia Lodge and the other brethren from all the lodges dedicated and opened in solemn form, in the presence of Lords Fitzwilliam and Galway and a distinguished company, the General Infirmary here, a lasting monument of benevolent usefulness. In identification with this noble institution I must mention the name of Bro. Dr. Bartolomé. In the minute book of Britannia Lodge 17th Feb., 1775, is the consideration of a proposal for the establishment of a lodge at Rotherham. On the 10th March the Rotherham petitioners were informed that, "as they have irregularly dared to make a Mason without formal powers, they are unworthy the countenance of Britannia Lodge." I am proud to inform the province that in 1808 a lodge was opened, and in 1860 or 1861 Bro. Bentley Shaw re-consecrated at Rotherham the Phoenix Lodge, No. 904, which is now not the least prosperous or the least loyal amongst the 63 lodges of this province, and I hope on some future occasion for an opportunity to pay my personal respects to its excellent W.M., Bro. Fawcett, and the brethren. In 1797 Mr. Scott proposed to build a lodge room suitable for the Britannia Lodge. In June, 1799, Bro. Chadwick preached a sermon before the brethren in St. Peter's Church for this purpose, and it was resolved that every brother absent except being sick should incur a pecuniary penalty. In 1798 the brethren marked their loyalty and patriotism in support of the Government of the day against a foreign country by a subscription which amounted to a considerable sum. In 1838 the united lodges assembled at the Spread Eagle, and in 1839 Dr. Bartolomé was installed Worshipful Master; and it must be gratifying to the Sheffield brethren to see this old and esteemed Past Master present in Provincial Grand Lodge on this auspicious occasion. In 1841 a handsome testimonial was presented to Bro. Bartolomé who was again re-elected Worshipful Master. In this year of Britannia 33 members were present. In the last month of this year the consecration of the lodge took place at the Music Hall. Thus after moving about as it were from pillar to post, the members of the Craft in Sheffield at last found a permanent habitation; and until 1861 the most perfect harmony prevailed amongst the brethren. In this year the Freemasons purchased the Old Savings Bank premises in Surrey street, the site of the present Masonic Hall, and adapted it to the present purposes of the Craft in Sheffield, raising the money in shares of £5 each. This property was vested in trustees for the benefit of the Craft, and a trust deed was drawn up setting out clearly the object for which the purchase was made, and that the building should ultimately become the property of the Britannia Lodge. These shares were not all taken up until 1867. From this time, in accordance with the trust deed, Britannia began to purchase, and to gradually absorb the shares of the various brethren. The three lodges in Sheffield, after experiencing much inconvenience for many years from the inadequate accommodation afforded by the existing buildings, formed the idea of a limited company and erecting the present hall, which it is hoped will meet the requirements of the Craft in Sheffield for several generations. After much grave consideration it was finally resolved to pull down the old building (the property purchased from Sherwin standing for a time) and to build on the old ground a New Masonic Hall. Bros. Scargill and Clark were intrusted with the plans, and the work was commenced in 1876. I must express my satisfaction to all parties concerned on the success of the work and its adaptability for the purposes of Freemasonry, and that this hall is a memorial of your skill and ability in Sheffield, and this Masonic Hall Company, Limited, was registered on the 24th November, 1874. It is divided into 2000 shares of £5 each, having a nominal capital of £10,000. Of these shares only 1000 have been issued for allotment and, with the exception of a very few, have been generously taken up. As each of the lodges whose warrants ornament its walls have shown at some period of their history the value of the principles of Freemasonry in the exercise of charity and benevolence, so, I understand, it is the intention of the Craft, to mark with significance their completion of this stately and superb edifice to co-operate in the work of restoration of the ancient parish church of St. Peter, now called Trinity. I must be allowed to mention the munificent contribution of £10,000 by a lady who has proved herself on several occasions a faithful friend to the Freemasons of Sheffield, and neither must I forget that other lady who supplements this work of restoration by a gift of £3000. I believe the Craft here will restore their portion of this fabric as well as the Freemasons of Durham their part of the cathedral of St. Cuthbert. My Deputy hoped to have the honour of initiating the late vicar of this church into Freemasonry, recently translated to the Bishopric of Sodor and Man, a noble imitator of the virtues of a previous vicar, the Reverend Jas. Wilkinson, who for half a century, by his unaffected piety, inflexible integrity, and unwearied zeal in the public service, obtained and deserved the endearing appellation of the father of the town of Sheffield. Time would fail me were I to enumerate the handsome contributions in detail, extending over a series of years, to the London charities, or how such brethren as Britain, Arnison, and Tindall are supported by the brethren of the three lodges in this noble cause of charity, suffice it to say this year alone the contributions of the three lodges amount to nearly three hundred guineas. I must, however, record one act of magnanimity on the part of the Sheffield lodges. At the Charity Committee meeting in March, Mary Ellen White, a daughter of one of the noblest of Sheffield Masons, was a candidate for the Girls' School. Because it was the last chance of Ada Hartley Healey, 264, you generously gave way to allow this girl to be the nominee of our Charity Committee. It afforded me the highest satisfaction to learn that at the election on the 14th April, through the exertions of the Charity Committee, both these West Yorkshire girls were elected. The members of the various lodges I believe vie with each other in their efforts to do good. The remarks of my Deputy to the Wentworth Lodge are still singularly applicable to this occasion. The spirit of Freemasonry here is the spirit of sublimity, of a depth, grandeur, and lovable beauty equal to all the mind of Plato ever conceived. And I doubt not the inauguration of this new hall will consolidate into perpetuity this harmony amongst the brethren he then so poetically expressed in 1875. In conclusion I congratulate the Craft on the re-building of this noble hall, and in the language of his Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, at York, in 1841, "I exhort you, brethren, never collectively or individually to suffer a breach of the constitutions of the Craft. And when assembled in lodge to leave all religious prejudices and political feelings outside the portal of the sacred temple, to strictly uphold the honour and dignity of the Craft by ever vindicating the laws and regulations, which being made in hours of cool reflection, after long and serious deliberation, provide a remedy for the correction of every abuse, and to defend at all times its rights and privileges by a close adherence to the established usages and customs of the Order." Thus may the principles of Freemasonry be supported as heretofore by old Masons and young Masons, and the Craft prosper in this hall, where order, peace, and harmony shall reign until every stone now built one upon another, through time, crumble into dust.

Bro. T. W. Tew, J.P., the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, also addressed the assembly, pointing out the duties of the general lodges in reference to the general working of their business, and amongst other matters dwelling upon the objects of Freemasonry, as tending to the social and moral elevation of its members, but without either interfering with business or politics. He deprecated any undue influence by Masonic brethren in any matters not pertaining strictly to the interests of the Craft, so as in any way to prejudice their opportunities of doing good in legitimate and proper channels. He congratulated the Sheffield brethren on the position they had attained, and on the possession of a suitable building in which the business of the Craft could be carried on with comfort to themselves and in a manner befitting the honourable society to which they belonged.

After the usual business of Provincial Grand Lodge had been transacted the brethren adjourned to the Cutlers' Hall, where a banquet was held, under the presidency of Sir Henry Edwards. Amongst those who took part in the proceedings were the Rev. Dr. Cox, of London; Rev. A. A. Bagshawe, Rev. Bro. Greenbury, Rev. E. B. Chalmers, Alderman Gill (Mayor of Wakefield), Dr. Bartolomé, H. J. Harrison, J.P.,

W. Jervis, W.M. 139; J. Ridal, W.M. 296; R. B. Ellis, W.M. 1239; B. Saville, W.M. 904; W. Jendwine, W.M. 681; W. T. Beanland, W.M. 1462; and most of the P.M.'s of the Sheffield lodges, and many other distinguished brethren.

THE SURREY MASONIC HALL. To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

On the walls of the metropolis, and in the advertising columns of our newspapers, may at this moment be read the following announcement, viz: "To be sold by Auction, by order of the Mortgagees, the well-built and very important public building known as the 'Surrey Masonic Hall.'"

Can this be read by any of the numerous members of our Craft in the South Metropolitan district without a twinge of conscience for non-assistance to a body of men who have done their best in the interests of Freemasonry, and have worked heartily and thoroughly against adverse circumstances to carry out an undertaking which it is admitted on all sides was not only a need, but of the greatest importance in promoting the "morale" of the Order by disassociating the practice of its ritual from the influence of tavern accommodation? I cannot now stay to compute the number of brethren within the district, but feel assured that it is sufficiently large to warrant the assertion that a contribution averaging amongst them the value of our smallest golden coin would have sufficed to prevent so deplorable a circumstance as the offer to public competition of the handsome building the promoters have erected.

In the report of the ceremony of laying the foundation or, as it was termed, the memorial stone, in May, 1874, I find the statement that for so long a period as ten years previously strenuous endeavours had been made to secure such a building. The first association formed for that purpose under the style of "The Masonic Hall Company" was registered under the Joint Stock Companies Acts, 1856-7 by twenty-four brethren, the capital being stated at £5000, in shares of £1 each, and I well remember that its early expectations were bright, although at that time the number of South Metropolitan Freemasons bore no adequate proportion to the present number and the anticipations of the later Company. The enthusiasm it evoked however soon died out, and subsequent attempts proved also fruitless. Not daunted, although probably disheartened, several of the "twenty-four" still kept the project afloat, and waited the better opportunity, which came at last, and in 1872 the two remaining of the original promoters obtained the adhesion of other brethren and with their assistance the present Company was formed. The Capital was fixed at £3000 only, in 600 shares of £5 each, and it was, I think, not unreasonably assumed that from amongst the many members of the Order surrounding the locality chosen for the Hall so small a share list would be speedily filled. The Directors laboured assiduously to interest both lodges and individual brethren, and their project met with universal approval and promises of support in all directions; but the failure of former attempts had great influence in causing that support to be withheld until assurance in the shape of "bricks and mortar" was given. Then there would be no hesitation! Then shares should be taken and cheerful assistance given! So, by the munificent aid afforded by two or three of the directors, the site was selected, a portion of the building was erected, and the memorial stone laid by the Prov. Grand Master on the 29th May, 1874, with great éclat, and still further approval and promises. And then began a time of trial for the directors, having committed themselves to the building of the hall they must needs go on, and the usual result of monetary complications ensued. Differences of opinion arose among the directors as to this, that, and the other plan of carrying out the project to completion in the face of difficulties occasioned by the non-fulfilment of the promises, so apparently earnestly made. Again the liberality of individual members of the board, the architect, and the builder himself, prevented the "Surrey Masonic Hall" remaining a carcass to this day, and at last the "substantially built public building of handsome elevation" was completed.

But where were all the promised shareholders; where the assurances of support? It was never intended or announced that the company should be a purely commercial speculation, or pay its shareholders more than a merely nominal dividend. It was built more than principally for the uses of Freemasonry, and the income from such use was to have covered cost and annual expenditure. It will be a standing disgrace to the fraternity if the hall ever becomes anything but a Masonic Hall. "It is there!" is the consolatory reflection of many who have lost time and money in the endeavour to raise it, and now it should be for others to keep it devoted to its original purpose. It has been a hard task for those who have connected themselves with this and former attempts, and they have seen their associations gradually dissolved by death, removal, and other circumstances, until now the directory of the Company does not contain the name of any one of the originators of the building. And it is in my personal knowledge that those who now form the "Company" have been equally unselfish in respect of both time and money as were their predecessors. Surely the "Craft," or that portion most nearly interested in the maintenance of such useful premises, should now take their part in the work and save the building for its original purpose. How that can be done at this critical moment I must confess myself unable to suggest; but, nevertheless, something should be attempted, if possible, to prevent so great a scandal to our Order as would be evidenced by an inability to keep what it has cost so much to obtain. In another week, say, even after a few days, it may be too late to do anything. In a great dilemma even little hopes give much encouragement, and a suggestion which at another time might appear ridiculous may be now worth some consideration. I venture to make one, and although perhaps no good may come of it, who knows what it might lead to? This will be read I hope by many on Saturday, the 28th inst. The auction is fixed for Tuesday the 31st. On Monday, the 30th, at six in the evening, let all those who think some sort of consultation might not be altogether unproductive, meet at the Hall itself, and see the outcome. It is a very impromptu summons, but Freemasons will be there to meet Freemasons, and them only. It is but right that the general body should know how very unselfishly individuals have acted in the general interest, and although I have no present connection with them, I can "a tale unfold" so creditable to the directors of the Company that in common fairness it should be heard. And if they can be supported and the building saved to the purpose for which it was dedicated there are many Craftsmen who will rejoice equally with

Clapham, July 25rd, 1877.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am a Freemason of the old school, of that period when Masonry was a bond of friendship, when brothers acted by rule, and our lodges were focusses for the exchange of fraternal love.

To what are we to attribute the decadence of this bond of union? I say that Masonry is not what it was. Do you require proof? Then go to the Surrey Masonic Hall, that beautiful structure at which all South London, whether Masons or otherwise, ought to feel proud.

It is now plastered over with large bills announcing that the mortgagee has foreclosed, and the Hall is to be sold by auction.

Is not this sufficient to make a Mason blush? What are the shareholders about that they thus allow their property to be sacrificed, their honour tarnished, and an esteemed brother ruined for having placed too much confidence in the brethren.

Let a meeting at once be called of the shareholders, and the conduct of the Directors and their Secretary be severely censured; let a new board be formed, to which not one of the present managers should be selected, and with a new secretary the builders' claim could soon be paid with honour, and the Hall continue to be a success.

Yours fraternally,

AN EX-DIRECTOR.

MASONIC LOTTERIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read with great interest the correspondence in the Freemason relative to "Masonic Charities." Whilst approving the laudable effort of Bro. Constable, I must admit that I think the system recently adopted by our lodge, if more generally known and practised, would tend more to increase the sympathy of the Craft, and encourage the brethren in systematic benevolence, than the strictly "Masonic Lottery," to which exception is being taken, besides perhaps, satisfying the "conscience clause" of those who object—seeing that all subscribers are expected, eventually, to pay for what they receive.

I enclose a copy of our rules and regulations, for publication herewith—if you deem them of sufficient importance—which you will observe, provide for brethren becoming Life Governors or Life Subscribers to any, or all of the Masonic Charities, either at once, or by small contributions, according as circumstances or inclination may permit.

I am pleased that the movement is so far successful with us, as to allow of first ballot being taken at our next Lodge meeting on the 31st inst.

Yours fraternally,

"448."

Rules and Regulations for the Government of the Benevolent

Fund in connection with Saint James's Lodge, No. 448.

1. The object of this fund shall be primarily—to increase the number of life-subscribers and life-governors of the Masonic Charities, and the moneys shall at all times be kept separate and distinct from the regular lodge funds, and be solely and strictly confined to purposes of Masonic benevolence, either of a local character, or in connection with the general charities of the Order.

2. The fund shall consist of subscriptions of one shilling and upwards per month, payable in advance, annually, half-yearly, quarterly, or monthly, at the option of each brother contributing.

3. The management of the fund shall be in the hands of a committee of six subscribing brethren, to be elected annually, by the contributing members, at the same regular lodge meeting as the Worshipful Master of the ensuing year. The first committee shall be appointed forthwith, on those rules being approved by the brethren in open lodge. The committee shall present an annual report to the members, shewing the state of the fund, and number of life-subscriptions or life-governorships obtained; and such annual report shall be sent to the brethren, along with the regular balance sheet of the lodge.

4. When and so often as the sum in the Treasurer's hands shall amount to five pounds five shillings, over and above working expenses, a ballot shall be taken for a life-subscription at the ensuing meeting, of which due notice shall be given in the regular lodge summons. The successful subscriber shall have the privilege of selecting the particular Charity to which the donation is to be made, and the Treasurer of the fund, or the lodge member of the Provincial Charity Committee, shall forthwith forward the same, in such brother's name, to the Secretary or Treasurer of the Charity selected.

5. Whenever and so often as any brother shall have paid to the fund the sum of five pounds five shillings without drawing successfully, he shall be entitled to a nomination as life-subscriber or life-governor, as the case may be, when the fund reaches the requisite amount; and if several brethren shall become entitled to a nomination at one and the same time, the priority of their respective claims shall be decided by ballot.

6. Any brother ceasing to contribute to the fund, shall thenceforth have no control over the money he has already subscribed, but the same shall be at the disposal of the committee.

7. If any brother should become entitled by ballot to a life-subscription, or life-governorship, and cease to subscribe to the fund previous to his having paid in contributions the requisite amount of five pounds five shillings, or ten pounds ten shillings, as the case may be, he shall be solicited to pay up the balance at once; and in the event of the money not being obtainable from him, the matter shall be dealt with by the committee, as the nature of the case may require.

8. Should any matter or question arise for which these rules do not provide, the same shall be decided by a majority of the contributors present at any regular lodge meeting.

9. The members are empowered to frame any new rule which they may deem needful for the well-being of the fund; but no new rule shall become effective, nor an old rule abrogated, until such proposed new rule, or such abrogation of any existing rule, shall have been submitted to the consideration and decision of the subscribers at two several lodge meetings, and at every such meeting the matter proposed shall have been severally determined upon and sanctioned by the majority of the contributors present thereat.

The foregoing rules were approved and adopted by the brethren in open lodge, this 29th day of May, 1877.

C. T. RHODES, W.M., Treasurer, pro. tem., who will be glad to receive the names and contributions of all brethren who may feel disposed to confirm and redeem the promises made by them at their initiation.

CHARITY ORGANISATION REFORM.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I do not seek to re-open this question in its entirety, but simply to call attention to one point connected with it. I think Bro. Simpson has expressed a hope, in accordance with the Editor and other correspondents, that more attention shall be paid by the committees of the Institution to the original cases. As I was one of the few present on Thursday last, I can bear testimony to the anxiety and carefulness exhibited by all in dealing with the petitions for admission. If the same scrutiny be exercised by the General Committee, I, for one, cannot see the need or possibility of any reform in that respect. I do not agree with the result of the Quarterly Court deliberations, in one case especially, but I yet feel bound to express my admiration of their evident desire to do justice to all concerned. One fact, I think, became patent to all, that more power must be given to the Quarterly Court to deal with all the cases of petition for admission, as an ultimate court of appeal, as the apparent want of any such power has resulted in placing on the Institutions list a case, (I say it in all kindness to the poor orphan boy), which ought never to have got on the list, and may lead to many and grave abuses, if it be not at once dealt with, and rectified. Even on Thursday, when two cases were withdrawn, they were withdrawn apparently by resolution of the General Committee, though announced to the Quarterly Court, and in future, I for one, think that the Quarterly Court should have power to reject or affirm any recommendation of the General Committee. I should not have troubled you with this, but as I always like to give "justice where justice is due," I think it right to defend the General Committee and the Quarterly Court of the Boys' School from the popular allegation and the hasty assertion that they do not consider the cases carefully. The truth is, as one correspondent has well said, the greatest abuses are committed, not by the committees or officials, but by those good brethren, who in defiance of the laws of the school carry cases on to the list which ought, neither legally or morally, to be there at all.

I am, yours fraternally,

A LIFE GOVERNOR OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

GIRLS' SCHOOL ELECTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Sometimes you kindly allow a brother to draw attention in your columns to an exceptionally deserving case; such a favour I ask at your hands, in order that I may point out that of Mona Beatrice Henet.

Her father was well-to-do, but through no fault of his own sank into poverty; this and illness, (repeated rupture of bloodvessels on the lungs) have prevented his supporting his six children; the mother (from a fearful affliction) has been able to do nothing; and I therefore ask the subscribers who may remain unpledged to render a real service to this distressed family.

The case is strongly recommended by the following brethren:—Bros. R. C. Elze, D.P.G.M. Somerset, Redgar, Bridgwater, L.G.; E. Turner Payne, P.G.D. England, P.G. Treas. Somerset, Bath, V.P.; Dr. Samuel Bryant, P.G.S.W. Somerset, Bristlington; J. L. Stothert, P.P.G.S.W.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am sincerely gratified by being enabled to announce that at the final meeting of the Board of Stewards on the 17th inst. that the result of the kind efforts of 225 Stewards for the festival of the Boys' School was declared to be £13,535 12s. 6d., with two lists not received.

Faithfully and fraternally yours,

FREDK. BINCKES, Secretary.

[By an unaccountable error, this letter did not appear in our last week's impression.—Ed.]

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I see by your paper that there are 63 candidates announced to fill nine vacancies in this school. It is said some of them ought never to be in the list.

As a subscriber, I intend to vote for those I consider most worthy; more especially those dear orphans that have lost both parents, leaving no means for their support. I have no doubt that others will follow my example. By this means those that are deserving will be elected, and those not deserving will be rejected.

Yours fraternally,

A SUBSCRIBER TO THE SCHOOL.

MASONIC CANVASSING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I should like to have the opinion of some of your correspondents on the following points.

A, a Freemason, is a candidate for a public appointment. Shortly before the election Z., a P.M., issues a circular, signed him as such, to the Freemasons of his town, requesting their votes in favour of A. The circular is marked private and confidential.

Is or is not the issuing of such a circular contrary to the principles of the Craft?

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

Scio.

[Most entirely so.—Ed.]

A CORRECTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

May I ask you kindly to insert the enclosed letter, which appeared in the Windsor and Eton Express of July 7, and allow me (in justice to myself) to state that my attention has only just been drawn to the fact that a somewhat similar report occurred in your paper of June 30, otherwise I should have contradicted it sooner.

To the Editor of the Windsor and Eton Express.

Sir,—I see in your issue of to-day that in the report of the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Berks and Bucks at Wycombe, on Monday last, I am credited with having contributed 100 guineas to each of the Masonic Institutions. I shall feel obliged by your correcting this in next week's paper, as it was not me, but Bro. John Palmer, who was referred to.

THE SHAKESPERIAN CONTROVERSY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As I see that you are having another "shine" about Shakespeare, I think it well to send you the following extract from an American contemporary, which, I think, is very "apropos."

"A Shakesperian student affirms that Double, double, Toil and trouble, has no reference to matrimony. Persons about to embark will feel easier."

I am, yours fraternally,

Spot.

ROLL OF LODGES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As I am now trying to get together certain statistics of Freemasonry throughout the Globe, I should be obliged if the Prov. Grand Secretaries of England Ireland and the colonies would kindly publish in your columns the number of the brethren on the rolls of their respective Provinces. I should be obliged also if the Grand Secretaries of Foreign Grand Orient lodges on the Continent, and throughout the world, if they would in the same manner supply me with the correct number of Masons on the Rolls of their respective Grand Lodge, Orients &c.

Yours fraternally,

GEO. R. HARRIOTT.

Prov. G. M. Wigton and Kirkcudbright.

THIRD CLASS BY ALL TRAINS.

(PROPOSED TESTIMONIAL TO MR. ALLPORT.)

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Freemasons, as a rule, are always amongst the foremost in recognising true merit and philanthropic motives; knowing this to be the case, I trust you will allow a brother to bring the following proposition before the Craft.

I venture to assert that the public generally are more indebted to the general manager of the Midland Railway Company than to any man living for introducing this system, although he had arrayed against him the powerful opposition of most of the great railway companies.

Out of gratitude for conferring this great boon on all our poorer brethren—who can now travel express for third class fares, taking with them their wives and families to the sea-side, I think some kind of acknowledgment should be devised, whereby the directors of the Midland Company may know that this great good, bestowed on us all, commercial men and excursionists alike, mainly through the perseverance of their general manager, is fully appreciated both by Masons and the general public.

I trust the subject is worthy the attention of the Editor of the Freemason, and that brethren will support the proposition.

Yours fraternally,

ATHOLL.

[We entirely agree.—Ed.]

"IF A BODY."

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Remembering the good old song, I wish to ask my brethren, through the medium of your excellent paper, which is read aloud in our family circle, whether the following questions, which appear in 'an Israeliish contemporary, do not require an appropriate answer in the columns of the Freemason.

If a body see a body 'propriate his hat, should a body kick a body just for doing that?

If a body catch a body stealing his "old rye," should a body kick a body till a body cry?

If a body spy a body creeping round his lot, shouldn't a body give it to a body 'ot?

If a body catch a body carrying off his wood, should a body whale a body if a body could?

I am, yours fraternally,

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

BELGRAVE LODGE (No. 749).—A lodge of emergency was held at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Wednesday, the 18th inst., for the purpose of raising the five following brethren, viz.:—Bros. Hall, Mulcock, Tubbs, Watson, and Spragg. On Friday, the 20th ult., the members dined together at the Alexandra Palace, Muswell Hill. The members and visitors, to the number of sixty-two, sat down precisely at six o'clock, under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. J. W. Hobbs. There were also present Bros. Greenwood, S.W.; Booker, J.W.; Garrod, Sec.; Runtig, Treas.; Gardner, S.D.; Coltart, J.D.; Groves, I.G.; Painter, Hester, Grogan, and Battey, P.M.'s.; Bros. Forscott, Spragg, Wallace, Tubbs, Hull, H. Booker, Leech, Hall, Snelling, Hill, Cruden, Fitley, Culpin, G. S. Elliott. Amongst the visitors were Bros. Buss, Assist. G. Henry Garrod, Sec., an illuminated testimonial and handsome timepiece, subscribed for by the members of the lodge. The testimonial, the work of Bro. Badkin was greatly admired, and ran as follows: "Belgrave Lodge, No. 749.—This testimonial, together with a timepiece, value twenty guineas, was presented by the members of the above lodge to Bro. Henry Garrod, P.M. 177, 720, 749, and P.Z. 507, 749, 766, to mark their appreciation of his services as Secretary for nineteen years. Signed by the W.M., Wardens, and P.M.'s." The musical arrangements were carried out by Bro. Kift, assisted by Bros. Collins, Trencher, and Upstone, and gave great satisfaction. A special train left the Palace a little after ten, bringing the brethren to town, after spending a most enjoyable evening.

WEST SMITHFIELD LODGE (No. 1623).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, July the 19th, at the New Market Hotel, King-street, West Smithfield. Business being ended, the lodge was closed and adjourned to Thursday, September the 21st, to meet at two o'clock p.m. An excellent banquet was served under the personal superintendence of Bro. T. Butt.

LIVERPOOL.—Garston Lodge of Harmony (No. 220).—The annual installation meeting of the members of this lodge was held at the Wellington Hotel, Garston, near Liverpool, on the afternoon of the 25th ult. [Bro. John Hughes, I.P.M., acting as W.M., opened the lodge, supported by Bros. C. Leedham, P.M.; J. W. Baker, P.M.; R. Jones, P.M.; S. Tickle, J.W.; W. S. Vines, P.M.; P.G.S., Treas.; G. Price, Sec.; J. Tewkesbury, S.D.; T. F. Hill, J.D.; Dr. J. V. Carter, J. E. Lloyd, H. Mercer, W. Lovelady, W. Tait, C. Sayer, H. Paine, J. S. Bullock, W. S. Matthews, J. W. Pickering, J. Blair, S. Chambers, and others. The visitors were Bros. W. T. Bro. S. Tickle was placed in the chair of W.M. by Bro. J. W. Baker, P.M. The officers invested were Bros. Dr. V. Worthington, I.P.M.; G. Price, S.W.; T. F. Hill, J.W.; J. W. Baker, P.M., D.C.; W. S. Vines, P.M., P.G.S., Treas.; James Carter, Sec.; J. N. Clark, Org.; J. Tewkesbury, S.D.; H. Hatch, J.D.; A. Sharples, I.G.; T. Wainwright, S.S.; J. R. Ivey, J.S.; and J. Robinson, Tyler. The brethren subsequently dined at the Reading Room, the caterer being Bro. Woods. The annual picnic of the lodge was held at Grappenhall on the following day.

STOCKPORT.—Lodge of Peace (No. 322).—The Lodge of Peace held its Festival of St. John on Tuesday, July 10th. The brethren assembled at the lodge-room, at the Warren Bulkeley Arms Hotel, soon after three o'clock, when the ceremony of installing the W.M. elect, Bro. N. Dumville, was duly performed by Bro. J. C. Chetham, P.M., P.P.G.S.B. (Cheshire). The following officers were appointed by the W.M., and invested by the Installing Master, viz., I.P.M., Bro. John Williamson; S.W., Bro. J. H. Carrington; J.W., Bro. Worsnop; Treas., Bro. Hickson, P.M.; Secretary, Bro. Philip Chetham, P.M.; S.D., Bro. L. D. Bradbury; J.D. Bro. G. Bennett; D. of C., Bro. Bardsley, P.M.; Organist, Bro. Colonel Wilkinson, P.M., P.P.S.G.D. (Cheshire); I.G., Bro. Robert Chetham; S. Steward, Bro. A. J. Bradbury; J. Steward, Bro. Ginger, Tyler, Bro. Joseph Meadows. The visitors present included were Bro. Schofield, W.M., 104; Bro. Wills, W.M. 1213; Bro. Strangeways, S.D. 111; and others. After the closing of the lodge, the brethren proceeded to the banquet, which was artistically laid out in the adjoining room, by Bro. Firth. In addition to the usual toast list, several songs and glees were given by an efficient party of vocalists engaged by the W.M., consisting of Bro. Edmondson, Bro. M. Stafford, P.M., Bro. W. Dumville, P.M., Bro. H. Lister, S.W., and Bro. Balfe, assisted by brethren of the lodge. Bro. Fielding ably played the pianoforte accompaniments. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly proposed and responded to, and a thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent. The meeting was invested with additional interest from the presence of Bro. Philip Chetham, the aged Secretary, now over ninety years of age, and upwards of sixty years a Mason; said to be the oldest Mason in England. The old gentleman is hale and hearty, and does most of the Secretary's work at the present time. It is worthy of remark, too, that this lodge can boast of having amongst its members three generations of one family. Bro. J. C. Chetham, the Installing Master on this occasion, is the son of the aged Secretary, and has himself four sons in the lodge, the eldest of whom (Bro. John Chetham) like his father and grandfather, is a P.M. of the lodge.

ERITH.—St. John and St. Paul Lodge (No. 615).—The "Men of Kent" and the "Kentish Men," with no thought of the feuds which raged between their ancestors, met in amicable array at the Pier Hotel, Erith, on the 27th ult, to do honour to the installation of the Master elected to the high position of presiding over the lodge, this being Bro. Charles Andrews, P.M. of No. 77, and of No. 299, and P.P.G.S. of Kent. There was a great array of Prov. Grand Officers of the White Horse county, which is not by any means a "one horse" county, as its history proves, and its Masonic sons show as much spirit in carrying out the work of the Craft as their progenitors of old showed in maintaining their liberties. The venerated and kindly brother, Dr. Spurrell, P.G.J.W., the Master, opened the lodge. Brother Andrews then being Senior Warden and Bro. Churchley, Junior, and after the minutes were unanimously confirmed, Bro. T. Smith, P.P.G.P., and Bro. Coste, P.G.D.C., took the Wardens' chairs. Bro. T. W. Knight, P.M. and P.P.S.G.W., worked the ceremony in a style which elicited the warmest praise. The officers appointed, and at once invested with the jewels and cares of office, were S.W., Bro. Churchley; J.W., Bro. T. W. Knight, (in place of a brother who was to have taken the position); S.D., Bro. James Fletcher; J.D., Bro. Robert Stone; I.G., Bro. George Fletcher; Treasurer, Bro. Poole; Secretary, Bro. Spurrell, I.P.M.; D.C., Bro. Tomkins; W.S., Bro. Boyden. Bro. Martin was invested as Tyler. After the addresses in the course of the ordinary lodge business, the following motion, proposed by the W.M., and seconded by the S.W., was carried unanimously, that those who rise "to eminence by merit" shall be fined; in other words the resolution ran: "That each Worshipful Master on his installation shall pay a sum of five guineas; each Senior Warden on his investiture shall pay the sum of three guineas; that each Junior Warden shall pay the sum of two guineas on his investiture, to the Treasurer of the lodge, and the amount so subscribed to be voted to the Masonic Charities in such manner as the majority of the brethren in open lodge shall determine." The sum thus raised was devoted to charity, being voted to the Boys' School. With many expressions of pleasure it was also resolved to present the I.P.M., Bro. Spurrell, with a P.M., jewel, valued at ten guineas, as a slight acknowledgment of his services in the faithful discharge of the Mastership of the lodge. The lodge then closed in due form, and the brethren mustered for dinner. There were present Bro. Charles [Ralph,

P. Prov. G.S.D.; Bro. W. Russell, W.M. 77, Prov. S.G.D.; Bro. A. Spencer, Prov. G. Sec. of Kent; Bro. Binckes, Sec. of the Boys' School; Bros. Bevan, of the Erasmus Wilson Lodge; Leake, I.P.M. of 77; Smith, P. Prov. G.P.; Hastings, Prov. G.P.; Lewis Etheridge, W.M. Sidney Lodge; J. Nunn, P. Prov. J.W.; Staff-Sergeant Spinks, W.M. United Military Lodge; John White, P.M. 228 (Freemason); Gamble, W.M. Florence Nightingale Lodge; Pryce, Woolwich, &c. After the dinner the grace was chanted with an exquisite harmony of voices by Bros. Musgrave, Hubbard, and Nunn. The W.M. gave, in fitting terms, "The Health of her Majesty," who, he reminded the brethren, was an earnest supporter of the Masonic Charities. In giving the toast of "The M.W. the Grand Master," after whose name stood the Shakespearean motto, "The immediate heir of England—the hope and expectation of our time," the W.M. said his Royal Highness, as time rolled on, took more and more interest in his duties as Grand Master, and every Freemason had good reason to be proud of his Royal Highness as the Grand Master. The toast was heartily accepted, and then the W.M. proposed the toast of "The Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers," who were commended as "whom you all know are honourable men," the W.M. remarking that the proof of the attachment to the Order of these noblemen and gentlemen who held the highest positions in the Craft was shown in the fact of its high position and the high estimation in which it was held in the world. This toast was warmly cheered. The W.M. then, in felicitous terms, proposed "The Health of the Provincial Grand Master for Kent, Lord Holmesdale," whose name on the programme was adorned with Shakespeare's words, "A lord to a lord, a man to a man," and his lordship was warmly toasted with all honours. The next toast was "The Deputy Grand Master for Kent, Bro. Eastes, and the rest of the Grand Officers," against which stood the motto, causing much comment, "Your voice shall be as strong as any man's in the disposing of new dignitaries." The W.M. said that they would all have been glad to have seen Bro. Eastes among them, but doubtless his many duties had kept him absent, and the company would gladly welcome the Prov. G. Sec. Bro. A. Spencer said the reason why the D.P.G.M. was not present was because he was on his holidays. The Prov. Grand Officers might be divided into two classes—those who enjoyed their honours, and those who had to work. There was a natural desire to share the Prov. Grand honours, but as there were forty-two lodges in the province and only eleven purples to be given each year, it was impossible that every lodge should have a share of the honours each year, and those who did not must exercise patience. He trusted that in time every deserving brother would receive the recognition of his merits. The I.P.M. then proposed the toast of "The W.M.," whose motto stood on the programme, "The Master, he is a good one, and his worthiness does challenge much respect." Bro. Spurrell said that the W.M. had distinguished himself very grandly in the cause of Masonic charity, and did not look for any reward for doing good. The W.M. was most deserving of the interest and good wishes of his brother Masons, and all would wish him a successful year of office, an office which was certain to be well worked. The W.M. acknowledged the toast, and then the I.P.M. was toasted, Dr. Spurrell being spoken of as one than whom "A braver place in our heart's love hath no man." He acknowledged the toast, and "The Visitors" were toasted, with the motto "And will he not come again," to which many of them, through Bro. Smeed, gave an affirmative response of the most unquestionable character. "The Officers of the Lodge," prefaced by the words "One step I have advanced thee," was acknowledged by Bros. Churchley, Knight, and Poole. "The Charities" had no response from Bro. Binckes as he had departed by the last but one train, Bro. Hastings responding instead, and the W.M. observed that the Lodge of St. John and St. Paul would be one of the first in the province in its action towards the charities, and did not seek for members. The increase of the applicants for the charities—this, too, of members who had only been a short time in the ranks—proved that discrimination was not at all times exercised. The Tyler's toast concluded the programme, and the evening's entertainment was most pleasantly diversified by the efforts of Bros. Musgrave, A. Hubbard, J. Nunn, Smeed, and Miss M. Roby.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw (Lodge No. 1002).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 24th inst., when there were present Bros. R. Robinson, P.M., who presided in the absence of the W.M.; I. Evening, S.W.; Jos. Kerr, J.W.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Org.; W. F. Lamony, P.M. and Sec. (Freemason); W. Shilton, P.M.; S. Thwaites, S. Ferguson, S. C. Robinson, H. Peacock, W. Rule, and W. Potts, Tyler. The meeting was called for the purpose of raising Bro. W. Rule, and the first part of the sublime ceremony was most efficiently performed by the W.M. in the chair, with Bro. Lamony as S.D., after which Bro. Lamony took the chair, and worked the concluding portion of the degree. The lodge was then closed in form. At a meeting of the Permanent Committee the same evening, Bros. W. Taylor and Shilton were appointed to superintend the removal of the furniture from the old lodge room, and the fitting up and decoration of the new premises, in time for consecration, on the occasion of the Provincial Grand festival.

LIVERPOOL.—Neptune Lodge (No. 1264).—The annual picnic of the brethren connected with the Neptune Lodge, No. 1264, holding its meetings at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, took place on Wednesday, the 25th ult., the scene of the day's festivities being the Victoria Gardens and Hotel, Thatto Heath, a short distance from Prescot, which is a perfect oasis in the desert of surrounding coal mines and manufactories. The "Old Neptune" has long been celebrated for the unanimity, cordiality, and fine brotherly feeling which animate every brother, from the W.M. to the youngest initiate, and as a consequence the annual pleasant "out" which has existed for a number of years has invariably been looked upon and experienced as the most enjoyable in the district. Weather favoured the outers, the day being bright and breezy, and the whole of the day's proceedings passed off as "merry" as the proverbial "marriage bell," without the slightest semblance of a hitch. The officers vied with each other in promoting the harmony and enjoyment of those who were present. About 80 ladies and brethren started from Lime-street shortly before ten o'clock, and arrived safely and expeditiously at Thatto Heath Station, where the floral beauties of the platforms, carried out by Mr. Prescott, station master, were the subject of universal admiration. Here the party was met by the St. Helen's borough band (under the conductorship of Mr. J. Parr), and the whole party marched to the grounds, nearly the whole of the "natives" turning out to see the procession. Amongst those present were Bros. Joseph Healing, W.M. (whose urbanity and attention contributed largely to the day's enjoyment); A. Cotter, I.P.M.; H. Williams, P.M.; Joseph Korn, S.W.; W. C. Webb, J.W.; P. B. Gee, P.M.; Treasurer; J. Linaker, Secretary; A. C. Wylie, S.D.; Thomas Walton, I.G.; C. Foxtergill, S.S.; J. Hughes, J.S.; and C. Rigotti, Assistant Secretary. There were also a number of visitors from other lodges. Dinner was served in the large covered marquee by Mr. W. Carr, landlord of the hotel and grounds, and the excellence of his catering has certainly never been excelled in the history of the Neptune. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts having been duly honoured, the Worshipful Master proceeded to perform the unusual but pleasing task of proposing the health of Bro. Royle and his bride, mentioning his long connection with the lodge, and wishing the newly-married couple every prosperity. The toast was received in a manner which showed the great popularity of Bro. Royle. Bro. Cotter, I.P.M., then proposed "The Health of the W.M.," stating that this was not his first year of office, as he had been the Master of the lodge when it was first consecrated. He said they must all be aware of Bro. Healing's efforts to make the lodge successful, and especially on the occasion on which they were then assembled. The W.M., in replying, said he was fully rewarded by witnessing the happy re-union of the brethren and their friends. He concluded by proposing "The Health of the Past Masters," to whose cordial co-operation, he said, was owing the great success of the gathering. Bro. Cotter responded, "The Officers," replied to by Bro. Korn, S.W., and "The Press," responded to by Bro. Joseph Wood, Treas. 1094, (Freemason), followed; while "The Visiting Brethren" was coupled with the name of Bro. Gotham, 823. In proposing "The Ladies," the W.M. said that, as one of the first promoters of Masonic picnics in this province, he hoped the day was far distant when such social gatherings should be discontinued, as they conduced to harmony and brotherly love. Bro. Cotter responded. As an extra toast, the W.M. gave, as a most appropriate toast for the Neptune Lodge, and one which they were proud to honour, "The Absent Seafaring Brethren," and gave a hearty welcome to those brethren who had just come home. Bro. Campbell responded. "The Health of the Host and Hostess" followed, the W.M. wishing them prosperity in their new undertaking. The after dinner proceedings were enlivened by a number of songs rendered by the brethren. The afternoon was spent in a most enjoyable manner in the grounds, and both then and after tea dancing was kept up with spirit on the green. The party, headed as before by the band, returned to the station at nine o'clock, and arrived in due course at Lime-street, very much pleased with their day's outing. Bro. Cotter, I.P.M., acted as Director of Ceremonies, and performed the duties to the satisfaction of all.

HAMPTON.—Lebanon Lodge (No. 1326).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on the 21st ult. at the Lion Hotel, when there were present amongst others, Bros. Gilbert, W.M.; Fox, S.W.; Williams, P.G.O. of Middlesex, W.M. elect 1275; J.W.: J. Hammond, P.M., W.M. elect, 1572; S.D.; Shackleton, W.M. 1524; J.D.; F. Walters, P.G.D. of Middlesex, Sec.; Dubois, P.G.D. of Middlesex, I.P.M.; J. T. Moss, P.M. P.P.G.D.; W. Hammond, P.M., P.P.G.D. of Middlesex; and Balwin, P.M. 1423, P.A.G.P., I.G. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the report of the Audit Committee was read and adopted. The ceremony of inducting Bro. Fox, W.M. elect, to the chair of K.S. was most ably performed by Bro. Baldwin. The beautiful language of the ritual was enhanced by the clearness of the enunciation that accompanied it. To mark their appreciation of Bro. Baldwin's efforts, the lodge unanimously passed him a vote of thanks, and which was ordered to be entered on the minutes. The officers invested were, Bros. Williams S.W.; J. Hammond, J.W.; Shackleton, S.D.; Baldwin, J.D.; Gloucester I.G.; F. Walker Sec.; Lawrence, D.C.; Shott, Organist; H. Potter, P.M.; W.S.; Stone A.W.S. Bro. Fox having vacated the chair, the I.P.M., Bro. Gilbert, initiated Mr. Williams, of the mercantile marine, in a very careful manner. Previously to the lodge being closed, the W.M., in a few well-chosen sentences, presented the I.P.M. with a very handsome souvenir of his year of office in the shape of a costly jewel, which compliment was duly acknowledged by Bro. Gilbert. The visitors were, Bros. Hunt, W.M. Hemming; Crag, S.W. 1586; T. Walls, J.W. 1381; Simmons, J.W. 1559; Clarke, D.C. 1654; Hartnall, 871; Murphy, 1512; Knell, 1607. The banquet was well served by the caterer, Bro. Murphy, and at its conclusion the long array of toasts were briefly given from the chair: The honour of replying upon behalf of the Prov. Grand Officers, past and present, fell to Bros. Dubois and Baldwin, and Bros. Hurst and Walls responded for "The Visitors." "The Past Masters" toast was responded to by Bros. Gilbert and Moss.

The latter dealt with the subject matter most humourously, and also proposed the health of the W.M., in a very neat speech. P.M. Fox in reply briefly said that he felt exceedingly honoured at being placed in the Master's Chair of so large and powerful a lodge as the Lebanon, and he hoped that his year of office would be a most pleasurable one to all parties, at least nothing should be wanting on his part to make it so. "The Initiate" having been given, Bro. Williams responded by saying that if he could not make a useful Mason he would endeavour to prove a worthy one. During the proceedings Bro. Walls entertained the brethren. "The Officers" having been proposed by the W.M., was acknowledged by the Junior Warden. Bro. Smeed having been called upon to discharge his duty, the brethren departed until the 18th of August next.

GREAT STANMORE.—Abercorn Lodge (No. 1549).—The second season of this prosperous summer lodge was completed on the 14th ult. and witnessed a large gathering of brethren, to greet the advent of the highly popular Bro. Osman Vincent, who had been unanimously elected for advancement to the chair of K.S. The lovely weather gave an additional charm to the quiet and rural but delightful spot where this lodge meets, and many enviable expressions invariably proceed from visitors at these re-unions whilst enjoying the beautiful scenery and exquisite summer flowers. The meeting, was, in honour of the occasion, well and worthily sustained, everything passing off to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. J. W. Garrod, for the last time in his year of office, at 2.45, and was well supported by his officers—Bros. Vincent, S.W.; Tidcombe, J.W.; Rogers, Treas.; Veal, Sec.; Ebbs, J.D.; Winter, Organist; Eversden, I.G.; Helsdon, I.P.M.; Middleton, Tyler; and the following brethren: Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B.; H. T. Swatton, Peach, Hunt, E. G. Swatton, Clark, Buck, Darby, Long, Meek, Thompson, Marshall, Lavin, Johnson, Felton, Smith, Roy, and visitors, J. W. Garrod, 889; Woodstock, P.M.; Walker, Hitchcock, Humphress, and George, 733; Rogers, P.M. 902; Hall, 34; Nethersole, 840; Mapleson, 95. After disposing of the preliminary business and confirming the minutes of the previous lodge; great satisfaction was expressed by all present at the Secretary's announcement of the prosperous report of the audit meeting on June 13th, and state of the finances. The ballot being unanimous for the admission of Bros. Thompson and Smith, of No. 733, and Dr. Lavin, 404, those brethren were welcomed accordingly, it also proving favourable for the admission of Mr. W. F. Middleton, that gentleman was duly enlightened by the W.M. to the First Degree. He then, after opening his lodge to the Second Degree, invested Bro. R. Helsdon, I.P.M., with his collar, and entrusted him with his jewel for the purpose of installation. The W.M. elect having been duly presented by Bro. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B., and also having acknowledged in the customary manner those ancient charges to which all must assent prior to that elevated position being bestowed, the interesting ceremony was completed in the presence of several P.M.'s and purple honoured brethren, whose congratulations were as hearty as sincere, equally with the rest of the brethren when admitted to pay homage to their new W.M. After the customary salutes and the effective rendering of those beautiful addresses which form so great a feature in this ceremony the brethren were unanimous in according their thanks to the I.P.M. for having again so ably illustrated this duty, and the W.M. proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bro. Tidcombe, S.W.; Ebbs, J.W.; Eversden, S.D.; Marshall, J.D.; Roy, I.G.; Helsdon, M.C.; Hunt, W.S.; J. Middleton, Tyler; the responsible duties of Treas. and Sec. being again left in the hands of Bros. Dr. Rogers and C. Veal, and Bro. H. Llewellyn Winter, re-appointed Organist. On resuming the lodge to the First Degree, the W.M. invested his I.P.M. with the usual handsome P.M. jewel, for which he suitably and gratefully responded. The W.M. also proposed Mr. Ede Pontchalon and Mr. G. H. Hall for ballot at the next meeting. The Secretary adverted to the subscriptions for the Burdett Testimonial Fund as progressing favourably, and had instructions to increase such by a donation from the lodge funds. He also announced that after next meeting the lodge would probably number 30 subscribing members, and in accordance with bye-law No. 7, the initiation fee should be raised to seven guineas. Hearty good wishes from the various visiting lodges completed the business, and the W.M. effectively closed the lodge at 5.10 in perfect peace and harmony. The banquet was served at 5.30, and the usual unlimited hospitality was observed, the new W.M. showing how happily he was fitted also for this branch of his duties. The various toasts were given in the most appropriate manner, and the responses were all equally unanimous. In reply to his own health by the I.P.M., the W.M. honestly observed (what is generally but too true) that he had that day been very nervous as a young man on taking so exalted a position, but feeling now how genuine was the support of his brethren he was decidedly on better terms with himself, and hoped to shew, during his year of office, that his best efforts would succeed in maintaining the reputation so liberally accorded to the Abercorn Lodge. The toast of "The Initiate" brought the old Entered Apprentice's Song from the Secretary; in fact, this is now becoming in many lodges that officer's duty. The chorus, as usual, was hearty and effective. The toast of "The Visitors" was responded to by each and all, and they were most lavish in praise, not only of the working of the lodge but of their hospitable and hearty reception. The musical contributions of the brethren were equal to the occasion, and needed no help from without, the Organist being a host in himself, and was ably supported by Bros. Garrod, Johnson, &c. The W.M. having passed the highest eulogiums severally upon his officers, nothing now remained but the Tyler's toast, which was quickly given, according to ancient custom, the brethren separating with the honest conviction that the Abercorn Lodge still maintained its enviable reputation, not only for the good of the Craft, but itself in particular.

STAINES.—Musgrave Lodge (No. 1597).—The regular July meeting of this lodge was held at the Angel and Crown Hotel, Staines, on Saturday, the 21st ult. The lodge was opened punctually at 3 o'clock by the W.M., Bro. F. Keily, Prov. Grand Treas. Middlesex, supported by the following brethren: Bros. E. Amphlett, S.W.; G. Pythian, (visitor), acting J.W.; I. G. Dunn, S.D.; G. P. Gillard, J.D.; H. T. Bing, I.G.; J. Gilbert, Tyler. There were also present Bros. Wilson, P.M. 209, acting I.P.M.; R. G. Jewell, W. H. Stevens, A. S. Paterson, T. Hulburd, 40; Jno. Prince, 209; W. Fowler, 1305; and several other brethren. After the lodge had been opened in due form the W.M. called upon the Hon. Sec. to read a dispensation of the M.W. Grand Master, for the initiation of Mr. F. G. Hulburd, aged 18, a "Lewis," into Freemasonry, which ceremony was performed in a very excellent and impressive manner, the charge being delivered by Bro. Wilson, the acting I.P.M. The sum of five guineas was then voted to the Burdett Testimonial Fund, and after receiving one proposal for initiation the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting room, where a very enjoyable evening was spent.

Knights Templar.

NEWPORT.—Gwent Preceptory.—The Gwent Preceptory of Knights Templar was held at the Masonic Hall, Dock-street, Newport on Thursday, 26th ult., at 7 p.m., where the following were present:—Lieut. Col. Lyne, G. Constable, P.E.P.; Capt. S. G. Homfray, P.E.P.; Sir Kt. W. Williams, E.P.; Sir Kt. W. Pickford, W. Watkins, J. Piggford, H. J. Groves; Capt. A. Thrale Perkins, P.G. Chap. of England; H. Tweedy, and others. The minutes of the last preceptory were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Bro. Francis Green Lake, of the Philanthropic R.A. Chapter, Abergavenny, and he was unanimously accepted and installed as a member of the Order by Sir Kt. W. Williams, E.P., who performed the ceremony in a very effective manner. Sir Kt. W. Pickford was then proposed by Sir Kt. W. Williams, and seconded by Sir Kt. Capt. S. G. Homfray, to become the E.P. for the ensuing year. The ballot was then taken, and he was unanimously elected to be installed at the next meeting. Sir Kt. W. Williams was proposed, balloted for, and elected as Treasurer. There being no other business the preceptory was closed. The Priory of Malta was deferred until the next meeting, in consequence of the unavoidable absence of Major Shadwell H. Clerke, Grand Sub Pr or of England, one of the founders of this priory, and who usually performs this ceremony in such an effective manner, when it was earnestly hoped that he would be present.

Ancient and Accepted Rite.

The ballot was then taken for Bro. Francis Greenlake, Philanthropic Lodge, Abergavenny, who was unanimously elected and made a member, the ceremony being performed by the M.W.S. Bro. R. J. Chambers was then duly installed as M.W.S. for the ensuing year, by Capt. S. Geo. Homfray, 30°, and then appointed his officers. In pursuance of a resolution on the circular by Bro. W. Williams 18°, the perfection fees of this chapter were reduced to three guineas. Several brethren were then proposed for ballot at the next meeting, and the chapter was closed in harmony. After passing a resolution of extreme regret at the absence of Gen. Doherty, 33°, Inspector General of the district, through illness, and a fervent hope that he would be speedily restored to his usual health and spirits, a P.M. W.S. jewel was presented to Capt. A. Thrale Perkins, 32°, in recognition of his services as M.W.S. for the past year. The brethren then adjourned to a banquet at the King's Head, when a very pleasant evening was spent, and Bro. H. J. Groves in his usual manner provided the harmony.

Red Cross of Constantine.

Sir Knight R. Brown, M.P.S. occupied the throne, surrounded by a full complement of officers. Bro. W. Vines, W.M., 1299, was duly exalted by the M.P.S., assisted by Em. Sir Knight Clark, Past P.S. All below the rank of Enthroned Sovereigns then retired, and Sir Knight John Capell's enthronement as M.P.S. was efficiently performed by Ill. Sir Knight Dr. J. Kellott Smith, Dep. Int. General. Eight Sir Knights took the order of St. Lawrence, and two guineas were handed over to the funds of the Hamer Benevolent Fund.

SUPREME GRAND CHAPTER.

On Wednesday evening the quarterly convocation of Supreme Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of England was held at Freemasons' Hall.

Dr. R. Hamilton presided as M.E.Z.; Col. Burdett as H.; and Comp. S. Rawson as J. Among the other companions present were Col. Creaton, as S.E.; Capt. N. Phillips, S.N.; Peter de Lande Long, P.S. James Glaisher, as 1st A.S.; Robert Grey, 2nd A.S.; A. J. D. Filer, Robinson, F. Adlard, Hyde Pullen, J. C. Parkinson, Thomas Fenn, Benjamin Head, Capt. Platt, Andrew Holman, P.G.S.B.; R. T. Elsam, Z., 185; J. McDougall, H. 913; C. A. Cottebrune, P.Z. 177, &c.; John Canham, H. 22; Edward Cox, P.Z. 360; R. Loveland-Loveland, Z. 257; Henry Reed, P.Z. 180; C. Burmeister, Z. 538; W. Stephens, Z. 865; E. Driver, H. 742; H. C. Levander, P.Z. 720; Dr. Ramsay, Z. 877; H. Massey, P.Z. 619 (Freemason); and J. R. Kerr, P.G.J., G.C. of Canada. There were also several other Principals of chapters present.

After Grand Chapter had been opened, the warrants recommended by Grand Chapter Committee to be granted were granted.

The granting of the charter for the Wanderers' Chapter raised considerable discussion, some companions holding that as Grand Chapter had a rule that no charter should be granted to a lodge which had not been three years in existence, the rule ought not to be relaxed in favour of this lodge, which, though a military lodge, had only been in existence fourteen months. In the end the companions resolved not to grant the charter.

A motion, of which Comp. John Mason had given notice, was not proceeded with, because Comp. E. J. McIntyre was on the South Wales circuit, and Comp. John Mason was too ill to attend.

The next business was the voting 100 guineas for the relief of the sufferers by the fire at St. John, New Brunswick.

Col. Creaton said that all the companions were familiar with the circumstances attending the late lamentable fire at St. John, in New Brunswick, and he should, therefore, in a very concise form, place them before the companions. There were 375 acres consumed and 7000 families were burnt out, making about 20,000 people houseless; the value of the property destroyed was about 13,000,000 dollars, of which only about one-fifth was covered by insurance. With this simple statement he thought he might at once put the motion—"That the sum of 100 guineas be granted from the funds of Grand Chapter for the relief of the sufferers by the fire at St. John, New Brunswick. He was sure it would be a great boon to those sufferers, and, at the same time, a very graceful act.

Comp. S. Rawson, acting J., seconded the motion, and added that the amount should be sent to Grand Lodge of Quebec for distribution, as they were best able to appropriate the amount.

Comp. Thomas Fenn, objected to this, as there was no reference to Freemasonry in the matter. He would propose that it be paid to the general fund.

Comp. Creaton said he presumed this would be the Mansion House Fund.

Comp. Rawson consented to this, and the motion was carried without a dissentient voice.

Grand Chapter was then closed.

GRAND LODGE OF MARK MASTER MASONS.

The ninth annual festival in aid of the Mark Benevolent Fund was held at the Alexandra Palace on Wednesday, the 1st inst., the R.W. Bro. Right Hon. the Earl of Donoughmore, G.S.W., in the chair, supported by the following, including, as will be seen, some guests not belonging to the Craft:

R. W. Bros. C. F. Matier, P.G.W.; V.W. Rev. F. W. Thoys, G. Chap.; Fredk. Davison, G. Treas.; Fredk. Binckes, P.G.J.W.; G. Sec.; Thos. Meggy, P.M. Macdonald Lodge, P.G.M.O.; W. Bros. Berridge, P.M. Macdonald, G.D.C.; S. Rosenthal, P.M. Old Kent Lodge, P.G.M.O.; J. H. Wynne, P.M. Old Kent Lodge, P.G.I.G.; Bro. J. H. Spencer, W.M. Southwark 22, P.G.I.G.; J. S. Funkenstein, P.G. Steward; Alfred Williams, P.M. Macdonald, G.D.C.; Richard Boggett, W.M. Humber; P. S. Robinson, Humber, 182; A. Middleton, P. G. Steward Lancashire; Geo. Higgins, P.G.W. North Wales and Cheshire; H. R. Cooper Smith, Carnarvon Lodge; Baron de Ferrieres, Capt. Henry Berridge, T. J. Pulley, J.W. Aldershot Military Lodge, Henry Wm. Binckes, P.M. Old Kent Lodge, G.A.S.

There were also many ladies, it being one of the principles of the Mark Masons in holding their festivals to arrange that ladies add to the lustre of their banquet table.

The banquet was served in admirable style by Bros. Bertram and Roberts, the lessees of the Alexandra Palace. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Madame Thaddeus Wells, the vocalists being Mad. Thaddeus Wells; Mad. Alice Barnett; Bro. Frank Elmore; and Mr. Horscroft; and the instrumentalist, Bro. Henry Parker, P.P.G. Organist, Middlesex.

At the conclusion of the banquet, the Chairman rose and said, Ladies and Brethren, in introducing the toast list to you to night, I should just like, before I begin it, to state what the nature of the toast is. There are some toasts which are usual on all occasions like the present, and there are others which are of special importance, and though I have no doubt they will all be received by you with pleasure, there are some—especially the toast of the evening—which will demand more attention than the rest. We must not forget that there are such things as trains, which wait for no man, nor must we overlook the new class of men that has sprung up—the obstructives—and I assure you though I have some Irish blood in my veins, I have no wish to be classed with the Irish obstructives, and therefore I should not waste time over the toast list. With these few observations, I give you the first toast "The Queen and Mark Masonry."

The Chairman:—Brethren, the second toast is "The Health of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." And I see on my toast list that the name of one member is particularly referred to, namely, Prince Leopold. I feel very much honored in proposing this toast, and the mention of Prince Leopold's name is very agreeable to me, because I and another brother Mason lately vacated offices which were afterwards held by Prince Leopold, and his illustrious brother; and we feel honoured that offices held by us are considered not unworthy of these illustrious brethren.

The Chairman:—It is only a few weeks ago that I had to propose this toast that I am about to give you. I proposed it after very valuable advice I received from the very worshipful brother sitting opposite (Bro. Binckes), together with information upon what I may call the statistics of the Mark Degree, which enabled me to put before the party assembled the very satisfactory effect of having occupied the Grand Master's chair. I reminded the company assembled of the effect I refer to, namely, that there were a great many Mark Grand Masters alive. We were only a lot of men sitting round that table, and I now repeat it for the benefit of the ladies. It is a very curious fact that we have seven Grand Masters alive, and, I believe, well, for it is so short a time since, that it is very unlikely anything has happened to them. I state it with a view to encourage them to think that if they could in any way persuade those with whom they have influence to become Mark Masons, they might be doing a very good action. There are the Earl of Limerick, the Earl of Carnarvon, Lord Leigh, Lord Holmesdale, Bro. Portal, Bro. Beach, and Bro. Lord Percy. Brethren, I give you "The Grand Masters, Past and Present."

Bro. Baron de Ferrieres:—Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen, I confess that it is a great pleasure for me to rise and be able to say "Ladies" as well as "Brethren." We have not quite reached the position of America, where the ladies are Masons, and where they have lodges of lady Masons. Though we cannot say "Sisters" it is a great pleasure to say "Ladies," and I trust that the ladies will confess that the ladies are treated better by Mark Masons than by Masons in general. The last festival I attended was in Freemasons' Hall, where the ladies viewed the dinner from a gallery. Here, however, we have had them amongst us, and I am sure we have all enjoyed our dinner the better for their society. The toast committed to my hands, [I presume, because all present are Grand Officers, or Past Grand Officers,] is the Health of Lord Sk. Imersdale, and all the Grand Officers Past and Present." We have heard that there is something very conducive to health, in the Grand Mastership of Mark Masons, and there appears to be every probability of our numbers increasing very rapidly. I confess, as a Mark Mason, I do think our Craft is not recognised as it should be; I do think that Masons in general are apt to look down on Mark Masonry; are apt to look upon us coldly. However gentlemen, without prolonging the time, I will at once give you "The Health of the Grand Officers, Past and Present," coupled with the name of Bro. Matier.

Bro. Matier:—Right Worshipful Brother Chairman, ladies and brethren, for the last six years, my name has the honor of being coupled with the toast proposed. It is always with a very large amount of diffidence that I rise to respond to it, there being great number of brethren who could respond to it much better. Suffice it to say of the Grand Officers, that I believe, I and they have done our best. As Deputy Grand Master, we have had Lord Skelmersdale. In addition to this post he occupies the office of Prov. Grand Master of the Province of Lancashire, the largest province in Mark Masonry. The other Grand Officers it would ill become me to speak of, seeing that you sir, are the chief of them for the present year; and that the Past Grand Officers have done their duty, I think this meeting amply shows. Bro. Matier concluded by reminding the Chairman, that in proposing the health of the Royal Family, he had omitted to call attention also to the Duke of Connaught, who also belonged to the Mark Degree, adding that he obtained it in Ireland, where he would shortly be made Prior.

Major Barlow:—Ladies, brethren and friends, I have now to propose a toast, and I am perfectly sure that you will anticipate what that toast is; I allude to our worthy chairman who has presided over us this evening, (loud and continued applause). After that reception it will not require much more for me to say, except that the G.S.W. of the Mark Degree, has presided over us; and I also have very great pleasure in stating to the brethren connected with the Mark Degree that this has been the most successful collection we have had; with that process the influence of the Chairman has much to do. It is so with all charities, and we know that it is so. The song which is to follow is rather appropriate, because as we have always a fresh president every year, and we are now to hear a song of "The love who has sailed away," which, I think, is rather appropriate. Without further preface I beg to propose "The Health of the Right Hon. the Earl of Donoughmore, S.G.W. of England, long life, and prosperity to him. I only wish to add that I trust I may live to see him occupy the position of G.M. in the Mark Degree.

The Chairman:—Ladies, brethren, and gentlemen, I do not know quite what to respond to this toast. I think I may say that the song has been very impressive, and calculated to carry one away. My invitation to take this position this evening was rather sudden, and the notice somewhat short, but these sudden pleasures are always the greater. The position I occupy to night I shall look back to with pleasure and pride. I have heard a rumour that there is a lot of money flying about. I hope it is true; it will be a happy recollection for me, with these words I will ask you to accept my very heartfelt thanks for the way in which you have received my name, and I will now proceed to the more important matter of the toast of the evening, "The Mark Masonic Benevolent Fund." Well, you will expect me to go a little into the history of the fund. It is now nine years, and I think we may say that steadily—for nine years measures the age—the prosperity of the fund has been on the increase. There is one feature connected with the fund, which to me individually is one of very good omen; and that is that the fund is not connected with the Freemasonry of this country alone. In giving relief we have gone beyond the channel, and have also assisted brethren in Scotland and Ireland, and this was done in what I may call the struggling days of the fund; in these struggling days the effort was made, and the effort has now met with its reward. Whenever a pressing emergency did arise there has been no stinginess, but substantial aid has been forthcoming. In the past year three large grants were made from the fund. As far as the fund itself is concerned it has reached a point where its prosperity is assured. Now, however, I want to think of those to whom the prosperity of the fund is due. There are two names in particular. One is Bro. Meggy, whose exertions have been very great, and participating with him is Bro. Binckes, and to these two are mainly due the success of this fund. I am told, apropos of this particular matter, of a school in contemplation in connection with this fund when it reaches a certain state of prosperity—that there will be a school for the children of Mark Master Masons, assisted by their own particular fund. And I should like to express the wish before we sit down that some progress may speedily be made in it. When we are dealing with any particular fund the object is generally a charitable object, and if we can assist what extends over a very large section of the Craft by means of this fund without restricting the objects of the charity or hurting ourselves,—what I mean is if we keep ourselves within the four corners of the intentions of the fund, we need not be perfectly exclusive, and we can be helping others. With these words I conclude, and have said them with the wish for the prosperity of the institution and with very keen appreciation of its success.

Bro. Meggy, in returning thanks, stated that during the last nine years twenty-four families had received substantial assistance from the fund; and latterly the generosity of the brethren had enabled them to increase the amounts they could give, so that sums of £20, £25, or £30 were given when occasion arose. It was satisfactory also to say that they had £600 at present invested.

Bro. Binckes, Grand Sec., also returned thanks, and stated that the present year's was by a very considerable sum the largest amount collected at any festival of the Mark Degree, and after some earnest appeals on behalf of the school, called upon the Assistant Sec. (Bro. H. W. Binckes), to announce the amounts of the Stewards' lists, which were as follows, giving a total of £232 2s.

Total.....£232 2 0

Bro. Frederic Davison proposed "The Health of the Board of Stewards," coupling with it the name of Bro. Boggett, who had collected the largest amount.

Bro. Boggett having returned thanks, Bro. Meggy proposed "The Health of the Ladies," which (with the Chairman's concurrence) he called the toast of the evening, as the ladies were the most important feature in securing the success of these festivals, and he trusted that those who came would use their influence to bring their friends another time. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Cooper Smith, who briefly returned thanks.

The musical arrangements were very complete, and the efforts of the artistes pleasantly filled the intervals between the speeches. We may congratulate Bro. Binckes on the admirable arrangements, which secured so pleasant an evening.

The total receipts from the revenue into the National Exchequer from the 1st April to the 14th inst. were £21,805,837. In the corresponding period of last year they were £21,442,931. The expenditure was £26,644,677, against £26,521,291 last year. The balance in the Bank of England on Saturday was £1,132,430, and in the Bank of Ireland £532,405.

THE SURREY MASONIC HALL.

The meeting suggested by our correspondent, "P.M., P.Z.," in his letter, published in our columns last week, was held at the Surrey Masonic Hall on the evening of Monday last.

Amongst the brethren present were Bros. Dr. Pinder, G. H. N. Bridges, N. B. Headon, M. S. Larham, T. L. Green, E. Moody, E. Clark, S. Drysdale, H. Garrod, James Stevens, and W. Ramsey.

Although the gathering might fairly be considered sufficiently representative, it was not, however, so large as the circumstances of the case had led us to expect it might be, and it was soon discovered that the large hall would not be required for the purpose of the meeting. The dining hall was therefore thrown open, and this was very sufficiently filled by members of the Craft, shareholders in the Company, or otherwise.

Bro. James Stevens was nominated as chairman, but, stating that he was the writer of the letter which had led to the meeting, declined that position, and Bro. N. B. Headon, P.M. The Great City Lodge, No. 1436, was requested to preside.

The Chairman, after briefly explaining that the gathering together of the brethren on this occasion was more for the purpose of consultation on the position of the Surrey Masonic Hall Company, and the risk of the building being purchased for, and devoted to other purposes, than for the purpose of passing resolutions condemnatory or otherwise on past proceedings in relation thereto, hoping that the subject would be approached by each speaker in a proper Masonic spirit, and, as far as possible, free from personality or bias. A cool, calm consideration was necessary, and that could not be given if feeling was to be strongly displayed. The meeting was not formed, or held, under authority. It was more as a committee of interested persons than as a body of men capable of deciding upon action, and of carrying that action to a practical result. He called upon Bro. Stevens to read the letter published in the Masonic paper, and this was done.

From this point a lengthy discussion ensued, the details of which we consider it quite unnecessary to report. Freemasons have natural feelings and impulses, and it was not to be wondered at that the narration of certain past proceedings should have occasioned indignant remarks, which, although each speaker endeavoured to avoid personality, could not fail to be unacceptable to some individuals. However, all who desired to speak were listened to with attention, and many propositions were put forward with a view to remedy the past.

A Director endeavoured to explain away some of the extraordinary proceedings which were attributed to the Board, but failed to do so. Indignation was expressed that the shareholders had not been called together prior to the announcement of the sale by auction under foreclosure by the Mortgagees.

Sympathy for the builder, Bro. J. Oliver, whose unpaid balance for the erection of the buildings amounted to nearly £4,000 was generally expressed, and the tone of the meeting subsequently became that of a general desire to see him saved from so great a loss. Nothing however, resulted of a practical nature, as so little time remained for carrying out any of the suggestions made, and after two hours debate the brethren separated, very doubtful indeed as to the issue of the morrow's public sale of the building.

FREEMASONRY IN IRELAND.

On Thursday week the Provincial Grand Lodge of the South Eastern District, met in the Masonic Hall, The Mall, Waterford. Never was there a larger meeting of the members of the Order held in the city. The large Lodge-room was well filled by brethren from the remotest parts of the district, and visitors from the Drogheda and Poonah Lodges. In addition to its being the quarterly communication, the members of the Craft assembled in great numbers, to show their regard and respect for their new R.W. P.G.M. Brother Stephen Moore, M.P., whom his Grace the Duke of Abercorn has appointed to that high dignity. They also were anxious to show the high estimation in which his predecessor, Sir John Keene, was held, and to express their gratitude for the genial rule he held over them from the formation of this Masonic Province, and also to testify their regret for Brother Denny, who has been his Deputy. After the R.W.P.G.M. was installed, he appointed Brother Guff, P.P.G. Treasurer, to be his deputy. The officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge for the next year were then elected in the following order:—D. A. Milward, (5), P.G.S.W.; W. H. Constable (44), P.G.J.W.; T. Swan (116), P.G.S.D.; H. Waugh (32), P.G.J.D.; J. Sunderland (32), P.G.I.G.; J. E. Murphy (5), P.G. Treasurer; Rev. J. DeRenzy (297), P.G. Secretary and Chaplain; C. Fennell (44), and R. Walley (32), P.G. Stewards; J. Moreland (297), P.G. Organist.

Having transacted all business coming before it, the Lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to the refreshment rooms, where a sumptuous entertainment was provided under the banner of No. 5 Lodge, catered in the best style by Sergeant Tiffin, when the new P.G.M. presided. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, and as is done at all Masonic banquets, there was a collection made for the relief of the distressed members of the Order. The brethren separated at an early hour in "peace, love, and harmony."

Much credit is due to the Secretary Bro. Murphy, for the admirable manner in which he arranged for the banquet and meeting.

Bro. Col. Craton's proposition that be voted 100 guineas toward the relief of the sufferers by the fire at St. John's, New Brunswick, was we are happy to record carried unanimously at Grand Chapter on Wednesday.

ANOTHER PROPOSED NEW MASONIC HALL IN LIVERPOOL.

The proposal to build a new Masonic Hall at Kirkdale, situated at the north end of Liverpool, has been for some time under consideration in the Walton Lodge, 1086, and to this lodge certainly belongs the credit of being pioneer in the movement. The result is that a company has been formed and the building already commenced. The proprietary and directorate are strictly confined to Masons, in order to avoid any clashing of interest in the management of affairs. The new hall, to be called the "Skelmersdale Hall," will be situated in Westminster-road, at the corner of Kirkstall-street. The building will have a handsome brick front and side elevation, and the upper part is to be exclusively reserved for Masonic work, and will be fitted with every convenience, the lodge-room being about 50 feet by 27 feet. The lower part will be principally taken up by the dining rooms, which will also be available for public meetings, &c., while the basement will contain kitchens and heating apparatus. The brethren have taken a large number of shares, and it is hoped that the building will be finished in time for the new year installation. It is believed that the Prince of Wales Lodge, the Walton Chapter and the Walton Mark Lodge, &c., will transfer their meetings to the hall, and it is hoped that the Provincial Grand Master of West Lancashire, Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, will consent to open the building with Masonic honours. The architect is Mr. John Wells, and the contractors Messrs. R. Wells and Sons.

THE FIRE IN ST. JOHN, NEW BRUNSWICK.

The Masonic fraternity occupied the front portion of the upper story of Ritchie's building, Princess-street, where there were two lodge rooms and several ante-rooms; whilst the encampments of Knights Templars and the bodies of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite had their ante-rooms, armouries, &c., on the storey below. For nearly twenty-one years this building was the head quarters of Freemasonry in New Brunswick, the Craft having previously held their meetings in Marshall's Building, corner of Princess and Charlotte-streets, which also fell a victim to the fire. On September 24th, 1856, the late Grand Master Keith, of Halifax, then Prov. Grand Master of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, dedicated the hall to Freemasonry, there being a Masonic procession, service at Trinity Church, at which the Rev. Jerome Alley preached the dedication sermon, a Masonic dinner and ball in the evening. The late Alex. Balloch was Mr. Keith's Deputy for New Brunswick, but the old hall now in ashes witnessed the formal constitution of the Prov. Grand Lodge of New Brunswick, with Mr. Balloch as Prov. Grand Master, the installation of his successor, Robt. T. Clench, and finally the constitution of the Grand Lodge. The walls of the room were adorned with the warrants of the different bodies that met in the hall—some of them dating back to the early days of the present century, that of Carleton Royal Arch Chapter, whose origin goes back to 1802, being the oldest—with choice engravings and paintings, including many Masonic pictures of interest, an oil painting of the Ascension of considerable merit, a portrait of the late Bro. Balloch, and Bro. Furlong's gift to the Grand Lodge of the "Prince of Wales in his Masonic clothing." To everything that hung on the walls some special interest attached. One bore the signature of some eminent man, another commemorated some great event, another was the work of a departed brother, another recalled struggles and trials of which nothing now but happy memories survived. Each body had its own silver jewels, banners, furniture, regalia, and cabinets. In the armoury of the Encampment of St. John of Knights Templars was probably the finest set of uniforms in Canada, and the loss falls not only on the organisation itself, but on individual members, whose private property was there. The Union De Molay Encampment also had a large lot of fine regalia. Albion Lodge had, among other treasures, one set of silver jewels, the gift of the late Asst.-Commissary General, Oliver Goldsmith, a descendant of the poet. Indeed, it would not do to undertake to recount the treasures which the Masonic bodies possessed—all are swept away. Not a thing in the room was saved, and no amount of money can replace the losses.

The bodies burnt out were:—Albion Lodge, St. John Lodge, Hibernia Lodge, Union Lodge of Portland, New Brunswick Lodge, Leinster Lodge, Carleton Royal Arch Chapter, New Brunswick Royal Arch Chapter, St. John's Council Royal and Select Masters, New Brunswick Council Royal and Select Masters, Moore Conclave Knights R.C. of Rome and Constantine, Encampment of St. John, Knights Templars, Union De Molay Encampment, Knights Templars, Harington Lodge of Perfection, A. and A. Rite, Harington Chapter Rose Croix A. and A. Rite, the Royal Order of Scotland, New Brunswick Consistory S.P.R.S. 32°.

The Grand Lodge of New Brunswick is also a heavy loser, though it had very little property in the Masonic Hall buildings. Its library and valuables were chiefly kept in the room of the Grand Secretary, W. F. Bunting, Esq., in the City Buildings. All of the books, and there were many rare and curious ones, are destroyed. Indeed, so complete was the destruction that not even was a copy of proceedings of Grand Lodge to be found. A portion of the regalia was preserved. This is but a drop of water however, from an ocean of waste.—St. John Globe.

It has been decided to present the Mayor of Manchester with a gold key on the occasion of the opening of the new Town Hall, and a special design has been prepared and approved by a committee. The top will be of solid gold, pierced and richly enamelled, with the city arms on one side and the arms of the Mayor on the other.

BRO. WILLIAM PITT LELEIOHOKU.

The following Masonic Addresses to His Majesty on the death of H.R.H. Prince William Pitt Leleiohoku, heir-apparent to the throne of the Kingdom of Hawaii, and brother to King Kalakaua, will be read with interest by our readers. We are indebted to Bro. John J. Taylor, J.W. 121, Penzance, for the transcripts, who kindly forwarded them per W. Bro. W. Hughan, P.S.A.D., &c.

IN MEMORIAM.

"Universal Terrarum Orbis Architectonici Summi ad Gloriam."

From the Orient of Kamehameha Lodge of Perfection, No. 1, in the city of Honolulu, Kingdom of Hawaii, under the celestial of that zenith, which answers unto 21° 18' north latitude.

It having pleased the Supreme Grand Master and Great Architect of the Universe, in the decrees of his inscrutable wisdom to summon from an earthly to the Celestial Lodge the spirit of our beloved Brother William Pitt Leleiohoku, one whose youth, devotion to the sublime principles of Freemasonry, and marked abilities gave some promise of a career of future usefulness to his country, therefore,

Resolved, That while in the decease of our lamented brother, this lodge has sustained an irreparable loss, we bow with reverence and submission to the will of God.

Resolved, That we tender our most sincere and respectful condolence to our exalted Brother Kalakaua, to the Royal Sisters of the deceased Prince, and to Her Highness his adopted mother, in their sad bereavement, and we earnestly pray and confidently believe, that God himself will give them "the oil of joy for mourning, and a garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."

Honolulu, April, 24, 1877.

Sire and Brother Sir Knight,—We find it written in the "Great Light of Masonry" that "it is appointed for all men once to die," and the great leveler Death knocks at the door of a Prince's Palace, as well as at the cottage of the peasant, and although we have the consolation of religion to console us in the hour of trial, still when the summons comes for one in the pride of manhood, and with every prospect of a long and prosperous career before him, and eventually to a seat on the Throne which you now so worthily fill, the blow falls with crushing force; and we, the members of Honolulu Commandery, No. 1, of Knights Templar, feel that the Masonic chain which bound us together has been severed, ere yet the link which bound your Royal brother to us had become dimmed in its Masonic lustre, and that that link will only be re-united when we assemble before the Supreme Grand Commander.

But, to you, Sire, your sisters, his mother by adoption, and your brothers-in-law, we tender you on behalf of our Commandery that sympathy which Sir Knights should bear to each other in their afflictions.

We are, Sire,

Fraternally and respectfully,

Hall of Hawaiian Lodge, No. 21, F. &amp; A. M.

Honolulu, May 9th, 1877.

Sire:—It was with the deepest feelings of grief that the Members of Hawaiian Lodge No. 21, learned of the death of their brother W. P. Leleiohoku, on the 10th of April last.

The Lodge desires to express to your Majesty, and to the Royal Family, their sympathy with you all, in this your great bereavement, and to assure you, that they feel very severely the loss of their brother, who had in his short Masonic intercourse with the Lodge, made himself respected and loved.

Sire, in times of grief and trouble, human sympathy and condolence avails but little to soften the blow, but the little the Lodge can offer you and your family of sympathy, they do fully and feelingly.

As a brother Mason you know full well, the brotherly feeling one Mason should have for another; we can assure you that this Lodge, had the full Masonic feeling for your brother; they feel, that in his early death, not only his family, but the whole nation have met with a great loss.

With the renewed expression of the Lodge's sympathy, and condolence to your Majesty and the Royal Family.

We have the honor to be your Majesty's most obedient servants,

Committee { W. F. Allen, P.M.
M. Louison,
Chas. T. Gulick.

To His Majesty, Kalakaua.

THE LATE BRO. HENRY NEWMAN.

The Masonic fraternity in Liverpool have once more been called on to mourn the loss of a brother whose praise was deservedly in all the lodges for geniality, generosity, and nobility of character. Bro. Henry Newman, who for a long time was a worthy member of the Temple Lodge, No. 1094, after a brief illness, died at his residence, "Binfield," Park-lane, Liverpool, on Thursday, the 19th ult. Deceased was formerly connected with the volunteer service, and identified with a number of local charitable institutions and public bodies. He was universally esteemed by an extensive circle of friends in and around Liverpool, and the large gathering at his funeral, which took place at Holy Trinity Church, Waverley, on Tuesday, the 24th ult., where the body was interred in a new family vault, showed how deep and general was the respect for his memory and how great the regret for his loss. The attendance comprised representatives of nearly every class, amongst the number being several well-known Masonic brethren. At the deceased's late residence a short service was conducted by the Rev. P. T. Forfar, minister of Oldham-street Scotch Church, an intimate friend of the family; and the body was afterwards removed to the place of interment. The relatives of the deceased present were Masters Henry, Thomas, and William Newman (sons of the deceased), and his brothers, Bro. Captain W. J. Newman, 80th L.R.V., and Mr. Arthur Newman (who has been associated with him in business as a dentist for about 18 years). Amongst those present at the funeral were Captain R. E. Stewart, Major Robinson, Captain Bradley, Captain and Adjutant Bloomfield, Bros. Councillors G. Peet, G. Fowler, and D. Campbell, Bro. Dr. Kisch, Bro. Dr. R. H. D. Johnson, the Rev. P. T. Forfar, Messrs J. Hood, G. Hunter, J. Moulding, Bros. Joseph Wood, (Freemason), R. R. Martin, C. Campion, J. S. Macbeth, S. Campbell, C. Dvall, C. Powell, H. Lawson, R. Bennett, A. Ralph W. Chapple, T. Langstraw, C. Stewart, W. Peet, Bro. H. Crowther, Bro. W. Gamble, J. Milner, Wilson, J. Winkle, C. Wells, Durandu, R. Compton, Pealing, Fraser, Jones, C. Wignall, W. Ring, N. Ring, &c. The funeral service in the church and at the grave was conducted by the Rev. R. Irvine, curate of St. Mary's, Waverley. Mr. J. J. Monk, was the Organist, and played the "Dead March" in "Saul" as the body was taken into and removed from the church. The solemn funeral service was partly choral, the choristers being Bros. T. Armstrong, P. G. Treasurer, T. J. Hughes, H. C. Harrison, Hogarth, Hughes, jun., and three boys. The 30th Psalm was sung to Felton's chant, and the hymn "Jesu, Lover of my Soul," formed the closing portion of the church service. The responses and the hymn "Jesus Lives" were also sung at the side of the grave by the same choristers. Messrs. J. and W. Okill, Waverley, were the undertakers. The deceased was for some time a member of the Toxteth board of guardians and of the Toxteth local board. He was also honorary dentist to the Orphan Boys' and Infants' Asylums, Myrtle-street; the Stanley Hospital, Bootle Hospital, the Indefatigable Training Ship, and the Seamen's Orphanage. He was also a member of the Temple Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, No. 1094, in which he was greatly esteemed; and he was probably instrumental in creating a large number of life-governors for the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, by his benevolent efforts, than any other brother in the province. The deceased formerly held a captaincy in the 1st L.E.V., and in 1869 he was presented with an illuminated address and sword by the members of his company (E), and with another address by the general corps on his retirement in 1871.

BRO. GEORGE WARD HUNT.

It is with much regret we announce the death of Bro. Hunt, First Lord of the Admiralty. The announcement has caused considerable surprise, coming as it did so closely upon more favourable news, which had led us to expect his early return to the Admiralty in order to resume his official duties. But the hopes of his friends have experienced a sad and unexpected blow. Early on Sunday morning a telegram was dispatched from Homburg urgently requesting the presence of his son, and shortly afterwards a telegram reached the Admiralty asking the authorities not to forward any more official documents, as the right hon. gentleman would for the present be unable to give them his attention. Later on came another telegram announcing that he had expired at half-past ten o'clock.

Bro. George Ward Hunt was the only surviving son of the late Rev. George Hunt, of Buckhurst, Berkshire, and Wadenhoe House, Oundle, Northamptonshire. He was born at Buckhurst on the 30th of July, 1825, and was educated at Eton and Christ Church, Oxford, where he graduated B.A., second in Classics, in 1838, and M. A. in 1851. In the year 1870 he was made an honorary D.C.L. by his university. He married, in 1857, Alice, the third daughter of the Right Rev. Robert Eden, Bishop of Moray and Ross. He was called to the bar at the Inner Temple in November, 1851, and for a short time went the Oxford circuit, but he relinquished practice before he entered Parliament. In 1873 he was made a bencher of his inn, and amongst other appointments he was one of the Royal Commissioners for Inquiring into the Constitution of the Law Courts.

Bro. Hunt first entered Parliament in 1857 as the Conservative candidate for the borough of Northampton, and during his service was extremely popular, his manly, frank nature gaining him the friendship even of his political opponents.

The Lord Mayor announced that in consequence of the lamented decease of the First Lord of the Admiralty, the banquet to her Majesty's Ministers fixed for Wednesday last, would not be held.

The funeral took place on Tuesday, at Homburg. Col. Gardiner represented the Queen. All the English and American residents and visitors attended, including Bishop Macdougall and Bishop Masters, Archdeacon Hopper, and Archdeacon Huxtable, Lord Tweeddale, Lord Waterford, the Earl of Warwick, Lord Forester, and Lord Farham, Admiral Sir John Drummond and Admiral Wiles, General Sir Richard Wilbraham, General Green, and General Wilkinson, Mr. Trelawney, Mr. Miles, Mr. Wedderburn, the British Consul, and many others, more than 100 in number. The Vivid, Staff-Commander Wise, which conveyed the late First Lord of the Admiralty and family to Cologne, arrived at Portsmouth on Tuesday, from Devonport, and proceeded to Antwerp for the purpose of embarking Mrs. Ward Hunt and relatives, but is detained at Cologne owing to the illness of Mrs. Hunt, caused by excessive grief.

BRO. JOHN EMMENS, P.M., &c.

It is also our melancholy duty to record the death of Bro. J. Emmens, a well-known and much esteemed brother of the Old Concord Lodge, No. 172. His funeral takes place on Friday, the 3rd inst. The brethren of the Old Concord will assemble at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, at 11.30 a.m., leaving that establishment at 12.30 p.m. for Brompton Cemetery, which they expect to reach at 1.30. White kid gloves and ties will be worn, and a sprig of accacia carried by each brother. An account of the proceedings will appear in our next.

Masonic and General Tidings.

A Special General Court of the Governors and Subscribers to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls will be held at Freemasons Hall, on Tuesday next at 4 o'clock precisely, at which meeting Bro. Col. Creaton will move, "That the Building Committee be authorized to expend the sum of £2500 in the purchase of a plot of land adjoining the premises of the Institution at St. John's Hill."

The Masons of the English and other lodges of Smyrna, on the invitation of Bro. Stab, P.M. of the Homer, have contributed £50 for the benefit of the Turkish wounded.

His Grace the Duke of Abercorn, M.W.G.M. of Ireland, accompanied by the Duchess, left town on Wednesday last, on a visit to Bro. the Earl of Mount-Edgumbe, R.W. Prov. Grand Master for Cornwall, at Mount-Edgumbe, Plymouth.

The consecration of the Chapter of United Strength, No. 228, took place on Tuesday last at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street. The principal officers installed were Comps. J. Terry, Z.; John Winsland, H.; and Robert Griggs, J.; The ceremonies were performed by Comp. H. Muggeridge, P.G.S. Br. All the founders are members of the mother lodge. A full report will appear in our next.

The Whitehall Review understands that the office of Sub-Prior of the Order of the Temple, vacant by the death of the Earl of Shrewsbury, will probably be conferred by the Grand Prior upon the Earl of Carnarvon. It was hoped that Prince Leopold would have accepted the office, but the state of his health will not allow him to undertake any additional Masonic duties.

The Daily News states that the Masonic lodge of Perigueux has been dissolved. The offence lay in some of the brethren saying that Freemasonry was the most fraternal, rational, and, in its essence, Christian religion in the world. I believe this view is not confined to the Masons of Perigord.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to take under her patronage the Westminster Training School and Home for Nurses, 8, Broad Sanctuary, founded in 1874 by Lady Augusta Stanley, has sent a donation of £100 in aid of its funds.

Princess Louise (Marchioness) and the Marquis of Lorne left Kensington Palace on Tuesday morning for Germany.

Among the soldiers who left for Malta on board the Crocodile on Friday evening, July 27th, was a man who had enlisted in the 2nd battalion of the 13th Light Infantry under an assumed name, but who is now discovered to be really named Burke, and to be heir to an estate in Chancery worth £70,000. A solicitor arrived at Portsmouth shortly before the departure of the troop-ship, and acquainted the lucky fellow with the change in his fortune, but there was no time to complete the formalities necessary for his discharge.—Standard.

The marriage of the Lady Mayoress (Miss White) and Mr. Cecil Price is to be solemnised on Thursday next, in St. Paul's Cathedral, by the Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the Bishop of Ely and Canon Liddon. It is expected that the Bishop of London will also be present. The service will be choral. It is stated that it is nearly 120 years since a marriage was celebrated at St. Paul's.

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.—All Advertisements intended for insertion in our next issue should reach the Advertisement Office, 198, Fleet-street, E.C., by 12 o'clock noon on Wednesdays, and all communications respecting the same must be addressed to THE PUBLISHER.

The Lord Chancellor has offered the vicarage of Sheffield to the Rev. Canon Blakeney, vicar of St. Paul's, Sheffield. The Sheffield Telegraph mentions that should the Rev. Canon accept the vicarage of Sheffield, the next presentation to the vicarage of St. Paul's rests with himself.

The directors of the Midland Railway Company have decided to recommend to the proprietors the payment of a dividend on the ordinary stock for the past half-year at the rate of 5 per cent, per annum.

It is in contemplation to erect a statue of Bro. Alderman Walker, Mayor of Liverpool, in commemoration of his gift of an art gallery to the town.

A meeting of the Urban Literary Club was held on Tuesday week, at St. John's Gate, Bro. S. S. Bacca taking the chair.

Mr. Simmons, the aeronaut, ascended from Dewsbury, on Monday, and descended at Sleaford, 100 miles distant, an hour afterwards.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and Mrs. Tait will leave Addington Park about the 15th inst., to pay a few visits in Ireland, and will afterwards go to Scotland or the autumn.

In nothing are men more fastidious or fanciful than in pens. What one writer would call exquisite another would deem execrable, what one would term beautiful another would consider wretched. Of course, under such circumstances, no pen, however carefully manufactured, can be expected to suit all hands, but by purchasing a sample box of Macniven and Cameron's pens, now of world-wide reputation, any writer, whatever may be his peculiar notions of a good pen, can find one to suit his hand. We have been favoured with samples of many descriptions of pen manufactured solely by this eminent and well known firm, and really feel great pleasure in recommending them to our readers. We cordially endorse the numerous favourable criticisms that these nibs have been subjected to by the Press throughout the world, and quite agree with the following now well-known lines:

"They come as a boon and a blessing to men,
The Pickwick, the Owl, and the Waverley Pen."

The foundation-stone of a Masonic Hall was laid at Barnard Castle, on Tuesday by the W.M. of the "Barnard" Lodge, No. 1230. The edifice will prove an ornament to Newgate, which street has of late years been considerably improved in its architecture. A report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

Financial trouble, we are pained to learn, has overtaken our brethren in Indiana, whose Grand Lodge is embarrassed by a debt of 100,000 dollars. A joint-stock company is spoken of to save the new Masonic Temple at Indianapolis. The Temple is worth a quarter of a million of dollars.

ROMISH INTOLERANCE has been exhibited afresh in Australia, in the case of the late Bro. Maurice Reynolds, a lawyer of repute, of Parramatta. The remains of Bro. Reynolds were refused interment, with the rites of the Roman Catholic Church, because he was a Freemason. The Deputy Provincial Grand Master (Irish Constitution), Bro. Jackson, conducted, however, the Masonic service, and pronounced an eloquent oration at the grave. We are reminded by this incident of a like event that occurred four years ago in Australia, when the Romish priests of Sydney refused to bury the Chief Justice of New South Wales, because he was a Mason, when the District Grand Chaplain, (English Constitution), Bro. Rev. Wazir Brg, M.D., LL.D., performed the last rites of the Craft at his grave. Freemasonry is not opposed to the Romish, or any other Church, but Rome is for ever at war with every liberal principle, and permits her children to have no secrets from her, and not even to do good secretly.

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs set to popular airs, written by Bro. R. Phillips, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. Sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—ADVT.

A notice from the Post Office states that on and after Aug. 1st, a single post-card, or any number of post-cards—whether "stout" or "thin"—may be purchased by the public. The prices respectively will be according to the following scale, namely:—Stout cards: one, 2d.; two, 1½d.; three 2d.; four, 2½d.; five, 3½d.; six, 4d. Thin cards: one, 1½d.; two, 1d.; three, 1½d.; four, 2½d.; five, 3d.; six, 3½d.

The Australian Freemason, in June entered upon its fourth year. We congratulate its Editor, Bro. Dr. Beg, upon its evident prosperity.

The Masonic Eclectic, of Washington, D.C., has just completed its first volume. We fraternally congratulate Bro. Ramey, primarily upon its value, and secondarily upon its beauty.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 2lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as samples, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark-street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea Dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom must be addressed to the Secretary.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Ever useful.—The afflicted by illness should look their diseases fully in the face and at once seek a remedy for them. A short search will convince the most sceptical that these noble medicaments have afforded ease, comfort, and oftentimes complete recovery, to the most tortured sufferers. The Ointment will cure all descriptions of sores, wounds, boils, leg ulcers, eruptions, erysipelas, rheumatism, gout, and skin diseases. The Pills never fail in correcting and strengthening the stomach, and in restoring deranged liver to a wholesome condition, in rousing torpid kidneys to increase their secretion and in re-establishing the natural healthy activity of the bowels. Holloway's are the remedies for complaints of all classes of society.—ADVT.

THE LAST MEETING OF GRAND CHAPTER.

We are glad to note that after the transaction of the usual business, and the granting of several new warrants, Grand Chapter dealt with the opportune motion of our gallant Companion Col. Creaton. All our readers are aware of the dreadful fire at St. John, and Comp. Col. Creaton proposed to vote 100 guineas towards the fund now raising for so many homeless and distressed fellow creatures. We are happy to record that the motion was unanimously agreed to, and the amount will be paid over to the Mansion House Fund. Those of us who take pleasure in Royal Arch Masonry will be gratified to observe the gradual growth of Capitular Masonry and the prosperous financial condition of Grand Chapter. We have always been among those who deeply value and admire Royal Arch Masonry, and can realize the need and importance of the Grand Chapter.

SUMMER MUSINGS.

Summer is upon us in full force, and in its glowing hours some of us may be disposed to think, (if we think at all), that the seasons pass us by very quickly. So in truth they do; but still as they neither accelerate nor decrease their speed, such as that quickness of passage is, such it has been since the Great Architect of the Universe proclaimed his glad and loving Fiat, and the grateful voice of Nature and of man echoed these thrilling and familiar words, "Behold," it is all "very good!" It has often struck us, and perhaps the same idea may have struck the minds of some of our more thoughtful readers, that there is something very wonderful in this unchangeability of the great created world of nature all around us. Years come and go, centuries disappear, ages vanish in turn, and still, summer and winter, cold and heat, day and night do not cease. Strange revolutions and wondrous events take place on this lower earth of ours, great scenes, moving epochs fraught with untold happiness or sorrow to our human race, appear and fade away one by one, but still Nature asserts its ceaseless sway, and continues its unaltered appearance. This earth of ours changes; it is true that its contour receives a sensible alteration of appearance. Dry land becomes sea; sea becomes dry land; hills subside; volcanoes cease their fiery ebullitions; towns and villages utterly disappear; and the whole face of a country or district is greatly and strikingly varied. But through all these outer changes and revolutions, the operations of nature never cease. The seed is sown, the seed is harrowed, the seed springs to life, the seed becomes the full corn in the ear; and the summer harvest is reaped at last, for the food of millions, for the contentment of all. All through these long ages and through these marvellous centuries, through peace and war, through plague and pestilence and famine, through human joy and suffering, and gladness and tears, through the long roll of living and dying men, over the graves of countless generations, all the while the beneficial and remedial processes of kindly Nature, in the good providence of Almighty God, have kept on their ceaseless round. There is no change possible, no destruction no diminution, no revolution for them. Such as Infinite Goodness and Wisdom have planned them, in Infinite Forethought, Contrivance, and Design, such they are still, such they ever will be, alike for the praise and wonder, the grateful memories, and the reverential thoughts of reflective mortals. And as Freemasons, we are bound alike, taught by our symbolic lore and our human sympathies, to regard with mingled pleasure and awe the wonderful works of nature all around us. To us, let us hope, that mighty Creation which spreads before our enraptured gaze on every side is something more than a mere piece of extraordinary mechanism, a mere act of dreary necessitarianism, but rather a compact, astounding, living whole, witnessing, ever to us, that the Hand which made all these things and us is indeed Divine, that that outward and startling fabric of a world of ceaseless wonders is indeed permeated ever, penetrated through and through, by a Living Spirit which tells to all listening ears, and gentle minds, that all we see around us, is the benign handiwork of our Great Creator. When, then, as to day some of us may be strolling, amid childhood's pleasant voices, and fair faces, and warm hearts, by the sands of the great sea, or when we are loitering among green fields, or noting the crops of golden grain, or inhaling the scent of the heather on breezy moors, or resting neath the shades of umbrageous trees, let us call to mind reverently that in respect of these glorious and beneficent gifts of Nature we are not to treat them as idle things, of no account, but we are to value them deeply and truly. Nothing often is so consoling to the jaded heart and strained spirits of our race as the aspects of Nature, in its gentler forms or even in its more startling phasis. There is a soothing and subduing influence for all right-thinking beings in the sights and sounds of the sea waves, in the murmur of the breeze, in the tracery of the foliage, in the gleaming graces of field and forest, of hill and dale, of the goodly lochs, and the luxuriant pastures. The wise and instructed Freemason will regard these outer things gladly and gratefully, and he will look through them all as though, unequalled in themselves and imparting true joy and peace and wisdom to man, yet also bidding us, with no uncertain voice, believe, that we see and hear "voices in the babbling brooks, sermons in stones, and God in everything."

OUR GREAT HOSPITALS.

We are among those who consider our London Hospitals a source of genuine pride and satisfaction to every Englishman! For they are purely English in their conception, in their development, in their labours, and in their views. They represent equally the efforts of enlightened philanthropy and the perfection of medical science—the indubitable spirit of Christianity and the noble toils and skilful assiduity of an admirable profession. In nothing, perhaps, is true benevolence so much displayed and so rightfully employed as in the alleviation and treatment of the many maladies to which humanity is "heir to" in that kindly and unselfish ministering to the urgent and palpable sufferings of the afflicted and tormented of our fellow creatures. Our London Hospitals, founded by benevolent persons, supported by the sympathetic, are, we venture to think, Institutions concerning which all patriotic Englishmen have but one opinion, deserving, as they most surely do, the commendation and confidence of us all. Of late a theory has been started, we hardly know on what authority, certainly not, we believe, on that of the medical profession at large—namely, that "gratuitous medical relief" is a mistake altogether. At the present day, abounding with sciolists and "windbags" of every species and genus, and when men seldom reason, and hardly ever give themselves the trouble to think, no paradox is too perverse, and no proposition is too preposterous but they are sure, to find plenty of teachers and supporters. We are favoured at once with an overflow of "tall talk," of magnificent lucubrations, of dreary essays on so-called first principles. It is at once boldly assumed and dogmatically declared that all "gratuitous medical relief" is vicious and vitiating per se, and without drawing on the sublime memories of the past to restrain and correct the crude ideas of the present, we are coolly and decidedly told that all "gratuitous medical relief" is condemned by the experience of the day, (the experience of the day!—God help us all!), and that in the future, hospitals are, or ought to be, "self-supporting," and the example of the United States is invoked in support of this great revolution. But as often happens, though some writers unnecessarily press the regulations of American Hospitals upon us, in proof of the soundness of their own views, yet they always forget, in their hurry to profit by the so-called "illustration," that the London hospitals and the American hospitals have been founded under entirely different circumstances, and the same rules which apply to the latter may not perhaps equally apply to the former. We shall, however, be very greatly surprised to hear, that the "American illustration" goes very far, if it goes any way at all, as we have read accounts of noble institutions attended to by most skilled members of the medical profession in the United States, in which the principle of administration is with them, as with us, "gratuitous medical relief." But even supposing that the special circumstances of the United States might demand a different system from ours, is that any reason why we should change ours in obedience to a technical cry or a hard and fast line of an abstract proposition, which so far as appears are more tentative than practical, more suggestive than real? That it may be a good thing, and a very proper thing, to establish hospitals for those who can afford to pay for medical treatment there, and prefer to avail themselves of the services of skilled nurses and an able medical staff, is a matter for serious consideration, about which, as in all sub-lunary questions, much may be said, and will be said, on both sides of the case. But coolly and solemnly to propose that because of an admitted "abuse," (countless are the abuses of life), we are to do away at once with a great and admitted "use" is a very striking commentary on the shallowness and superficiality of the hour. We certainly are living in strange times, and have to witness curious episodes. And most distressing is it to the thoughtful mind, when the great difficulty of the hour is to steer clear, as between the excess of dogmatism and the excess of doubts—between the untenable claim of authority and the ill-omened assumptions of scepticism—to find that the more unmeaning, illogical, and unsound a proposition is, the more likely is it to commend itself to the appreciation of the impulsive, and to the acceptance of the unthinking. Hasty assertion, unfounded induction, and audacious arguments, which would have scared Aldrich, horrified Whateley, and distressed Mansel, "are apparently the order of the day just now;" and we need only take up the daily papers to find many specimens of "capital crimes" against right reasoning and common sense, which some of the "Parrots" of this, our generation, indulge in habitually for the amusement of their fellow men, and to their own evident self-satisfaction. We therefore protest, once for all, to-day against the hasty asseveration that the principle of "gratuitous medical relief" is either condemned by the experience of the "Faculty," or hurtful to true charity, or subversive of the proper and needful administration of our great and admirable hospitals. We shall recur to this subject in our next.

SHAKESPEARE AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir,—

My name having transpired in the course of the interesting correspondence on the above subject, I should like, with your permission, to say a word touching the same. As an outsider I should have thought that had Shakespeare been a Freemason, his name, when he was initiated, would have been entered in the book or books of his lodge, and that such book or books would have been preserved. Perhaps, however, I am wrong in supposing that any books whatever are kept, in which case, of course, my suggestion is valueless. Your correspondent, Stephen C. Heath, Esq., makes, I think, a great mistake in giving scraps of quotations from the great poet to show that he was a Freemason. Shakespeare was so voluminous a writer, and touched upon almost every conceivable subject in his writings, that by thus "chopping" his sayings up, as does Mr. Heath, he could with some plausibility be made to be anything. Besides, we all have a tendency, I think, to dwell unduly upon favourite passages in the writings of great men, and tutor ourselves to believe in the end that our prejudices were shared by them. We should learn, more especially when dealing with dramatists, to distinguish between the sentiments they held and those they deemed fit, for dramatic purposes, to put into the mouths of their characters. A Roman Catholic does no violence to his conscience when he asserts that Shakespeare was a member of his faith—he can give many quotations and bits of quotations to favour his argument; the same may be said of a Protestant, or even an Atheist. Let me deal with two or three of Mr. Heath's "hashed up" quotations, given for the purpose of proving Shakespeare was a Freemason.

1st. "Who builds stronger than a mason?"—Hamlet, A. 5, S. 2.

To a non-student of Shakespeare this would read, standing alone as Mr. Heath gives it, as though Shakespeare implied by the question thus put, as it were, defiantly, that none could build stronger than a mason, (by the way, there is no capital M to mason in the original), whereas the question, including others besides masons, is put by one gravedigger to another, and the answer, as we all know, is that the gravedigger builds stronger than any.

2nd. "The labour we delight in physics pain."—Macbeth, A. 2, S. 2.

This may or may not apply in a particular sense to Freemasonry, but I am very certain it applies with great force to all civilised men—and to women too, civilised or otherwise.

3rd. "Friends now fast sworn, whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart."—Coriolanus, A. 4, S. 4.

There is only a comma after the word "heart" not a full stop. The quotation runs thus:—

"Friends now fast sworn,
Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart,
Whose house, whose bed, whose meal and exercise,
Are still together, who twice as 'twere, in love,
Unseparable, shall within this hour,
On a dissention of a doil, break out
To bitterest enmity."

By quoting this passage, for only in its entirety has it any sense, Mr. Heath would give outsiders to think that Freemasons are much given to "falling out" about nothing.

4th. "Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all."—Troilus and Cressida, A. 3, S. 3.

There is no stop whatever after the word "all." Here is the passage:—

"Beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time."

In conclusion, whether Shakespeare was a Freemason or not, I fail to see what good can arise by straining beautiful and well beloved passages from their original meaning. Let Shakespeare be found to have been a Freemason by all means—I do not begrudge your Craft the honour, but in the discussion let there, I pray, be no "fantastic tricks" played with the writings of the great poet.

I remain, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

G. SOMERS BELLAMY.

ROLL OF LODGES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Very singularly about the time that Bro. G. R. Harriett was writing his letter to you of your last issue, I was observing that such a work should be issued about every five years by the united action of the various Grand Lodges.

Bro. Leon Hyneman, now of New York, printed such a work in 1860, entitled the "World's Masonic Register: containing the name, number, location, and time of meeting of every Masonic Lodge in the World, so far as known; also, of every Chapter, Council, and Commandery in the United States and Canada; also the date of organisation, time and place of meeting of every Grand Lodge, Grand Chapter, Grand Council, and Grand Commandery in the United States and Canada, with the Statistics of each Masonic Jurisdiction; also, the name, business, residence and Masonic affiliations, and titles of each subscriber, besides much useful and valuable Masonic information. Philadelphia. Printed for the author by J. B. Lippincott and Co. 1860." (556 well got-up pages.) I suppose it could not have paid, or would have been followed by other editions.

Yours fraternally,

JOHN YARKER.

WEST YORKSHIRE AND THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am sorry I did not, until to day, see my copy of the Freemason of last week, that I might have, at the first opportunity, corrected the error into which your correspondent had fallen. I certainly acted as a Steward at the last festival, but it was not my good fortune to send in the grand sum your correspondent attributes to me. How the mistake can have arisen I can't tell, but I have just referred to your report of June 30th, and see that the sum of £661 10s. od. was placed to my name, instead of the modest sum of ten guineas.

I take this opportunity of correcting another mistake in connection with my name and the Boys' School. On June 16th I was reported as a winner of a life governorship by one of Bro. Constable's tickets—No. 9993—such, however, was not the case. Amongst the tickets I sold for our good Bro. Constable two drew prizes—No. 9993 was one of these, and it was purchased and held by Bro. Joseph Starkey.

I was pleased to hear of West Yorkshire's handsome contribution—£766 10s. od.—suggesting, as it does, that—
"The clouds that lowered upon our house (at Wood Green);

In the deep bosom of the ocean buried."

I am, Fraternally yours,

S. B. ELLIS.

THE LION AND LAMB LODGE, No. 192.

The following appeared in the Masonic columns of the N. Y. Dispatch—

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I can somewhat corroborate the position taken by the writer of the Keystone article on "Free and Accepted Masons," reprinted in the Dispatch of June 24th. Some years ago, being anxious to learn the details of my grandfather's record as a member of Lion and Lamb Lodge, London, I wrote to W. Bro. John G. Marsh, the Secretary of that lodge, in respect thereto. In reply I received several courteous letters, and this truly fraternal brother even went so far as to search the list at Freemasons' Hall, London, and the lodge minutes books for me without charge.

My grandfather, R. W. Bro. Thomas Sothoran, P.M., and in good standing in his mother lodge for over fifty-eight years, was initiated in 1808, under the so-called "York" Constitutions, but really those of "The Ancients." The warrant of the Lion and Lamb Lodge, of which my uncle and my father were also members, was granted December 24, 1789, by the Marquis of Antrim. W. Bro. Marsh informed me that this nobleman "was Grand Master of Masons according to the Constitutions granted by H.R.H. Prince Edwin of York, A.D. 926; and when the union took place in 1813, the constitution of the York (?) Grand Lodge became united with the Grand Lodge of England, so that since that date, the warrant having been confirmed and registered in the books of the Grand Lodge of England, we have continued so up to the present time." The warrant of the lodge commences in a way which cannot be misunderstood so far as the designation "Free and Accepted Masons" is concerned: "We, the Grand Lodge of the most ancient and honourable fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, according to the old Constitutions, granted by H.R.H. Prince Edwin of York, Anno Domini, 926, and in the year of Masonry 4926, in ample form assembled, viz.: The Rt. Worshipful and Puissant Prince Randall William McDonnell, Marquis, Earl and Baron of Antrim, Lord Viscount Dunlacy, Lord Lieut. of the County of Antrim in the Province of Ulster and Kingdom of Ireland, Knight of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, one of his Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, and in that part of Great Britain called England, and Masonical jurisdiction thereunto belonging to, Grand Master of Masons, &c."

The numerical position of Lion and Lamb Lodge, after the union of the Moderns and "Ancients" in 1813, was No. 325; in 1832 it was altered to No. 227, and in 1863 to 192.

So much is to be learned on the various issues involved that I would recommend those interested to study what I consider the two best works on the subject, and which cover the whole of the debatable ground from every conceivable standpoint. They are Leon Hyneman's "Freemasonry in England from 1567 to 1813, including an analysis of Anderson's Constitutions of 1723 and 1738, authorised by the Grand Lodge of England." 12mo., pp. 192. New York: R. Worthington, 1877; and William James Hughan's "Memorials of the Masonic Union of A.D. 1813." 4to., pp. 120. London: Chatto & Windus, 1874. In conclusion, I should say that the list of Grand Masters and Grand Secretaries from 1717 to 1813, according to Hughan, reveals the fact that there were three distinct Grand Lodges of all England in existence during some portions of that period, namely, "The Moderns," "The York Masons," and "The Ancients."

The list of "Moderns" begins with Anthony Sayer, elected first speculative Grand Master, 1717, at the Apple Tree Inn, by four old operative lodges, and concludes with H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex, 1813.

Of the "York Masons," R. W. Bro. Hughan says: "The earliest roll of Masters preserved of the Ancient Lodge, held at York, commences 1705, when Sir George Tempest was the chief officer, and down to the year 1724 the chairman was either styled Master or President, in which Lord Bingley, Sir William Robinson, Bart., Sir Walter Hawkesworth, and others served the lodge, but it was not until 1725 that the members constituted themselves into the Grand Lodge of all England, held at York, at which date the list of their General Masters begins."

In 1725 Charles Bathurst was elected first Grand Master of the "York Masons," and there appears, with two breaks (1734—1761 and 1782—1791), a succession of sixteen Grand Masters, up to Edward Wooley, 1792, when this Grand Lodge collapsed.

The secession of "The Ancients" took place in 1753, and on December 5th of that year Robert Turner was elected Grand Master of this schismatical body by some dozen lodges. From 1753 to 1813, when H.R.H. the Duke of Kent was Grand Master, there were altogether ten Grand Masters of "Ancients." The Marquis of Antrim, who granted the warrant of the Lion and Lamb Lodge referred to, was, from 1782 to 1790, Grand Master of "The Ancients," who have been also termed "Atholl Masons," from the fact of two successive Dukes of Atholl having ruled over the body from 1771 to 1781, and from 1791 to 1813.

Yours fraternally,

CHARLES SOTHERAN.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HERTS.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Herts was held on the 27th July, at Barnet, the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. T. F. Halsey, M.P., presiding. By the courtesy of the Rev. Mr. Hutton, vicar of Barnet, the Provincial Grand Lodge was accommodated with the use of the National School Rooms, which, by the grace and kindness of the ladies of Barnet, were beautifully decorated for the occasion with flags, emblems, and flowers.

The parish church also was placed at the disposal of the Provincial Grand Chaplain, the Rev. George Finch, Vicar of Leverstock Green, for a special service, in which he was assisted by the Incumbent, Organist, and fell choir.

Provincial Grand Lodge having been duly opened at the National School Rooms, the officers for the year were appointed and invested as follows:

The Prov. Grand Officers and brethren were then marshalled in due order, and marched in procession to the parish church to attend Divine service, as above stated. The sermon, preached by Bro. Finch, Prov. Grand Chap., was taken from the text "God, I thank Thee that I am not as other men are," xviii. Luke, part of 11th verse. "Was this," said the preacher, "thanksgiving, or was it mere boasting? If the speaker felt within himself that God in His mercy had done a great deal for him, that he had kept him from the presumptuous sins that those about him were devoted to, and that this goodness demanded praise and thanksgiving from him, then he said surely in no better words could such beautiful gratitude be expressed than 'I thank Thee I am not as other men are,' but if on the contrary it was nothing but pride, nothing but self-esteem, which drew from his lips the opinion he had formed of himself, and if it was only in a spirit of boasting that he spoke of himself as being different from others, his language was ill-chosen, his appeal to the Most High Irreverent and his sweeping denunciation of others quite out of place in a house of prayer." Passing by the more particular examination of the position of the speaker and the publican, the preacher proceeded to consider what it was that prompted this prayer, if prayer it might be called, 'God, I thank Thee I am not as other men are,' and said it must be borne in mind that the man was a Pharisee, a member of a strictly religious body, by profession a separatist, one also who believed most strictly in tradition, and in performing to the letter the ceremonial law. Taught from his youth up to see with his particular sect the truth of God as it had been revealed to the fathers, the Pharisee clung most tenaciously to the persuasion that he was not, indeed, as other men were, because he believed himself to be much more highly instructed in those things which it became them to know, and also that he believed himself better than others, because he lived more strictly within the letter of the Divine Law. Addressing the brethren around him he said that those who had met to-day in that house of God might be justified in saying just what this man said of himself—that they were not as other men are. Theirs, just like his, was a religious body; they, as Freemasons, believed in one God, the Great Architect of this Universe, the Maker and Preserver of all things visible and invisible, the Great "I Am," the first and the last, in whom we live and move and have our being. The Volume of the Sacred Law was their guide also, by following whose precepts they hope to ascend at last to the throne of God, and shine as the stars for ever and ever. Religion pervaded all their rites and ceremonies, and was, in fact, the mainstay of their fabric, and they, like this man, if they cared to boast (which, thank God, they did not), they might boast that they were not as the outside world; that they are men with higher, loftier aims than the uninitiated; that from remotest ages the members of this Society have lavished their gold for good, have passed their lives in kindly affection one to another, with brotherly love; being considerate to the poor and needy, speaking the truth from the heart; principles which as they approximate to the Divine love, having, he trusted, lost none of their hold over them, their children, but being just as firmly believed as they were in the lodges of old, can carry us no higher. It was not with feelings of personal superiority, it was not a consciousness of higher worth, that prompted a Freemason to compare himself with others who do not belong to this Craft. If, as the possessor of certain secrets, he believed himself wiser than his uninitiated brethren, the worthy Mason is the last person in the world to act in the presumptuous spirit indicated in the words "Stand by, for I am holier than thou." A Mason may be proud, but it is the pride of the brotherhood. He wished, however, to impress upon them that it was impossible to preserve the dignity of the Order unless they individually endeavoured to live up to what they professed. Any breach of the laws of morality, any deviation from the paths of uprightness, must bring disgrace upon the Order. The outside world were naturally curious about a secret society, and it naturally expected much of those who were ready to confess that to them much had been given. As the Chaplain he might be pardoned on an occasion like this if he reminded them of the importance of admitting none but upright and true men into the Order, because it was true of the Masonic as well as the natural body, that if one member suffer all the members suffer with it. Least of all among Masons could it be said "Am I my brother's keeper?" Connected by indissoluble forms they were bound together, they were many members but one body, therefore he would urge upon them to see that the badge of innocence should cover no un-Masonic breast, but the truly spiritual and Masonic jewels of a meek and quiet spirit and an honest and true heart. He reminded his hearers that on this occasion they met in an historically famous town, near to the spot where the fourth Edward met in battle the King-maker, the Earl of Warwick. They had not come, as the others did, with anger raging in their breasts, but with brotherly love in their hearts and the emblems of peace in their hands, very different from those which animated the rival factions in those unsettled times, and they might thank their God that they were not as those others were. In one respect he would call upon the members of the Provincial Grand Lodge to emulate those to whom he had referred. As those others grew famous by the triumphs wrought upon that ground, let those before him seize this present occasion to do some present good. The Masonic heart was always open to the cry for help, and, therefore, in appealing to them to-day on behalf of the Barnet National Schools he knew that he needed not to unlock the Masonic breast, which was always open to relief. The schools were very much in need of funds, and if a Freemason in certain respects is not as other men are (and as a Freemason he must be content to be a separatist), yet in his heart he is not as the Pharisee was, but always ready to relieve suffering of every form, always ready to listen to the tale of destitution and sorrow and woe, always willing to do good unto all men, but most especially unto them that are of the household of faith.

At the conclusion of the service the brethren were again marshalled and returned in procession to the lodge room.

The R.W. Prov. Grand Master said that he should now proceed with the motion, notices of which had been given and were entered on the agenda paper; he therefore called upon Bro. T. S. Carter, P.P.G.S.D., to propose the motion that stood in his name.

Bro. T. S. Carter rose, and with a few appropriate remarks moved "that the sum of twenty pounds be given from the funds of Prov. G. Lodge to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and the amount be placed on the list of the Prov. G. Secretary, Steward for the Province, at the next festival," and the motion having been duly seconded, was put from the chair and carried nem con.

The Prov. G. Secretary, (in the absence of Bro. J. L. Mather, W.M., No. 1580), moved "A vote of £10 to the Gladsmuir Lodge, towards the expenses of receiving Prov. G. Lodge."

The Prov. G. Master, in putting this motion to the Prov. G. Lodge, said I should not be doing right if I left unexpressed my own satisfaction at the excellent arrangements that have been made, and at the cordial manner in which everything up to the present time has been done to contribute to the convenience of Prov. G. Lodge, and to the comfort and pleasure of the visitors to the Gladsmuir Lodge. The Prov. G. Master then read the motion, which was carried unanimously.

The Prov. G. Secretary: I beg to move "a vote of £10 to the funds of the National Schools, Wood-street, Barnet." These schools are very much in want of funds, the rooms belonging to which schools we have the use of to-day, by the kind courtesy of the Vicar, who has rendered all the assistance in his power to secure the comfort of the Prov. G. Lodge on the occasion of its meeting to-day.

This motion having been seconded was put and carried unanimously.

The Prov. G. Chaplain, Bro. Geo. Finch, announced that the collection made in the church, in aid of the funds of the Barnet National Schools amounted to a little over £16. (Applause).

The Prov. Grand Secretary said that at the meeting last year it was decided to publish a Masonic Calendar for the province, and a committee was appointed to carry the resolution into effect; and he had now to report the results of that work, because it was necessary before deciding to continue it, to look a little into the past, and also into the demand in the province for such a publication; and in order to place himself in the right he would say that it was a very valuable publication, that it was exceedingly useful, and, he believed, had proved a great convenience to the Provincial Grand Master. It would not do, however, for the cost of maintaining it to fall almost wholly upon the funds of Provincial Grand Lodge. The receipts from the sale of the Calendar during the year were £5 11s., which, with 12s. due for same from the Gladsmuir Lodge, gave a total of £6 3s. on this side of the account. Was that a satisfactory state of things? Out of nine lodges in the province, five lodges had taken copies; the other four were not represented. Of those lodges two were very important lodges—lodges to which the proposer and the father of the Calendar belonged; and he thought that the least these brethren could do, after coming forward to propose a considerable expenditure, was to take some steps to secure a satisfactory circulation of the work. Now with regard to the cost, the printing came to £2 19s. 6d. From evidence he had been able to obtain this appeared rather a large sum. Nothing could be better than the way in which the work was brought out, but the question was whether it could not be done at a smaller cost if it was to be continued for another year. He knew there were many difficulties in the way of the first publication of such a book—the difficulties of getting in returns, &c., which increased the cost very much. The P. G. Secretary then read a communication from Cornwall, showing that the Masonic Directory for that province was produced at a cost of £9, and concluded by moving "That in the event of Provincial Grand Lodge deciding to continue its publication, every lodge be invited to contribute a fixed sum, according to the number of its members."

After some conversation, from which it appeared that the notices respecting the publication of the Calendar had not been generally responded to, and that the Secretaries of some lodges had not made the publication known to the members,

The Prov. Grand Master made some observations upon the usefulness of the work, which he cordially approved of, and upon the method adopted in the province of Oxford, which also published a book of this kind, it was agreed that the publication should be repeated for the next year, the publisher stating that the cost would not be so great in the second year, and the P. G. Secretary's motion was put and carried.

Bro. Captain Dick, P.M. No. 403; moved "that the brethren of the Province be invited to subscribe, as a body, to a fund to be devoted towards the restoration of St. Alban's Abbey."

The motion was seconded by the W.M. of the Hertford Lodge, who referred to the action taken in the matter by the lodge over which he presided, which as the oldest lodge in the province had taken a forward part in the movement; and at his request the Prov. G. Sec. read a copy of a resolution of the Hertford Lodge and a committee appointed for promoting the object.

After some conversation, in the course of which it was suggested that as the professional and Masonic duties of the Prov. Grand Sec. were already sufficiently onerous, Bro. Capt. Dick should be constituted an Assistant Sec. for the special object of this resolution but which Bro. Iles declined, he having already ample aid in the efficient assistance of Bro. Dawson, the motion was put and carried unanimously.

A vote of thanks was passed to the Rev. Mr. Hutton, Vicar of Barnet for his kindness in placing his church at the disposal of Prov. Grand Lodge for the special service which they had attended.

The Prov. Grand Master:—For the work of decorating the rooms in which we meet to-day, which has been done by the ladies of this neighbourhood, I feel that we should be wanting in July if we did not propose a vote of thanks, requesting Bro. Livingston to communicate it to them.

The vote having been carried with applause, a vote of thanks to the respected Chaplain, Bro. Finch, for the able sermon he had preached, was also proposed and carried, and Bro. Finch returned thanks.

The Prov. Grand Master:—Before I close this Prov. Grand Lodge I am sorry to have to announce to you that that it is quite out of my power to do myself the pleasure of presiding at the banquet table this evening, my duty as a member of Parliament demands my presence in another place. I have no wish or intention of introducing politics, but you as Masons, being friends of order and decorum will, I am sure acknowledge that the very important business coming before the house to-night renders it incumbent upon me to be in my place there this evening. I am extremely sorry that this necessity exists for my absenting myself from your festivities, but under the circumstances I feel sure you will excuse me. In the absence of the Deputy Prov. Grand Master I will ask our Prov. Senior Grand Warden to take my place at the banquet table, where I am sure he will preside most efficiently.

The Prov. Grand Lodge was then closed in ample form and with solemn prayer. Among the visitors present were, Bros. M. Edward, 1479; T. Kent, 1479; C. Drummond, 403; E. Baxter, 504; P. A. Coard, 90; T. F. Carter 403; F. Till, 403; Willson, 403; J. W. Bonus, 1580; R. T. Young, 1385; E. F. Francis, 403; J. Askew, 1585; J. R. Cocus, 403; T. Bonard, 869; J. S. Copestick, 869; J. Robinson, 467; G. F. Barrett, 367; D. C. Foster, 504; J. Brittain, 1385; J. Livingston, 1385; W. C. Madden, 803; G. Chambers, 504; J. G. Baker, 500; T. H. Hill, 524; A. Leattot 1385; A. J. Small, 403; G. Nicoll, 1208; J. S. Hailer, 127; T. D. Cox, 1580; W. J. Fitch, 499; J. C. Massey, (Freemason), and others.

The brethren were then ushered into the banquet room, which, like the lodge room, was elegantly decorated with flags and flowers for the occasion, where they sat down to a handsome banquet, which, with the exception of soups and fish, was cold. The tables were loaded with all the good things in season, and arranged in a very tasteful and superior manner, and the attention paid by the brethren of the Gladsmuir Lodge to their visiting friends and their evident desire to make them abundantly welcome, were beyond praise.

The company having done ample justice to the excellent viands, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and duly honored.

Bro. Livingston. I rise to propose "The Health of the Rt. W. Prov. G. Master, Bro. Halsey." (applause). I knew when I mentioned our R.W.P.G.M.'s name, that it would be received with enthusiasm. I do not know a man who is more highly respected. I wish he was among us this evening personally, as he would have presided over you much better than I could hope to do. You all know his good qualities as well as I do, some much better. I give you "Our Rt. W. Prov. G. Master, Bro. Halsey," wishing him health and happiness. This toast having been enthusiastically received, "The Health of the Deputy Prov. G. Master, Bro. John Seagwick, and the rest of the Prov. G. Officers," was proposed by Bro. Nivett, and duly honoured; after which the Chaplain, Bro. Finch, proposed "The Health of the W.M.'s of the several Lodges in the Province of Herts," and Bro. Willson responded. Various other toasts including "The Visiting Brethren," "The Masonic Institutions," "The W.M. of the Gladsmuir Lodge," and "The Ladies," were duly honoured and responded to. During the intervals between the speeches, some excellent music, vocal and instrumental, was contributed by Bros. Seymour Smith, G. T. Carter and Lester. The musical arrangements were entrusted to the care of Bro. Seymour Smith, and were very ably carried out. The weather throughout the day was everything that could be desired, and every one present had reason to be thoroughly satisfied with the success of the meeting of the Prov. G. Lodge of Herts for 1877.

CONSECRATION OF THE ROTHESAY LODGE, No. 1687.

On the evening of Friday, the 27th ult., a new London Lodge was consecrated at the Inns of Court Hotel by Bro. R. Wentworth Little, Deputy Provincial Grand Master for Middlesex.

The new lodge is called the Rothesay Lodge, Duke of Rothesay being one of the titles of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M.

The ceremony was performed in a most convenient and suitable room on the ground floor of the hotel, and although the room was full of brethren, no inconvenience was felt from vitiation of the atmosphere during the two hours that the ceremony lasted.

Bro. Little had on his right Col. Burdett, Provincial Grand Master for Middlesex, and on his left the Rev. P. M. Holden, who acted as Chaplain. Bros. James Lewis Thomas was S.W.; C. A. Cotebrune, J.W.; H. G. Buss, D.C.; W. C. Parsons, Sec.; and C. S. Scott, I.G. Among the other brethren present, in the ranks of whom were numerous Present and Past Grand Officers of Middlesex were Bros. E. Moody, E. S. Scott, H. Massey (Freemason); H. C. Levander, Keys, A. Barfield, G. Bubb, H. Reed, E. H. Thillay, C. Burrell, West, W.M. 1328, G. Reg. Surrey; Green, Scott, P.M. 823; B. H. Swallow, P.M. 381 and 1362; Brignall, P. Prov. G. Reg. Durham; F. Walters, and C. B. Payne, G.T.

After the lodge had been opened Bro. Little addressed a few words to the brethren, stating the pleasure he had in coming to consecrate the lodge, and regretting that his deficiency in power of speaking prevented him articulating so strongly and forcibly as he could wish. He was, however, assisted by Bro. Holden, who would supply anything that might be wanted.

The usual ceremonies having been performed:

Bro. Rev. P. M. Holden delivered the oration, and said, Provincial Grand Master for Middlesex, Deputy Grand Master, Officers and brethren. The occasion on which we are met together to-day is, I conceive, interesting not only to ourselves as Masons personally and individually, but to the whole Craft at large, inasmuch as it denotes the continued prosperity of our venerable Order, which like the famous Indian tree, the banana tree, perpetually renews itself in scions as vigorous and flourishing as their parent stem. To myself it is a source of peculiar pleasure and gratitude, to have been invited to assist you, Deputy Prov. Grand Master, at so interesting and important a ceremonial as the consecration of a new lodge, the Rothesay Lodge, more especially as I feel convinced and have good reasons to know that its founders are brethren eminently qualified to fulfil the duties of the high offices to which they have been appointed by the Grand Master in the warrant of constitution. Having, doubtless, already "won golden opinion," for their zeal in the cause of Freemasonry, they are now laudably anxious to devote their time, talents, and ability to the still further advancement and development of so noble, so interesting, and so very ancient a science. What had been said by a learned and well known writer of literary men may I think equally well be applied to the members of our enlightened Craft—"they are a perpetual priesthood, stand from generation to generation, the dispensers and living types of God's everlasting wisdom." And I rejoice to know and think that so many excellent, worthy, distinguished, and talented men are to be found in the ranks of our fraternity. To their enfranchised minds Freemasonry unveils a universe of thought. To them it is a keen delight to trace and to interpret those grand and solemn truths which were but dimly shadowed forth in the mystic rites of the ancient world. Looking back through the mists of ages they behold in the white-robed Aeenians a kindred race, and are familiar with the symbolic teachings of the great philosophers of old. Amid the obscurity and darkness of occult ceremonies they discern faint gleams of the true light in which we now rejoice. In every land they find traces and tokens innumerable, graven by the hands of skillful Masons, upon the walls of ruined faves and temples. They establish the affinity of our Order with the Dionysian artificers of old, with the disciples of Pythagoras, with the College of Architects at Rome, and with the various operative associations of the middle ages. They demonstrate clearly that the grand ethics of Freemasonry were known and taught by the very wisest sages of Greece, whose names and whose works are still honoured and revered by the whole civilised world. They prove that our Order, though often persecuted and often reviled, has never yet failed or even faltered in its sublime career, though meanwhile the mightiest empires and the proudest kingdoms have been compelled to succumb to the destroying hand of conquest, or to the effacing fingers of time and decay. And I would ask what nobler exercise of the intellectual faculties can possibly be found than a calm and earnest pursuit of Masonic knowledge, thus gleaning and gathering on our onward way the vast treasures of wisdom which it reveals to our view? But, brethren, it is not merely to the intellectual pleasure to be derived from the study of Freemasonry that I would desire to direct your attention. Our Order possesses other and more practical claims upon your sympathy and support. It is founded upon principles that are at once an honour and an ornament to human nature. It bids us hasten to the rescue of the young and helpless from the pitfalls of ignorance, poverty, and even vice. It calls upon every one of us to ameliorate the sad condition of those who, in the decline of life, from some circumstance or other, require our consolation and assistance. And I am proud indeed to add that English Freemasons have ever been distinguished not merely for their zeal in promoting the welfare of the Order, but for their large-hearted benevolence and diffusive charity. The very best answer that can be given to the evils, and the sorrows, and the disparaging remarks of the unenlightened world is to point to those splendid establishments which have been raised for the nurture of the young and the shelter of the old. Nearly 100 years have now passed away since the Masonic Girls' School was founded; and who would venture to estimate the vast amount of good that it has achieved. The Masonic Boys' School was established some ten years later; and the crowning of our charitable undertakings was effected by the erection of a suitable retreat for those who, having "borne the heat and burden of the day," and standing, as it were, on the threshold of the Grand Lodge above, desire to end their lives and peace in tranquillity. Brethren, it is our duty to prove that Masonry is something more than a name, something infinitely better and higher than a mere excuse for social gatherings, be those social gatherings never so pleasant. It is our solemn duty to prove to the world that its principles are high and lofty, its designs grand and praiseworthy; and the clearest and most logical way to convince the sceptic or scurrilous is by a steady, consistent, and unwavering practice of the benevolent precepts and principles of the Order. Freemasonry will then present, not only to the mind of the philosopher, an organised system of knowledge, unfolded in beautiful ceremonies known only to the initiated, but to mankind in general it will appear as a beneficent and benevolent institution, teaching, inculcating, and enforcing the very purest principles of morality, and wisely bearing the fruits of charity and goodwill. May this lodge then which we are met to consecrate and inaugurate to-day, the Rothesay Lodge, prove a conspicuous example of all those virtues which adorn the mystic character; may it convey to distant posterity the august lessons which have been handed down to us from our forefathers; may it be the shrine of intellect and the temple of thought; the abode of peace and the home of joy; founded by the hands of true, faithful, and devoted Masons, and supported by the firm pillars of intelligence and truth. May it ever remain as an imperishable memorial of its founders, growing year by year in prosperity and happiness, and shining brighter and still brighter in the glorious firmament of Masonic fame. I have now, worshipful sir, arrived at what is not, to me, at least, by any means the least pleasing part of my duty; and that is to thank you, sir, and you, Col. Burdett, and brethren all, for the very kind and patient manner in which you have been pleased to listen to the remarks I have made; and I cannot better perhaps conclude than by wishing, with all my heart, and I do so most sincerely, that the grand principles upon which our Order is built and established, namely, brotherly love, relief, and truth, may ever be present with us in our hearts, and shine conspicuously in the whole of our conduct through life, so that when we are summoned away from this earthly scene our names may be enrolled as members of that glorious brotherhood who loving their fellow men, are loved of God; even as we learn from that well-known little poem, how

About Ben Haden, (may his tribe increase),
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich, and like a lily in bloom,
An angel, writing in a book of gold.
Exceeding peace had made Ben Haden bold;
And to the presence in his room he said,
"What writest thou?" The vision bowed its head,
And with a look made of all sweet accord,
Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."
And is mine one?" said Abou; "Nay, not so,"
Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low;
But cheerily still he said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow men."
The angel wrote and vanished. The next night
He came again with a great glowing light,
And showed the names of those that God had blessed,
And lo! Ben Haden's name led all the rest.

Bro. Holden at the conclusion of this address, resumed his seat amidst the loud applause of the brethren.

The ceremony of consecration of the lodge was afterwards proceeded with, and when it was completed Bro. Little installed Bro. Louis Beck, S.D. 1559, as Worshipful Master in the presence of a Board of 21 Installed Masters. Bro. B. Swallow was invested by the W.M. acting as I.P.M. When the brethren below the degree of Installed Master were admitted, and the salutes given, the following brethren received the collars of the offices attached to their respective names:—Frank Kirk, 1328, S.W.; John Hancock, 1563, J.W.; B. H. Swallow, Treasurer; Wm. C. Parsons, Secretary; J. B. Docker, S.D.; Bro. Croesland, J.D.; Bro. Outhwaite, I.G.; and Bro. Potter, Tyler. The addresses were delivered by the Rev. P. M. Holden, after which the W.M. proposed and the J.W. seconded the names of five gentlemen as initiates, and of three brethren as joining members. Subsequently, Bros. Col. Burdett, R. W. Little, the Rev. P. M. Holden, and H. G. Buss, were elected as honorary members of the lodge on the motion of the W.M., seconded by the S.W. Also on the motion of the W.M., seconded by the S.W., a vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Little for consecrating the lodge; and Bro. Little having acknowledged the compliment, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet. The usual toasts followed.

Col. Burdett in replying for the Grand Officers said that all the Grand Officers were glad to find that the performance of their duties was appreciated by the brethren at large. It was a great pride to the Craft that at the present time they had the Prince of Wales for Grand Master, the Duke of Connaught for Grand Senior Warden, and Prince Leopold for Grand Junior Warden; while the Pro Grand Master's office was held by Lord Carnarvon and that of Dep. G.M. by Lord Skelmersdale. He believed that at no former time had these offices been so eminently filled, and at no time could such distinction be exceeded. The Grand Officers felt very proud of the progress that Masonry had made. Very probably the number of the lodges consecrated this year would exceed the number consecrated last year; but he might observe that what was wanted was not so much an increase in the number of brethren admitted, but in their quality. Speaking of his own province, Middlesex, he believed they had had a much higher class of men introduced during the last year than ever they had had before. Although that province was but a young province, only six or seven years old, it had a large number of lodges, and a great body of brethren moving in the higher class of society. From what they had seen that day it must be noted that great progress was being made in Masonry throughout the whole of the kingdom; and one particular feature must have been observable, that all the work that had been done was executed in an admirable manner. This was an evidence of a progress in the knowledge of the science of Freemasonry.

The banner of the lodge, on which were the arms of the Duke of Rothesay, and the motto "Avito vires honore," was here raised, and

Bro. Little rose to propose "The Health of the W.M.," and said they had that moment hoisted the banner of the lodge, a banner which he hoped would be the brethren's guiding star for many ages yet to come. On the present occasion they hailed it as an omen of hope, and as a prognostication that the lodge would achieve great success. It was his pleasure and privilege to propose "The Health of the W.M.," and he was sure that the brethren would wish him all success, and all the support that he could desire, from the cordial feelings they had towards him. He could not say, as many of the brethren could, that he had enjoyed the friendship of Bro. Beck for a long time; but he could say from what he did know of him that he was a Mason at heart, that he had not entered Masonry merely to put himself forward and make himself a Master. He had, in fact, made himself a master of the art of Freemasonry, and he would bring this lodge to all the prosperity and success the brethren wished. After a few other complimentary remarks Bro. Little proposed "The Health of the W.M., and Prosperity to the Rothesay Lodge."

The W.M., in reply, said that it would not be for want of exerting himself if the lodge failed. He had had the honour of being placed in the chair, and he should not have sought that honour if he had not intended doing his best. He then proposed "The Health of Bro. Little, D.P. G.M. Middlesex, and Consecrating Officer."

Bro. Little said that strictly the officers of provinces were not entitled to receive any honour outside the limits of their provinces; nevertheless he appreciated the compliment, which had never been paid him more gracefully than it had that night. It had given him a great deal of satisfaction to be present at this meeting. He had not come up from the country specially for it, but for almost a week's meeting—for the Audit Committee of the Girls' Institution, for the Provincial Grand Lodge of Middlesex, for another meeting on Thursday, and for this meeting. If the Great Architect gave him health nothing would afford him greater pleasure than to assist in the onward work of the Craft.

Col. Burdett proposed "The Founders."

Bro. Kirk responded.

Bro. Brignall, P. Prov. Grand Registrar Durham, responded. He had had experience of Masonry for over forty years, and it had given him much pleasure to see its prosperity, especially lately. For the courtesy of the lodge in inviting him he begged to return his hearty acknowledgements. Being in London on business, and sojourning at the Inns of Court Hotel, he stepped into the lodge to see the consecration. The circumstances were quite accidental; but the brethren with hearty Masonic feeling had invited him to stay; he had done so; and he had very much enjoyed himself. He was very proud to be present, and he hoped that every successive Master would leave the chair to his successor as pure and unsullied as he received it.

Bro. H. C. Levander also responded, and trusted that the Rothesay Lodge would flourish for many years. If the brethren were careful whom they admitted it could not but succeed.

Bro. F. Walters also replied. He had known Bro. L. Beck many years, and he had found him a sincere Mason, working hard to do his duty. He knew he would carry out his duties in a praiseworthy manner, and that he would set a laudable example to the other brethren.

Bro. the Rev. P. M. Holden proposed "The Masonic Charities," and advocated the claims of all those Institutions to the liberality of the Craft. He looked upon charity as the grand prophylactic virtue of the Order, the power that preserved it from corruption, that would prevent people saying that Masons were nothing better than a body of revellers, who never bestowed a thought upon their poorer brethren. For himself, he wished that the charities might flourish and increase more and more.

Bro. Levander replied, and said that without charity no man could be a real Mason. He recommended to the attention of the brethren the three noble Institutions of Freemasonry, with one of which Bro. Little, the Consecrating Officer of to-day, was connected as Secretary. He only regretted that Bro. Little's state of health prevented him from replying to this toast, because had he been able to reply the brethren would have had a much more eloquent and powerful address than he (Bro. Levander) was capable of giving.

After the Tyler's toast the brethren separated.

Bro. Louis Beck's band played during dinner, and the singing after banquet was performed by Bro. Farquharson and Mr. Cotte. Bro. Louis Hermann was pianist.

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

INAUGURATION OF A MASONIC LODGE AT PALMERSTON.

Thursday May, the 24th, will long be regarded by members of the Masonic Order as a day worthy of holding a prominent place in their recollection; for, not only was it the birthday of her Majesty Queen Victoria, but the occasion also of laying the foundation-stone of the new hall of the Palmerston Lodge. The site selected is an elevated one, and affords visitors thereto an excellent view of the townships and districts adjacent. Already the building has been raised several feet above the basement, and nearly all the materials for enabling the contractor, Mr. Clarke, of Palmerston, to make an early completion, are on the ground. At about 4 p.m. the members of the Craft residing in Palmerston, and the Dunedin and Oamaru brethren, as well as those from other places, assembled at the local Town Hall. There, at half-past 1 o'clock, the District Grand Lodge of Otago and Southland was opened by dispensation, and, shortly adjourning, a procession was marshalled by District Grand Director of Ceremonies, Bro. D. H. Rhodes.

Captain Kitchener, on behalf of the members of the new lodge, invited the R.W.D.G.M., Bro. J. H. Harris, to lay the foundation stone, whereupon that gentleman intimated that it gave himself and the brethren who had accompanied him from Dunedin great pleasure to be present, and assist, to the best of their ability, the Palmerston brethren in performing the interesting ceremony about to be proceeded with.

A plan of the building having been produced,

The R.W.D.G.M. stated that it had been prepared by Mr. Lawson, architect, that it appeared complete and suitable for the purpose for which it was intended. He next called upon the proper officer to read the scroll, which which was afterwards placed in a bottle and deposited in the cavity; as also were copies of the Daily Times, Guardian, Palmerston and Waikouaiti Times, and Freemason. The following coins were likewise deposited by the D.G.T., Bro. Gilligan—One sovereign, one half-sovereign, one five-shilling piece, half a crown, two-shilling piece, one shilling, sixpenny piece, fourpenny piece, threepenny piece, a penny, and halfpenny.

Bro. A. H. Burton offered up prayer as follows:—

Almighty and Eternal God, Architect and Ruler of the Universe, at whose creative fiat all things first were made; we, the frail creatures of Thy providence, humbly beseech Thee to pour down upon this congregation the continual dew of Thy blessing. More especially we invoke Thy blessing on this our undertaking, ever remembering the object and aim of this Institution—obedience to Thy holy law. Grant, we beseech Thee, that our Order may flourish in every part of the globe, become increasingly influential in the diffusion of the light of wisdom, aiding and strengthening reason, and dissipating and lessening human error, misery, and vice. May it teach us to regulate our actions by the rule of rectitude, square our conduct by the principles of morality, and guide our conversation and our thoughts within the compass of propriety. May the edifice which is this day commenced be carried forward to its completion prosperously. Do Thou protect the workmen; secure them from all injury; and when completed, may it be the means of strengthening our Order. Finally, grant us the knowledge of Thy truth; do Thou be our guide and ruler, and ultimately admit us into Thy everlasting Kingdom—that house, not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens. Amen, so mote it be.

The D.G.D. of Ceremonies, Bro. Rhodes, then gave instructions for the stone to be lowered three degrees; while this was being done the band played "God Save the Queen." Bro. Rhode, next called upon the brethren to salute three times three; and similar salutes were given as the remaining stages of lowering the stone proceeded.

Addressing successively the officers having the custody of the square, level and plumb-rule, and having obtained the usual answers to the satisfactory performance of their respective duties,

The R.W.D.G.M., Bro. Harris, said: Worshipful brethren, having full confidence in your skill in our Royal art it only remains for me to finish the work you have begun. Having struck the stone three times with a gavel, he added:—May the Almighty Architect of the Universe smile benignantly on the work now commenced, and may the Craftsmen conduct and complete the building according to the grand plan, in peace, harmony, and brotherly love.

P.M. Bro. Geo. Smith then poured corn on the stone.

D.S.G.W. Bro. A. H. Burton, strewed wine on the stone.

D.D.G.M. Bro. Joyce poured oil on the stone.

The R.W.D.G.M., Bro. Harris, then said that it had been the custom amongst Masons from time immemorial that the person on whom devolved the honour of laying the foundation stone should offer a few remarks which he should think suitable to the occasion. The remarks which he intended to make would be addressed to those who were not Masons, because, so far as Masons themselves were concerned, the observations which he should offer would be unnecessary and uncalled for. Masonry, as he viewed it, was a religious, moral, and social institution. In its religious and moral aspects it taught them to believe that the whole universe, the whole material universe, owed its origin to the one great creative power; it taught them their duty to that great Supreme Being, to reverence His Holy Name, to obey His laws, and in all respects to fear and love Him. Masonry taught them their duty to their neighbour, and the commands in the Decalogue were included in the Mason's belief. Referring to the social aspect, he might say that Masonry was of the greatest antiquity; it was founded on truth; it had survived the attacks of its enemies, and the wreck of nations, and he had almost said, would probably survive even the world itself. Within its ranks had been found kings, princes, rulers, statesmen—the highest in all lands had not felt ashamed to become members of the Craft. Their ranks were opened to every true man, no matter what his language or colour; so long as he was a true man, and believed in these principles, he could be admitted to their ranks. It was in connection with that great and noble Institution that they had assembled that day. They had been told by the Worshipful Master elect that this was the foundation stone of a temple dedicated to Masonry; and he now wished to add that the work which had been the cause of the visit here of himself and brethren was to them a work of love. They rejoiced to find that Masonry was spreading in this comparatively remote district of the Province of Otago, and he was sure that if carried out according to its tenets it would be found to be a blessing, not a curse, to this neighbourhood. He expressed the hope that in that Temple, the foundation of which they had that day laid, would be found for many years to come the true spirit and principles of Masonry. With those few remarks he begged to thank the public for their attendance, for the kind manner in which they had listened to the few remarks he had made, and for the quiet and orderly way in which everything connected with the ceremony had proceeded.

Bro. Capt. Kitchener having thanked, in a few well chosen remarks, the R.W.D.G.M., and the other visiting brethren, for their attendance, the procession returned to the Town Hall, where the Grand Lodge was closed.

At about 5 p.m. the visiting brethren, the members of the Palmerston Lodge, and other gentlemen, to the number of about forty, assembled in the large hall.

The W.M. elect of the Palmerston Lodge, Bro. Capt. Kitchener, presided. Immediately on his right was the R.W.D.G.M., Bro. Harris, and the other brethren from Dunedin occupied seats in the vicinity. The hall was nicely decorated with flags, banners, and evergreens; and the Palmerston Brass Band added materially to the general enjoyment.

The Chairman proposed the toasts of "H.R.H., the Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Grand Master of England;" and "The Grand Masters of the Irish and Scotch Constitutions," which were enthusiastically responded to.

The Chairman said that with the next toast "The District Grand Lodge of Otago and Southland," he desired to couple the name of their worthy friend and guest, the R.W.D.G.M., Bro. the Hon. J. H. Harris, who had kindly come all the way from Dunedin, to assist the Palmerston brethren, aided by the other gentlemen, who had also kindly accompanied him. The brethren here were thankful that Bro. Harris had consented to pay them this visit. (Hear, hear.) The gentlemen to whom he referred had, at great inconvenience to themselves, left home to render all the assistance in their power in carrying out satisfactorily the interesting ceremony of that day; they well merited the sincere thanks of the Palmerston brethren, and he asked them to drink in bumpers the toast of "The District Grand Lodge of Otago and Southland." The toast was heartily received.

The R.W.D.G.M., Bro. Harris, on rising to respond on behalf of himself and visiting brethren, returned his sincere thanks for the kind manner in which the Palmerston brethren had treated them. And while tendering his thanks, he must also add that the Chairman had somewhat overrated sacrifices which he himself, at any rate, was supposed to have personally made. Speaking for himself, however, and for the gentlemen who had accompanied him, he believed that had their visit to Palmerston involved any personal sacrifices, those sacrifices would have been cheerfully made. (Applause.) But it so happened that what they had done was simply an important duty. A District Grand Lodge for Otago and Southland had been constituted, and it was the duty of the Grand Master to assist all the outlying districts in the formation of lodges, and to instruct them when instruction was required; to render, in fact, every possible assistance that one body of Masons could render to another. But, as he had said once before that day, the performance of this important duty had been, at the same time, a labour of love; and he hoped they would all live to see completed, in a very short time, the building, the foundation stone of which they had that day laid. (Applause.) Further, he hoped they would all live to see the cope stone laid, and that the Worshipful Master elect, all the members of the lodge, and many members from different parts of the colony, would meet to see completed what he could only regard as a reproach to the Masons of Dunedin, who were now in the position of being without a building they could call their own! He was glad to be able to say, however, that there was reason to believe that that reproach would ere long be removed, as steps were being taken which would probably result in obtaining a suitable building for the purposes of Masonry in all its branches. (Hear, hear.) He had further to say that they might rest assured that any communications, by their recognised officers to Dunedin lodges asking for assistance would meet with prompt and proper responses. (Hear, hear.) As regarded the step the Palmerston brethren had taken, it was one of which they need not feel ashamed; they ought rather to rejoice in it, if properly carried out. Their Institution was an old one; it had weathered the storms of many centuries; it permeated all society, the whole of the civilised, and, he had almost said, the uncivilised world. He congratulated the Palmerston brethren on the step they had taken in this somewhat remote district from the centre of Masonry in this Province, and felt sure that, if properly carried out, the step would prove a blessing to the inhabitants of the town and district. He again returned thanks for the kind manner in which the toast had been received. (Applause.)

Bro. J. H. Harris said the duty he had now to perform was a very agreeable one to himself. They had witnessed that day what he believed many would consider a very interesting ceremony; they had also partaken of a very excellent dinner, which was another matter for gratification. All that had been done could not have been accomplished unless a good deal of important work had been done previously by somebody. Financial arrangements, among other things, had to be made for building the new hall, and a great deal of other important preliminary work. In the first place he wished to congratulate the Palmerston brethren on the selection of their Worshipful Master. He thought, for two reasons, that they had acted wisely in that respect. It was important that the first Master should be a man, not only of good standing in the district, but a man who could exercise a considerable amount of personal influence over the lodge itself. Moreover, they had selected a very old and experienced Mason, who not only stood high in blue Masonry, but in the higher degrees of Masonry; and the duties devolving upon them that day would be imperfectly performed if they did not ask them to join in drinking "The Health of Bro. Capt. Kitchener, the Worshipful Master Elect; and prosperity to the Palmerston Lodge." (Applause.)

The Chairman, in responding, returned thanks for the kind manner in which the toast had been proposed and received; it had been proposed, in fact, in terms which, as applied to himself, were too flattering. True, he had risen to a certain height in Masonry, but that had been the result more of spasmodic action than real hard work. He now hoped he was about to depart from his old ways of being raised in that way, and that hereafter he should be brought face to face with real work, so that he would be able to learn his duty sufficiently well to teach those under him. He intended to do his best, and he was sure that he would be cheerfully and willingly assisted by the brethren. (Applause.) He trusted that that day twelve months, if they had the good fortune to induce Bro. Harris, and assistants, to again come to Palmerston, he would find that the Palmerston Lodge had advanced in a manner even beyond expectation. (Applause.)

Bro. S. W. Cobden proposed the toast of "The Lodges under the English Constitution," coupled with the name of Bro. A. H. Burton. He would simply say he trusted that the harmony which existed at the present time between the various bodies would ever do so, and that the sooner one great union took place the better it would be. (Applause.)

Bro. Burton replied.

Bro. Gilligan also made a few remarks, intimating that the Palmerston brethren would be glad to see the visitors here again when the lodge was opened, about the 15th August.

Bro. M'Kenzie returned thanks on behalf of the Scotch Constitution.

"The Health of the Officers Elect of the Palmerston Lodge" was proposed by P.M. Bro. Smith, coupled with the name of Bro. Keen.

Bro. Keen said that, as junior officer, he begged to return thanks. He was pleased and proud that that day they had opened their English lodge. He must say, however, he was surprised to find a peculiar feeling existing as regarded the English, Scotch, and Irish Constitutions. He had come to the antipodes to learn, for the first time, that there was any difference; he hoped he should never hear such an opinion expressed again.

Bro. Burton proposed "Prosperity to the Town of Palmerston," coupled with the name of Bro. Gilligan, formerly Mayor of Palmerston.

Bro. Gilligan responded.

Bro. Joyce proposed the toast of "All poor and distressed Masons."

The Mayor, Mr. C. Haynes, returned thanks on behalf of the visitors for the hospitable manner in which they had been entertained.

"The Health of Host Duncan" having been proposed and drunk, with three times three for "Mr. Duncan and family," that gentleman responded, and

The proceedings, which passed off most satisfactorily were closed.—Palmerston Times.

SALE OF THE SURREY MASONIC HALL.

The announcement of the public sale of this well-known and handsome building attracted a large and influential assemblage at the Auction Mart on Tuesday last, amongst whom we noticed the faces of several well-known brethren.

Bro. J. Green (of the firm of Bros. Weatherall and Green) officiated, and after a few introductory remarks as to the character and capabilities of the structure, and expressing his hope as an old Mason that the building might be secured by the Craft, so as to avoid what our correspondent last week characterised as a standing disgrace to the fraternity if it ever became anything else but a Masonic Hall, a first bid of £3000 was promptly made, which was rapidly followed by biddings of £100 each, until £4000 was reached, when Bro. Green announced that low as the price was, his reserve was obtained, and the property was entirely in the hands of the public. Biddings of £50 each followed from numerous competitors, and the hammer ultimately fell at £4600, offered on behalf of Bro. John Oliver, by Bro. M. Sansom, of Kennington-road.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

LODGE OF JOPPA (No. 188).—At a special meeting of this lodge, held at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, on Thursday, August 2nd, 1877, the following resolution was unanimously passed: "That the lodge having heard of the unfortunate position in which the W.M., Bro. Lewis Lazarus, is placed, beg to tender to him the expression of sympathy which animates every member present, and also their full confidence in his integrity and his humanity, which actuated him in the circumstances which placed him in his present position. That a copy of the above resolution be sent to the W.M., and also one to his wife."

NEW CROSS LODGE (No. 1559).—On Saturday last, the regular meeting of this lodge was held at the New Cross Public Hall, Lewisham-High Road. Considering the seaside attractions, and the general desire of Baak Holiday-makers to quit the town of toil for other and more agreeable scenes, the attendance may be said to have been a good one, although in one or two instances the absentees were out of town. With his usual reverence for punctuality, the W.M., Bro. H. Keeble, entered lodge, and assumed the duties of the chair, being supported by Bros. E. H. Thielley, P.M. 145, P.P.G.S.B. Middx., S.W.; Walter Simmonds, J.W.; Louis Beck, S.D.; H. J. Green, J.D.; Ernest E. Smith, (acting as) I.G.; T. Grummant, Secretary; Bro. E. M. Hubback, P.M. 79, P.G.S. &c.; Bro. Hamilton, 1559, as I.P.M. There were present Bros. A. Macgillivray, H. Metham, Hiram Henton, Knibbs, Fry, Thornton, Swain, and Wise; and visitors, Bros. J. L. Cogan, J.W. 1365, and Aime Hugon, 145. The lodge having been opened, Bros. S. Wise, and E. Fry were interrogated and subsequently passed to the degree of F.C. Lodge having been further opened, the W.M., in a most impressive manner, passed to the Sublime Degree of M.M. Bros. Thornton, Knibbs, and Swain. Too much cannot be said of Bro. Keeble's excellent working, but we may add in parenthesis it was the general remark that our esteemed brother exceeded all previous efforts. This concluding the business on the agenda paper, lodge was closed, and an adjournment made for refreshment. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts having been given, Bro. E. M. Hubback, P.M. 79, P.G.S., &c., proposed in an overwhelmingly complimentary speech "The Health of the W.M.," whom he described as a Mason who had the welfare of the Craft at heart, and as W.M. of 1559 the welfare of that lodge in particular. He assured the brethren that in Bro. Keeble they had a W.M. who would not fail to advance the interests of those under his Masonic rule, and was ever willing to listen to, and adopt any suggestion made by a member, so long as it was for the good of the lodge, and its brethren. Much more he said in praise of one who well deserved it, but we regret that we cannot give Bro. Hubback's speech at farther length. The W.M. was warmly received, when he replied, and from the reception accorded him it is easy to see that never has it fallen to the lot of an occupant of the chair of K.S. to be so universally popular with his brethren. The toast of "The Visitors" was responded to by Bro. Cogan, J.W. 1365; and that of "The Officers" by Bros. Thielley, S.W.; Simmonds, J.W.; L. Beck, S.D.; H. Green, J.D.; Grummant, Sec. Excellent harmony was supplied by Bros. Beck, Metham, Hagon and Swain, and it was not until a very late hour that the Tyler's toast brought to a close what was acknowledged to be one of the most enjoyable evenings spent since the consecration of 1559.

THE HENRY MUGGERIDGE LODGE (No. 1679).—The second regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Prince George, Park Road, Dalston, on Saturday, July 28th, when the following business of the lodge was admirably conducted by Bros. Henry Muggeridge, W.M.; Francis Fellows, S.W.; E. F. Storr, J.W.; J. Lorkin, S.D.; H. John, J.D.; J. H. Wilkin, I.G. Bro. Emil Hülland, of the Neptune Lodge, was raised. Bros. Alfred Sack, Edwin Charles Dyer, and Compton F. Brown were passed, and Messrs George Clark, S. Stamper, Charles Haines, and Charles Arnold were initiated. Among the visitors we noticed our Bro. Henry Marston, a very highly respected member of the Craft, and eminently known in the theatrical world. Bro. Alfred Henry Diaper, Past Grand Steward, P.M. St. George and Corner Stone Lodge, No. 5, was elected a joining member. It was late before the banquet was on the table, in consequence of the work to be got through in lodge, and we much admire our old friend Bro. Henry Muggeridge for taking the initiations one at a time. It is a pity it is ever otherwise, for such a fine and solemn ceremony should not be imperfectly done. We have sometimes three candidates taken at one time, and the effect is not so good. The banquet was well served, but being nearly ten o'clock, little time could be allowed for long speeches or songs, many of the brethren residing at a great distance. The second meeting of this successful lodge closed in harmony.

PAIGNTON.—Torbay Lodge (No. 1358).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 6th inst., at the Town Hall, Paignton. Present: Bros. John Couldrey, W.M.; W. E. Warren, I.P.M.; S. E. Heath (W.M. 797), as S.W.; J. F. Chinnock, J.W.; Rev. R. Bowden, P.P.G.C., and Rev. N. Pratt, P.G.C., Chaplains; James Greenfield, P.P.J.G.O. (W.M. elect), Treas.; A. L. Palk, Sec.; F. Palk, S.D.; P. Warren as J.D.; T. Brooks, R.A.M., Organist; C. Perrot, I.G.; W. Tozer, Tyler. Also Bros. Oliver, P.M.; Pillar, P.M.; J. Burton, W.M. 328; Yates, Hunt, Sawyer, W. Rossiter. Visiting brethren: John Hurrell, S.W. 797; Pearl, 22; P. Warren, 1245; Sampson, 282; Coffin, sen., Coffin, jun., 1205. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the ceremony of installation was proceeded with. The W.M. elect was presented to the Installing Master Bro. the Rev. R. Bowden, P.P.G.C., by Bros. Couldrey and Warren, and was, according to ancient custom, duly installed in the chair of K.S. All below the rank of I.M. were then admitted and saluted the W.M. in the usual manner; the W.M. then invested his officers for the ensuing year as follows:—Bro. John Couldrey, I.P.M.; J. F. Chinnock, S.W.; F. Palk, J.W.; Rev. Noel Platt, Chaplain; W. Rossiter, Treas.; W. E. Warren, P.M. Sec.; Rev. Noel Platt, S.D.; A. L. Palk, J.D.; B. C. Heath, D. of C.; T. Brooks, R.A.M. Organist; Preclar and Bovey, Stewards; C. Perrot, I.G.; W. Tozer, Tyler; W. E. Warren, P.M. The lodge being closed, the brethren proceeded to the Esplanade Hotel, where a capital banquet was served. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given by the W.M. and duly honoured, Bro. T. Brooks presided at the piano, and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

Mark Masonry.

TRURO.—Fortitude Lodge (No. 78).—On Friday, the 3rd inst., Bro. William Lake, the well known Cornish publisher, was installed as W.M. of the Fortitude Mark Lodge, No. 78, Truro, by the R.W. Bro. W. J. Hughtan, Senior P.M. 78, P.G.W. of England, &c., assisted by W. Bro. W. J. Johns, P.M. and Treas. No. 78, Prov. G. Sec. There was a goodly muster of the members, Past Masters; Crews Sec.; and Middleton, P. Prov. S.G.D.; as usual being present. Visitors, Bros. Bray, Taylor, and Hooper, of No. 73, 87, and 101 respectively. Mark Masonry has always found congenial soil on which to flourish, since its introduction in 1865, under the wing of its Senior P.M., and its popular Prov. G.M., Sir Fredk. M. Williams, Bart., M.P., and we understand that a warrant for another new lodge has just been issued for Newquay.

CONSECRATION OF THE CARADOC LODGE, No. 1674.

Friday the 3rd inst., will long be a red letter day in Rhyl, as it marked the identification of the town for the first time with Freemasonry. For some time past the want of a Masonic lodge has been felt in Rhyl, and at the instance of Bro. J. A. Spinks several of the fraternity held meetings with the view of establishing a lodge in that town. All preliminary difficulties having been smoothed away, the brethren communicated with Bro. J. Salmon, of Chester, Junior Grand Warden of the Province of North Wales and Shropshire, and P.P.S.G.D. Cheshire, whose experience in Masonry well qualified him for the task of forming a new lodge. Bro. Salmon had several conferences with the brethren at Rhyl, and a petition was finally sent up to the Grand Lodge.

The petition was acceded to, and Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, Bart., M.P., the popular Grand Master of the Province, was then asked to consecrate the lodge, which is called the Caradoc Lodge, being No. 1674 on the register of the Grand Lodge of England, but in consequence of his ill-health the ceremony was postponed. No sooner, however, had the worthy baronet recovered from his indisposition than he announced his intention of consecrating the lodge, and on Friday the event took place under his auspices.

The town was visited by a large number of the brethren of the province, together with Masonic visitors from Liverpool, Chester, and various other places.

The consecration took place at the Town Hall at two o'clock, the following Prov. Grand Officers being present:—Bros. Sir W. W. Wynn, Bart., G.M. of the province; G. Owen, P.S.G.W.; the Rev. T. L. Kyffin, P.G. Chap.; Sisson, P.G.B.; Spaul, P.G. Sec.; Parmiter, P.G.D.C.; W. L. Banks, P.G. S. of W.; F. Wood, P.G.D. of Cer.; Hyde, P.G. Tyler; Britton, P.G. Steward; R. Phillips, P.G. Std.; E. Andrew, P.G. Std.; J. Stokes, P.G. Std.; A. Walker, P.P.G.S. of Works; John Peters, P.P.G.S.W.; A. W. Blaney, P.P.G.S.W.; L. G. Wardley, P.P.S.G.D.; R. Worrall, P.P.G.S.B. Cheshire; J. T. Platt, P.P.G.J.W. Cheshire; C. Dutton, P.P.S.G.W. Cheshire; and James Gerrard, P.P.S.J.D. Cheshire. In addition to the above each lodge in the province was represented by its W.M. and a detachment of the brethren.

The Consecrating Officer was Bro. W. H. Spaul, who performed the ceremony in a very impressive manner.

In the oration Bro. the Rev. T. L. Kyffin, P.G. Chaplain urged upon those present, and especially upon the officers to be elected for the lodge, the carrying out of the sacred principles and duties of Freemasonry, which had spread among all ranks of society and throughout every clime. These sacred precepts taught them the right way to live and their duty to rise higher and higher on earth, that when the Grand Master of all came to make up his jewels they might feel in their own minds the happy consciousness of having done their duty.

At the conclusion of the consecration the Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master appointed Bro. James Salmon W.M. of the new lodge, the installation being performed by Bro. George Owen, P.S.G.W. Bro. Henry Nicholson Gilbank and A. J. Spinks were appointed Senior Warden, and Junior Warden of the lodge.

At the conclusion of the business the brethren, in full regalia formed in procession, and proceeded to St. Thomas's Church. The demonstration would have been very imposing had it not been for the rain which compelled the members of the fraternity to assume their overcoats. The brethren arrived at the church shortly after four o'clock. The service was read by the Rev. T. L. Kyffin, and the lesson by the Ven. Archdeacon Morgan, P.P.G. Chaplain. The service was choral. The sermon was preached by the Ven. Archdeacon Morgan, who said that by command of the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, a collection would be made at the close of the service in behalf of the Rhyl Charities, and the Masonic Benevolent Institution of the Province. He might mention that the Rhyl Charities named were the Women's Home and the Ragged Schools; which were local so far as the buildings were in the town. But the benefits of the Women's Home were limited to persons not resident in Rhyl. He thought it best to mention the object. The home stood in much need of aid; and he appealed to his brother Masons who had the means, to consider the wants of poor women who had lost their health and were without the means necessary to restore it. Of the Ragged Schools he might say they were for destitute children in the parish, who during the summer months ministered to the wants of visitors. Having again appealed to those before him to consider these objects, he took for his text the words to be found in St. Matthew, xxii, 37 and following verses. The preacher proceeded, after a brief introduction, to treat of the twofold love mentioned in the text—of selfishness, of hatred. He noticed the words of the Apostle, "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death," and said that if self-interest were the great thing with any one of them, if he were wanting in sympathy with his fellows, he was in God's sight as a dead man. If anyone amongst them had no sympathy with, or withheld support from these charities, he had not learnt the rudiments of Freemasonry.

At the close a collection was made, the bags being carried by members of the fraternity. The amount contributed was £20.

There was a strong choir, and an anthem was sung.

Mr. Wrigley, organist and choirmaster, presided at the organ, and after the close played the National Anthem.

The brethren then wended their way to the Town Hall, where they sat down to a banquet, under the presidency of the Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master. A number of ladies were admitted to the gallery.

On the removal of the cloth,

Bro. Sir Watkin Wynn proposed "The Health of Her Majesty," which was most loyally received.

In proposing "The Health of the Prince of Wales," Bro. Sir Watkin remarked that he had great pleasure in proposing the toast, seeing that his Royal Highness was heir apparent to the throne, and Grand Master of their Order. The Prince had seen Masonry in many parts of the world, and was an enthusiastic supporter of the Craft.

Bro. J. Salmon, who was received with applause, proposed the health of "The Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master," and in doing so he regretted that the toast had not been placed in abler hands, but at the same time he felt it did not require a long speech from him to remind them of the many good qualities which distinguished Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, who was beloved throughout the principality of North Wales. It must be pleasing to those present to think that their Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master's health had been so far restored as to enable him to be present on that occasion, and he trusted that Sir Watkin would long be spared to preside over the Province of North Wales and Shropshire. During the time he had been their Grand Master, Masonry had greatly increased throughout the Principality, and the Province was now second to none in the kingdom.

Bro. Sir Watkin, in responding, said he felt much obliged to them for the kind way in which the toast had been received. He was very glad every time he came to Rhyl to see how wonderfully the town was improving. Forty years ago, when he first visited it, it was an unimportant village, but every time he re-visited it he could not fail to notice its growth. He had the honour of assisting at the laying of the foundation stone of the beautiful church they had attended that afternoon, and he was now glad to see that the gentleman by whose exertions it had been completed had, by the unanimous consent of the diocese, been appointed archdeacon. As to the good of Freemasonry it would be idle on his part to take up their time in speaking of it. He had had the pleasure of attending lodges in many parts of Europe, and had seen the good it had done everywhere. He regretted that in consequence of the state of his health this was the first time he had been able to come among them that year. The consecration of the lodge had been postponed longer than he could have wished, but he had, unfortunately, been confined to the house. Thanks, however, to the care of his doctors and a visit to Germany, his health was now restored, and he hoped to make up for his shortcomings during the remainder of the year.

Bro. Gilbank next proposed the health of "The Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Bulkeley Hughes, M.P.," and coupled with the toast the name of Bro. G. Owen. He stated that at the last moment Bro. Bulkeley Hughes had been detained in town, which he regretted very much; but he was very glad to see that the other Provincial Grand Officers had acted so well during his absence.

Bro. Owen, in responding, remarked upon the necessity for a Masonic lodge in Rhyl, and expressed himself satisfied with the efficient manner in which the business had been conducted that day. He felt sure that the lodge had a bright career before it.

Bro. Sir Watkin then proposed "Prosperity to the Caradoc Lodge." He said they had appointed a brother as Worshipful Master who had worked up not only that lodge but other lodges in the Principality. Bro. Salmon was well up in Masonry, and it was fortunate for the members of the lodge that they had so energetic a brother at their head. He was initiated in the same lodge as him (Sir Watkin), and he therefore knew how good a Mason he was. He trusted that the lodge would prosper, and concluded by formally proposing the toast, coupling with it the name of Bro. Salmon, the W.M. of the lodge.

Bro. J. Salmon, in responding, said it gave him great pleasure to think that the consecration of the lodge had now been completed. He did not derive so much pleasure from the recollection that they had given him work to do, although many of his brethren in Masonry often said they could not give him too much. However, he would do the best he could to merit the honour which had been conferred upon him, and he believed the lodge would prosper and become a shining light in Masonry. Rhyl was most favourably situated for the establishment of a lodge. It was central, and had convenient railway accommodation, and if the brethren would only support him there could be no reason why the lodge should not succeed. Of course he should look to them for their most earnest support, for the Master of a Masonic lodge was like the captain of a ship, which could not well be navigated unless the captain was supported by his officers and crew. The position which they had conferred upon him was not of his own seeking; he had accepted it purely from his love of Masonry and his wish to extend it; for he believed that however good a man might be he would become better by joining a Masonic lodge. He would become a better man, a better husband, a better father, and a better member of society. If a man would only observe the principles inculcated in Freemasonry he would be a gainer by it in every way. In conclusion, he thanked them for the way in which the toast had been proposed and received, and he trusted that the Caradoc Lodge would, in its future career, be as a shining light set on a hill.

The Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master then proposed "The Health of the Venerable Archdeacon Morgan," which was well received.

Archdeacon Morgan having replied, the Junior Warden of the lodge, Bro. A. J. Spinks, proposed "The Health of the Consecrating Officer," to whom a great deal of credit was due for the complete and able manner in which he had rendered the ceremony that day.

Bro. Spaul, in responding, said it was the first lodge he had consecrated, and he was pleased to think that he had had the opportunity of performing the ceremony. As the lodge was his first Masonic child, he should look upon its future career with very great interest. There was one thing that struck him that day, and that was the attendance of ladies at the banquet. (Hear, hear.) That was an example he hoped to see followed on other occasions, for he believed that every true-hearted Mason desired that the ladies should participate sometimes in their enjoyment after the lodge meetings were over. It reminded him of the occasion when he attended the Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, a festival at which, he might remark, the province of North Wales indeed, no less than £170 being contributed by it, and £100 of that amount he had the pleasure of taking up himself, a duty he hoped to have to perform again. (Hear, hear, and applause.)

Bro. J. Salmon next proposed "The Visitors," which was acknowledged by Bro. J. McHattie (Chester), who said it gave him very great pleasure to be present on that occasion. Bro. Salmon, he added, was a thorough working Mason, and deserved credit for the energy he had displayed in forming the new lodge. One of the proudest distinctions of their Craft was the amount of money contributed annually to the Masonic charities; and he was glad to see that the province of North Wales and Shropshire was not neglectful in that respect.

Bro. J. J. Cunah proposed "The Health of Bro. A. J. Spinks, the Junior Warden," remarking that had it not been for the efforts of Bro. Spinks Freemasonry would never have been identified with Rhyl.

Bro. Spinks briefly responded, and after a few other toasts the proceedings terminated.

The lodge music was under the direction of Bros. J. Humphreys and Herbert Ellis, Chester, assisted by Bros. Adams and Alton Jones, Mold. During the evening some capital songs and duets were ably sung by these gentlemen, and materially contributed to the entertainment of the brethren.

The Registrar General reports that the fatal cases of small-pox in the twenty principal towns, which in the nine preceding weeks had steadily declined from 92 to 29, were 37 last week, of which 31 occurred in London and five in Liverpool. Scarlet fever continues fatally prevalent in Wolverhampton. There were 28 fatal cases of measles in London last week, one of typhus, 14 of enteric or typhoid, and six of simple continued fever. No less than 60 deaths occurred from different forms of violence.

The Great Yarmouth and Stalham Railway was opened for traffic on Tuesday.

CONSECRATION OF THE CHAPTER OF UNITED STRENGTH, No. 228.

More than eighty years ago, as the records in the minutes of the Lodge of United Strength are stated to show, it was resolved that steps should be taken to form a chapter to the lodge. What came of the resolution, and what steps were taken, Masonic history is as silent about as is general history concerning the detailed actions of the Picts and Scots of blessed memory. This is not caused by the Lodge of United Strength being without means of going back in its history to remote times. The lodge is in possession of a written history, more or less complete like all written history, but altogether unvarnished, unlike all other history. This written history is in the minutes; but it is silent as to the steps which were taken by the brethren in the year A.D. 1797, and we fail to find the United Strength Masters and Wardens ever travelled from the far west, somewhere about the then wilds of Cheyne Walk, to the east, in the search of a charter, or, if they travelled, what was the result of their perilous journey. But besides the written history there is existing, and long may its authors flourish, certain oral testimony. Far is it from us, to allege or to hint that this oral testimony be in any degree traditional, or, still worse, legendary, and none will think so when we say that this is in the memories of certain ancient brothers, so ancient that grey-headed members who have grand-children are mere youths by their side. These very ancient members have, to the great glory of the lodge, memories so green, that the bald records in writing are, upon occasions, amplified and made living testimony. One instance will suffice. In 1869 a very ancient dame, quite on a par with the very ancient members of the lodge, applied for the aid of her late husband's brethren. Her husband had been dead 40 years, and he left the lodge nearly 60 years before, but she brought with her his discharge from it, showing that he had left it in 1814, in an honourable manner, and showing his jewel, for the lodge is a jewelled one, and his widow had kept this memento of her husband's brotherhood through the many years of her solitude. Of course the very ancient members knew the name of the brother who had left the lodge just before the Battle of Waterloo was fought, and the youthful members of the lodge, led by that most enthusiastic youth in matters of charity, Bro. James Terry, cheerfully embraced the opportunity of practising the virtue they all admire, and the old lady was sent rejoicing, happy to find, that though all blood relations had died away, her dead husband had living brothers in the inheritors of those who had more than 60 years ago received her good and true man amongst them.

All history, written or oral, being silent as to any practical result of the movement for a chapter in 1797, the subject was often mooted as to pressing on another step. The very ancient members, being as modest as they are worthy, did not press the subject, and the more youthful ones, with the deference ever paid by worth, waited for their elders. Last year, however, the lodge was ruled over by one whose keen love of his lodge is only equalled by his love of the Craft, and having, perhaps, felt the strangeness of entering the Royal Arch apart from his lodge, bridged the gulf which, in no unkindness, had existed, and invited all the Royal Arch Masons in the lodge to apply for a charter for a new chapter. This was Bro. Robert Griggs, the well-known architect of Gray's Inn-square, and the second important step of this undertaking was the consecration of the new chapter on the last Tuesday in July (last Tuesday week).

The ceremony was held at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, E. Comp. Henry Muggerridge, Past Grand Standard Bearer, P.Z., being the Consecrating Officer, assisted by E. Comp. John Newton, P.Z., acting H., and E. Comp. Hazelgrove, acting J.

The new officers designated were: Bros. James Terry, Z.; John A. Winsland, H., Treas.; Robert Griggs, J.; James Hillhouse, Scribe E.; John White (Freemason), Scribe N.; Robert Snare, P.S.; Halford, First A.; Killick, Second A.; The visitors included Comps. Hill, of the Domestic; Faija, of the Caveac; Goolden, of the Royal York; Humphreys, of the Phoenix; and Cousins, the latter presiding at the harmonium.

It is unnecessary for us to go through the whole ceremony, and it will suffice to say that the companion of the benign countenance, Comp. Muggerridge, gave the whole ceremony with wonderful impressiveness, all the more wonderful when it is considered that the room was like the hottest room at a Turkish bath, and that the coolest and most self-possessed of mankind, the new M.E.Z., was only sustained by a plentiful supply of "Sainsbury's best" (lavender water), administered outwardly. The new chapter was formed with all solemnity, the Principals inducted into their chairs (Comp Terry being presented by his old friend, brother, and companion, Newton) and the officers invested and placed in their respective chairs. For the propositions for election the first name read out by Scribe E. was that of the worthy Secretary, Bro. Joseph Crump, for upwards, too, of a quarter of a century (no mere reckoning by years in this case) of the dear old mother lodge, and, as in the case of the siege of Rome by the Tuscan, if there had been any enemies present, they "could scarce forbear to cheer," and, as it was, "all ranks gave forth a rapturous shout." The other chapter work included the election of Comps. Muggerridge, Newton, and Hazelgrove as honorary members. After many names for exaltation, had been given in and the chapter closed, the brethren adjourned to banquet, which was certainly a very pleasant feature in the evening's proceedings. The M.E.Z., in his usual graceful manner, proposed the usual loyal toasts—"Her Majesty," "The G.Z.," and the other Grand Officers." Then the Consecrating Officer was toasted, and responded to the toast with the eloquence which is to him a natural gift.

Comp. Newton, in proposing "The M.E.Z.'s Health," reviewed the memories of bygone years to both, and dwelt upon the good which Comp. Terry was never tired of doing.

The response was brief, and to the purpose, and the M.E.Z., referring to his two worthy companions, Winsland and Griggs, thanked them for the honour they had done him, in conjunction with the other founders in offering him the chair. Comp. Winsland, as an old P.Z., and an older P.M., might have taken that position, and Comp. Griggs, as the active promoter of the chapter, might have looked to a higher position; but as it was the wish of all, the position of M.E.Z. had been accepted by him with pride.

The two other Principals were toasted, and an acknowledgment was made of their arduous work in promoting the welfare of a lodge whose unitedness does not stop with its name. The officers, too, spoken of as worthy Masons, who had worked their way to good positions, and that too, by the one standard recognised in the Book of Constitutions, "Merit only," were likewise toasted with heartiness, as were the visitors and the honorary members.

The evening, in sober pleasure spent, had its pleasures greatly enhanced by the singing of Comps. Cousins, Humphreys, and Griggs, and by recitations by Comp. Muggerridge.

FREEMASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

WELL DESERVED HONOURS.

Our active brother, Chas. E. Meyer, has had new honours conferred upon him. In May last he was declared an honorary life member of Canongate and Leith and Leith and Canongate Lodge, No. 5, Leith, Scotland. This lodge is the offshoot and eldest daughter of the Lodge of Edinburgh, Mary's Chapel, No. 1, and was formed May 29, 1828. It is not only one of the oldest but one of the largest and most powerful working lodges under the Scottish Constitution. Accompanying the announcement of his affiliation, Bro. Meyer received a certificate of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, with Bro. D. Murray Lyon's signature appended as Grand Secretary, also a beautiful gold badge, upon which are emblazoned the coat of arms of each of the two corporations, Canongate and Leith. This badge is a present from Bro. James Neilson, Lodge No. 5.

Bro. Meyer has also been made the second honorary member of the Centenary Lodge of Fortitude, No. 131, Truro, Cornwall, England, and has received a most elegantly engrossed certificate of the same.

At the stated meeting in June the members of Melita Lodge, No. 395, of which Bro. Meyer is a Past Master, were apprised of the high honours conferred upon him, and it was decided that a recognition was due, whereupon the following was offered:

Resolved, that Melita Lodge, No. 395, fully recognises the compliment conferred upon one of its members, Bro. P.M. Charles E. Meyer, by Canongate and Leith Lodge, No. 5, Leith, Scotland, and by the Centenary Lodge of Fortitude of Truro, in making him an honorary member of said lodges, and we hereby tender our sincere thanks to the members of said lodges for the high honours thus conferred. After some eulogistic remarks from some of the brethren present, the resolutions were unanimously adopted and the Secretary directed to transmit a copy to Leith and to Truro.—Philadelphian Chronicle.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

The 20th Triennial Conclave of the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar of the United States, to be held at Cleveland in August, promises to be unusually enjoyable. Oriental Commandery, No. 12, on behalf of the Grand Commandery of Ohio, will entertain the visiting Knights as follows: Monday, August 27, Reception at Cass Hall; Tuesday, 28th, Grand Parade and Review, Excursion on Lake Erie by steamer, and Evening Reception; Wednesday, 29th, Lawn Fête, Reception, and Competitive Prize Drill; Thursday, 30th, Lake Excursion to Put-in-Bay. This programme speaks for itself. The knightly courtesy of our fratres of Ohio could not be more fully exhibited.—Keystone.

ST. JOHN'S DAY IN LOUISIANA.

Bro. David Leatherman, District Deputy Grand Master of Louisiana, writes to Bro. F. H. Babbitt, M.D., of this city (who has fraternally shown us his letter), that Atchafalaya Lodge, No. 164, and Tyrian Lodge, No. 206, celebrated St. John's Day last by a Masonic festival at Red River Landing. There was a large gathering of brethren present, and a delightful time was enjoyed. Bro. Leatherman was Master of Ceremonies, and Bro. Samuel J. Powell, Grand Master of Louisiana, was present, and delivered an address, as did also Bro. John B. Gordy, M.D., a member of the Grand Lodge Committee on Work. The celebration concluded with a sumptuous banquet. A large number of ladies were present, and after partaking of the banquet, dancing was indulged in by the brethren and their guests. Grand Master Powell is a model Grand Officer—unassuming, unselfish, courteous to all, and loved by every member of the fraternity over whom he presides. He is indeed a Solomon, and not a Cæsar over the Craft. Bro. D. Babbitt, of this city, we may add, is a P.M. of both Atchafalaya and Tyrian Lodges, and naturally feels proud of their prosperity.—Keystone.

EXCURSION OF COLUMBIAN COMMANDERY.

On Saturday, 14th ult., this venerable and long-famed commandery, known as the "Old Guard," from the fact that it has been from its organization, No. 1, and older than the Grand Commandery itself, visited Rockaway Beach for a parade and excursion, at the invitation of Sir Knight J. G. Worth, whose guests they and the visiting Sir Knights were, on the steamer William Cook. The line was formed at their asylum, Masonic Temple, on Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street, at 8:30 a.m., when, preceded by the full drum and fife corps of the Eighth Regiment, under the baton of Bro. Mackever, they repaired to the steamer as follows: Em. Sir Peter Forrester; Commander; Sir Knights E. M. L. Ehlers, Generalissimo; W. D. May, Captain General; Em. Sir Knights Robert Macoy, Gr. Recorder, and Chas. Aikman, Gr. Warder; R. Em. Sir Knight Beatty, Past Gr. Commander, and Em. Sir Knight Lancing Burrows, Grand Prelate of the Gr. Commander of New Jersey; the officers and twenty Sir Knights of Damascus Commandery, No. 5, of Newark, N. J., and a delegation of Sir Knights from Clinton Commandery, No. 14, of Brooklyn; the whole forming a line of about ninety Knights Templars in full uniform. The Beauseant was displayed as well as the guidons by their bearers. Among many of the well-known knights of the Commandery we noticed Sir Knights Wm. Fowler, a descendant of the Knickerbockers, and E. B. Fairchild, and E. Bonabue, jr. of the command. The trip to the beach was greatly enjoyed, the day being unexceptionably fine, the music by the band being all that could be desired, and the attention of Sir Knight Worth duly appreciated by all. On arrival at the second landing, the objective point, a salute of nine guns was fired, when the visiting Sir Knights were welcomed by the proprietors of the Sea-Side House, Messrs. Remsen and Wainwright, and after re-forming on their spacious landing and preceded by the drum and fife corps, were by the gentlemen named escorted to their magnificent pavilion on the ocean, where, after the command were brought in line, the hosts of the Sea-Side House invited the excursionists to a feast at three p.m. The command broke ranks, and, until the hour designated, enjoyed themselves with bathing, dancing, and occasionally smiling. Three o'clock having arrived, the Knights, with the ladies accompanying them, were seated at two long tables in the upper pavilion, where pyramids of roast clams and any quantity of clam chowder was ready for the assault. In fact when the pyramid of clams was captured, and they grew clam-iferous, more pyramids appeared, until they gave up in perfect exhaustion. To the originator of the excursion, Sir Knight Worth, and to the landlords of the Sea-Side House all credit is due for their exertions, free of charge, to make everything go as pleasant as a marriage feast is supposed to go.—New York Dispatch.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

This Orient has been conducting itself very unmasonically. At its general meeting, held in Paris in September last, it was decided by a large majority to take into consideration the outrageously unmasonic proposal, viz.: "The obliteration from their Constitution of the belief in God and in the Immortality of the Soul." It appears that the majority of members in this Orient are what are commonly called "Atheists," who like to live "without God," and denying, as they do, the "Immortality of the Soul," to die "without hope." They, in their own self-esteem, have become so elevated or superhuman, that they are contented to live and die "like the beasts of the field." Of course, being "highly cultivated" (as they fancy), they think it their privilege to be on the same level with the beasts of the field. It will be well for these deluded individuals to pay attention to what some of the greatest and the most philosophical and learned of men have said on the subject of Atheism. For their behoof we quote the following:

1. Lord Herbert, of Chesham: "Whoever considers the study of anatomy, I believe will never be an Atheist; the frame of man's body, and coherence of his parts, being so strange and paradoxical that I hold it to be the greatest miracle of Nature."

2. It is said of Galen, the celebrated physician of antiquity, that he was once atheistically inclined. But after he had anatomized the human body, and carefully surveyed the frame of it, viewed the fitness and usefulness of every part of it, and the many intentions of every little vein, bone and muscle, and the beauty of the whole, he fell into a fit of devotion and wrote "a hymn to his Creator."

3. Dr. Marshall, a lecturer on anatomy, once devoted a whole lecture to display the profound science that was visible in the formation of "the double hinges" of our joints. Such was the effect of his "demonstrations" that an inquisitive friend, who had accompanied Dr. Turner to the lecture, with sceptical inclinations, suddenly exclaimed with great emphasis, "A man must be a fool indeed who, after duly studying his own body, can remain an atheist."

4. Dr. Arnold, in one of his weighty letters, says, "I confess that I believe conscientious Atheism not to exist."

5. Dr. Krummacher, in his Alliance Paper on Infidelity in Germany, remarks "That atheism in the lower classes appears as a plant—proceeding more from political interest than as a proof proceeding from a clear self-judgment. Religion is looked upon as an invention to press down the people."

6. Mr. Vanderkiste, in his deeply interesting "Notes and Narratives of a Six Years' Mission among the Dens of London," says: "The so-called atheists with whom I have met have proved, with few exceptions, upon being closely questioned, not really to be atheists at all. They have admitted some causation, and when pressed closely upon the subject of intelligent causation, and required to define terms, they have fairly broken down and become angry. Atheism is to be regarded as the desperate shift of an ill-regulated mind, determined to rid itself of responsibility at the expense of all reason and argument."

7. John Foster, the original-minded author of the Essays says: "The wonder then turns on the great process by which a man may grow up to the immense intelligence which can know there is no God. What ages and what light are requisite for this attainment! This intelligence involves the very attributes of Divinity while a God is denied. For unless this man is omnipresent, unless he is at this moment present at every part in the universe, he cannot know but there may be in some place manifestations of Deity, by which even he may be over-powered. If he does not know absolutely every agent in the universe, the one that he does not know may be God. If he is not himself the chief agent in the universe, and does not know what is so, that which is so may be God. If he is not in absolute possession of all the propositions that constitute universal truth, the one that he wants may be that there is a God. If he cannot with certainty assign the cause of all he perceives to exist, that cause may be God. If he does not know everything that has been done in the immeasurable ages that are past, some things may have been done by a God. Thus, unless he knows all things—that is, precludes all other Divine existence by being Deity himself—he cannot know that the Being whose existence he rejects does not exist. But he must know that he does not exist, else he deserves equal contempt and compassion for the temerity with which he firmly avows his rejection and acts accordingly."

8. Newton, Kepler, and others of the greatest discoverers in science, rose from Nature up to Nature's God, and had their minds filled with "religious emotion" when exploring the earth and the heavens.

9. Lord Bacon, "one of the most remarkable of men of whom any age can boast"—"a reformer of philosophy"—says; "God never wrought a miracle to convince Atheism, because His ordinary work convinced it."

10. Morell, in his "History of Philosophy, vol. 2, pp. 646-7," states; "If you want argument from design, then you see in the human frame the most perfect of all known organization. If you want the argument from being, then man in his conscious dependence has the clearest conviction of the independent and absolute one on which his own being reposes. If you want the argument from reason and morals, then the human mind is the only known repository of both. Man is, in fact, a microcosm—a universe in himself; and whatever proof the whole universe affords is involved, in principle, in man himself. With this image of God before us, who can doubt of the Divine type?"

11. Cicero, Brougham, Paley, Chalmers, and others, with unrivalled eloquence, have convincingly established the argument—declared in the Sacred Law—"The heavens declare the Glory of God, and the firmament sheweth forth His handiwork."

It is needless to multiply quotations. The opinions of philosophers ought to have "weight" with "the Atheists" in the Grand Orient of France, who, we confidently and defiantly assert, have not "the gigantic mind" either of Bacon, Newton, or Kepler. Would the Atheists in the Grand Orient of France remember that if they persist in their truly unmasonic resolution, "cut off," they must be from, and disowned by, all the genuine Sons of Hiram in the Universe of Masonry.

Alas, for La Belle France! The Atheism of its God-defying children has been its ruin. Did not Atheism produce the too-well-known "Reign of Terror" in that land? Did not Atheism then transform "the beautiful" France into a troubled sea and a sea of blood? Did not Atheism dissolve the bonds of Society? Did not Atheism worship a common Siren in a state of nudity, as "The Goddess of Reason"? Ay, did not Atheism, under the sacred name of liberty, perpetrate "horrid deeds," which are unrivalled in the history of the world? In the words of Lamartine—"The republic of these men without a God was quickly stranded." And we again assure the Atheists in the Grand Orient of unhappy France—"Let the throne in the heavens be declared vacant and proclamation be made throughout the land that there is no God"—not only are the Masonic bonds that bind Masons dissolved, but society itself is left of all its safeguards, crime is committed without dread of punishment, and the vilest passions of the vilest rush onward without restraint.—Australian Freemason.

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

The Chapter of St. John was opened and consecrated, at Timaru, on Tuesday, 10th April, by M.E. Comp. H. Thomson, M.E. Comp. Thiel, and E. Comp. Deane, from St. Augustine Chapter, Christchurch; Comp. G. H. Wildie, 1st P.; Comp. W. Williamson, and P.; Comp. John King, 3rd P.; Comp. Samuel Hammond, Treasurer; R. R. Taylor, P.S.; Comp. N. M. Simms, S.E.; Comp. N. A. Hobbs, S.N.; Comp. J. N. S. Zister, Organist; Comp. N. Dall, Janitor; eight Brethren of St. John's Lodge were exalted, and three joining members admitted. At the conclusion of consecration ceremony the companions sat down to a dinner in the Library of the Masonic Hall. Owing to the amount of business to be done, the dinner was not a lengthy one and only a few of the principal toasts were drunk.

MASONS' STREETS.—During the Middle Ages it was a custom universally followed in large cities and smaller provincial towns, for the several Craftsmen of various vocations to be aggregated in lodges which occupied either the entire quarters of a municipality, or were opened on both sides of a street which was often designated by the name of the handicraft. At a very remote period the Austrian metropolis, Vienna, had the public thoroughfares, according to a venerable plot of the city, specially set apart, and also entirely abandoned to various skilled handicrafts. For many centuries the Masons in Paris were regularly domiciled along the Rue des Maçons, and in this respect closely followed a more ancient custom descended from their Roman predecessors. A number of the cities of the United States have a "Freemasons'-street," for example, Norfolk, Va., and Indianapolis, Indiana.

We are requested to announce that the Yarrow Lodge, No. 244, Jersey, will meet at the Masonic Temple, Stopford-road, St. Helier's, Jersey, on Monday, 13th inst., at 7 p.m.

RIGHT ESTIMATE OF FREEMASONRY.

Masonry, like every other institution, has a body and a soul, and therefore is to be regarded both literally and spiritually. If only the outward form—the visible unfolding—is taken into account, there will be no high and proper estimate of its character. It requires a mental and moral discernment to obtain a large and just appreciation of the Masonic system. Running rapidly through the degrees, gathering a few catch words of the ritual, occasionally witnessing some portion of the ceremony rehearsed, paying dues and fulfilling the specific obligations that Masonry imposes, will by no means lead to a full comprehension of the genius of our institution, or make evident the sublimity of its principles and its far-reaching moral benefits. A man without imagination or sensitiveness of soul, having no mental or moral training, whose whole being is saturated with materialism, can by no effort estimate rightly the breadth and sweep of the Masonic system. It makes no difference how many degrees such an one may take, how perfect, even, he may become in the text of the ritual and in matters of ceremonial procedure, there will always remain a glory hidden from his discerning, so that he will see and judge the institution on its lower and not on its superior side.

When the land surveyor looks forth upon the landscape he sees so much of distance and surface manifestations, so many helps or obstructions in the laying out of roads, the building of bridges, or the cutting of tunnels. The speculator in real estate notes the availability of the same prospect for house lots, his estimate being that of the market. The geologist and chemist regard the formation of the rock and the properties of the soil, their estimate being also professional and limited. It is the man imbued with a love of nature, possessed of a true sensitiveness of soul, and a broader reach of thought and vision, who alone is able to pass all these lines of outward seeming to discern a beauty and a worth in the landscape which were but faintly apprehended by the others. To him a wonderful meaning—an indescribable charm—will be manifest, as he goes forth among the fields or forests which fill his cultivated thought with a thousand suggestions, while by such an intelligent estimate of nature he is lifted up into communion with Nature's God.

Precisely thus are some men fitted to appreciate Masonry at its best, to discern its genius and its philosophy, while others will never do more than perceive its material side, albeit they may become excellently well versed in the technicalities of the system and punctually fulfil its outward obligations. Perhaps these ought not to have entered the fraternity. They are unsuited by original constitution and temperament, by lack of any special capacity, and by the want of mental and moral training, for the rightful appreciation of a society which holds a philosophy of such mystical character, and makes use of forms and legends so various for the purpose of ministering to the faculties that belong to the spiritual side of human nature.

But being admitted to Masonic relationship, even the comparatively prosaic and uncultivated should consider that they have pledged themselves to a work of personal spiritual expansion. First of all they must devote themselves to a cultivation of sentiments and faculties which lie dormant in their natures, so that they may apprehend the underlying principles and moral glory of Masonry, no less than its visible signs and practical benefits. Let them but exercise their moral powers, cultivate a spiritual insight, and it will not be very long before they will begin to appreciate the moral and philosophical character of the organization to which they have given their allegiance. Then they will honour it, not merely for its instituted forms and prescribed ceremonies, its social helps and bountiful benefactions, but also for these intangible yet essential properties that belong to its higher life and character. Masonry has a soul as well as a body. The body is one outward and visible part, comprising law, ritual and ceremony; organization and administration; a variety of practical manifestations by no means to be undervalued. The soul is the interior life—the vital source of impulse and grandest movement, and may of right claim pre-eminence. Hence more thought and study should be given to the spiritual characteristics that impart to Masonry its truest dignity and worth, while the brethren keep in mind that statement which applies to every system, even to religion itself, viz.: that the letter kills, while the spirit alone gives life.—Repository.

The quietness of an hotel in London possesses a great charm, especially to those who, visiting town from country seats or country towns, seek refuge from the noise and babel in their hotels, in many cases only to find the quietness sought for an illusion. Many Metropolitan Hotels, replete with accommodation, are situated in noisy thoroughfares, or great centres of traffic; and it is our pleasure now to direct the attention of noblemen, gentlemen, and families to an hotel that, although situate in the fashionable part of town, and within a stone's throw, so to write, of Saint James's-street, Pall Mall, Piccadilly and Bond-street, yet possesses all the advantages of perfect quietude and a private and direct entry to the Green Park. There is no traffic through Saint James's Place, Saint James's-street, and in this is situate (No. 17) Green's Saint James's place Hotel, containing elegant suites of rooms adapted for families of the highest distinction, and in addition single apartments with use of coffee room. The great care devoted to the cuisine, the choice selections of first quality wines, good attendance, and the whole under the personal supervision of Bro. Anton Herold, give to visitors frequenting the establishment all the comforts of a home. The elegant suites of rooms are admirably adapted for lodge meetings and banquets; and it is desired that noblemen and gentlemen, will kindly give the same their consideration, being ensured of every attention and accommodation.

A SUMMER ST. JOHN'S IN AMERICA.

The New York Dispatch says that Monday 16th July, was set apart for the twelfth annual excursion of Delta Lodge, New York, No. 451, and Providence smiling upon the effort, the weather was all that could have been wished and better than it would have been had the participants fixed it for themselves. At ten of the clock, the large steamer chartered for the occasion, with its two attendant barges, like the wings of a swan sailing on the placid waters of some sylvan lake, and filled with a company in which many of Brooklyn's choicest spirits had a place, sailed forth on its journey up the Hudson. Mirth sat like a wreath of bridal roses on every happy countenance, and joy unrestrained floated on the zephyrs that fanned the brows of the participants, from tender infancy to sedate old age. Anon the sweet strains that recall the goddess Euterpe and the secter dedicated to Gambrinus set little feet to "—stealing in and out

and larger ones, like these of the Dispatch, for instance, followed suit, till the very rafters trembled, and Old Sol, though somewhat out of the lenient mood he has lately affected, curved up one corner of his mouth and smiled sweetly on the happy devotees of the triangle. So happy was the day, so sweet and pleasant was the companionship, that when at last Iona's beach embraced the gilded prow of our galleys, old and young men and maidens refused to be separated, and by general consent hundreds of lunch baskets gave forth their contents on the boats and set out a feast at which Lucullus in person might have enjoyed a surfeit—where every clime contributed its richest stores, from the orange of Florida to the truffles of Perigord, to say nothing of the renowned Widow Cluquet and the pipers whose hide is always sick. Talk about Olympus and the feasts of the gods! Refresh your memory with golden dreams of last year's strawberries served in silver bowls, moistened with Alderney cream and fitly crowned with sugar white as the snows born of mid-winter and pulverulent as the dust of ages; think of douchees à la Reine, Becasse on toast, or the choicest menu of—anybody you like, and you will still come short of the gastronomical enjoyment of this festive occasion. Followed a season of intellectual refreshment, in which song and jest, wit and repartee, flashed and corruscated like jewels in the light. Those whom "Bruce had often led" still followed their leader and made the air vocal with sweet sounds, which the environing shores sent back in echoing reverberations, and anon when our bark turned once more to the city of the bridge and its sails reflected the soft radiance of the declining day, Terpsichore again assumed command, and held undisputed sway till the "Sweet By-and-By" and "Home Again" announced to unwilling ears that the fairy scene was ended, and the cares and struggles of life again in presence.

Among those present we noticed Bros. and Mrs. Chas. P. Marrat, Bro. and Mrs. McPhail, Bro. and Mrs. William J. Orr, Bro. George Orr, Sergt. John Beatty, Bro. and Mrs. John Bruce, Bro. and Mrs. Saunders, Bro. and Mrs. Sutton, Bro. and Mrs. Forest with Miss Charlotte Forest, Bro. and Mrs. Leighton, Bro. and Mrs. Ivory, Miss Fitzpatrick, Bro. and Mrs. Dispatch, and fourteen hundred and seventy-eight others whose names we would gladly give did we know them. It is scarcely needed that we should add that the Dispatch received more attention than could be conveniently divided among one, and it is a matter of regret that there were not half a dozen of us. It was a day to be remembered, and if we had the proper kind of type we would mark it here in red.

An envious, crusty, forlorn old bachelor, who happens to be looking over our shoulder here remarks: "No wonder they didn't want to go ashore; it rained like the D—idymus." But as the Irishman said, "we pay no attention to such remarks."

"SHOULD OLD ACQUAINTANCE BE FORGOT?"

At the June Assembly of Boston Commandery, Boston, Mass., a very pleasing incident took place, which must have been agreeable to the more youthful knights, and cheering to those more aged. For nearly a year past Sir Abraham A. Dame, who presided over the Commandery in 1826-29, under the title of Most Eminent Grand Master, has been unable to attend the meetings; but on this evening E. Commander S. Mason, Jr., had taken especial care to have him present. A committee of Past Eminent Commanders was appointed to escort the venerable knight into the Asylum, where he was received with appropriate honours and respect. On entering, the Sir Knights rose to their feet, and all joined in singing "Should Old Acquaintance be Forgotten?" This was continued with fine effect during the march to the East, where a kindly welcome was extended by the Eminent Commander. After witnessing the work in the Order of the Temple, Sir Dame made a brief speech, in which he expressed himself grateful for the attentions shown him, and filled with pleasure at again meeting with the Knights in the Asylum of Boston Commandery. He also complimented the fidelity shown to the ritual, as taught by Webb and Fowler, and gave words of encouragement to all. He said that possibly he might not have the satisfaction of again meeting with them in the Commandery; but so long as God permitted him to live, he should feel, as he always felt, a lively interest in their prosperity, and, in conclusion, wished them "good night."—Liberal Freemason.

Bro. the Rt. Hon. Lord Waverley, R.W. P.G.M. Suffolk, has left town for Ballymena, Antrim, ## LODGES BY IMMEMORIAL CONSTITUTION.

Preston tells us that a sufficient number of Masons met together within a certain district, with the consent of the sheriff or chief magistrate of the place, were empowered, at this time, to make Masons, and practice the rites of Masonry, without a warrant of Constitution. The privilege was inherent in themselves as individuals; and this privilege is still enjoyed by the two old Lodges which are now extant (1795), and act by immemorial constitution.

The two Lodges alluded to are still in active existence, but there were formerly four referred to in the old records, and accounted for as follows, by Preston, whom we again quote:—

"1. The old Lodge of St. Paul, now named the Lodge of Antiquity, No. 1, formerly held at the Goose and Gridiron in St. Paul's Church-yard, is still extant (in 1795), and regularly meets at the Freemasons' Tavern, in Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-Inn Fields, on the 4th Wednesday of every month. This Lodge is in a very flourishing state, and possesses some valuable records and other ancient relics.

"2. The old Lodge, No. 2, formerly held at the Crown in Parker's-lane in Drury-lane, has been extinct about fifty years by the death of its members.

"3. The old Lodge, No. 3, formerly held at the Apple-tree Tavern, in Charles-street, Covent garden, has been dissolved many years. By the list of lodges inserted in the Book of Constitutions printed in 1738, it appears that in February, 1722-3, this lodge was removed to the Queen's Head; in Knave's Acre, on account of some difference among its members, and that the members who met there came under a new constitution; though, says the Book of Constitutions, they wanted it not, and ranked as No. 10 in the list. Thus they inconsiderately removed their former rank under an immemorial constitution.

"4. The lodge, No. 4, formerly held at the Rummer and Grapes Tavern, in Channel-row, Westminster, was thence removed to the Horn Tavern, in New Palace-yard, where it continued to meet regularly till within these few years, when, finding themselves in a declining state, the members agreed to incorporate with a new and flourishing lodge under the constitution of the Grand Lodge, entitled the Somerset House Lodge, which immediately assumed their rank.

"It is a question that will admit of some discussion, whether any of the above old lodges can, while they exist as lodges, surrender their rights; for those rights seem to have been granted by the old Masons of the metropolis to them in trust, and any individual members of the four old lodges might object to surrender, and in that case they could never be given up. The four old lodges always preserved their original power of making, passing and raising Masons, being termed Masters' Lodges; while the other lodges, for many years afterwards, had no such power, it having been the custom to pass and raise the Masons made at these lodges at the Grand Lodge only.

MARRIAGE OF THE LADY MAYORESS.

On Thursday the marriage of Miss Ada Louisa White, daughter of Bro. Sir Thos. White, Lord Mayor, with Mr. Cecil Herbert Thornton Price, partner in a Scandinavian mercantile firm in the City, took place in St. Paul's. This ceremony has excited much interest in the City circles, and long before the hour at which the marriage was announced to take place a large number of people had assembled at the grand entrance to St. Paul's. The noble building has very rarely been used for the marriage service, and never has any person of historical name or civic note been wedded at the Pauline Altar. It was therefore to be expected that the marriage of the Lady Mayoress would excite more than ordinary interest. For some days past there had been a great demand for tickets for the interior of St. Paul's, and it was not long before the limited number was exhausted. The interest of those persons who had not been fortunate enough to secure tickets was centred in the arrival of those who had been invited to the ceremony, and it was not long before the latter filled the space in the choir and under the dome of the building, the galleries being also occupied. The bridal party having arrived, the service commenced with the processional hymn, "The Voice that breathed o'er Eden," which was sung by 40 choristers, preceding the bridal party as it advanced from the west entrance to the steps of the choir. The lectern had been moved aside for the occasion, and here the principal part of the ceremony took place. The Psalm sung was "Blessed are they that fear the Lord," and before the exhortation the choir sang Mr. Arthur Sullivan's Marriage Anthem, "O God, Thou art worthy to be praised." The bride was given away by her father, the Lord Mayor. At the end of the service, and while the signatures were being appended to the register, Dr. Stainer, the organist, played a voluntary, which was followed by Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," as the newly-wedded pair left the Cathedral. There were sixteen bridesmaids. On the return to the Mansion House, the guests were entertained at a breakfast in the Egyptian Hall, where the bride-cake was cut with a silver sword. The marriage presents are both costly and numerous. It will, doubtless interest our lady readers to be made aware of the fact that the bride's dress, from Lyons, was a white satin Princess robe, with a rich white court train four yards long from the waist, and brocaded down the back with rosebuds and forget-me-nots. The front, as well as the back, was cut all in one, with a row of orange blossoms on either side, from the shoulders, and a large bouquet, of the same flower on one side of the petticoat. The veil, handkerchief, and trimming of the bouquet, as well as of the dress, were of Brussels point lace. The shoes, from Paris, were made of white satin, hand-painted, with a design of orange blossoms and myrtle.

The dresses of the sixteen bridesmaids were petticoats and trains of Rose de Barri silk, and these young ladies all wore wreaths.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The usual monthly meeting of this Committee was held on Wednesday, at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, when the Worshipful Bro. Col. J. Creaton, P.G.D. presided. There were present: Bros. James Brett, Wm. Stephens, J. W. Stedwell, Griffiths Smith, S. Rawson, J. M. Case, L. Stean, Hyde Pullen, Samuel G. Phillips, Warren, Wheeler, T. Cubitt, and Thos. A. White. The minutes of the last monthly meeting were read and confirmed. The committee reported the deaths of Bro. Richard Kidd, (Rye); William Warren, (Bristol); and O. G. Phipp, (Ramsgate); also that Mrs. Stanbank, an annuitant had become insane, and that in consequence of her being taken care of by the parish authorities her annuity would cease.

The Warden's report was read and adopted. The letter of the Grand Secretary, conveying a resolution of the Board of General Purposes as to office accommodation having been read, two members were nominated to confer on the subject with those already appointed by the Girls' and Boys' Committees. The petitions of Bro. J. Lister (Bristol) a Mrs. G. Bird (Devizes) were placed on the lists. The Chairman's notice of motion was considered and unanimously adopted, viz.: "That in acknowledgment of the zeal and energy so successfully executed by Bro. John Constable, P.M., Lodge 185, V.P., in connection with the various charities, more especially with the festival of this Institution in 1874, he be enrolled as an hon. V.P. with all the privileges of the rank." The Secretary reported that he had received three out of the outstanding five lists of the Stewards of the late festival, making the total sum realized £13,556 16s. The Chairman signed various cheques. The proceedings then terminated.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

A Special General Court of the Governors and Subscribers of this Institution was held on Thursday afternoon at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, and over which Col. Creaton, V.P., presided. There were present Bros. H. A. Dubois, Thos. Massa, E. H. Finney, W. F. C. Moutrie, S. Rawson, Thos. F. Peacock, Griffiths Smith, A. H. Tattershall, H. Dicketts, Col. James Peters, Hyde Pullen, R. B. Webster, H. Phythian, G. Phythian, Thos. W. White, Prier de Lande Long, Thomas Cubitt and H. G. Buss.

The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed,

The Chairman said the special business which had called them together to-day was to authorize the Building Committee to expend the sum of £2,500 in the purchase of a plot of land adjoining the premises of the Institution at St. John's Hill. He said that it would be patent to all of them that the large building now on the ground at Battersea Rise would take a great deal from the open space, and it was suggested by the Building Committee that he should see the owner of the adjoining land with the view of ascertaining whether he would sell a portion of it. He saw Mr. Whiting, and at first he would not listen to the proposal; he said he would loan them a piece but would not sell it. After three or four interviews, however, that gentleman said he had seen his brothers and others interested in the property, and they had consented to sell the piece adjoining the Institution, for a sum of £2500; and he also gave his word that when the land was properly in the market that he would let him know, and give him the first refusal for the Institution. The piece of land in question was about five eighths of an acre, and ran the whole width of the ground, the price was a long one, but it must be understood that Mr. Whiting did not want to part with it. The committee pressed him to sell, and £2500 was the sum he put on it. He moved "That the Building Committee be authorised to expend the sum of £2500 in the purchase of a plot of land adjoining the premises of the Institution at St. John's Hill."

Bro. Dubois seconded.

Bro. Dicketts thought that £2500 was a very long price to give for five-eighths of an acre; he had all along understood that the land measured seven-eighths of an acre. The question was whether it was worth while to buy it.

The Chairman replied that Mr. Whiting would be much better pleased if they did not purchase.

Bro. Dicketts: Is it possible for the Institution to purchase the whole piece?

The Chairman: That is not possible. We all know that it is a very long price, but we want it.

Bro. Peacock thought that they should not miss the opportunity of acquiring land which they really wanted. It must be remembered that they had an unwilling vendor.

Bro. Tattershall supported the motion.

Bro. Dubois asked if there was any contract to sell.

The Chairman: Only verbal.

Bro. Dicketts moved as an amendment that the land be not purchased.

There being no seconder, the original motion was put and carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are the proper medicine for people whose faculties are jaded and whose energies are exhausted by excessive heat, too much work, or over-indulgence. A few doses of these Pills always prove a simple, safe, and cooling treatment, for all stomach and liver complaints, a longer course will set right every organ whose action is impaired, strengthen every structure whose tone is diminished, and renovate that blood whose purity is tainted. Giddiness, headache, nausea, flatulency, and all other dyspeptic symptoms yield with surprising certainty and celerity to these corrective Pills, which lay siege to the seat of these distressing sensations, and carry off without any pain or other disagreeable drawback those peccant matters which are disordering the entire humane machine.—Adv.

THE GOLD MEDAL OF THE BARD OF AVON LODGE.—It may not be known to the brethren that the Bard of Avon Lodge gives a gold medal (value five guineas) to be contended for annually at the Collegiate School, Stratford-on-Avon—Warden, Bro. Dr. Collis, vicar of Stratford-on-Avon—the subject, English Literature, comprising Shakespeare, History, English Essay, &c. It is open to all the school. It has been won this year by John Percy Simpson, aged sixteen, son of Bro. Rev. R. J. Simpson, Past Grand Chaplain. Dr. Collis remarked in presenting it that twenty-five years ago he presented a prize on a similar occasion to his father.

Mr. E. W. ALLEN, Ave Maria Lane, E.C., has just issued a book which cannot fail to interest not only Old Blues, but the public generally. The staff of telegraphists (at least, in the south of England), is about to be reduced, and the vacancies are to be filled by sappers from the Royal Engineers. Four members of the telegraph staff will shortly leave Portsmouth, eight will go from Southampton, and ten from Brighton, and they are to be employed in London.

HOSPITAL SUNDAY.—The Metropolitan Hospital Sunday Fund available for distribution amounts to £24,960, a slight falling off when compared with last year's total.

THE HEALTH OF PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR.—We are glad to be able to report that the Prince is now convalescent, the fever having run its course and the temperature subsided. The interest of the case, from a medical point of view, has been the abnormal relation between the respiration and circulation, but these functions are now becoming healthy. The drainage of Marlborough House is to be entirely reorganised, but we are glad to hear that negotiations are in progress for securing an excellent mansion, with a fine park, in the north of London, which will be used as a kind of nursery for the Royal children in the London season.—Medical Examiner.

The Craft in general will learn with great interest that the Royal National Life boat Institution has accepted a tender for £520 for the erection of a very handsome boathouse at Clacton-on-sea, where the first of the lifeboats presented by the Grand Lodge of Freemasons of England, in honour of the safe return from India, of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M. of the United Kingdom, and a fine tower will be erected above it at the request of the donor of the site. The boat is built, and will be placed on the station before the wreck season, and a crew is being formed of men well acquainted with Maplin and Goodwin Sands.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.—A Special General Court of the Governors and Subscribers of this Institution, will be held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on Monday week, the 20th inst, when the following recommendation of the General Committee will be moved: That the report of the House Committee on extension of accommodation, as submitted to the General Committee be approved, and confirmed; and that in accordance therewith, the building at Wood Green be enlarged for the reception of 32 additional Boys, at an estimated expenditure of £3000.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE.—Late on Wednesday evening, a skeleton model of this celebrated obelisk was completed in New Palace-gardens, Westminster. The site chosen, or suggested, in this locality, is in the middle passage of the west garden plot, with the statue of Lord Derby on one hand and that of Lord Palmerston on the other, the statue of Canning being in the rear. The model has first a step 2 feet 2 inches deep, with a tread 19 inches wide; the second step is 1 foot 9½ inches high, with a tread 1 foot 7 inches wide, and the third step is 1 foot 8 inches, with an 18 inch tread. Then follows a block 9 feet in dimension horizontally, and six feet high. From the block the obelisk proper springs, with a base of 7 feet 4½ inches. The Luxor obelisk at Paris is 76 feet high and 8 feet square at the base. The Cleopatra Needle is, as regards the monolith, 63 feet high. Another skeleton model, it is said, is to be put up on the Thames Embankment.

THE SEA SERPENT MYSTERY.—A remarkable fish has been washed ashore at Thurso, a model of which has been made by Mr. F. Buckland, and has just been added to the piscatorial exhibition at the Royal Aquarium Westminster. The fish in question was alive when it came ashore, but was in a dying state. It measures 12 ft. 4 in. in length, and is much in the shape of an enormous sword, gradually tapering off at the tail. It is undoubtedly a fine specimen of the "Gymnetrus Arcticus," otherwise "Regalacus Banksii." The back is studded with sharp webbed spines forming a continuous back fin, and the belly is covered with little ivory studs. The account of this fish at the present time is of great interest, because it affords us some clue to the monsters seen by the officers of the Royal yacht Osborne et sea off Cape Vito, on the coast of Sicily. This monster was observed to rear its head and body several feet out of the sea (after the manner of the so-called sea-serpent), and, judging from this fact and other particulars, there is every reason to believe that the creature seen was no other than a very large specimen of Gymnetrus. We may say that a similar fish was caught off the Tyne in 1849, but it was at least 4½ ft. shorter. Let us hope that we have at last solved the mystery surrounding the so-called sea serpent.—Fishing Gazette.

A CURIOUS INCIDENT.—A Berlin paper reports the following curious incident, which happened on the Potsdam line of railway on Sunday afternoon.—The driver of the engine, upon the train nearing the station of Steglitz, was surprised to observe three ladies standing upon the rails, gesticulating vehemently, for the purpose, it seems, of causing him to stop the train. The driver made good use of the engine-whistle, to induce the ladies to step off the rails. But all in vain; the ladies remained immovable upon the line of the approaching engine, and thus left the driver no alternative but to run over them or to signal for the train to stop, though there was nothing upon the line to justify such a signal. The ladies, as soon as the train had come to a full stop, ran hurriedly towards a carriage, out of which a gentleman was looking with surprise marked in his face, called him papa, and requested him to alight from the carriage (the train having stopped exactly opposite the residence of the ladies), so as not to be compelled to finish the journey to the station of Steglitz and travel back unnecessarily. The officers in charge of the train, surprised by such impudence, though different, however, and not only would not allow the gentleman to leave the train, but compelled the ladies to enter a carriage and in company with their papa took them to the station of Steglitz, and probably to pay a heavy fine for delaying the train and infringing their bye-laws.—Daily Express.

The Local Board of Worthing have accepted, with cordial thanks, Mr. Robert Loder's (of Beach House) offer of £500 towards acquiring a central cricket-ground for this town.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1 lb. 2s. 6d., 2 lbs. 5s., 4 lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as sampler, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark-street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea Dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom must be addressed to the Secretary.

At the Committee Meeting of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution on Wednesday last, Bro. James Terry, the energetic Secretary of this Institution, reported that of the five outstanding lists of the Stewards of the late Festival, three had been received, making the total sum realized £13,556 16s. We offer Bro. Terry our heartiest congratulations.

The Masonic Relief Associations of the United States met in Convention in Albany, New York, on May 29th. Twenty associations (by no means all) were represented. Bro. Alexander Gardner, of Washington City, presided. There were many new and valuable points brought out at the Convention. The general interchange of views will no doubt result beneficially to these associations. Each delegate seemed willing to give all the information he could, and present his experience in the working of his own association.

Bro. E. H. Cushing delivered an original, able and very entertaining address before Holland and Gray Lodges, Houston, Texas, on June 25th.

THE EDUCATIONAL VALUE OF FLOWER SHOWS.—The value of the poor man's flower show is to himself great, but to his children greater. The educational system that prevails is altogether too subjective, and there is but little attempted in the way of teaching the young to observe and reason on their observations. The three R's are of primary importance, but they require to be supplemented by systematic teaching in the open air on open-air subjects, and we look forward hopefully to a recognition of the necessity by school boards, not only in towns where the field of observation is contracted, but in the country, where it is practically unlimited. We are advised by the powers that be to prepare the children everywhere for catching and killing the Colorado beetle, but their imperfect training in the faculty of observing compels us to fear that in their zeal to exterminate the doryphora they may wage war with coccinella, that is to say, the potato beetle being much talked of, but as yet unseen, the lads of the village may find consolation in the wholesale destruction of the ladybirds, which are among the very best friends of man in the kingdom of insects. The window flower show may be made immensely useful as an aid in the education of the young, and we once more remind the guardians of the youthful poor that a habit of observing and a taste for a knowledge of nature's ways and means are of immense importance in the development of manliness, and independence, and intelligence, and morality, and usefulness. The book of nature is worthier to be read than a majority of the books in common use, and it is one of our duties to encourage the young, whether of rich or poor, in learning to read it with a view to the acquisition of useful knowledge, and the cherishing of sentiments of reverence and love for the beneficence that warms the world, and renders capable of happiness every living creature.—Gardener's Magazine.

The Midland Railway Company intend, we are informed, to introduce a dining-saloon carriage into some of their trains. In this carriage hot dinners may be cooked and served the same as in a hotel or restaurant.

A notice has been placed on the doors of St. Dunstan's West, Fleet-street, to the effect that a faculty has been asked for permission to make a road through the disused parochial cemetery, so as to connect Chancery-lane and Fetter-lane.

TRAFFIC IN ITALIAN CHILDREN.—On Wednesday the Lord Mayor received the following communication from the Home Secretary:—"Whitehall, 6th August, 1877.—My Lord,—The attention of the Secretary of State has been called to the practice under which children bought or stolen from their parents in Italy or elsewhere, are imported into this country by persons known by the name of 'Padroni,' who send them out into the streets to earn money by playing musical instruments, selling images, begging, or otherwise. It is most important to suppress this traffic by every available means, and Mr. Cross relies on the vigilant co-operation of the police for this purpose. In many cases the employer will be found to have committed an offence against the vagrant Act 5 Geo. IV., c. 83, by procuring the child to beg. (See the case of Reg. v. Viasani, reported in Justice of the Peace, Dec. 1, 1866, p. 756.) If so, he should be forthwith prosecuted and the result of such prosecution should be made the subject of a special report to the Secretary of State. The child will probably come within the provisions of the 14th section of the Industrial Schools Act, 1866 (29 and 30 Vict., c. 118), either under the first class as a child begging alms, or under the second class as a child found wandering and without proper guardianship. An application should therefore be made to the justices for the child to be sent to a certified industrial school. Further application should be made under section 19 for the temporary detention of the child in a workhouse until the industrial school has been selected, information being at once communicated to the Secretary of State in order that if requisite he may render assistance in making the necessary arrangements. The final result of each case should also be reported to the Secretary of State. Mr. Cross requests that your lordship will be so good as to cause instructions to be issued to the police of the City of London in conformity with these suggestions.—I have the honour to be, my lord, your lordship's obedient servant, A. F. O. LIDDELL."

EXAGGERATED VIEWS OF FREEMASONRY.

The Daily News states that a lodge at Perigord, or Perigord, has been closed by the French Government, because some of the brethren stated, (a very rare "paté de Perigord" indeed), that "Freemasonry was the most fraternal, rational, and, in its nature, Christian religion in the world." We can hardly believe the statement "pur et simple," and feel sure, that there must be something more in the background. For though we do not agree with "some brethren" of the lodge in such statements, yet we could afford we think, to treat such an expression of "hyperbole" with tranquil indifference. It is quite clear to us that it is a grave error to term Freemasonry at all a Religion. It is not, and never can be, a "Religio," to any one. Indeed it makes no such profession, and claims no such character. It is simply a religious and philanthropic sodality, advocating charity, toleration, and brotherly love, whose morality is based on the word of God! Its platform and its professions are equally broad and sincere, and it wishes to serve as a rallying point among the inevitable controversies and disagreements of men, for those of contrasted views and differing creeds. But it in no sense declares itself to be a Religion to the world, and any such view is in grave excess both of its tenets and its practice. In this age of exaggeration and cloudy statements, it seems well to us to be precise in such matters, and to lay down accurately, as far as we can, alike what Freemasonry does teach and what it does not teach, to avoid the errors of some, to anticipate the accusations of others.

GRATUITOUS MEDICAL RELIEF.

We alluded in our last to the general assertion that "Gratuitous Medical Relief is hurtful per se," hurtful, that is, to the hospital, the community, the individual, and the medical profession; and we propose to consider the subject to-day a little more in detail. The argument, such as it is, as must be evident to every Tyro even in logic, is simply an assertion, a "petitio principii," and above all an arguing from a particular to an universal. An abuse exists in this or that particular hospital, that is to say, persons who can afford to pay for medical advice, avail themselves improperly of gratuitous attendance and pay nothing, and therefore the whole system of "gratuitous medical relief" is injurious and objectionable. But can any such naked proposition be really brought to a logical conclusion? We have no hesitation in answering "no." Admitted the "abuse"—and a great abuse no doubt it is—does it therefore affect the use? Again we reply emphatically in the negative. For the principle of "gratuitous medical relief" is, we venture to contend, despite the dicta of some, a very good and wholesome principle. For what is it but simply this? A manly and beneficent attempt to offer skilled nursing, and scientific treatment, in those many dreadful diseases which unceasingly afflict humanity, to those who for want of personal means or through lack of home accommodation are unable literally to avail themselves comfortably and satisfactorily of the one or the other. And this endeavour, which is the aim and object of all our great Metropolitan hospitals, is one which commends itself entirely to every sense of philanthropy, and every dictate of religion. It is in fact, in its measure a humble approximation to the example of that Holy and Divine Teacher, who "went about doing good," and was ever glad to heal "all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people." It is a fact "bene notanda" on this subject that to Christianity must be conceded the perfection and development of the hospital and the infirmary. If it be true, as probably it is, that the temples of Æsculapius, in the Pagan world, were schools for medical instruction and centres for the cure of disease; if it be also correct, that the Hebrews had hospitals and refuges for their sick and suffering, yet the present noble infirmary and hospital system is the benign expansion of the benevolent teaching of Christianity. Hospitals and infirmaries in this country were originally "lazar houses," or places of reception and isolation for those who wandered back from the crusades, who were afflicted with the mental curse of leprosy, or grave cutaneous disorders. As gradually their need died out they became homes for the sick and infirm, until in the last century the special infirmary and hospital movement began in the metropolis and provinces, which has culminated in the present remarkable development of those needful and praiseworthy institutions. In particular cases and distinct foundations, the appropriation for the sick is of much earlier date than the last century, but these are exceptions from the general condition of hospitals, and need not be dwelt upon now, as they are known to all our readers. At this moment the great hospitals and infirmaries of the metropolis and provinces occupy one of the noblest positions which ever has been attained, either in the history of medical science, or the progress of benevolent relief. Can it then be fairly contended by any, even by the most hasty inductionist, that we are bound, because of an admitted abuse, to deprive ourselves of so great and noble a use? Is not the proper way of procedure to correct the "abuse" but to uphold the "use;" It may be quite proper, as we have said before, that self supporting hospitals should be established, if there be a need for them, but why, are we, because of partial "abuse" of a noble system, to abolish the general "use" which has been an untold blessing to countless thousands of the suffering and less opulent of our fellow citizens, of our fellow creatures male, female, and infant? And then comes in the further question, what are we to do, how are we to deal with large endowments left for the absolute object of "gratuitous medical relief?" We live in an age of confiscation and large-hearted plunder, and it is just possible that some great authority may discover a ready "Cypres" interpretation of founders' wills, as affecting our great hospitals. But can such a course be either reasonable or recommended which would practically deprive countless hundreds of the poor and helpless of all curative efforts, and all skilled nursing? Those of us who know anything of the "Cottage Homes of England" must be well aware how utterly unfitted they are for the treatment of fever or infectious disorders, of dangerous maladies, necessitating severe surgical operations. Few except those who have stood in ill-ventilated rooms, and badly drained cottages, (still a disgrace to our civilization), have any idea of the amount of blood-poisoning which there goes on, or what pest-houses of epidemics they often are to a village or a district. We feel therefore bound to protest to-day, in the great interest of thousands upon thousands of our poorer brethren and sisters of the dust, against any tampering with the noble and beneficent system of "gratuitous medical relief." That some abuses exist we do not deny, but they can easily be met, by special legislation of the hospitals themselves. We feel certain that any attempt to turn all our great hospitals, (impossible as we deem it to be), into paying institutions, if worthy indeed of this calculating age, is alike inconsistent with the object of hospitals themselves, and above all with the views, as we make bold to assert, or the great majority of a most enlightened and benevolent profession. We feel assured that so great a change—must we not call it a revolution?—in these honoured schools of medical science, these unequalled centres of humanitarian relief, will not be very readily conceded by that most important section of our community which is ever most conspicuous for its generous self abnegation in the interests of suffering humanity and the absorbing claim of scientific progress, and which devotes itself with such characteristic energy to the alleviation of suffering, the extirpation of disease, and those curative, sanative, saving remedies which may arrest the fell inroads of contagion, and give health to a community, life and peace and comfort to our individual and family life.

THE HORRORS OF WAR.

Though not politicians in any sense, we are humanitarians, and we cannot help feeling and saying that the accounts in The Times of Tuesday, in respect of the atrocities committed by the Turkish army on dead and dying Russian soldiers deserve the indignant reprobation of all lovers of humanity, and, above all, of all Freemasons, who are ever marked by kindness to their fellow men. If it be also true that Sir Arnold Kemball has left Mucktar Pasha's army in consequence of similar horrors, even extending to the disinterment of brave soldiers, buried as they fell, for the purpose of mutilation, it is impossible to say too much in indignant condemnation of atrocities, which are a disgrace to civilization and humanity. In all nations respect for dead soldiers has been held to be a solemn duty, because those who thus pass away with "harness on their backs," have a claim on the consideration of the chivalrous and the loyal. It seems as if the Turks had determined to convince Europe how impossible it is for them to remain in it any longer, and we do, as humanitarians, loudly protest against acts which must bring a blush to every cheek and sorrow to every heart.

TRUE RELIGION! TRUER CHARITY.

The Chaine d'Union for August gives us a startling account of a neat specimen of rampant, bigotry and intolerance in Brazil, which we deem only right to notice and to reprobate. It seems that on Good Friday, (of all days in the year), a certain Rev. P. Montara, rector of the seminary there, had to preach during the services of that sacred day. He employed his time, we are informed, in pouring forth a series of invectives against Freemasons. He exhorted the women "never to consent to allow their husbands, brothers, or sons to affiliate themselves to this society of the damned, and threatened to devote them, without remorse, with the Freemasons, to the flames of Hell." Is not this a charming episode of true religion, of genuine charity, taking place, as it did, on a day which might have been consecrated, we should have thought, to preaching the love of God, and good will to man? Some time ago we were severely taken to task by an esteemed correspondent for what we said about Ultramontanes, and we believe that in consequence we lost the favour of his patronage. But even he, we venture to think, if he reads these humble lines, will perhaps be inclined to modify his opinion, and to admit that, we may fairly call attention, from time to time, to that want of sense and that parody on true religion which so conspicuously mark Ultramontane utterances and proceedings just now, everywhere in respect of Freemasons and Freemasonry.

WHY MASONIC UNDERTAKINGS ARE OFTEN UNSUCCESSFUL.

There may be many reasons given why, as a rule, Masonic undertakings are often unsuccessful, which, to-day, we have neither time nor inclination to enter upon. But there is one indubitable cause, to which we think it well to advert, as it is one which, probably more than anything else, affects seriously such ventures and enterprises, in themselves perfectly lawful, advisable, and good. It is this, the absence of Masonic support given to the Masonic press by those who advertise Masonic Institutions and wants. "A priori," we should have been tempted to think that if Freemasons desired to make their needs known to Freemasons the most natural and most obvious channel would be to advertise in a paper largely read by Freemasons, like the Freemason, for instance. "But no, my brethren, that would be a great mistake if you thought so." Masonic societies and individuals will often advertise in any paper but a Masonic paper, even when the object is a purely Masonic one, though we do not profess to understand on what grounds, either of reason, common sense, or fair play, they really do so. Of course every one is free to advertise where he thinks he gets the most value for his money, but as a large proportion of our Order, as we know, never see The Times at all, we presume to think, (blind beetles, perhaps, that we are), that more Freemasons would have read the announcement had it been duly published in the advertising columns of the Freemason. It seems to us, though we may be wrong, that we want a little more "esprit de corps" in such matters, and that very often if Masonic undertakings do not sometimes succeed, a good deal may be fairly attributed to that short-sighted policy which is content to publish the requirements and applications of Freemasons in any journal but a Masonic one. We are, of course, aware of the immense circulation of our contemporary, The Times, which is, perhaps, the "raison d'être" of such proceedings, but nevertheless, as Freemasons, and in the interests of our brethren and our Order, and our publisher, we venture to deem them alike unwise in themselves, and most unfair and inconsiderate towards Masonic Journalism.

SHAKESPERIAN FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you kindly allow me to offer a few words of explanation in reply to your correspondent, G. Somers Bellamy, Esq., respecting the Shakesperian quotations sent by me and which appeared in the Freemason last month. I beg very respectfully to assure that gentleman, that I had not the least intention of offering them for the purpose of trying to prove the great poet to have been a Freemason; they were simply to show how very similar they are (I mean the scraps I sent only) to certain parts of our ceremonies. I willingly endorse all Mr. Bellamy's remarks, that by cutting out certain parts only, Shakespeare might be made to be nearly everything, at the same time if that gentleman will kindly refer to my letter he will not find a single word to show that there was any intention on my part to offer them as proofs, but simply as being similar to what we have heard in our ceremonies.

In conclusion, Sir, I beg to state in the most friendly manner, that the paragraph in Mr. Bellamy's letter as follows—"Let me deal with two or three of Mr. Heath's 'hashed up' quotations, given for the purpose of proving Shakespeare was a Freemason," is rather severe and quite undeserved on my part, and I trust that Mr. Bellamy will accept my word of honour that I had no such intention, and in the same kindly spirit as this explanation is offered acquit me of any desire to play any "fantastic tricks" with the beautiful writings of the immortal bard.

I am, dear Sir, and Brother, very obediently and fraternally yours.

STEPHEN C. HEATH.

MASONIC CANVASSING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I agree most thoroughly with your editorial note, in answer to "Scio," as to "Masonic Canvassing" for matters not Masonic. My opinion is that for a Freemason to make use of his connection with our "ancient and honourable Society" to further his business, or to secure a situation (not Masonic), is wholly derogatory to the Institution of which undoubtedly he is an "unworthy member."

I sigh for the time when our Grand Lodge will make it penal to make use of Masonic signs on shop fronts, circulars, &c. (to advance business objects), in accordance with the rule in so many Grand Lodges in the United States, where brethren are not allowed thus to parade their membership.

I have known individuals have their business cards printed, with the "Square and Compasses" thereon, prior to their initiation, and only awaiting their formal reception to circulate them amongst the fraternity.

It is for the Craft generally to stamp out such a nuisance by never supporting men (and brethren) who thus act, and render their unmasonic conduct less remunerative than they anticipate. Masons can only be approached Masonically on Masonic business, and the sooner this fact is recognised the better.

Yours fraternally, WM. JAMES HUOHAN, P.S.G.D.

ITINERANT MASONS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A brother (if he deserves the name) visited our town last week and called upon the brethren, pleading distress. He was in appearance a regular vagabond, dirty and filthy, holding his certificate from the Grand Lodge of Scotland, from the Lodge No. 122, Royal Arch, Perth; signed on the margin J—W—. It is well worn, having been presented to a host of brethren during the peregrinations of its owner, until you can hardly make out what it is. It had been folded into 24 squares, each square on the back bearing signatures of brethren, with the amount of relief given. One of the latest —, Cardiff, 2/7/77.

As soon as it was presented to me I recognized the old parchment, the vermilion signature at the top still showing its colour through the dirt and grease with which it was smeared, but not quite so legible as when I saw it about six years ago.

Very likely many a brother in reading the above will call to mind the individual and his parchment, and perhaps they know something about him, and will let the brethren know if he is worthy of being assisted.

Yours fraternally,

R. W. C.

THE INSTALLATION ENGRAVING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Can you inform me when the engraving of the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales at Albert Hall is likely to be finished. I have looked in vain for the promised advertisement, it is now very long overdue.

Fraternally and very faithfully yours,

DISAPPOINTED.

Multum in Parbo; or Masonic Notes and Queries.

LITTLE BRITAIN.

As I think that Bro. Kenning may like to know what old Stowe says of this now classical-Masonic street, I have copied his remarks: "In Briton-street, which took that name from the Dukes of Brittany lodging there, is one proper parish Church of St. Botolph, in which church was sometime a brotherhood of St. Fabian and St. Sebastian, founded in the year 1377, the 51st of Edward III., and confirmed by Henry IV. in the 6th of his reign. Then Henry VI., in the 24th of his reign, to the honour of the Trinity, gave license to Dame Joan Astley, sometime his nurse, to R. Cawood, and T. Smith, to found the same a fraternity, perpetually to have a master and two mistresses, with brethren and sisters, &c. This brotherhood was endowed with lands, more than thirty pounds by the year, and was supported by Edward VI." The more detailed account of this re-founded guild, with a view of the old Guild Hall, will appear, I am glad to say, pace Bro. Kenning and the Editor, in the October number of the Masonic Magazine.

A READER OF OLD STOWE.

Rebiew.

"La Chaine d'Union."

The August number of this excellent Masonic periodical not only does great credit to our esteemed and able confrere Hubert, but is most interesting to all Freemasons in France or out of France. We are very glad to think that in the main and leading questions of the hour we are very closely in accord with Bro. Hubert, whose enlightened views and tolerant sympathies are most pleasant to note and to realize. We earnestly commend La Chaine d'Union to the notice of all our brethren who read French, and we wish sincerely to our esteemed Bro. Hubert all possible success in his unselfish and meritorious efforts.

FREEMASONRY IN INDIA.

BANGALORE.—The season of this favourite Indian station was inaugurated by a grand ball given by the W.M. of Lodge 1043, and the members of the fraternity in the vicinity. The entertainment took place in Brown's new Assembly Rooms, one of the finest suite of public rooms in Southern India, and used on this occasion for the first time. Not only were all the leading members and residents at Bangalore present, but numerous visitors came from Madras, Ootacamund, and Cannanore. The Chief Commissioner of Mysore, the General Commanding, and all the leading officers accepted the hospitality of the brethren, and the ball was acknowledged to have proved a great success. Great credit is due to the unwearied exertions of the indefatigable Secretary, Bro. J. W. Hayes, who was most ably supported by the Stewards, Bros. Lieut. Ricardo, Captain McCleverty, Capt. McCullagh, Captain Nepean Smith, and the Past District Officers, Bro. Major Aubrey Saunders and Bro. J. Balfour Cockburn, M.D. 31st.

FREEMASONRY IN GERMANY.

The Grand Lodge of Darmstadt recently held a memorial lodge in honour of the late Grand Duke of Hesse Darmstadt, the Protector of Masons. The lodge was draped in black and white, and beautifully decorated with evergreens and flowers, and a most impressive ceremony was presided over by the Grand Master, who delivered a fitting address on the occasion, which was followed by another from the Speaker, eulogising the character and kindly disposition of the late Grand Duke. The music, instrumental and vocal, was composed expressly for the occasion, and ably executed by the musical professors of the lodge. Amongst the visitors was Bro. Hollon, a Past Officer of the Grand Lodge of England.

The Worshipful Company of Grocers have given £50 and the Worshipful Company of Clothworkers an annual subscription of £100 to the London Diocesan Home Mission.

THE METROPOLITAN RAILWAY.—On Tuesday an inspection of the Metropolitan Railway was made by Governor Tilden, the Hon. J. Bigelar, and Mr. Cyrus W. Field. They were accompanied by Sir E. Watkin, M.P., and Mr. Myles Fenton, who conducted them over the principal stations and explained the working and general features of the line.

GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

A Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of Scotland was held on Monday afternoon in the Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh. The throne was occupied by Bro. Henry Inglis of Torsonce, R.W. Deputy Grand Master; and among those on the dais were—Bros. Lord Inverurie, Prov. G.M. Kincardineshire; Captain G. R. Harriott, Prov. Grand Master of Wigtown and Kirkcudbright; Alex. Hay, Grand Jeweller; D. Robertson, Grand Bible Bearer; D. M. Neilson, Grand Deacon, &c. The Senior Warden's chair was occupied by Bro. W. Mann; and W. Hay, Grand Architect, acted as Junior Warden. Among those present were—William Officer, representative of the Grand Lodge of Egypt; D. Murray Lyon, Grand Sec.; D. Kinnear, Cashier; J. Monro, R.W.M. 360; D. Murray, R.W.M. 103; W. Kyle, R.W.M. 34; J. B. M'Naught, R.W.M. 556; J. T. Allan, R.W.M. 28; A. Thomson, R.W.M. 262; J. Shiels, R.W.M. 579; W. H. Bickerton, Prov. Grand Sec. Glasgow, (Freemason); Adam Thomson, R.W.M. 262; T. Halkett, P.M. 141; J. A. Ferguson, P.S.W. Mother Kilwinning, &c.

Grand Lodge having been opened in ancient form, letters of apology for absence were read from the Most Worshipful Grand Master, Sir Michael Shaw-Stewart, Bart.; Colonel Campbell, Provincial Grand Master Renfrewshire; Captain G. F. R. Colt of Gartsherrie, Grand Sword Bearer; Nisbet, Burnet, Kelso, and others.

The Chairman then introduced Bro. Carr, R.W. Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada; Dr. Baynes, R.W.M. Lodge Elgin, Montreal, the representative of the only lodge in the district which had remained faithful to its mother lodge in Scotland; and Dr. Hay, P.M. Lodge Eden, East Indies.

These brethren were heartily welcomed, and acknowledged the warm and brotherly reception which had been accorded to them.

The Chairman stated that as an experiment the minutes had been printed, and placed in the hands of members some time previous to the meeting. He therefore moved that they should be held as read.

After some discussion the minutes were adopted.

A special report regulating the duties of the Grand Secretary and Grand Cashier was approved, after some slight alterations suggested by Bro. Officer.

Lord Inverurie, on behalf of himself and the new province over which he had been installed as Grand Master, rendered thanks to Bro. Barrow and the Grand Lodge for the kind way in which the deputation had performed the duties connected with the ceremony at Stonehaven.

Chapters were ordered to be expedite for Lodge St. Andrew, Queen's Town, Cape of Good Hope, and Gael, Glasgow, the latter of which proposed that the officers-bearers must be able to carry out the business in the Gaelic language.

The Grand Secretary intimated that he had received a telegram from Captain Borland, Dist. G.M. Bombay, resigning his position, and the appointment of Bro. MacIntosh Balfour in his place was unanimously approved.

Bro. Bickerton submitted a motion the effect of which was to do away with the present system of members of Edinburgh lodges being ex officio members of Grand Committees. He pointed out that when this law was enacted the difficulty of reaching Edinburgh was very great, and no one could be got to attend unless they were resident in the neighbourhood of the city. The facilities in the way of travelling, however, had now altered this state of matters, and it was time that this law should be rescinded, so that the country at large should be better represented on Grand Committee. Bro. Adam Thomson seconded the motion, which was supported by Bro. Officer and Bro. Mann, and carried by a large majority.

Bro. Thomas Halket, Pr. M. No. 141, moved an addition to the Grand Lodge laws to the effect that a Provincial Grand Lodge may enact that every member of each lodge in the province shall pay the sum of two shillings annually to the Provincial Benevolent Fund; that the Treasurer of each lodge shall keep a separate account of these subscriptions, and pay them to the Provincial Grand Benevolent Fund—said fund to be distributed and applied by the Provincial Grand Lodge Committee.

A member of a lodge in Dumbartonshire moved the previous question, which, after a considerable amount of discussion, was agreed to by a large majority.

Bro. W. M. Pearson, seconded by Bro. Officer, moved:—"In order to save the valuable time of this Grand Lodge, and avoid the tiresome process of calling the roll, it is hereby resolved that in future none but members of the Grand Lodge be admitted to the body of the hall; and that the Grand Secretary be instructed to issue tickets of admission to all members of Grand Lodge annually, on payment of their fees. Such tickets to be forfeited if transferred. Visiting brethren to be accommodated either in the gallery or without the bar of Grand Lodge." The motion was unanimously agreed to.

After some other business was disposed of, Bro. J. A. Ferguson, P.S.W. Mother Kilwinning, proposed that in future the quarterly communications of Grand Lodge should be held at two o'clock instead of five. It was ultimately resolved to fix the hour at four o'clock.

Grand Lodge was therefore closed in ample form.

A Red Cross conclave was subsequently held, at which Bro. Bickerton was invested with this degree.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee met on Saturday, the 4th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, Bro. Benjamin Head in the chair. The following were also present: Bro. Hyde Pullen, Bro. W. F. C. Moutrie, Bro. J. Wordsworth, Bro. H. Browne, Bro. W. Roebuck, Bro. H. T. W. Hunt, Bro. H. B. Webster, Bro. Revd. Morris, Bro. D. M. Dewar, Bro. John N. Dennison, Bro. J. C. Dwarber, Bro. B. C. Massey (Freemason), Bro. Jesse Turner, Bro. C. F. Matier, Bro. Frederick Adlard, Bro. H. Perryman, Bro. C. Horsley, Bro. S. B. Wilson, and Bro. Frederick Binckes, Secretary.

The minutes of the General Committee of 7th July were read and confirmed, and there were also read for information the minutes of the Special House Committee of 7th ult. of the Quarterly General Court of 16th, and of the House Committee of 20th idem, and report of the Audit Committee; whereupon it was resolved that the report of the Audit Committee be entered on the minutes; and that the purchase of £3000 guaranteed India Five per Cent. Stock be effected, and the Chairman was authorised to sign cheques for the purchase money.

The Secretary reported that at a Special House Committee held that day (Saturday), to consider the question of extending the accommodation at Wood Green, so as to admit of a larger number of boys being received, Bro. Steven Barton Wilson had submitted a plan of the proposed additions, with his report upon the same (from which it appeared that the proposed additions will give sleeping accommodation for 33 boys, besides supplying additional class-rooms), which the Special House Committee recommended for adoption, at a cost not to exceed £3000, the sum for which, in Bro. Wilson's judgment, the work could be executed.

After some remarks from Bro. Jesse Taylor as to certain details about which he desired information, which was at once given by Bro. Wilson, the report was adopted by the General Committee, and referred to a Special Court, which in order to facilitate the completion of arrangements for the work was fixed for Monday, the 20th inst., at 12 o'clock.

Petitions on behalf of E. C. Hunt, John Gibbs, and R. H. Nicholls, to be placed on the list of candidates for election, were read and accepted; and a presentation from the Marquis of Ripon in favour of Samuel Willyhurst was submitted by the Secretary and received.

The Secretary read a letter from Bro. Hervey, Grand Secretary, in relation to the application made to Grand Lodge for enlarged office accommodation for the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, to the effect that the requirements of the Craft precluded the possibility of further space being given at Freemasons' Hall for this purpose. Bro. Binckes reported that on receipt of this letter he had placed himself in communication with the Secretaries of the other Masonic charities, with the view to their taking joint action in this matter.

Bro. Binckes reported that on final examination and verification of the list, it was found that there were sixty-seven candidates for vacancies at the next half-yearly election.

The meeting closed with the usual vote of thanks to the Chairman.

A POLICE REPORT.

At the Guildhall justice room on Monday, the 2nd inst. Thomas Edwards a carpenter, living at No. 16, Andover-road, Holloway, was summoned by Mr. Arthur George Newton, the managing director of the Masonic Building and Investment Society (Limited), for assault and threatening language. Mr. Ody appeared for the complainant, and Mr. Louis Lewis for the defendant. Mr. Ody stated that the complainant, who was the managing director of the above society, having offices at No. 1, St. Ann's-lane, employed a man, named Sugden, to fit up the offices there. The latter employed the defendant to do the work for a certain sum. The defendant not having been remunerated by Sugden, went to the offices and demanded the money, but the society, having paid his employer Sugden half the amount, refused to listen to his application. The defendant, after staying in the office for some hours, said that if he could not have the money out of the complainant he would take it out of him, and struck him in the mouth, beat him about the body, and broke his hat. He (Mr. Ody) had made a proposal to Mr. Louis Lewis, that if he would consent to his client being bound over to keep the peace the complainant would be satisfied. That course was the more necessary as the next day after what he had referred to took place, the defendant met the complainant in Cornhill, and there threatened him again, and the police had to be got to remove him. Mr. Arthur George Newton said he was managing director of the Masonic Building and Investment Society, of 1 St. Ann's-lane. It had been recently started, and Mr. Chant was the Secretary. He entered into a contract with a man named Sugden to do certain work, and had paid him £2 15s. on account. Witness then gave evidence as to the assault, confirming Mr. Ody's statement. As soon as he recovered he sent for a constable, who refused to take the charge. He had been ever since under medical treatment. On the following day he met the defendant in Cornhill, when the latter was so violent that the police were obliged to be sent for. Cross examined by Mr. Louis Lewis: He was managing director of the Masonic Building and Investment Society. He had had an office in Thavies Inn, and was not ejected from there. He had offices in Noble-street now. He had an office at 251, Tottenham-court-road, and houses at Edmonton, and land at Melford-road, Dulwich. He refused to answer any more of those questions, as they were irrelevant. Mr. Louis Lewis said that they tended to impeach the credibility of the witness, as it would show that he was not to be believed on his oath, and that no assault whatever had been committed. Alderman Figgins ruled that Mr. Lewis was entitled to test the witness as to his credibility. Witness, in continuation, said that the society's bankers were Messrs. Barnett, Hoare, and Co., of 61 and 62, Lombard-street. They had not £10,000 at their bankers', but he refused to say if they had £1000. He had not been proprietor, manager, or secretary of a skating rink, but he had had something to do with one. Witness refused to answer any more questions of Mr. Lewis's. Alderman Figgins remarked that if he refused to be cross-examined he had better retire from the summons. Mr. Newton said he would not withdraw from the summons. Alderman Figgins said then he must answer the questions put to him. Mr. Newton said then he would adopt the alderman's suggestion and withdraw from the summons. Both summonses were then dismissed.—Daily Telegraph.

FREEMASONRY IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The brethren of the Alexandra Lodge, 1581, Somerset East, celebrated St. John's-day on June 25th. At 10 a.m. the brethren assembled in their handsome little lodge, and after the necessary Masonic preliminaries, they proceeded in procession to All Saints' Church, where the Rev. H. R. Woodrooffe delivered a very interesting and appropriate sermon, so much so that an outsider would have been led to suppose that he was one of the Craft.

After service the brethren again formed in procession, and returned to the lodge, when the ceremony of installation of the W.M. and officers for the ensuing year took place. The ceremony was performed by the Immediate Past Master, Bro. T. E. Butler, who during his term of office proved himself a most energetic Mason, and by his unremitting zeal and love for the lodge tended greatly to raise it to its present prosperous condition. Many witnessed the installation ceremony who had never witnessed it in an English lodge before, and one and all expressed themselves in terms of admiration at the impressive manner in which the ceremony was performed.

In the evening the brethren, after opening the lodge, proceeded to the banquet prepared for them at the Somerset Hotel.

At 8 o'clock the newly elected W.M., Bro. Alex. Cruickshanks, took the chair, supported on his right by Past Master T. E. Butler, and on his left by Past Master S. V. Cloete.

After enjoying themselves for the space of an hour or so, the W.M. called the brethren to order, and to charge their glasses. He was a Good Templar himself he said, but he did not restrict them to any kind of liquor. He would ask them to drink "The Health of her Majesty the Queen." This toast was of course responded to with that loyalty for which Somerset lies, and especially the Freemasons, have been distinguished.

The next toasts proposed by the W.M., and most heartily responded to, were "The Health of the Grand Master, the Prince of Wales," and "The Deputy Grand Master, Hon Richard Southey," which were drank with Masonic honours.

"The Health of His Excellency Sir Bartle Frere" came next in order, to which Bro. S. V. Cloete, Civil Commissioner, replied.

The W.M. in proposing The Health of Bro. Butler, the retiring W.M., said it gave him a double pleasure, because the toast was of a twofold nature. A deputation of the brethren, had waited upon him and handed him a Past Master's presentation jewel, for him to present to Bro. Past Master T. E. Butler, as a small token of their esteem and regard. As it is just newly to hand, and all have not seen it, I will read the inscription:—"Presented by the brethren of the Lodge Alexandra, No. 1581, in appreciation of his services while filling the chair of Worshipful Master." I think, brethren, that conveys the intention. And now, Bro. Butler, in the name of the Lodge Alexandra, No. 1581, Somerset East, I present you with the Past Master's presentation jewel, as a token of the esteem in which you are held by them. And where your lot or ours may be cast, in this our earthly lodge at any future time, the name of Bro. Butler will be cherished with a fond remembrance by every Mason in connection with the Lodge Alexandra. But I sincerely hope that it may please the Great Architect of the Universe to spare you and yours long amongst us, that you may be able to assist us in carrying out that noble work in Masonry which you have already begun, and after a long and well-spent life you may be able to meet the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge above, there to receive your wages without scruple and without diffidence.

Bro. Butler suitably acknowledged the gift.

After this Past Master Butler said that he had an important toast to propose, and this time it must be a bumper, it was the toast of "The Newly-elected W.M." Every one knew him, and, therefore, they had confidence in placing him in the chair; and if he took the same interest in the lodge during his Mastership as he did when he was an officer, it must succeed. As a Master he is young still. He has encountered many ups and downs, but these will be a lesson to him, which he will find useful during his Mastership. I express now to him every feeling of confidence, and I hope this day twelve months he will merit your applause.

Bro. Cruickshank, in responding, said that he would merely thank them for the honour of installing him in the chair, and for what they had expressed of him that evening.

The next toast, "The Newly-elected Officers," was proposed by Bro. Cloete. He said that he knew intimately the difficulties and labours attendant upon the proper conduct of a lodge. All will agree with him that when the members of this lodge were just starting their little craft for sea, they found breakers ahead when it came into the broad ocean. To meet these breakers the officers are put round the W.M., and where there is much anxiety they remain at their posts, supporting their Master until the ship is brought into port. Brethren, and newly-elected officers, conquer the breakers of prejudice, become acquainted with the principles of Freemasonry, and prove that you are upon a proper course. Be able to argue it when necessary—to meet your opponent with good sound argument, and push on your little barque and laugh at those who scorn you. I hope all the officers will show confidence in their Master, and that the barque will come safely into harbour, and that the applause, "good and faithful servants," will meet you on your entrance to the mansions above.

Bro. J. Hobson proposed "The Health of the Visiting Brethren." He was pleased to see them, and he was sure the same pleasure was experienced by the Masters and officers in seeing them around the table.

Bro. Dr. Moolman responded.

Bro. Cloete proposed the toast of "Poor Brethren." This was the greatest toast, he said, and the one which ought to be nearest the heart of a Freemason.

To wind up with, "The Health of Mr. and Mrs. Buddenbrock" was proposed, and responded to most heartily, for the excellent dinner they had prepared, and for the attention shown all present during the evening.

Among the brethren present as visitors we noticed Bros. S. V. Cloete, C.C.; Dr. Botha, Dr. Moolman, W. Anderson, Masons; and the Rev. H. R. Woodrooffe and Rev. A. Brigg.

The following are the officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. A. Cruickshank, W.M.; T. E. Butler, I.P.M.; W. H. Reddle, S.W.; C. J. Hobson, J.W.; J. McLaren, Sec. (re-elected); S. Barnett, Treas. (re-elected); W. McCallum, S.D.; T. Jackson, J.D.; H. Buddenbrock, First S.; W. H. Culley, Second S.; W. Robb, I.G.; G. Lake, Tyler.

PROPOSED FREEMASONS' HALL AT BARNARD CASTLE.

The foundation stone of the Barnard Masonic Hall, Barnard Castle, was laid on Tuesday, the 31st day of July, with Masonic honours, by the W.M. of the Barnard Lodge, 1230, Bro. R. J. Dent.

The building is being erected in Newgate-street, and when completed will be both an ornament to the town and a credit to the Craft. The brethren met at the lodge room, Witham Testimonial, at 2 p.m., and after opening the lodge a procession was formed, and the brethren proceeded to the ground.

Upon arrival at the enclosure the procession halted, the brethren opening to the right and left, allowing the W.M. and his officers to proceed to and take up a position round the stone, the brethren following after in inverted order. A very handsome and emblematically engraved silver trowel was then presented to the Worshipful Master by the builder, and a prayer offered up by the Chaplain. The Treasurer then, by command of the W.M., deposited, in a suitable cavity in the lower stone, a phial containing various coins of the present reign, a list of the members of the Barnard Lodge, 1230, programme of the ceremony of laying the foundation stone, local newspaper, &c. After the cement was laid, and the stone properly adjusted by the plumb rule, level, and square, the builder delivered the mallet to the W.M., with which he struck the stone in the customary manner, declaring it to be well and truly laid.

The W.M. then strewed the corn, wine, and oil, with the accustomed ceremonies. After prayer was offered up by the Chaplain, the following oration was given by the Worshipful Master of the Barnard Lodge (Bro. John Ralph Dent, of Streatham House): "There is a bright side and a dark side to most scenes, and it is so with our position to-day. We have our misfortunes and successes. It is always best to leave off, if possible, with the pleasant impression, therefore I will begin with our misfortunes. We had great hopes that we should have induced some one of high Masonic rank to lay this foundation stone to-day, as we felt that an occasion like this was not likely to occur again in the lifetime of any of us, and it is our misfortune that it has devolved on one so unworthy as myself. I can assure you this has come about from no personal ambition on my side, for I should have been highly pleased to have seen another in my place, neither does it arise from any desire of the brethren of the Barnard Lodge to keep the honour among themselves. As I have said, we have made considerable efforts to obtain some one of high rank to come here to-day, but in these we were unsuccessful. But we can turn to a brighter side. The ceremony to-day marks the commencement of a work long looked forward to and long desired. As a lodge we have been in existence some ten years, and during that time we have had two temporary lodge rooms. As these were not our own, were not built or designed for Masonic purposes, and were besides used for various purposes in the intervals between our lodge meetings, it will be seen that our position was unsatisfactory. Therefore, to obtain a house of our own was one of the greatest objects of our ambition. An eminent Frenchman has said that people rarely attain the great objects of their ambition, and when they do attain them, it is in such a way, and at such a time, as to deprive them of half their value. This, however, cannot be said of us. We shall, I hope, very soon attain the object of our ambition, and I venture to think the time and the manner of obtaining it will be equally appropriate. We are not too old to appreciate it. We could well have begun it before this year, for it is not every day that a suitable site can be found. We have taken the first opportunity, and I think we are fortunate in obtaining a lodge room of our own at so early a period of our history. The manner of our obtaining this object of our ambition has been equally satisfactory, for it has brought out the zeal of the brethren to an extent which few of us expected. They have not only contributed their money, and I believe every brother has done so, but they have also contributed their time and advice in furthering this object so much desired, and I feel proud to have assisted in a work so earnestly carried out. There is only one drawback in this, that is the fear which may arise that having in hand a work of such magnitude for so young a lodge, our contributions to charities may suffer injuriously, but I feel sure the brethren will not allow this to occur. I would urge them not to lose sight of the greatest ornament of Freemasonry. When we enter into possession of our own lodge, we shall, I hope, be too grateful to the Great Architect of Universe for His many favours,—I say we shall be too grateful to Him to fail in our duty to our fellow creatures and to those of our brethren who are in need. In our lodge we have always, I am glad to say, worked together with the utmost unity and harmony. In times past, we have had a worthy succession of Masters, but they have ruled a lodge sojourning, as it were, in a strange land. It happens that my year of office will witness the turn of the tide. And when we enter into our promised land, I hope we shall see a worthy succession of Masters as those who have preceded me, and that our new building will consolidate the unity and prosperity of our lodge. (Applause.)

The brethren then returned in procession to the lodge room, when the lodge was closed.

A cold collation was afterwards given at the King's Head Hotel. The architect is Bro. R. R. Rule. Contractor and builder, Bro. Kyle.

The following brethren took part in the ceremony, viz: Brethren of the Barnard Lodge, 1230:—Bro. R. J. Dent, W.M.; J. W. Badcock, S.W.; G. C. Lee, J.W.; J. Brockbank, Chaplain; R. C. M. Cooke, Treasurer; W. Lang, Secretary; H. Boazman, D.C.; J. Kyle, I.G.; J. Kitley, Tyler; Stewards, W. Gardner, and D. Finlay; J. M. Moore, I.P.M.; R. Richardson, P.M., P.P.G.R.; C. B. Wardale, J. G. Hall, J. Wild. Visiting brethren: Bro. J. G. Todd, W.M. 94; J. Hoggett, P.P.G.O. 111; J. C. Martin, 111; W. Milford, 111; T. Garget, Tyler 111; J. Wharton, 123; W. Pringle, 124; G. Oldham, 124; D. #### Obituary.

THE REV. H. V. PALMER, P.M. 236, P.P.G.C. NORTH AND EAST YORKS.

Numbers of our country readers will hear with the deepest regret of the sudden demise of the Rev. Henry Vaughan Palmer, rector of St. Margaret's, York, and Chaplain of the York Cemetery, which took place on Sunday, at his residence in Fulford-road. On Saturday, 28th ult., Bro. Palmer was suddenly seized with alarming symptoms, having previously been in his usual state of health, and medical aid having been summoned it was found that he was suffering from an apoplectic attack. He never rallied, and after some hours of unconsciousness he died about seven o'clock on Sunday morning. Bro. Palmer had been a resident in York for some 30 years, and from his geniality and Christian-hearted conduct had rendered himself very popular with all classes. He was formerly connected with the Unitarian body in York, but subsequently joined the Church of England, and was ordained to the ministerial office, and about sixteen years ago was appointed to the living of St. Margaret's, in the gift of the Archbishop, and four years afterwards obtained the chaplaincy of the York Cemetery. Bro. Palmer was closely identified with many excellent local institutions, and was an ardent supporter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and was an extensive literary contributor to several well-known serial publications. He was an active Freemason, and was a Past Master of the York Lodge, No. 236. At the time of his death he was the Chaplain of that lodge, and Second Principal of the Zealand Royal Arch Chapter. He died at the early age of 59, leaving a widow and a son and daughter. His son, the Rev. W. V. Palmer, is at present curate of Stokesley. The funeral took place at noon on Thursday, and was attended by many of the clergy and gentry of the city. A number of members of the two Masonic Lodges, York, 236, and Eboracum, 1611, were present, evincing the fraternal esteem in which the deceased was held. Amongst them we noticed the following:—Bros. Ald. March, P.M. 236; W. Lawton, P.M. 236; J. Todd, P.M. 236; T. Cooper, P.M. 236, and W.M. 1611; G. Balford, P.M. 236 and 1611; Rev. W. Valentine, 236; Alderman Terry, 236 and 1611; Flint, 236; G. Simpson, 236 and 1611; T. S. Camidge, 236; I. F. Taylor, 1611; G. H. Simpson, 236; T. B. Whytehead, 236 and 1611; J. S. Cumberland, 1611; Taylor, 236; H. Churchill, 236 and 1611; M. Cooper, 236 and 1611; G. C. Baskett, 236; Mann, 236; Hollins, 236; J. Smith, 236; J. Redfear, 236; Buckle, 236; Lewis, 236; Marshall, 1611; Humphries, 1611; Ald. Valey, 236; M. Rooke, 236; Powell, 236; Storey, 236; Gibson, 236; Tissiman, 236; Gairforth, 236; Ayre, 236; Kirby, 236; Hartley, 236; Saville, 236; Wood, 236; Hill, 1611; A. T. B. Turner, 1611; J. Ward, 236; and others. The service was read by the Rev. J. Metcalfe, rector of Holy Trinity, Micklegate, and a member of Eboracum, 1611; assisted by the Rev. F. Umpleby, sole curate of Osballdwick. The W.M. of the York Lodge, 236, Bro. W. Cowling, P.M., brother-in-law of the deceased, was amongst the principal mourners. The procession also included the governor and members of the Company of Merchant Adventurers, to which the deceased was chaplain; the Friendly Societies of the city, the deceased being a member of the Grand United Order of Odd Fellows; the children of St. Margaret's Church Schools, and a very large number of the parishioners, both rich and poor. The plate on the coffin bore the following inscription:—"Rev. H. V. Palmer, born April 4th, 1818, died July 29th, 1877."

BRO. JOHN EMMENS.

On Friday, the 3rd inst., the mortal remains of the late Bro. John Emmens were consigned to their last resting-place in Brompton Cemetery. The deceased was for many years a distinguished member of the Craft. He was initiated into the mysteries of the Order on the 3rd August, 1836, in the Old Concord lodge. Two years after his initiation he was elected W.M., and three years afterwards accepted the office of Secretary, which office he held up to the time of his death, a period of 36 years. His burial, by a curious coincidence, took place on the anniversary of his initiation. In 1860 Bro. Emmens conceived the idea of founding a new lodge, and having received the cordial support of some eminent members of the Craft, a warrant from the Grand Lodge was obtained, and the New Concord Lodge was consecrated, he being selected as its first W.M. He did not, however, forsake his first love, but remained loyally attached to both up to the time of his death, and, being the oldest surviving P.M. of the Old Concord, he was familiarly called "the father of the lodge," a distinction to which he was justly entitled as the founder of the New Concord. In him Masonry had an ardent and firm adherent, and his genial disposition and unvarying kindness to all with whom he came in contact, either in the ordinary business of life, or in the more esoteric relationship of the Craft, endeared him to a large circle of brethren and friends. That he was admired and esteemed by his brethren is patent from the fact that on one occasion he had the honour of being chosen Grand Pursuivant, and filled that office with the most marked ability. In his long career as a Freemason—one who took an active rather than a passive part in all that concerns the Order—he naturally came prominently forward, and few men have succeeded in endearing to themselves a larger circle of acquaintances than he had. Later in his life he had unfortunately given way, but his death, which took place on Saturday, 29th ult., was nevertheless somewhat sudden, for on the 19th ult. he was present at the banquet of the Old Concord Lodge, at Rosherville.

The funeral cortege left the late residence of the deceased, No. 254, Kingsland-road, at twelve o'clock, and proceeded by way of the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, where it was joined by seven private carriages, containing the Past and Present Officers of the Old Concord Lodge, each of whom wore white kid gloves, white neckties, and carried a sprig of acacia. Amongst these gentlemen were Bro. J. S. Ward, the present W.M. of the lodge; his Wardens, Bros. A. J. Dottridge and Goosey; Past Masters Gorton, Jeffries, Dixon, King, Holland, E. Dottridge, and Hockley, and other officers, besides several lay members of the lodge. At the cemetery gates the mournful procession was met by a large number of brethren, principally members of the New Concord Lodge. Amongst these were Bros. Cusworth, W.M., and Thos. Bartlett, who has twice filled the chair of K.S. in this lodge, and the following Past Masters and officers of the lodge:—Bros. H. J. Gabb, J. R. Gallant, W. H. Main, Spratt, Sinclair, Blyth, Bolton, W. J. Erabb, Louis Duke, and Henry Gabb, and several brethren connected with different lodges in the metropolis. These were also attired in the customary manner amongst Masons on these mournful occasions, and walked in procession in the rear of the carriages.

The Rev. Bro. Laughlin, who has for many years been the Chaplain of the Old Concord, read the burial service within the chapel in an impressive manner, and officiated also at the grave, around which the relatives of the deceased and the Masonic brethren clustered to take a last glance at the coffin.

The funeral arrangements were entrusted to the care of Bro. K. Dottridge, of the firm of Messrs. Dottridge Brothers, Dorset Works, East-road, City-road, and was of an imposing character, without unnecessary display. There were, besides the hearse, two new and improved mourning carriages, containing the son and daughter of the deceased and other relatives, and the seven private carriages already mentioned as containing the principal brethren of the Old Concord. The coffin was of polished oak, with massive brass handles and furniture, and was mounted with appropriate Masonic emblems. On the plate was engraved the simple inscription, "John Emmens, died 28th July, in his 68th year." The pall used was embroidered with white silk, with fleur-de-lis corners, worked in applique.

BRO. MOORE BEATTY.

Bro. Moore Beatty's death at Atlantic City on the 18th July was very heroic, but very sad. As he was walking upon the beach with his wife; Mrs. Phillips, who was in bathing, and a stranger to him, cried out for help. Bro. Moore at once divested himself of his coat and boots, and plunged in the surf to the rescue. The result was the drowning of both Mrs. Phillips and Bro. Beatty. Bro. Beatty was a member of Integrity Lodge, No. 187, and highly esteemed by all who knew him. He died a noble death, and let us embalm him in our memories.

We record, with extreme regret, the very sudden death of the wife of Bro. Walter Montgomery Neilson, at his residence, Queenshill, Kirkcudbrightshire, on Wednesday, 25th ultimo. Masons in the Glasgow Province, and throughout Scotland generally will deeply sympathise with the Provincial Grand Master in his bereavement.

It is hoped (says the Times) that public business will be sufficiently advanced to enable Her Majesty to prorogue Parliament on the 14th or 15th inst.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

BOLTON.—St. John's Lodge (No. 221).—The third annual picnic of about 40 of the members of this lodge, with the requisite company of ladies, took place on Wednesday, the 1st August. When we say that the weather was all that could be desired, the company happily assorted, and the arrangements complete, it only remains to be added that the place of pilgrimage selected was that charming residence, Eaton Hall. The journey by rail to Chester accomplished, a few spare minutes was occupied by "Ye Ladies" in "Ye room," and by "Ye Lords" in "Ye kitchen." Luncheon having been served in Messrs. Bolland's well known style, tracks were made to "the Groves," on "Ancient Devas banks," where a commodious barge, rowers and band, were waiting to convey the party a joyous four miles to the palatial hall of the Duke of Westminster. This excursion, so well known to many of our readers by its time-worn associations, as by its exceeding beauty and peacefulness, demands no more from us than an acknowledgment of the thorough enjoyment, and the close of the return journey to the city was marked by general sighs of regret. The ancient church and priory of St. John's, the celebrated walls and the venerable pile of St. Wedburgh were only cursorily examined from lack of the time, which had been so delightfully spent elsewhere. Tea was heartily partaken of, and the party, accommodated with the largest L. and N.W. Railway saloon carriages, was speeding on its return journey, pleased, delighted and unitedly disposed to accord to Bros. Stanley, W.M.; J.W. Taylor, D.C.; P. Prov. G. Organist; and J.M. Rutter, P.M., a hearty and unanimous vote of thanks for their trouble, caution and care in organizing and conducting so happy an excursion, begun, continued and ended without a single hitch or contretemps.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge (No. 1002).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Monday night, the 13th inst., for the purpose of balloting for, and, if approved, initiating into Masonry, the Rev. George Richard Hoskins, minor canon of Carlisle, evening lecturer of All Saints, Cockermouth, in order to enable him to take part in the forthcoming provincial festival, which has been fixed by the Earl of Bective, M.P., R.W.P.G.M., to be held on the 28th September, under the banner of Skiddaw Lodge, the new premises in connection with which will be consecrated on the same day. There was a good muster, and all the officers' positions on this occasion, with one exception, were filled by Past Masters, viz: Bros. R. Robinson, P.M. and Treas., as W.M.; W. E. Lamonty, P.M. and Sec. (Freemason), as S.W.; W. Shilton, P.M., as J.W.; Rev. E. R. Rice, M.A., P.M., Chaplain; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Org.; W. Taylor, W.M., as S.D.; and A. Taylor, P.M. 310, Carlisle, as J.D. The other brethren present were H. Dodgson, M.D., P.M.; J. Pearson, P.M.; J. Evening, S.W.; T. Kerr, J.W.; C. Gibson, I.G.; W. M'Quhae, Steward; Stephen Thwaite, R. Bailey, J. Bolton, H. Moncrieff, H. P. Wicks, W. Martin (J.W. 1660), T. C. Robinson, H. Peacock, and W. Potts, Tyler. The requisition concerning the meeting having been read, the ballot was taken, which proved unanimous, and the candidate being admitted, was regularly initiated, with a completeness and machine-like effect which created a deep impression on all present, the rev. candidate in particular. The working tools were presented by Bro. Lamonty, P.M., and the E.A.'s charge was delivered by Bro. Dr. Dodgson, P.M., whilst the music, both opening and closing, as also incidental to the general ceremony, in the hands of Bro. Lewthwaite, P.M., and choir, was so hearty and telling, that much of the success of the proceeding was due to that harmonious and desirable adjunct to our beautiful work. Altogether, this was one of the most enjoyable working meetings ever held since Skiddaw Lodge was consecrated.

LIVERPOOL.—Duke of Edinburgh Lodge (No. 1182).—Since its translation from the suburban district of Wavertree to the purely urban locality of the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, the Duke of Edinburgh Lodge, No. 1182, has continued to prosper so much as to render it at once a leading lodge in the province, an example in the way of charity, and a model in its working. Harmony and Masonic enthusiasm have always marked its existence, and the happy family feeling was not absent on Thursday, the 9th inst., when the brethren assembled at head-quarters to assist at the all-important work of installation. There was an attendance of between 120 and 130 brethren, including an unusual array of P.G. Lodge Officers and other leaders of the Craft in the W. Lancashire Division of the Order. Bro. R. Martin, jun., whose year has been a most prosperous one, was in his place in the E., and his officers in their respective places were Bros. T. B. Griffiths, 710, (Brooklyn, U.S.); R. Reader, S.D. 292; W. A. Wilson, P.M. 203; and G. O. Rothwell, P.M. 1356. After the transaction of some formal business, Bro. Robert Martin, jun., W.M., concluded his year of office by installing Bro. John Williams as his successor in the chair of W.M., the presentation being made by Bros. P.M.'s Myers and Edginton. The whole of the ceremony of installation was performed in a highly effective manner, and the following brethren were subsequently appointed officers:—Bros. R. Martin, jun., I.P.M.; T. B. Myers, P.M., D.C.; T. Davies, S.W.; G. Musker, J.W.; W. Brown, Treasurer (re-elected for the tenth time); A. D. Hesketh, Sec.; A. Barclay, S.D.; T. Dutton, J.D.; J. O. Rea, I.G.; H. C. Haynes, S.S.; T. Wareing, J.S.; and W. Monk, Tyler. A special vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded on the minutes to Bro. R. Martin, I.P.M., for the admirable manner in which he had performed the ceremony of installation, and the W.M. also presented him with a chaste and valuable P.M.'s jewel, in recognition of his valuable services to the lodge, and the efficiency with which he had worked the lodge during the year. The brethren subsequently dined in the large banquet hall, under the presidency of the W.M., and during the evening the customary loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and responded to. Bros. Major Turner, P.G. Treas., and J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C., acknowledged "The Prov. G. Officers of W.L." Bro. Martin, I.P.M., gave "The W.M.," and said he had watched Bro. Williams since his earliest Masonic life, and he was sure that every brother must wish him the greatest prosperity during his year of office. The W.M. briefly acknowledged the compliment, and said he would do his utmost to maintain the present high position of the lodge. Bro. Martin, I.P.M., in reply to the toast of "The Installing Master," thanked the brethren for the kindness which had been shown him in connection with his work that day. Bro. Skeaf, P.G.O., and Bro. H. Williams, P.M. 249, responded for "The Visitors," and Bro. J. T. Callow, P.M. 673 and 1505, for "The Masonic Charities," specially referring to the undoubted excellencies of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution and the Hamer Benevolent Fund. A most enjoyable evening was spent, capital songs being given by Bros. Queen, Atkinson, and Gilfillan, Bro. J. Skeaf, P.G.O., presiding at the piano, and playing one of his own brilliant fantasias with an amount of verve which could hardly have been excelled.

SALOP.—Castle Lodge (No. 1621).—On Friday, the 10th inst., the members of this lodge held their first anniversary at the Crown Hotel. The W.M. elect, Bro. E. Jones Chetty, was installed by Bro. J. Stokes, and after the installation ceremony the W.M. appointed Bros. Southwell, S.W.; and Dr. Colles, J.W. There was a very large attendance of the brethren, among whom were Bros. J. Stokes, E. Jones Chetty, Lester, H. Smith, H. B. Southwell, Dr. Colles, J. Sewell, J. S. Vince, T. F. Nock, W. L. Southwell, E. Price, G. C. De Lessert, C. Delgton, T. Pratt, C. Edkins, A. S. Trevor, T. M. Deighton, Thos. Whitefoot, and F. Foxall; and the numerous company of visitors comprised Bros. Waring, Russell, A. Green, T. Brettell, J. Nicholson, W. Smith, and T. P. Hanson, of 252; Masfield, D.P.G.M. of Worcestershire; W. H. Sporiall, 1124; J. Fitzgerald and R. Lloyd, 377; J. R. Harris, 773; W. Waldron, and W. M. Pritchard, 573. During the proceedings, the W.M. presented a splendid gold Past Master's jewel to Bro. Stokes, bearing the following inscription: Presented to Bro. Joseph Stokes, P.M., P.G.S.W. of Worcestershire, by the brethren of the Castle Lodge, 1621, as a mark of great esteem, and in recognition of his valuable services as first W.M. of the lodge. At the close of the lodge business the brethren adjourned to a banquet, which was served in first class style, and reflected great credit upon the purveyor. The usual Masonic toasts were honoured, and the brethren shortly afterwards separated.

JERSEY.—Cæsarean Lodge (No. 74).—A quarterly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Temple, St. Helier, on Thursday, August 9th, when the chair was taken at 7 p.m. by Bro. Benham, W.M., supported by Bros. Dr. Hopkins, Past G.J.W. and P.M. 26 and 74; A. Schmitt, Chaplain and Sec.; J. Catley, S.W.; J. O. Le Sueur, J.W.; W. Metherell, M.O.; R. Barrow, S.O.; P. Blampied, J.O.; P. Binet, Treas.; T. Leat, S.D.; W. H. Chapman, J.D.; W. Pugsley, Reg.; Dr. T. Aubin, I.G.; Rogers, Tyler, and many members. The lodge having been opened, and the minutes read and confirmed, the W.M. announced that the only business for the evening was the installation of his successor, for which he had availed himself of the presence in the island of the founder and first W.M. of the lodge, by whom he had himself been installed. The chair was then taken by Bro. Dr. Hopkins. Bro. Benham presented Bro. John Catley as W.M. elect, and the usual preliminaries having been completed, the brethren were requested to withdraw, and in their absence Bro. Catley was duly installed in the chair of Adoniram. On their return he was, according to custom, proclaimed and greeted as W.M. He then proceeded to appoint and invest the following as his officers: Bros. Benham, I.P.M.; Schmitt, Chaplain and Sec.; C. D. Bishop, Assist. Sec.; Dr. T. Aubin, S.W.; I. O. Le Sueur, J.W.; C. Kingsnorth, M.O.; T. Leat, S.D.; W. Wetherell, J.O.; W. T. Pugsley, Reg.; J. O'Flaherty, S.D.; W. H. Chapman, J.D.; P. Blampied, Dir. of Cers.; W. H. Campbell and J. Gray, Stewards; J. Huelin, I.G.; Rogers, Tyler. The installing Master concluded the proceedings by giving the usual addresses to the W.M., Wardens, Overseers, and brethren, each of which elicited the applause of those present. On the proposition of Bro. Schmitt, seconded by the I.P.M., a cordial vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Dr. Hopkins for his efficient services on this occasion, to which a suitable response was made by the recipient, who congratulated the lodge on its resuscitation after having been long in abeyance, and its good prospects for the future, observing that just ten years had elapsed since he had placed in the chair the brother who was now I.P.M. A similar vote of gratitude was passed in favour of Bro. Benham, to whom the brethren are greatly indebted for his zeal in resuscitating the lodge after so long a cessation of working, and without whose efforts its existence must have terminated, whereas it is now in a most flourishing condition, not only in print of numbers, but also of the materials of which it is composed, as evidenced by the fact that almost all the officers are Past Masters of Craft Lodges. No other business offering, the proceedings were brought to a termination soon after 8 o'clock, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet room for supper. The usual Masonic toasts were given from the chair and duly honoured. Among them three require especial notice. The first was proposed by Bro. Schmitt, and included the name of Bros. Hughban and Dr. Hopkins, of whose services to the Craft in general and to this lodge in particular he spoke in most eulogistic and affectionate terms, of which the last named had given ample evidence this evening to those brethren who having joined the Craft since he left the island had previously no personal acquaintance with him. The second was in honour of the I.P.M., who was well known to all present, by whose continuous and judicious conduct as their head in Mark Masonry the lodge had been sustained in the island under great discouragements, all of which he had overcome, and had thus re-established this branch of the Craft on a firm basis. The last toast was proposed by Bro. Binet, himself one of the oldest, most consistent, and zealous Masons in the province, in honour of Bro. Schmitt, the experienced, prudent and active guide in Masonry, always ready and willing to render help and advice under all circumstances. The brethren separated at about 10 o'clock, after having spent a most pleasant evening, in the proceedings of which the greatest interest was manifested, and an amount of harmony and kindly feeling prevailed, to an extent not often met with, even among Masons.

CROYDON.—Croydon Mark Lodge (No. 168).—This newly-constituted Mark Lodge held its third meeting at the Greyhound Hotel, Croydon, on Friday, the 10th inst., the W.M., Bro. George Yaxley, P.G.S. and P. Prov. G.M.O., presiding. Amongst the officers and brethren present, were the V.W. Bro. Thomas Meggy, P.G.M.O.; Bros. J. Close, S.W.; the W. Bro. Thomas Poore, G.I.G., acting J.W.; Bros. Legg, Prov. G. Standard Bearer, M.O.; Nicholls, S.O., and Brown, J.O.; the V.W. Bro. James Stevens, P.G.J.O., acting S.D.; Bros. S. W. Lambert, as J.D.; Haynes, I.G.; Ridge, Organist; H. A. Pocock, Prov. G.I.G.; J. P. Dickens, Treasurer, &c. The lodge was opened with musical service, and the ballot was taken and declared clear for several candidates. Of these, however, only one attended, business and "out of town" engagements precluding the attendance of the remainder. Bro. T. R. Adams, M.D., of St. Mary's Lodge, was advanced into the degree with full ceremony and in most perfect manner. The meeting being one of emergency, in consequence of the previous regular night having been devoted to Provincial Grand Lodge, no further business was taken, and the brethren made an early adjournment to dinner. A very pleasant evening was spent by the numerous company, and Masonic toasts, charitable interests, and harmony enlivened the proceedings until "train time" caused the necessary separation until the second Friday in November next.

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs set to popular airs, written by Bro. E. P. Philpots, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. Sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—ADVT.

The Provincial Grand Treasurer's accounts exhibited a very gratifying state of affairs, shewing a balance in hand of £258 17s. after investing £210 in New Zealand bonds during the past year. The accounts were received and adopted, also the report of the committee for auditing them. The invested capital of the province now amounts to £600. Of the balance in hand propositions to subscribe 100 guineas to the Royal Masonic Boys' School (at the recent annual festival of which Bro. Beach presided), and additional votes to the other charities, as well as various other sums, were unanimously agreed to.

On the motion of Bro. G. Rake (Portsmouth), seconded by Bro. E. Booth (Southampton), Bro. M. E. Frost was re-elected Treasurer.

Before the P.G. Lodge closed Bro. Binckes tendered the best thanks of the executive of the Boys' School to Bro. Beach, and their high estimation of the services cheerfully rendered by him on the occasion of the recent festival of that institution, the most successful ever held in connection with any of the Masonic charities, the sum of £13,570 having been received. Bro. Binckes added that it had been decided to invest another £3000, and that the committee were authorised to provide for 32 additional sons of Freemasons being admitted. In conclusion he thanked the Deputy P.G.M. and the province generally for their liberal support of the schools.

Subsequently a banquet took place at the Guildhall, the P.G.M. presiding.

About 100 brethren attended, and at the close a few toasts were given. "The Queen," "The Prince of Wales, Grand Master of England," "The Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master," and "The Deputy Grand Master, Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, and Officers of Grand Lodge," were proposed from the chair and enthusiastically received by the company. With the latter Bro. Beach coupled the name of a brother who had served the office of Grand Warden in former years, but who had since been selected, for the great merit he had displayed, to preside over a most important province—of that brother who had done them the honour to be present at the meeting that day—General Brownrigg. (Much cheering.) They greeted his presence with the utmost enthusiasm. They had never had the pleasure of seeing him in the province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight before, but he trusted that his visit would enhance the good understanding which had previously existed and would be cemented that day between the Freemasons of Surrey and those of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight.

General Brownrigg responded, remarking that it was more than 21 years since he had had the honour of being the Senior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of England, and Masonry had become so popular in the present day that a small man like himself could hardly expect to attain those very high ranks which existed in the Craft; when they saw the Wardens' chairs occupied by princes of the blood royal it was very flattering to the Craft, but exceedingly difficult for others to attain to such high honours. (Hear, hear.) The principles which had guided their Provincial Grand Master had always been so just and excellent that he had no doubt, in the distribution of the purple, he always took care to give it to those who were worthy of that honour. (Applause.) He trusted that they would permit him to propose a toast before he sat down—the toast of the evening—that of "The Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, Bro. W. B. Beach, M.P." (Great cheering.) He had been extremely pleased that day with the visit he had paid them, and he should very much regret if in the future he could not be able to attend the Provincial Grand Lodge of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, and he hoped when his convenience would permit to see the Provincial Grand Master of Hants at the Surrey meetings.

The Chairman acknowledged the toast. He was happy to say that during the time he had had the pleasure of presiding over them he had met with nothing but encouragement on all sides, and he was induced by that to think that the Craft had not suffered in any way during that period. (Applause.) They had in various parts of the province seen of late new lodges spring into existence, and they had also seen that lodges which became dissatisfied with the buildings in which they had previously met had secured new buildings for themselves which did honour to the Craft and their enterprise. (Hear, hear.) He should be failing in his duty if he did not offer to the brethren of his province his most cordial thanks for the way in which they came forward and supported him when called upon to preside over the proceedings in connection with the Boys' School—a subject which had been already alluded to by Bro. Binckes during the former part of the day's proceedings. He (the Chairman) knew that the brethren had been previously called upon to make great exertions in that cause, and it was hardly to be expected that when they were appealed to by him to support him during the proceedings for the charity, they would again make the sacrifices they did, but when the donations were announced at the festival they elicited the warmest recognition. (Hear, hear.) The right worshipful brother intimated that the Provincial Lodge would be held next year at Southampton. (Hear, hear.) It was nine years since the Provincial Grand Lodge had been held in that town, and not since the year he had the honour of being installed as Provincial Grand Master. He assured the brethren it was his earnest wish, in the distribution of the honours of the Grand Lodge, to reward merit and ability, but it was extremely difficult always to meet the case. He could, however, assure those brethren who had exerted themselves in the cause of Freemasonry that though they appeared to be passed by at the present moment, such would not be the case eventually, for their merits would not be lost sight of, and he trusted that all would endeavour to promote the prosperity of the Craft by all means in their power. (Great cheering.)

Bro. Stopher (Winchester) submitted the next toast, "The D.P.G.M. of the Province, Bro. W. Hickman, P.A.G.D.C. of England," and Bro. Hickman suitably replied.

Bro. Eve (Aldershot) gave "The Visitors," which was acknowledged by Bro. Davison (Province of Middlesex).

The Chairman proposed the toast of "The Wardens and Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge," coupling with it the name of Bro. James Harris, who had rendered great services during the past few years. (Applause.)

Bro. Harris, in acknowledging the toast, said it was just fourteen years since he was initiated, and it was also just fourteen years since the last meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge was held in Winchester.

Bro. Hickman then gave "The Worshipful Masters, Officers, and Brethren of the Lodges in the Province," and said that of the twenty-eight lodges of which the province was composed twenty-seven were in full working order.

Bro. Godwin, Winchester, replied to the toast, and expressed his opinion that much good was done in the province and throughout the world by an interchange of visits between the members of different lodges.

"The Masonic Charities" was the last toast on the list. It was proposed by the Chairman, who dwelt on the eminent services of Bro. Binckes on behalf of the Charities.

CONSECRATION OF THE KINGSLAND LODGE, No. 1693.

The above new lodge was formally consecrated on Tuesday, 7th inst. The M.W.G.M. had authorised Bro. Terry, Prov. G.D.C. Herts, to perform the ceremony. That brother announced, during the evening, that this made the list of lodges consecrated by him during the past nine years 100 in number.

Among the brethren present were Chas. Daniel, W.M. 65; Chas. G. Hill, W.M. 1366; R. Snare, S.W. 228; W. Bawson, S.W. 1580; R. H. Halford, J.W. 228; R. Percy, S.D. 228; A. J. Vanderlyn, P.M., P.G.S.B. Kent, 199; Cohen, Montefiore, 1017; F. G. Guyer, 1288; W. Morgan, 1385; E. Bowyer, P.M. 1580; John Hodges, 1319; R. De Lacy, 97; G. E. Cook, 382; Alex. Mullord, 1288; W. Fysh, W. T. Owens, 1507; J. Powell, S.D. 186; Jos. Stock, S.D. 1178; E. T. Read, P.M. 781, 1349; W. H. Main, P.M. 813; Jas. Lyons, 188; Jas. Hill, W.M. 228; T. Baile, 917.

Bros. Edgar Bowyer, P.M. 1471, occupied the Chair of S.W.; Jas. Hill, W.M. 228; J.W.; Killick, sen., P.M. Merchant Navy, Secretary; and Main, P.M. New Concord, Inner Guard. The lodge was opened in the Third Degree, and the consecration ceremony was proceeded with. The customary oration was delivered by Bro. Terry, Bros. De Lacy, Hodges, and Mullord undertook the musical portion of the ceremony, and Bro. Cook presided at the harmonium.

On the conclusion of the ceremony the lodge was resumed to the Second Degree, and Bro. J. L. Mather introduced Bro. Charles Kingston Killick, jun., as the W.M. designate. The necessary obligations having been taken, a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and Bro. Terry performed the ceremony of installation.

The W.M. on taking the chair appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. Trewinnard, S.W.; H. P. Isaac, J.W.; C. K. Killick, sen., P.M., Sec.; J. H. Hawkins, S.D.; A. W. Fenner, J.D.; Hall, I.G.; T. Fitzmaurice, D.C.; W. Steedman, Tyler.

The W.M. proposed, and the S.W. seconded, a vote of thanks to Bro. Terry, in acknowledgment of the manner in which he had performed the ceremonies of consecration and installation, which was unanimously carried, and ordered to be recorded in the minutes.

Bro. Terry returned thanks.

Bros. Terry, Mather, Hill, and Bowyer were elected honorary members of the new lodge. Several propositions for initiation and joining were handed in, and the lodge was closed.

The ceremonies of consecration and installation being concluded the brethren adjourned to the banquet, to which full justice was done by the brethren.

Grace having been sung, Bro. Killick, jun., proposed the usual loyal toasts.

"The Most Worshipful Grand Master," and "The M.W. Pro G. Master, the Dep. G.M., and the rest of the G. Officers" having been duly honoured, Bro. Terry proposed "The Health of the Worshipful Master." He did so at the request of the brethren who had been invested that evening. Bro. Killick, jun., ever since the day he was initiated, had exhibited a vast amount of zeal in the cause of Freemasonry. He had worked hard and consistently, and he was sure the petitioners, as well as his Royal Highness the Grand Master, had made a wise selection in appointing him the first W.M. of the Kingsland Lodge.

Bro. Killick replied. The position in which he was placed that evening was one of which he was very proud. He sincerely thanked Bro. Terry for the kind way in which he had offered the toast for the acceptance of the brethren, and the brethren for the way in which they had honoured it. He would say that, though this was the last of the 100 lodges that Bro. Terry had consecrated, he hoped it would not be the least in his esteem.

The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Consecrating Officer." He referred to Bro. Terry's exertions in all matters Masonic. His zeal was known to all present, and he felt himself perfectly inadequate to do justice to his many sterling qualities. Bro. Terry suitably replied.

Bro. Vanderlyn replied for "The Visitors," which was given from the chair.

The next toast was that of "The Officers," which was acknowledged by each.

Bro. Trewinnard said the proceedings of the day had been so eminently satisfactory that he was sure the most sanguine hopes of the promoters would be realised.

Bro. Isaac gave a retrospect of the motives that led to the formation of the lodge, and promised that he would do all in his power to enhance its prosperity.

The Secretary remarked that it afforded him great pleasure to see his son in the chair; it was gratifying to his feelings as a father to hear the eulogiums that were passed on their W.M.

The other toasts comprised "The Health of Bro. Fysh," "The Charities," &c.

The steamer German, built for the Union Steamship Company, arrived at Southampton on 13th instant from the Clyde, having made the run round, a distance of about 580 miles against fresh head winds, in 43 hours, being an average of over 13½ knots per hour.

FREEMASONRY IN INDIA.

MURREE (Punjab).—Lodge Light in the Himalayas (No. 1448, E.C.).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the lodge-rooms, Murree, on Thursday, the 7th June, 1877. Present Wor. Bro. Dhanjibhoy Fakerejee, W.M.; Bros. H. Whympier, S.W.; G. Wood, J.W.; Garrow, Secretary and Treasurer; Holmes, S.D.; Davis, J.D.; Robb, I.G.; McIntyre, Tyler. Members: W. Bro. A. Stewart, Beatley, Rich, Shipman, Adie, and Gauly. Visitors: W. Bros. Jeffcoat and Briggs, Bros. Capt. Mure, Scott, Davis, Lyseth, and Haynes. The lodge was opened with prayer. The Secretary read work before the lodge, which was to install the Worshipful Master and invest officers for the current year. Bro H. Whympier, the Master elect, was then presented by W. Bro. Jeffcoat, who having asserted to the ancient charges, was duly installed and proclaimed as Worshipful Master, and saluted by the brethren in the usual manner. W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy, P.M., and District Grand Director of Ceremonies, then presented the Worshipful Master with the implements of his office, and commended his attention to the volume of the Sacred Law, the Book of Constitutions, the bye-laws of the lodge, and the warrant from the Grand Lodge of England, and delivered charges to the officers and brethren of the lodge. The following officers were then invested:—Bros. Wood, S.W.; Shipman, J.W.; Garrow, Sec. and Treas.; Mills, S.D.; Holmes, J.D.; Davis, I.G.; McIntyre, Tyler. W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy proposed, and Wor. Master seconded, Bros. Mure and Lyseth as joining members. W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy proposed, and W. Bro. Major Stewart, P.D.D.G.M., seconded, W. Bro. Jeffcoat and Bro. H. Scott as joining members. W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy proposed, and W. Master seconded, that the members of Lodge Mayo, No. 1413, at Rawul Pindee, be permitted to join this lodge without paying the joining fee, the brethren of Mayo Lodge having already passed a resolution giving a like privilege to members of this lodge. Carried unanimously. Proposed by W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy and seconded by the W. Master that a vote of thanks be passed to W. Bro. Major A. Stewart, P.D.D.G.M., and W. Bros. J. fcoat and Briggs, for the trouble they have taken in coming up from Rawul Pindee to assist at the installation. Carried unanimously. W. Bro. Stewart, P.D.D.G.M., then replied for himself and Bros. Jeffcoat and Briggs, and said that it had given them all great pleasure to assist at the installation, and how highly gratified they were to find the lodge worked so well and with such unanimity and concord amongst its members. W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy proposed and W. Master seconded, that a vote of thanks be given to Bro. Garrow for the valuable services rendered by him in the working of the lodge during the past year. Carried unanimously. Bro. Garrow then replied, and said what pleasure it gave him to find that the slight services he had been able to render had been appreciated. W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy expressed his regret for not receiving the Worthy and Wor. Bro. Major A. Stewart, P.D.D.G.M., with the honours to which his Masonic rank entitled him. The W. Master then requested W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy to retire from the lodge for a short time, and during his absence said:—Brethren, to the untiring energy and zeal of our late Master the present efficient state of the lodge is entirely due. When he took up the Mastership at the beginning of last year there were only 8 subscribing members, while now, upon his retirement, there are 24; and its funds are also in a very flourishing condition. He is one of if not the first Parsee gentleman who has risen to the high dignity of Master of an English lodge in the Punjab, and his worth as a Mason has been acknowledged by the District Grand Lodge, which has appointed him as one of its Grand Officers, and as a mark of our respect and esteem, I propose that, in addition to asking him to sit for his portrait (to be hung in the lodge rooms) we present him with a Past Master's jewel. The proposition was seconded by Bro. Wood, S.W., and carried unanimously. W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy was then re-admitted and acquainted with what had occurred in his absence. He replied in an appropriate speech, that he felt his services had really been over-estimated, and he would never fail to appreciate the kind sentiments which had been expressed and the honour conferred upon him on this occasion. The jewel will ever be a pleasant remembrance of his connection with the lodge, and the happy hours he had spent amongst his brethren. There being no further work before the lodge, it was closed in peace, harmony, and brotherly love at 8 p.m. The brethren adjourned to the banquet hall to dine, and on the removal of the cloth the first three toasts of O.B. were given by Bro. Major A. Stewart and, duly honoured. The District Grand Master and the District Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the District Grand Lodge Officers, coupled with the name of W. Bro. A. Stewart, was proposed by W. Bro. Jeffcoat, and responded to by W. Bro. Stewart, Past Deputy District Grand Master. W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy then gave the toast of the evening, "The Health of the newly-installed W. Master, Bro. Whympier," in the warmest and most expressive manner, and detailed his many excellent qualities as a Mason, and the liberality which he had shown towards the lodge. W. Bro. Whympier thanked the brethren most cordially, and expressed a hope that with the assistance of the officers and brethren he might be able to maintain the efficiency and prosperity of the lodge. At the least he will devote himself heart and soul to the work. W. Bro. Whympier then proposed "The Health of the retiring W. Master, W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy," whom he highly eulogized for the high state of efficiency of the lodge at the present moment. W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy replied briefly by thanking the W. Master and brethren for the cordial manner in which his health had been proposed and received. "The Officers of the Lodge" were proposed by the W. Master, and responded to by Bro. Shipman, J.W. W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy next proposed "The Health of W. Bros. Stewart, Jeffcoat and Briggs," thanking them for their kindness in coming so great a distance for the express purpose of giving their assistance at the installation of the W. Master. W. Bro. Stewart replied in a very effective speech, and expressed his readiness to repeat the journey at any time should his services be required. "The Army and Navy" was given by W. Bro. Whympier, and responded to by Bro. Capt. Mure. "The Visitors" was given by W. Bro. Dhanjibhoy, and responded to by Bro. H. Scott. "The Ladies" were proposed by Bro. Mure, and responded to by Bro. Gauly. A most enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the Tyler's toast and the old chorus.

There being no business before the lodge the question of delivering a lecture on the Tracing Board, or on any subject connected with the Craft, for the improvement and instruction of the brethren on such occasions, was fully discussed and generally approved of. One brother was proposed as a joining member. The Secretary was requested to invite the attendance of W. Bros. Col. Hodgson and Eason at the next regular meeting, there being several candidates for the Third Degree. Bro. Perkins then informed the brethren that he had received a letter from the W.M., Wor. Bro. Llewellyn, from Hyderabad, desiring to be kindly remembered to the brethren and wishing the lodge continued prosperity, also forwarding a report of the directors of the Bombay Masonic Association. The Secretary was desired to record the former and to read the latter for the information of the lodge. A regular meeting was held on Saturday, the 21st of April, 1877. Present: W. Bro. F. J. Laville, P.M., as W.M.; Bros. W. E. Perkins, S.W.; W. Hunt, as J.W.; J. Moreau, Treasurer, as Secretary; H. Hodgart, as S.D.; G. I. Yeend, as J.D.; E. Bethell, as I.G.; H. The ballot for the affiliation of Comp. A. Smith, Orion, proved clear. The companion, who had been instructed in the Mark and Excellent Degrees, was affiliated in due form, as prescribed in the Constitutions, and thereafter received some further instruction in the Holy Royal Arch Degree. Comp. Lawson was presented with his diploma as Z., and Comps. Crane and D. M. Smith with their R.A. diplomas. Scribe E. read remarks of the P.G. Permanent Committee on the revised bye-laws of the chapter; the reply thereto was approved, as was also some slight change in the laws, among which was an alteration of the day of meeting. An allowance was granted to the widow of a companion to pay her rent. A candidate for exaltation was proposed, and this closed the business of the evening.

MASONIC PRESENTATION AT LAHORE.—The Masonic Lodge Industry, in Lahore, has recently moved its quarters to a position near the railway, more convenient to the bulk of its members. This entailed considerable trouble and expense in fittings, &c., and Mrs. B. J. Hill, the wife of one of its members, having very kindly devoted considerable time to the matter and given very valuable assistance in decorating the hall, the members of the lodge expressed their gratitude by passing a formal resolution of thanks, and inviting Mrs. Hill to attend in open lodge at the next meeting, to receive a copy of the resolution from the hands of the District Grand Master of the Punjab. Unfortunately the health of Mrs. Hill did not permit of her attending the lodge, consequently a deputation of Masons, headed by the Right Worshipful District Grand Master of the Punjab, waited upon her at her own house on Thursday, June 21, and formally tendered a copy of the resolution, which ran as follows:—

Presented to Mrs. B. J. Hill, by the members of lodge Industry, No. 1485, in appreciation of the handsome presents made by her, and the interest she displayed in the decorating of the lodge rooms, as well as an expression of goodwill towards her generally.

Extract from the minutes of Lodge Industry, No. 1485, dated Lahore, 30th May, 1877.

Proposed by Wor. Bro. James Wilkinson, seconded by Wor. Bro. W. T. S. Grigsby, "That this lodge records with pleasure its hearty and best thanks to Mrs. Hill for various handsome presents made to it, including a canopy and other decorations to the lodge room."

And further, that she be invited to attend the next regular meeting on 27th June, to receive this extract from the hands of the Right Worshipful District Grand Master of the Punjab, in the presence of the W. Master, Wardens, and brethren in open lodge assembled.

Carried unanimously.

(Signed) ROBERT KERR, W.M.

CHAS. CARROLL, S.W.

BOYLE TRAYERS HILL, J.W.

J. W. SULLIVAN, Sec.

The Right Worshipful District Grand Master, in presenting the resolution, which was very handsomely illuminated by Mr. Bull, made a short but appropriate speech, in which he regretted Mrs. Hill's inability to attend in open lodge, but hoped that she might be early restored again to health. He also touched upon the question of ladies' opposition to Masonry on account of its secrecy, and stated its real secret was "Peace on earth and good will towards men." Mrs. Hill was too unwell to reply personally, but handed in a paper which was read on her behalf; in it she remarked that the ladies had no desire to worm out of their husbands the technical secrets of the Order, but she thought they might be taken into their confidence upon matters of charity; and wound up by stating that the little help she had given to the lodge was partly to shew that there is no necessity for the entire exclusion of ladies' help from Masonic proceedings and charities, and partly to shew her esteem for a lodge in which her husband had taken a great interest, and she felt proud of the very gracious manner in which her poor efforts had been recognised. The deputation then took leave. Mr. and Mrs. Hill left Lahore for Bombay en route to England by mail train on Friday evening (June 22)—many Masonic friends being on the platform to say good-bye and wish them a prosperous journey home and a happy return to India.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE.

The British Association for the Advancement of Science for the second time since its formation, forty-seven years ago, has selected the fine town of Plymouth for its annual congress, and everything bids fair for a successful meeting. Curiously enough, the Association now, as formerly, migrates from Plymouth to Glasgow; not only so, it brings from the University of that city one of its most distinguished professors, Dr. Allan Thomson, as president of the year. The first general meeting of the Association was held on Wednesday evening, when Professor Andrews, of Belfast, resigned the chair, and Dr. Thomson assumed the presidency and delivered an address. The sectional meetings commenced on Thursday morning, and will be continued on Friday, Saturday, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday next week. The sections are—Mathematical and Physical Science, Classical Science, Geology, Biology (including three separate departments of Zoology and Botany, Anatomy, and Physiology, and Anthropology), Geography, Economic Science and Statistics, and Mechanical Science. On each morning of the congress a general address will be delivered by one of the presidents of the sections. The programme also includes a series of evening meetings. On Thursday a soirée will be held in the Assembly Rooms. On Friday evening a discourse will be delivered by Professor Warrington Smyth on the "Physical Phenomena connected with the Mines of Cornwall and Devon." On Monday evening Professor Odling will deliver a discourse on the new element "Gallium." On Tuesday there will be a second soirée, and on Wednesday the concluding general meeting will be held. On Saturday there will be an excursion to Exeter, where the Mayor, on behalf of the citizens and inhabitants of the neighbourhood, has issued numerous invitations to luncheon at the Royal Public Rooms, to meet the president and members of the Association. On Thursday, the 23rd, there will also be excursions to places of interest in the neighbourhood of Plymouth.

Mrs. Ward Hunt is recovering from her illness. On Saturday last she was able to leave her chamber for the sitting room, and is expected to leave Cologne at the end of the week.

FREEMASONRY IN SOUTH AFRICA.

St. John's day happening to fall on a Sunday, the brethren of Meridian Lodge, No. 1469, Cradock, determined to hold their annual festival on Wednesday, 27th June. Accordingly on that day they assembled at about half-past ten o'clock, and after the lodge had been opened by their Worshipful Master, Bro. W. S. Leigh, they proceeded in order to St. Peter's Church, where the rector, the Rev. W. C. Wallis, preached an excellent and appropriate discourse.

The rev. gentleman took for his text the third verse of the 40th chapter of Isaiah: "The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness. Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God."

"For what reason St. John's day is chosen by the Order I would not presume to give an opinion to you who are acquainted with the mysteries and the history of Freemasonry. Nor would it perhaps become this place to enter upon such a discussion, sufficient that John the Baptist seems by this act to be chosen, as it were, your patron saint, and it is supposed that there is in the saint thus chosen something which is to be held up to the members of the Order as worthy of their regard and imitation, and therefore it is well that I should to-day lead you to consider some portion of the history or character of John the Baptist. Before proceeding to the consideration of the words of our text, I would wish to say that I am thankful that the Order do in this town (I know not whether it is a universal custom) attend, in their corporate capacity, a Christian temple. It has been urged by men learned and pious, but whether ever members of your Order or not I cannot say, that the order itself is Anti-Christ, because though acknowledging one Supreme Being as ruler of the universe, they in their ceremonies are said never to use the name of Jesus Christ. Whether such an accusation be true or false, it is not for me to say; or, if true, what the reason may be for such an omission—whether it be accidental or premeditated—whether done from a disbelief in the Messiahship of Christ, or whether merely done for the purpose of having a wider basis upon which all persons believing in a God, as the Creator and Ruler of the Universe, can join together as men of the world, for mutual society—help and protection. Now I consider that this annual gathering in a place of Christian worship at once takes away the ground from under the feet of those who thus accuse your society, and I am thankful that I am able to look upon this Order, which, as we know, includes some of the noblest names in the State, and many a one in holy orders, as not Anti-Christ, to say the least, and, therefore, I may take it as granted that in asking me, a Minister of Christ, to preach before you to-day, you wished to hear from my mouth some of that Gospel truth which I am appointed to preach, on the words of our text: 'The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness. Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God.' It is my desire to hold up the pattern of St. John the Baptist as an example for us to follow, and especially to those who are Freemasons, as he seems, as I have said, to be the patron saint of the Order, and therefore they are doubly bound to follow that example, for it cannot be forgotten that, although the rites and mysteries of Masonry may not be able to claim the character of Christian—it so happens that the members of this lodge whom I now address are Christians, so that both as Masons and as Christians I can call upon you to follow Him. I consider it the bounden duty of every man to seek to adorn the position he may hold, the office he may fill, or the society to which he belongs, and by doing your duty faithfully with honesty, zeal, and integrity, in the fear and love of God, and looking for the approval of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, you do, each one, adorn the position or office you hold, or the society to which you belong, and there is no doubt that every one has much in his power in this respect. Look at St. John; he had a special mission given unto him." The reverend gentleman then proceeded to describe the mission. "Are we not all placed in the world for a special purpose? Are we not all in the strictest sense missionaries sent forth by the Lord, and having hereafter to answer to Him? You have a special mission—as Masons certain duties are incumbent on you, and I am aware that you are required by the Order to display certain dispositions in your intercourse with your brother Masons, by which it is hoped that good may be done in the world, and the amount of evil lessened. Another such mission is so to act as a Mason that those who have before despised the Order, and spoken evil of its rites and mysteries, may be led to acknowledge their error, and confess the good it may do, and has done. But remember your mission as Christians exceeds all this, in the same degree that the Christian brotherhood is higher and more extensive than the Masonic brotherhood. And now consider the mission which the Christian religion lays upon us. Is it not the same as St. John's? 'Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God.' We see daily around us brethren who are bound to us by the same initiatory rite of baptism, admitted by that most solemn of all mysteries into this our brotherhood; and we are bound by vows—the Christian Order to which we belong lays upon us this clear and distinct injunction: 'Love the brotherhood.' If you are bound not only to live in unity and good will with the Masonic brotherhood, consider how much more are you bound so to do with that wider and higher brotherhood of Christians to which you belong. If you are bound by your vows to relieve the distress of any of your brethren who are in need, or the distress of their friends, wife or widow, children or orphans, of your own, or a foreign country, how much more are you so bound to do to those who belong with you to the higher brotherhood of Christ? Mind you, I do not for one moment intend that you should neglect aught that is laid upon you as a Mason; whatever duties or responsibilities a man takes upon himself he is bound to perform. These ought ye to, and not leave the other undone; and my object is, as I have already said, to show to you that whilst you feel bound to fulfil your engagements as Masons, you will not forget your obligations to do yet more as Christians. The coming for which we have to prepare the way is the coming of Jesus to judgment, when each one of us, and each one of those whom we see in the world around us, will either be allowed to join the holy brotherhood of the glorious angels and saints made perfect; or be compelled to join the awful and terrible brotherhood of Satan, and the other evil and debased angels. Mr. Wallis then proceeded to shew how this could be done, concluding thus: "I do not wish to detain you by many words this morning, but I must not omit to make a personal application of these words. I would earnestly ask of you: Do you think your heart is prepared for the coming of the Lord? All these things of the world will pass away, but the world to which we look will not pass away. On the coming of that great and terrible day of the Lord, it will matter nothing whether we have been Masons or not; but it will matter a great deal whether we have been Christians or not; Christians, I mean, not only by baptism, and that new birth in Christ, but Christians in our life, and in our services to Christ. We see in some members of the Order an earnest desire to obtain still higher degrees, they will work their way up, or they will purchase their degrees—this of some only—but I would beg that all my Christian brethren showed the like earnestness in working for their degrees in the Christian brotherhood; as the Apostle says, 'Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling.' And as the same Apostle saith to Timothy in language which sounds Masonic, 'They that have used the office of a deacon well, purchase to themselves a good degree,' so I would say, they that have used the office of a Christian well, purchase to themselves a good degree in God's Kingdom hereafter. Consider with yourselves of how much more consequence it is that you should be a good Christian than a good Mason, and henceforth, if it has not been yet the case, be seeking that better Kingdom. And now I have only to add, that I trust that God's blessing may rest upon the Society in this place; that, as you have thus publicly acknowledged your allegiance to Him, and as a body given to Him your public worship, He also, for Jesus Christ's sake, will accept your offer, and bestow upon the lodge the Grace of His Holy Spirit, guiding it in its counsels, directing it in its charities, and offices of good will and friendship; and also may, upon each individual member, bestow the benign influence of His grace, so that he may prepare his own heart for the coming of the Lord—so that the rough and rugged places being made plain, and the valleys of sin in his human heart being filled up with his goodness for Christ's sake, he may with joy see his Lord coming, in humble faith believing, that he will say to him: 'Well done, good and faithful servant.'

After the sermon there was an offertory in aid of the Building Fund of St. Peter's Church.

On return to the lodge the dispensation from the Earl of Carnarvon to the W.M. was read, by which the brethren had been permitted to attend Divine service in Masonic form. The W.M., Bro. Leigh, then appointed and invested the following officers:—Bros. A. E. Austen, S.W.; T. R. Smallman, J.W.; T. R. Smallman (elected), Treas.; A. Ziervogel, Sec.; H. Beadle, S.D.; S. J. Griffiths, J.D.; A. Metcalf, Steward; A. Engels (by proxy), Org.; H. Hinwood, I.G.; Jno. Urie (elected), Tyler.

W. Bro. P.M. Chalmers, assisted by giving the closing address to the Wardens and brethren.

In the evening a number of the brethren met in a private room of the Victoria Hotel, and spent several hours in very social intercourse.

GRAHAMSTOWN.—St. John's Lodge (No. 828).—This lodge assembled on the morning of the 25th June, to celebrate the festival of St. John, and after opening lodge proceeded (in company with Albany Lodge, No. 389) to St. George's Cathedral, where Divine service was conducted by Bro. Dr. Ross, Chaplain of both lodges. On their return the ceremony of installing the W.M. elect Bro. D. Sampson, took place, conducted by Bro. A. S. Dudley, P.M., assisted by Bro. W. Waller, P.M., and Bro. Wm. Wedderburn, I.P.M., of Albany Lodge. After the installation the W.M. invested the following brethren as officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. Dr. E. Atherstone, I.P.M.; C. W. Black, S.W.; T. Holliday, J.W.; Rev. G. G. Ross, Chaplain; R. Mundy, P.M., Treas.; A. Matthews, Sec.; J. Stanton, S.D.; J. W. Bayes, J.D.; Geo. Locke and T. White, Stewards; A. Evans, I.G.; A. Will, Tyler.

GRAHAMSTOWN.—Albany Lodge (No. 389).—The members of the old lodge assembled in their temple on Tuesday, 25th June, to commemorate the festival of St. John. After the lodge had been opened the brethren marched to St. George's Cathedral to attend Divine service, being joined there by the officers and brethren of St. John's Lodge, No. 828. The Chaplain of both lodges, Bro. the Rev. G. G. Ross, delivered an eloquent sermon from the text 1 Peter 11, 17 v. On their return to the lodge the brethren separated until 4 p.m., when they again met for the installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. W. A. Smith. (who has been many times both S.W. and J.W., and also Treasurer). The duties of Installing Master were most effectively performed by Bro. O. Lester, the retiring P.M., ably assisted by Bro. R. Currin, P.M., Wm. Wedderburn, P.M., and Bro. A. S. Dudley, P.M. No. 828. After the newly-installed W.M. had been proclaimed, he invested his officers as follows:—Bros. Wm. Wedderburn, I.P.M.; Rev. G. G. Ross, M.A., D.C.L., S.W. and Chaplain; G. C. Goodwin, J.W.; O. Lester, P.M., Treas.; J. Vialls, Sec.; W. T. Sampson, S.D.; F. Cook, J.D.; G. Reynolds and F. E. Orren, Stewards; H. Richmond, I.G.; G. Shaw, Tyler. Before the lodge was closed a handsome P.M.'s jewel was presented to Bro. W. Wedderburn on his retirement from office as W.M. of Albany Lodge. This is the last occasion on which No. 389 will met on St. John's-day, having recently altered their bye-laws, fixing their future annual festival on the 20th September (being the anniversary of the first meeting of the lodge in Grahamstown, after the receipt of the warrant, dated 3rd January, 1828).

ROYAL ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.

A long day's work was set out for the members of the Royal Archæological Institute on Monday. The first object of attraction was Credenhill Church and camp. The church dates from about the end of the 12th century, consisting of a nave and small chancel. A bit of stained glass in one of the chancel windows was pronounced by Mr. Beresford Hope (who was of the party) to be a remarkably excellent specimen of glass of the middle period. It bore the effigies of St. Thomas of Canterbury and St. Thomas of Hereford. The chancel (recently opened) is entered by three arches. The central arch is plain, but the two sides arches have a cinque-foil heading. The sill of a window on the north side of the chancel appears to have been made out of a stone of flint lid cut in two. Leaving the church the party proceeded to Credenhill, a Roman encampment approached by a narrow, deeply-cut Roman road. The position must have been a strong one; the cuttings are deep and numerous, and the top is defended by an unusually high earthwork. The area of the camp is considerable. It is now covered with wood. From Credenhill the route of the travellers was over or in sight of historical ground, in view of Kenchester, said to be the Ariconium of the Romans, and four or five miles distant from Hereford. It is a vast station, well termed Magna Castra, covering upwards of 50 acres, with two openings to the west and two to the north. A few traces of the walls, which appear to have surrounded an irregular hexagonal area of a temple at the east of a niche of Roman brick and mortar, called "The Chair," were until lately visible. Vaults, tessellated pavements, stone altars, coins, &c., have been discovered at various periods, but the whole site is now covered with green meadows and waving corn-fields. It has, however, been surveyed, and its limits correctly ascertained. At Byford Church, the next stopping place, the chief object of interest was the Early English chancel and an Early English arcade leading into the south transept. A manor house near is of the time of Henry VIII. Monington Church was next visited, a unique specimen of a church of Charles II., chancel screen and seating complete. At the entrance, by the north door, a broken slab lying on the turf is supposed to cover the remains of the great chief, Owen Glendwr. The seats in the church—high-backed long forms—are dark with age, and there are pulpit and reading desk to match. Mr. Beresford Hope said the church was restored in 1680, and pointed out its peculiarities, especially the chancel screen. There were many other examples of chancel screens before the Restoration, but after the Restoration they were not so common. The chancel screen is, perhaps unique of its kind. It is of wood, and over the centre are the Royal arms carved and painted. At Moccas Court, the seat of Sir George Cornwall, the party were received by the baronet and Lady Cornwall, and hospitably entertained. The house is beautifully situated on the banks of the Wye, and the terraces command most lovely scenery. A remarkable stone sundial was shown in the garden. It is supposed to be of the date of 1630. There are carved inscriptions in English and Latin on its numerous faces. It bears the imprint "Phillips Jones, fecit." Among the English lines are the following:—

"Amende to-day and slack not,
Dette cometh and warneth not,
Tyme passeth and specketh not."

The signs of the zodiac are also displayed on the dial. Moccas Church, which adjoins the park, was an object of much interest. This is a good specimen of a Norman church, with nave, chancel, and apse. It bears, as Mr. Beresford Hope remarked, a family likeness to Kilpeck Church (visited on Friday), which bore evidence of a later style of Norman architecture than the stern, grave style of this church. Each was great as a specimen of its own peculiar type, corresponding in general plan and differing in detail. Mr. Hartshorne, secretary to the Institute, read some remarks which he had prepared on a remarkable effigy—a Knight Templar in the chancel of this church. Having first quoted an extract from the "Speculum Regale," a Latin manuscript of the 14th century, which gives a description of the proper costume of a knight of the early period of that century, he pointed out that the garment worn by the knight here was neither a surcoat nor eyelas, and that it was probably an unique instance of such a military vestment as appeared in this effigy. There could be no doubt that a vestment of this special and particular kind was actually used by this member of the De Frene family. In addition to this it was valuable in another way, as showing the extraordinary accuracy of the mediæval sculptors as representing their patrons in their habits as they lived. Referring to the scale armour worn by the figure, he said that with the exception of an effigy of this period at St. Peter's Church, at Sandwich, there was, as far as he was aware, no other sculptured example of scale armour in this kingdom. Bedwardine Church, another Norman edifice, with out-bending walls, and containing a remarkably large font of conglomerate—sufficiently large for immersion—supported on five rude shafts, was the last place visited. This church, Mr. Beresford Hope remarked, had passed through several gradations. The leaning wall pointed to 14th century work, and the chancel was not quite on a line with the nave. There had been a rood loft, and Mr. Hope pointed out where the wooden staircase leading to it had been. An effigy of the 16th century was also pointed out.

FRESH ROMAN CATHOLIC INTOLERANCE.

We have taken the following from the Daily Telegraph of Thursday:—

On Wednesday, at Macclesfield, Canon Walter, Roman Catholic priest, refused to inter the body of an excise officer, named Delany, on the ground that the rules of the Church forbade him reading the service over any member of a secret society. The deceased, who was a Roman Catholic, was also a Freemason. The Rev. Mr. Hurst, of Hudsfield, interred the body, which was laid in the Church of England portion of the cemetery. The funeral was attended by the deceased's relatives and other Roman Catholics.

THE ROSE CROIX DEGREE IN NEW ZEALAND.

A chapter of this degree, called the Zola Chapter, No. 4, under the Supreme Council of 33°, Valley of New Zealand, was opened in Auckland at the Masonic Hotel on Thursday, the 28th June, by Bro. M. Niccol, 33°, as M.W.S., when the following brethren were installed as the first officers: Comps. H. G. Wade, H.P.; W. P. Rees, S.W.; W. Sloane, J.W.; A. Brock, Treas.; J. Herbert Burns, Sec.; Bros. Graham, Chancellor, and Larrit, I.G. The whole of the ceremonies being impressively rendered by Bro. Niccol, and sixteen members being enrolled.

After the closing of the chapter the companions adjourned to refreshment, and spent an hour in a very agreeable manner.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The Duke of Connaught proceeds immediately from the Curragh, where he has been with his battalion for the summer, to Fermoy, at which station His Royal Highness will remain throughout the winter.

The Princess of Wales has, by her own desire, been elected a "Dame Chevaliere," of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, a philanthropic society presided over by Bro. his Grace the Duke of Manchester.

We observe it is stated that a suite of apartments costing £2421, exclusive of furniture, to be fitted on board the "Britannia," cadet ship at Dartmouth, has been prepared at Devonport yard. The apartments are intended for the sons of the Prince of Wales, tutors, and domestics, and when fitted will occupy nearly the whole of the vessels poop. The erection and furnishing are to be completed by September 3.

Her Majesty the Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice, and attended by the lords and ladies of the Court, will, according to the latest arrangements leave Osborne on Tuesday next, the 21st inst., for Balmoral.

Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales remains at Marlborough House during the convalescence of the young prince. We understand that the Prince and Princess of Wales will shortly leave for Scotland.

The Whitehall Review lately informed its readers that the eldest son of the Prince of Wales is destined for the Army. It now understands that the Prince favours the idea of his son adopting the example set by his soldier-uncle, the Duke of Connaught, and entering the service at the bottom of the ladder. It is accordingly expected that the young Prince, on completing his education, will be appointed for duty to a regiment, continuing in a subordinate position until he has obtained a full insight into the working of the regimental system.

THE HEALTH OF PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR. Although the young Prince may be considered convalescent, he is still very weak, and has not yet made sufficient progress to enable his medical attendants to decide when he can be removed.—Medical Examiner.

Bro. the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro G.M., left town on Tuesday last for Highclere Castle.

Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, R.W. Deputy Grand Master, left London on Wednesday for Lathom House, Lancashire.

The state apartments of Windsor Castle will remain open to the public on the usual days during the absence of the Court in the north.

VISIT OF THE KING OF DENMARK TO LONDON.—The King of Denmark, attended by his suite, has arrived in London on a visit to the Princess of Wales. After a short rest at the Lord Warden Hotel, his Majesty left Dover at 8.45 a.m. yesterday by the up South Eastern express, Mr. John Shaw, manager and secretary, having charge of the arrangements for the journey to the metropolis. In anticipation of his Majesty's arrival the Princess of Wales, attended by General Sir F. Knollys and Miss Knollys, left Marlborough House shortly before eleven o'clock for the Charing-cross terminus of the South Eastern Railway, where her Royal Highness awaited the King's arrival. But short notice was given of the visit, but in the little time left at the disposal arrangements were made for the King's reception by Mr. Grimstead. Sir Edward Watkin, M.P., chairman of the company, was in attendance at the station. The train conveying the illustrious visitor reached Charing-cross at eleven o'clock, and the Princess of Wales and suite walked along the arrival platform to just opposite the Custom House room, where she met the King, who had mingled among the throng of travellers issuing from the carriages of the express train. Her Royal Highness and her father drove to Marlborough House.

It is stated that a marriage is arranged between Bro. Lord Ramsey and the Lady Hilda Bennett, youngest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Tankerville.

SUPREME COUNCIL FOR NEW ZEALAND.—Since the establishment of the above council, five Rose Croix Chapters have been constituted under its auspices in New Zealand, also two consistories of the 30° and a petition to establish another is under consideration. Now that the opposition at first encountered from the Supreme Council of Scotland has subsided, a prosperous career is predicted.

FREEMASONS' TAVERN COMPANY.—We extract the following from the City Press:—The court of the directors of this company (which was unanimously adopted at the 13th annual general meeting) stated that the expectations of the directors, as expressed at the last general meeting, had been fully realized. The management of Mr. Dawkins had resulted not only in a large extension of the business of the tavern, but also in giving the utmost satisfaction to its numerous patrons. There stood to the credit of the company an absolute profit of £640, or a net increase of profit over the previous year's working of £1000. The balance was transferred to the profit and loss account to diminish the amount of the accumulated losses of former years. The directors reported the death of their zealous and highly-esteemed colleague, Mr. J. C. Daniel, who had been connected with the company from its inauguration. The vacancy had been supplied by the election of Mr. C. E. Amos. Mr. Lawley and Mr. Dumas the retiring directors, were re-elected, and Mr. H. Chatteris and Mr. B. Baker were re-elected auditors.

THE MINISTERIAL BANQUET.—Her Majesty's Ministers have informed the Lord Mayor that there is likely to be much difficulty in arranging a time at which many of them could attend a Ministerial banquet at the Mansion House at this season of the year, with the 9th of November approaching. They add that they are very sensible of his lordship's hospitality, and they much regret that circumstances prevented their sharing it before the end of the Session.

The directors of the North London Railway Company recommend a dividend for the past half year at the rate of 6½ per cent. per annum, as against 6 per cent. in the corresponding period last year, payable on the 25th inst.

A capital portrait of the late Mr. Ward Hunt, is temporarily hung in the tea-room of the House of Commons, before going into the hands of the engraver. It is painted by Captain Mercier, to whom Mr. Hunt gave a sitting at the Admiralty a short time previous to his death.—Mayfair.

The death of Mr. William Longman took place on Monday last, and has created a widespread feeling of regret among many attached friends. Mr. Longman was the second son of the head of the world-famous Paternoster-row firm, and combined with a wonderfully energetic character for business much refined taste and considerable literary ability, which he occasionally exercised in the production of historical and other popular brochures. Mr. Longman died at Ashlyers, Hertfordshire, where he resided for several years, and acted as an influential local magistrate. Mr. Longman leaves three sons and four daughters.

Lord Carnarvon has offered the Colonial Secretaryship, vacant by the death of Mr. Rushworth, to Major W. Owen Lanyon, C.M.G., Administrator of Giqualand West, who has discharged with great ability the laborious and difficult duties of his office, which will cease to exist on the annexation of that province to the Cape.

Prizes of the value of over £800, exclusive of a large number of medals, are offered in connection with the National Eisteddfod of Wales, which is to be held this month at Carnarvon. The general arrangements appear to be on a scale worthy of the occasion.

The statue to be erected in Bombay in commemoration of the Prince of Wales's visit to the Presidency is now nearly completed. The statue, which is equestrian, represents his Royal Highness in his Uniform of Field-Marshal, seated on his favourite Arab, Aleph, raising his Marshal's hat with his right and holding the bridle with his left hand. The entire cost of the undertaking has been defrayed by the Parsees of the Bombay Presidency, and the monument, as well as the pedestal, will be erected in the city at their cost. The total weight is twelve tons, and the model, designed by Herr Bachm, has received the approbation of the Queen.

The Church of England Pulpit and the Ecclesiastical Review of Saturday last contains a full and verbatim report of a sermon on Formalism and Infidelity, and the only remedy, the Great Sacrifice, delivered by Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, Past Grand Chaplain, M.A., of Oriel College, Oxford, in St. Paul's Cathedral on Sunday, the 29th ult.

OBELISKS.—Bro. Erasmus Wilson, F.R.S., at whose expense Cleopatra's Needle is being conveyed to this country, is preparing a popular work on the subject of obelisks, which will serve as an introduction and explanation of the coming monolith.

The next regular meeting of the Frederick Lodge of Unity, No. 452, will be held at the Greyhound Hotel, Croydon, on Tuesday next at 4 o'clock.

ERRATUM.—In the paragraph relating to the gold medal of the Bard of Avon Lodge, which appeared in our last—"Twenty-five years ago" should have been printed "Thirty-five years ago."

Constitutions of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the charges, regulations, E.A. Song, &c. A copy should be in the possession of every brother. It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. Address Publisher, 198, Fleet-street, London.—ADVT.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Cumberland and Westmoreland will be held under the banner of the Skiddaw Lodge, No. 1002, on the 28th proximo.

A new lodge of Mark Masters, named the Fort Lodge, No. 106, was consecrated at New Quay, Cornwall, on Thursday last. It was arranged that an oration on Mark Masonry would be delivered by Bro. W. J. Hughan, Past Grand Mark Warden of England.

Bro. J. B. Monckton, P.G.D., in forwarding a cheque to the Turkish Compassionate Fund of the Daily Telegraph, writes:—"It is impossible to read unmoved your column headed 'Turkish Compassionate Fund.' Kindly receive five guineas to its credit from me as an average (or thereabouts) middle-class Englishman, enjoying the delights of a fine weather holiday, and sincerely hoping that others in like case may do the same."

Bro. J. Edward Curteis, P.M. 189, Prov. S. G.W. Devon., Arch Treasurer of the Order of the Temple &c., has been elected Clerk to the East Stonehouse Local Board of Health.

At the Council held on Monday by the Queen at Osborne, it was ordered that Parliament be prorogued until Tuesday, October 30th next.

Bro. Joseph Cox, proprietor of the Hackney Express, has had a purse of £320 presented to him, subscribed by the inhabitants of the district, to indemnify him for law costs in an action for libel, which arose through some comments in his journal on "Jerry Builders."

THE OBELISK AT ALEXANDRIA.—The Foreign Office has suggested to the Admiralty that, if thought advisable by that department, it would be as well that one of the ships of war on the station should be directed to tow to England the cylinder in which the obelisk has to make the passage.

WESTMINSTER CLOCK.—It is announced that the great clock at the Houses of Parliament will be stopped for about three weeks from the 21st inst.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Fminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 2lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as samples, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. SATURDAY, AUGUST 18, 1877.

THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

We are very glad to note and to record that the governing authorities of the Boys' School have determined, at a special court on the 20th ult., to recommend the increase of the school by thirty-two boys, at a cost of £3000. This is a proposition so reasonable, and, as we hold, so needful, that we do not think any controversy can arise about it. Had the enlarged scheme for 120 boys been persevered in, and, above all, the very objectionable plan of concentrating a preparatory and higher school in the same building, the friends of education would have had a good deal to say in opposition to a scheme which antagonizes every known principle of scholastic arrangements. In our opinion the present limited augmentation is absolutely demanded by the numerous claims now on the school, and is a step completely in the right direction. It probably will suffice for about two years, when humanly speaking, in all probability, we shall have to make up our minds to an enlargement to 300 on a permanent basis. Be this as it may, we feel bound to express our hope and expectation that this reasonable proposal of the executive will be unanimously supported by the subscribers, as both imperatively demanded by the wants of our Order, and the best interests of the school itself. In all probability the alterations can be made so as to allow of subsequent needful additions, in order to bring up the numbers to 300. The question of a preparatory school may safely be left to the progress of time and the yearly increasing demands for admission. It is only postponed "pro tem," not adjourned "sine die;" in fact, at present, we venture to think, as we said before, that it is hardly opportune or required, and that many insurmountable objections exist to a scheme hardly sufficiently digested to encounter hostile criticism, or to supply any proved requirement. It is to us, as we said before, a mere question of time, and one involved almost necessarily eventually in the growing necessities of the Order and the School.

THE REPORT ON CHRIST'S HOSPITAL.

The report published on Saturday happily exculpates entirely the authorities of this great School, as we felt sure it would from the first, from any blame or responsibility in respect of the death of the unfortunate boy Gibbs. Many of us, who are aware of the eminent services of the Treasurer, Bro. J. Derby Allcroft, of the zealous efforts of the present Head Master, Bro. Lee, as well as the high character of the Warden, Bro. Major Brackenbury, were perfectly convinced from the first outbreak of a sensational panic, that to no more able or painstaking rulers could the administration of any school be possibly committed, and we most sincerely rejoice to know, to-day, that their arduous labours are fully appreciated, and their high character satisfactorily upheld by the recent commission of enquiry. Our worthy and able Bro. Dr. Brette, to whom a somewhat slighting allusion was made in an article in The Times, by one evidently ignorant of the facts of the case, on which he thought fit to dogmatize, has since, we are informed, received, at the private speech day, a remarkable ovation from the boys themselves—the best reply to such remarks, and most justly merited by himself. We trust now that all those excited writers, many of them masters themselves, who wrote inveighing against the old school, will see the error of their ways, and learn to be more tolerant, and more truthful, and more just, to those upon whose shoulders a great responsibility rests. With respect to suggested reforms and changes, we do not feel ourselves to be competent to comment upon them. But we feel bound to say this, in the interest of one of the greatest of our educational institutions, that all deviations from the old established system should be carefully weighed, and cautiously elaborated. The governing system of Christ's Hospital may appear to be somewhat too complex; the distribution of responsibility may be too widely diffused in some instances, too much concentrated in others; but a great deal may be advanced on the other hand, against that excess of independent action on the part of co-equal authorities, so fashionable just now, and in which, (we must confess this much), we do not believe at all. For as we do not accept the "absolute wisdom" of our ancestors, neither do we trust in the "unlimited infallibility" of our contemporaries. Much that we are doing now, especially scholastically, is only experimental at the best, and tentative, and it is just possible that our descendants may think us as much behind the age, as we often profess loudly to believe our ancestors to have been. The one point, however, to be considered, is the welfare of Christ's Hospital in its actual and active relation to the great and useful end of education of those who nestle within its venerable walls, and we feel certain ourselves that its present and future condition of efficiency and importance to all concerned, are perfectly safe in the hands of those who control its destinies, and skilfully conduct its administration.

THE ATROCITIES OF WAR.

We shall all have been deeply pained with the accounts of atrocities which mark the present untoward warfare in the East, and deplore them deeply, in the ever sacred interests of humanity and civilization. The greatest evil of war, qua war, is the fact of the evil passions which it appears to release, like the winds of Æolus from all restraint the hateful brutality of poor human nature, to which it serves to give full play. All war is, no doubt, a record of dismal cruelties and mournful horrors, lightened up only by deeds of chivalrous daring and heroic courage, and when we have stripped from the history of internecine struggles, their glory and their blazon, we have for the most part very little left behind indeed, except that stern and terrible tale which war ever tells to us all. For what does war disclose? we ask to-day (and we are not "peace at any price" men under any circumstances), but rapine, cruelty, wrong, and outrage? What do the annals of war attest but acts and results at which humanity shudders, and memory grows pale? The greatest of soldiers, the Duke of Wellington, always deprecated, as we know, the mournful catastrophe of war, and no one was a more sincere friend to peace. He once said in the House of Lords in most impressive words, that no one who had participated in the scenes and consequences of war would desire to inflict them on any country in the world. We therefore never like to hear persons glibly talking, as we often do, to-day, (the wind-bag or the impostor of the hour), of "war as a necessity," of "war as advisable," of war as a "tertium quid," for we are well assured that in war all the glittering and rejoicing side of the pageantry of armies is soon lost in fell horrors and in dark deeds. The shouts of an applauding multitude, the echo of military bands, the strains of the drums and fifes, and the gallant march of thousands of brave men, are too soon exchanged for the groans and agonies of the dying, piles of silent and shattered corpses, the destruction of the labours of the industrious, the outrages of license, the unmerited sufferings of the weak, the helpless, and the innocent. War means always, remember, dear Bro. Bunkum, a ruthless annihilation of all we hold most near and dear in family and personal life, the ruin of peaceful progress, the destruction of commerce and agriculture, in fact the very counterpart to all that contributes to the happiness of families, the well being of society, and the progress and prosperity of mankind. When then a war has broken out, as in the present case, when religious passions and national antipathies are roused to the uttermost on both sides, we must expect, we fear, to hear of war's most disastrous results. Indeed, it is not at all impossible but that we may receive reports of a more widespread prevalence of all these direful animosities which can apparently be only quenched in mutual extermination.

nation. In the detailed account of atrocities which now daily distress us all, there seem to us, however, to be a marked distinction and a striking difference of kind and character. Without at all ignoring or palliating in any degree these atrocious acts of violence and bloodshed, which seem to be evolved from the sterner contingencies of angry combats, of personal encounters, of the deadly melée (sad,—most sad, as they are in themselves) what can possibly be said in respect of the loathsome and cold blooded cruelties of the massacre at Kavarna? Who can bear to talk of the horrors of Kesanlik? Who can extenuate the absolute horrors of wholesale murder and mutilation of wounded, dead, and dying Russian soldiers? The case of Kavarna is simply awful, too awful almost for words, and certainly far too awful for complacent criticism. Kavarna was a flourishing town near Varna, of 3,000 inhabitants, mostly Greeks and Christians, under the Turkish Government, and contained a peaceable and industrious population, and several schools for the young. It is invaded entirely and suddenly by Circassians in the pay of the Turkish Government, who demand from the Christians a ransom of several thousand piastres. The Turkish Governor recommends the Christians to pay this ransom, (he was probably "squared," as we say), and blames them for refusing. After a hasty refusal, and a hopeless defence, the Circassians began to massacre the men and outrage the women. For twelve long hours this horrible state of things endured, until 750 persons are massacred and outraged. The mind revolts at such possible and actual atrocities, so insulting to humanity, for which no punishment is meted out by the government of the country in which they took place. As regards Kesanlik, The Times correspondent declares that the awful horrors cannot even be narrated. So, too, in respect of the slaughter, and mutilation of wounded, dying, and dead Russian soldiers. The eye-witnesses of the deeds state that the sight was too horrible to describe, and we will not pain our readers with their terrible descriptions of this degraded barbarity, but simply record the fact for the information and abhorrence of our high-minded and kindly Craft. We can but lift up our feeble voice again to-day against a savage ferocity, and blood-stained deeds which degrade humanity and startle civilization, and which seem to convince us how much in 1877 this world has got to learn of the genuine principles of true religion and those dictates of kindness and consideration for our brother man, without which the pomp of empires is a lackered sham, and civilization itself a painted dream. Since we penned the above we have seen the Times of Wednesday, and think it well to give the reporter's own words: "All prisoners had been murdered and mutilated. The bodies of men, women, and children were found roasted alive in barns, whence they were not suffered to escape, and a baby was found nailed through its little tender body against a wooden gate. You can bear no more to read, or I to write, of such fiendish cruelty." Further comment is superfluous, the more so as we only write in the interests of Humanity.

THE TRUE TEACHING OF TOLERATION.

Prince Bismarck, it appears, has been "interviewed" by some Wurtemberg Lutheran Ministers at Kissingen, and the Times of the 9th inst., quotes the Leipzig Dauheim as giving an account "in extenso" of this episode in the "Kur" at that pleasant town upon the Saal, of a great statesman. We cannot, as Freemasons, avoiding as we do carefully all "debatable ground" and all controversial points, which we happily and utterly ignore, deal with many of the topics dwelt upon in that remarkable meeting. But as the Prince, in his usual terse and effective vocabulary, lays down one cardinal principle on which the present struggle and what the Germans term the "Cultur Kampf" actually turn, we may fairly comment upon a seasonable axiom of the German Imperial Chancellor, the more so as it entirely accords with the unchanging tenets of our tolerant and Cosmopolitan Order. Prince Bismarck most truly says that "various beliefs and constitutions have always existed and will continue to exist in the church"—he is speaking, as we understand, of the Christian Church in general—"and no one has a right to appropriate to himself the exclusive privilege of being in the right." Yes, this is the great truth, enshrined in a few telling words, which Freemasonry would seek to proclaim, namely, that we have no right to say, any of us, "this is the truth" and therefore proceed to excommunicate every one else who differs from us. That all who hold truth firmly to be one and the same in successive ages, may openly avow it and manfully stand by it at all hazards, we shall all probably hold to be a noble manifestation of personal or general faith. And we shall equally be prepared to laud and to admire all who abide by what they honestly conceive to be the truth, at whatever consequence to themselves. But while such a position is both most allowable and praiseworthy in all, be they who they may, who seek to aver and uphold what appears to them the truth in its highest aspects, yet common sense and Freemasonry would equally deny the right of any, to persecute or punish those who venture to differ from their dogmata, or deny their conclusions. Limitations to this general rule, however, will necessarily occur where the question arises out of lawful terms of communion propounded by this or that religious body, as it is quite clear that there can be no intolerance in any religious denomination prescribing the conditions of belief for those who claim to belong to them, as ministers or people. It is the universal prevalence, unfortunately, of an intolerant view of things in general and particular, against which Prince Bismarck's seasonable protest is delivered. The old theory of the Roman Catholic Inquisition, (on which all their sanguinary proceedings were based), was that, in the words of a Divine Parable they had a right to "compel" all men to come into the one true and saving fold, and that if they would not do so, they had authority to burn them, "con amore." It is this most mistaken view of moral duty, which in a less degree still affects in its measure many other religious bodies even at the present hour. The soothing and persuasive suggestion of Dominic still forms the standpoint of burning allocutions, and denominational fanaticism, angry resolutions, and childish menaces, issued often by those who for many reasons are utterly incompetent to express any opinion in the matter at all. As extremes always meet in this world, even so-called Protestant bodies have joined with Roman Catholic authorities, especially in the case of Freemasonry, in proclaiming to the world their anger and their impotence at the same time, only substituting for the "peine forte et dure," and the "fiery mercies" of the Inquisition bitter words and damnatory decrees. We have then, it appears to us, all of us, be we who we may, to learn to day, this simple but noble truth, that "the world is wide enough for us all," and that while it is our duty to adhere firmly to the denomination to which we belong, the creeds we love within the church of which we are members,—not half-hearted professors, but zealous and energetic believers, we have no warrant, except perhaps as "amici curiæ," so to say, to step outside our own line of demarcation, and antagonize and antagonize any other person or persons whatever. As Freemasons we shall gladly note and re-echo the language of an illustrious statesman, that toleration ought always to be "the badge of all our tribes," that as members of a cosmopolitan Order we should learn to be large-hearted and forbearing, and oppose, under all circumstances the debasing practice of persecution "for conscience sake." In all the struggles of the day, in the diversities of individual belief which prevail amongst us, amid the antagonistic forces of zealous religionists, (all honour to those who hold their own views in honesty and single-heartedness), we should always remember and say, "Sirs, we are brethren all," children of the Great Creator, and whatever our personal or general opinions may be, they give us no sanction whatever for supposing that we are alone in possession of the truth, (objectively), and most of all, do they ever lend us any special privilege of cursing or calumniating those from whom we differ in the abstract and in the concrete. True toleration is perhaps the hardest of all lessons to be learned by the intolerant animus of humanity, but we thank Prince Bismarck once more for his seasonable and sensible words, and for his admirable assertion of the ever-needed truth of a real and healing toleration.

TRUE HEROISM.

It is not without emotion that we shall all read the following passage in the letter of the correspondent of the Times from Bucharest, August 14th. It is a glorious contrast to horrible atrocities, on the part of the Turkish soldiery, in which some, like an excellent correspondent of ours elsewhere, do not like to believe:—"Turn the page, and hear how Dr. Carrick, an English correspondent, forsook his note-book to tend the wounded under fire; and how Mr. Hale, the artist of the Illustrated London News, saved his last drop of brandy, though sorely in need of it, saying, in public school phrase, 'Some poor devil might want it'; then later volunteered to fetch water from a distant well, because the road to it was so exposed to fire that the Russian soldiers there dared not go; but the English lad, for he looks little more, went and brought the water to the wounded." Whether as connected with the English Press, or as loyal citizens of our great Monarchy, we may well feel proud of our countrymen.

A MASONIC QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A and B are candidates to be raised, C and D are candidates to be passed.

To save time the W.M. has A and B raised together, then C and D passed together. Is this according to the laws of the Craft, or ought they not to be respectively raised and passed separately?

If you could kindly give me an answer in the next number of the Freemason I should be obliged.

Faithfully yours.

X. Y. B.

ATROCITIES.

A. M. Le Rédacteur Du Times.

Monsieur,—L'Ambassade de Russie a l'honneur de transmettre ci-joint à la Rédaction du Times la copie d'une pièce reçue du Quartier-Général Russe concernant les faits qui se sont produits au passage du défilé de Schipka. Ambassade Impériale de Russie, Chesham-house, 1c 9 Août.

"Kesanlik, 9-21 Juillet, 1877.

"Les 5-17 et 6-18 Juillet, dans les combats meurtriers qui ont précédé l'évacuation des ouvrages retranchés élevés par les Turcs, certaines positions ont été successivement occupées et abandonnées par les combattants des deux armées sans que de part et d'autre on ait eu le temps d'enlever morts et blessés. La lutte terminée, les blessés

Turcs, abandonnés en grand nombre, ont été recueillis, soignés sur le plateau même par les chirurgiens de l'armée adverse; mais des blessés Russes, aucun de ceux qui ont eu le malheur de tomber en un endroit momentanément occupé par les troupes Turques n'est resté vivant. De vingt à trente malheureux ont été décapités, plusieurs amputés des pieds, des mains, des oreilles, du nez, des parties sexuelles; la poitrine tailladée à coups de yatagan, et leurs têtes portées dans le camp Turc, où les ont trouvées les soldats Russes après l'occupation des ouvrages. Nous avons vu de nos yeux ces têtes coupées, ces corps mutilés, quelques-uns témoignant par la contraction des muscles, la torsion des membres, les horribles tortures d'une mutilation pratiquée à vif. Nous avons vu un corps décapité et mutilé encore étendu sur le brancard d'ambulance où il avait été placé blessé, par les siens, et non loin de là, les cadavres également décapités des deux brancardiers portant au bras gauche le brassard de la croix rouge.

"Nous en tenant strictement à ce que nous avons vu, et laissant à ceux qui ont été témoins du combat lui-même le soin de relever la violation des droits de la guerre qu'auraient commises les Turcs, en arborant deux drapeaux parlementaires pour rouvrir presque aussitôt le feu sur les troupes Russes au repos, nous soumettons au jugement du monde civilisé le contraste que présentaient le lendemain du combat, à quelques centaines de mètres de distance, d'un côté, plus de cinquante blessés Musulmans soignés selon les préceptes de l'humanité par les médecins de l'Armée Russe, de l'autre, le monceau de têtes coupées, hideux trophée des barbaries de la garnison régalière Ottomane.

"C. B. BRACKENBURY, Lieutenant-Colonel, Correspondant Militaire du Times.

ATROCITIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Allow me to venture, as a young Mason, to express some surprise that your paper should, in its last number, have referred to the atrocities committed by the Turks, and omitted all mention of the still more horrible deeds perpetrated by the Russians, in the present war. The latter have been recounted in the Times and Daily Telegraph, and only one case, that of the Jewish maiden, who was so barbarously treated by nearly twenty Russian soldiers at Yeni Zaghra, would suffice to account for, if not justify, any acts of retaliation on the Turkish side.

There is nothing Englishmen hate more than hypocrisy, and for a Government like that of Russia, steeped in horrors from Poland to Circassia, to pretend to have undertaken the present war from motives of charity is the greatest of hypocrisies.

It is the old story of the kettle and the pot.

Fraternally yours,

R. H. BLADES.

[We publish this letter, though not wishing to encourage a controversy on a political subject. The Turkish atrocities are only too true, and a fearful scandal to humanity.—Ed.]

CHURCHWARDENS' RECEIPTS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I send you an interesting item from the Churchwardens' Register of the parish of Dursley, Gloucestershire, taken from a work entitled "Chapters of Parochial History of Dursley and its Neighbourhood." The Register begins in 1566 and ends in 1758. In the accounts for the year 1707, of money expended in the repairs of the church, occurs the following item: "£2 6s. 0d. to the Free Mason for 23 day's work, about carving and setting up the new bartlemas on the Church."

Yours fraternally,

H. S. ALPASS, P.G. Sec. W.D. Lanc.

[We thank our correspondent, no doubt many similar items may be found by the curious and industrious.—Ed.]

THE INSTALLATION ENGRAVING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Let me assure the brother who signs himself "Disappointed" that the engraver has been constantly at work upon the plate since the issue of the last proof, early in May last.

No one possibly can have more interest in bringing the work to a conclusion than myself, every month's delay adding to the great expense on my part, but materially adding to the value of the plate as a work of art on the subscriber's part.

The last and final proof is to be examined by me towards the end of this month, and if I find no further alterations or additions are required, the plate will be undoubtedly in the hands of Messrs. McQueen, the printers, by the first week in September, where everything has been ready for the last two months to at once proceed with the issue of the proofs.

I take this opportunity of assuring "Disappointed" and subscribers generally, that nothing that I could possibly devise has been left undone to hasten the execution of the work, but as the plate progressed, and portraits increased, so did the time required to finish far exceed all our calculations. A very few weeks more patience is all that will be required from my friends and the Craft generally.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, faithfully and fraternally yours,

EDWD. J. HARTY.

[We think the two following letters are so important in themselves, as having a general as well as a particular bearing, that we take them from the Masonic Record for Western India for July for the information and consideration of our many readers.—Ed.]

VERY UNMASONIC CONDUCT.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Through the medium of your valuable publication I shall take the opportunity of making a few remarks on the state of affairs as now existing in one of the lodges of this city, I mean Lodge No. 273, in the hope that some good may come thereby.

The first point that requires to be noticed is the deplorable want of unity, and even of brotherly feeling, that is too evident in the relations of—not the members—but of the Past Masters among themselves. Of course such a state of things will very easily tend to spread to the members, but, I am happy to say, there is nothing to complain of in this respect as regards the latter. The unmasonic feeling existing amongst some of the Masters has shown itself occasionally in the relations between certain of the Masters and the brethren. I mean to say that some of the Past Masters, those to whom these remarks apply, have so little of the feeling of brotherly love and regard that they do not think it necessary to exhibit such feeling in their dealings with certain of the members.

This bad feeling and disunion has, I am sorry to say, always been, more or less, the characteristic of the lodge under notice, but I sincerely hope that the time may come when such will not be the case. I hope those of the Past Masters who are to a great extent responsible for the state of things complained of will be induced to cultivate more fraternal feelings amongst themselves.

Another matter that requires to be pointed out is the disposition on the part of some of the Past Masters to fancy themselves absolute monarchs over the lodge. They seem to claim the right, at any rate they assume it, to dispose of every matter according to their own wishes, and irrespective of the wishes or feelings of the brethren. Of course there are some Past Masters in whom the brethren place implicit reliance, but that does not entitle any one of them to assume undue powers and privileges.

Not the least serious complaint I have to make against the lodge is the off-handed way in which the funds are handled. While not a rupee—beyond the stereotyped meagre donation, once a year, to some of the charitable institutions of this city—is devoted to charitable or Masonic purposes, hundreds are wasted in presentations of costly jewels, watches, chains, tea services, paintings, addresses and Lord knows what more, to some of the Masters. The wonder is that these should be accepted by worshipful brethren who affect to perform their duties in the lodge out of purely Masonic feeling. Surely as Masons they do not labour for any substantial or worldly remuneration. Being placed in the Master's chair ought to be an all-sufficient reward for any true Mason. Since of late it appears to have become an established custom for the Past Masters and other ex-officers to appropriate jewels to themselves. I was always under the impression that the bestowal of jewels and other gifts depended solely on the wishes of the brethren, and that in all such cases the matter was left entirely to the votes of the brethren assembled in open lodge. At the present moment there are some three or four officers who have not only ordered jewels for themselves out of the funds of the lodge, but have been so kind to themselves as to increase the value of those jewels over that of previous years, and what is more, have taken the precaution to secure the intrinsic value of the jewels by having them made up in this country of "sovereign" gold. So this means business! It is certainly not Free Masonry. The funds of the lodge some four years back amounted to something like Rs. 600, at the present moment there is something like a negative balance of Rs. 20, in fact, though on paper it is something different, and somewhat more couleur de rose. An exact statement of the receipts and expenditure since 1873 will prove the truth of what I say.

For fear of taking up too much space I shall reserve what I have yet to say for another occasion.

A MEMBER.

GRAND LODGE FOR ALL [INDIA.]

Dear Bro. Bease,—

In your magazine for June, I observe you have an article on a "Grand Lodge for all India," and am glad to observe that you discourage the idea.

In my opinion it would never answer. In the first place where would you have its headquarters? Calcutta would come forward and claim it, as the oldest of the District Grand Lodges, and Bombay would claim it for some other reason; and Madras, Burmah, and the Punjab would be left out in the cold, having no reason to offer why the headquarters should be in their district. The only way in which it could work would be to have it at Calcutta, as the headquarters of the Viceroy. Let the District Grand Lodges remain as at present, but subordinate to the Grand Lodge in Calcutta instead of in London; but no single province would, I feel sure, agree to this. The case of the other colonies cannot be taken into account, as their population is quite different: here we are a fluctuating body and one constantly changing, and the rulings of a body in India would never carry the weight and strict obedience with which all rulings from England are met. Where should we find a Bro. McIntyre to explain our laws? and where should we find a Bro. Hervey, so courteous and kind, ready at all times to reply to all letters, with a knowledge almost equal to that of Bro. McIntyre? No, believe me, it would never answer, and the sooner the brethren who are stirring this question drop it, the better. Besides, we look with pride to the constitution of our Grand lodge, with the Heir Apparent as our Grand Master, and his two brothers as Grand Wardens. And when we go home, we, who are Past Masters, take our seats in Freemasons' Hall, with a pride in what is going on, and visit the schools, and feel we are paying our mite towards these magnificent institutions; now all these would be cut off and left in the cold, with nothing in the shape of a Grand Lodge to take a pride in, except a Calcutta assemblage of Masons, no better or no worse than the present District Grand Lodge meetings there, which to judge from its proceedings is in a worse condition than any of the District Grand Lodges on the Continent of Hindoostan. Rulings from such a body, which would be final, would never be received without being questioned, and the result would be the falling off of Masonry, the withdrawal of many good and faithful brethren, and the general collapse of the whole of Masonry in India.

I know a good many Masons in India, but I could not point to a single one whose opinion would carry that weight that the opinion of a Grand Master should do, throughout India; our District Grand Masters are good men and true, but still are liable to error, and, if so, there is the appeal open to England. When the appeal comes up, only those who, like myself, have heard W. Bro. McIntyre, can understand how ably he lays the case before the Grand Lodge of England, how thoroughly he is up to and at home in our ancient laws and landmarks.

So let the brethren who are urging this question take the advice of Punch to those about to marry, and "Don't." It will never succeed, and, even if partially discussed, will soon be the cause of heart-burnings and disagreements of all kinds.

PAST MASTER.

Reviews.

"History of the Dunmow Flitch of Bacon," by WM. ANDREWS, F.R.H.S. Wm. Tegg and Co., Pancras-lane, Chapside.

The history of the Dunmow Flitch is deeply interesting to all married couples, and is especially important for those who, like some dear married friends of ours, who, if they are not, ought to be candidates for the savoury rashers. We have known them long and well, and a more accommodating husband and a more obedient wife, we doubt exist on English or foreign soil. He never finds fault with her, and she never contradicts him. If all hymeneal arrangements resulted thus, whether temporary or perpetual, there would be fewer lone bachelors, fewer sighing old maids in this queer world of ours. And as we mean to encourage them and all other conjugal couples to go in for the "flitch", we have reviewed to-day Mr. Andrews' little book, which gives an historical, antiquarian, lucid, and we will add, affecting account, of an ancient usage, of a very valuable premium for married consistency, and married courtesy. If any there be who wish to know all about the Dunmow Flitch, when it was first cut off the well fattened bacon hog, why it was instituted at all, and how it can be obtained now, let them carefully study Mr. Andrews' authoritative narrative, and the result will be greatly to their edification. Whether the existence of the Dunmow Flitch adds anything to the serenity and reality of matrimonial concord and hymeneal comfort we may be inclined to doubt, as there are some husbands we know whom nothing can improve, and some wives who are beyond all control. Still, marriage is a wonderful institution and deserves encouragement, and demands commendation.

"The Blue Coat Boy, or School Life in Christ's Hospital," By WILLIAM H. BLANCH, E. W. Allen, Ave Maria Lane.

The author of this little work who is, we believe, a brother of our Order, appears at a time of sensational alarm and childish panic. There are other records, amusing and authentic, of Christ's Hospital, but this last "little stranger" seems to commend itself to the attention of all who like to know something about a school concerning which so much has been unjustly and foolishly advanced. The bad tone of the letters which appeared with reference to the poor boy Gibbs, and "bullying," and the like, were absolutely creditable to those who penned them, on account of their hypocrisy and untruthfulness, their "suppressio veri," and their "suggestio falsi." Our readers may study Bro. Blanch's little work with advantage and profit to themselves, as they will find much that is new, amusing, important and pleasant in its pages. We hope that the general public, having recovered from their scare, which some silly writers, "Old Blues," by the way, and under masters elsewhere, laboured to encourage and confirm, will believe that that great institution, which is such a credit to the city and the country is administered, and always will be administered, alike for the welfare of the scholars, and the honour of education. In all earthly institutions ameliorations may be made as old time moves on, but we may all rest perfectly convinced that the present administration of the school is fully alive to their responsibility, for the improvement of the scholars and the credit of the school.

"L'Art; Revue Hebdomadaire Illustrée;" A. Baltiere, Editeur, Paris.

This most interesting and important publication, which is now in its third year of existence, deserves the patronage of all lovers of artistic excellence. The engravings are alike marked by excellent taste, and effective skill, and place before us the contemporary position of French engraving art, as in a most satisfactory and striking condition of excellence and power. For all artists, this French review of the pictorial and engraving art is very useful and important, and we sincerely commend it to the attention not only of our brother artists, but to all who, like ourselves, admire the skilful colouring of the painter, and the happy facsimiles of the engraver.

"The History of Coaches," by G. A. THURPP. Kirby & Edean, 190, Oxford-street.

We have perused this elaborate and well written book with much interest. It is most admirably got up, and illustrated; and reflects no little credit on author and publisher.

The History of Coaches, which is the history of locomotion, concerns us all alike, as it throws no little light both on the manners and customs of our ancestors, and points out to us in how great a measure the present generation excels them alike in the conveniences of living, and the many comforts which skilled ingenuity has devised, or the advance of civilization and luxury has procured for us all. Space does not permit us to go into a detailed examination of this striking work, but having read it ourselves, we can conscientiously recommend its perusal to all who desire to keep up with the literature of the hour.

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND, 1812-23. By Bro. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

A few curious notices or circulars of the Grand Lodge of Ireland have lately been sent me by a friend and brother and I have much pleasure in affording the readers of the Freemason an insight into their character.

1. The first is an order of the Grand Lodge respecting the lodges to appear on a printed list to be issued annually from A.D. 1813.

The list of lodges has been from time to time increased, and for several years there has been a really useful and accurate "Calendar and Directory" published by the Grand Lodge, and particulars afforded as to the officers of the Grand Lodge, Grand Chapter, and other degrees.

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND.

Dublin, 6th August, 1812.

Right Worshipful and Honorable ABRAHAM H. HUTCHINSON, D. G. M. on the Throne.

Ordered,

That a list be printed and published, once in each Year, of all the Lodges with the names of the Masters, Wardens, and places of Meeting thereof, deriving under this Right Worshipful Grand Lodge.

That to facilitate this desirable object, it is necessary that the lodges do make returns on or before the 5th of November next, in order that the list may be prepared and ready to forward by St. John's day in December.

That the Grand Lodge orders of December, 1809, and December, 1811, respecting lodges seven years in arrears be extended to said 5th November, after which day they will be strictly enforced.

No officer shall be received in this Grand Lodge, or his name inserted in said list, belonging to any lodge four years in arrears, or that does not make regular returns and register its members according to rule.

The names printed in said list shall be considered as the constituted members of the Grand Lodge of Ireland for the time being.

No report, memorial, application, or reference shall be received from any lodge not making its returns in time to be included in said list, except Military Lodges which may return from foreign service.

Worshipful Sir, and Brother,

I feel much pleasure in communicating the above resolutions of the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and entertain no doubt of their meeting your concurrence, and that of the members of your Worshipful Lodge.

You and they will fully appreciate the advantages of such a publication, and forward its completion, by making the necessary returns at the time required by the resolutions—viz, 5th November next, and by settling the account if any arrears are due.

The utility of publishing the list intended by the Grand Lodge must be obvious to every intelligent brother; it will disseminate a general and most desirable knowledge of the regular lodges, as well as prevent intercourse or communication with unauthorised and illegitimate meetings, or any who shall belong thereto.

I have the honour to be, Worshipful Sir and Brother,

With much respect, your very obedient servant,

By Order of the Grand Lodge,

WILLIAM F. GRAHAM, D.G.S.

2. The second is a Report of Committee on the state of Lodges in Ireland, which was duly confirmed and ordered to be sent (when printed) to all whom it should concern.

This report affords light upon a subject hitherto little known, I expect, even to our friends in Ireland, and certainly not familiar to me before, as I had no idea that even the Grand Lodge of Ireland followed the example of the "Ancients" of England in permitting junior lodges to assume senior numbers (if vacant). It is evident, however, that in a modified form such was allowed, and a perusal of the report will not only confirm this statement, but also prove that the Grand Lodge of Ireland desired that all the lodges should have warrants of a uniform character.

As there is nothing said about the return of the originals, we are left to imagine the treatment these old charters were to receive, for the sake of uniformity, for we can scarcely suppose that the original and duplicate charters were to be retained by the lodges.

By the list of lodges in the directory of A.D. 1877 we see that many availed themselves of the opportunity thus to secure the revival of old charters, with their original numbers, e.g.

No. 4, Dublin, warranted originally about 1730, was rewarranted and revived A.D. 1823, and so with other old dormant, if not extinct, warrants of lodges, including Nos. 3, 5, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 15, 16, 17, and others from early this century to a few years since, all of which originally would date from about 1728 to 1750.

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND.

5th of December, 1816.

Ordered.—That the following Report of Committee on the state of lodges on the establishment of this Grand Lodge be confirmed:

The state of lodges on 24th June, 1816, were as follows: 607 Warrants, the dues of which are paid up within a period of three years.

110 Warrants in arrears three years and not exceeding five years.

68 Warrants in arrears five years and upwards.

25 Military, that have not corresponded for many years.

210 Dormant and cancelled.

1020 Gross number.

In order to dispose of the 210 numbers now vacant as above, together with such others as may be in arrears of dues and cancelled by the rule of the Grand Lodge—It is ordered that on and after the 24th June, 1817, the numbers of cancelled and dormant warrants and all numbers then unoccupied on the Grand Lodge books, shall be granted to applicants, properly qualified and recommended for same in manner following, viz.—Every regularly warranted lodge on the Irish Establishment, not in arrears to the Grand Lodge for dues or fines, or under censure or suspension, the members of which shall apply to the Grand Secretary (post paid) for a senior vacant number, shall be arranged according to the seniority of their present numbers, and the oldest vacant number given to the senior applicants, and so on till all such applications shall have been acceded to, respect being always had to applications for particular numbers if vacant, provided that the particular number so claimed be not senior to that which the applicants would have been entitled to, if they had not put in their claims to any specific number.

An exception to this rule is to be allowed in favour of military applicants when the number similar to the number of the regiment is vacant.

Lodges not making their applications for exchange of warrants, and clearing off their arrears due to the Grand Lodge, on or before said 24th of June, 1817, shall be considered as having relinquished their claim to the opportunity of obtaining senior numbers, in the future numerical arrangement of the lodges of Ireland.

That to meet the expense of revival and exchange of warrants the sum of one guinea shall be forwarded with each application, and after same are defrayed, the surplus shall be appropriated in aid of the Funds of the Masonic Female Orphan School.

In order to prevent any confusion or disappointment in the revival of warrants, it is ordered that with each application the warrant now held be sent up (together with the names of the officers and a list of all the members) an acknowledgment for same to be returned.

In all cases of warrants exchanged for those of different numbers, the sum of one British shilling must be paid for the transfer of each member to the new; same to be sent up with the applications for such exchange.

In order to a perfect uniformity of warrants, the Grand Lodge recommend that that such regular lodges as do not wish to change their present numbers will take a duplicate of same off the improved plate, in such case the original date shall be preserved and inserted.

After the lodges now in existence shall have their applications acceded to, all new warrants granted by the Grand Lodge shall be ordered for the highest senior number then vacant on the list, so that the numerical order shall not be increased till all the vacant numbers are disposed of.

It appears that of the sixty-eight lodges in arrears five years and upwards, several have been in correspondence with the Grand Lodge and made payments, on account, within said period, it is therefore ordered that time be given to those lodges to clear up their arrears to 27th December, 1817, after which period the rule shall be strictly enforced.

It is ordered that when the proposed arrangement is completed, a correct list of all the lodges on the establishment of Ireland shall be printed, as they will then stand on the books of the Grand Lodge, with the names of the Masters and places where held, a copy of which shall be sent to each lodge.

It is to be observed that no part of the foregoing is to apply to brethren who may require a warrant to form a new lodge, the regulations for which are provided for in rule No. 6, Section the 4th of Revised Laws.

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND.

Dublin, 3rd of April, 1817.

Ordered.—That the foregoing be printed and sent to all lodges in Ireland.

By order of the Grand Lodge.

ROBERT HANDCOCK,

Grand Secretary.

WILLIAM FRANCIS GRAHAM,

D.G. Secretary.

35, Capel-street.

No regular renumbering of the lodges in Ireland, as in England, appears ever to have occurred. Though the lodges are numbered from 1 to 1014, there are not more than 365 on the list of lodges in Ireland, exclusive of the Grand Master's Lodge (without a number), at head of roll.

I fully sympathise with the brethren who have an affection for their numbers, as for the names, of their lodges, but the system of retaining them as in Ireland involves some awkward results in having so many blank numbers.

3. The following will explain themselves, and abundantly illustrate the loyalty and law-abiding character of Freemasons:—

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND.

4th December, 1823.

Whereas on 1st August last, it was deemed prudent to make an order to suspend the meeting of lodges, and whereas it is now necessary for the election of officers of the Masonic Order in Ireland, that said order of suspension be for the present rescinded.

Resolved.—That the said order of suspension is hereby rescinded for the purpose of election and confirmation of officers.

Resolved.—That it is expedient that each lodge in Ireland do meet forthwith, elect officers for the ensuing half-year, and transmit returns as usual for St. John's-day, 27th December inst.

Under existing circumstances, it is recommended that on the ensuing election, the choice of Masters shall be of such brethren as have previously served that office, and due caution shall be observed that there be no infringement of the law of the land.

By Order of the Grand Lodge,

J. WILLIAM HORT, Grand Secretary,

WILLIAM FRANCIS GRAHAM, D.G. Secretary.

Brethren are hereby informed that a petition to Parliament, on behalf of the Masonic Order, is in preparation. Copies thereof will be forwarded as soon as possible to the different districts for signatures, with directions for future proceedings.

GRAND LODGE OF IRELAND.

6th April, 1826.

Resolved,—

That the services rendered to the cause of Freemasonry in Ireland, by the able, eloquent, and manly advocacy of its true principles and spirit, used by our worthy Bro. Joseph Rolleston, Esq., barrister-at-law, in his professional capacity at the late assizes in the County of Londonderry, justly entitles him to the thanks of the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and of all the brotherhood, which are hereby given to him.

Resolved,—

That the above resolution be communicated to our Bro. Rolleston, in the most respectful manner, and that a deputation consisting of the Grand Officers, and three members of the Grand Lodge, be, and are hereby appointed to wait on him for that purpose.

Signed by order,

WILLIAM F. GRAHAM,

D.G. Secretary.

Committee having waited on Bro. Rolleston, he was pleased to return the following answer:—

Gentlemen of the deputation.—The resolution passed by the Right Worshipful the Grand Lodge of Ireland, on the 6th of April, 1826, demands my most sincere and heartfelt acknowledgments; it is, if possible, more grateful by being communicated to me by Masons of your distinguished rank and character. The Grand Lodge have much overrated my services and advocacy at the late assizes of Londonderry—What was urged by me there, proceeded from a sincere attachment to the Order, and from an earnest desire to make public the true principles and spirit of Freemasonry. I confess the charge of riot affected me much at the time I heard it stated—it was an awful charge in those times against Freemasons; but it was false, and has passed away without injury—We should no longer remember it, or for a moment (on that account) imagine that any thing degrading was intended to be imputed by the Government to the real Free and Accepted Masons of Ireland—No, gentlemen, our loyalty and love for public tranquillity is known to all. But the legislature had enacted that public processions should be deemed illegal—To carry this law into effect, and to shew the impartiality of the administration of justice in Ireland, the society of the first respectability in the nation was selected—They had given some cause—they had marched in Masonic procession on the annual anniversary—it was felt from the nature of the prosecution that a wise and instructive lesson of submission to the existing laws might be given to the people of this distracted country on this important occasion, and it was instantly determined that Freemasons should never throw an obstacle in the way of public peace, resist the law, or impede the course of justice—A verdict of acquittal might perhaps have been obtained; for though the men had erred, their minds were pure—There was mistake without intention—But an appeal to a jury was disdained—The truth was not to be denied by Masons—Nothing inconsistent with the honour and character of the Masonic body had been designedly done; therefore no admission, consistent with truth, could injure them—The charge of riot was indignantly repelled, and the Masonic procession (in total ignorance of the law) was admitted—Contrition was expressed, and observance of the law in future promised—The learned judge, on being convinced of the error into which the Masons had inadvertently fallen, discharged them with expressions of kindness and salutary advice, which I hope they will never forget—That enlightened judge was indulgent, and Freemasons should be grateful—It seems (I know) singular to Freemasons in general that the legislature should prohibit the processions of the most loyal and peaceable society that ever existed—that it should by a general act prevent the proud and public display of the emblems of brotherly love, morality, and friendship, by a body of men uncontaminated by party, and untainted by intolerance—But we ought to reflect that the sacred name and character of Freemasons might be assumed by evil disposed persons, and converted to the worst of purposes; we ought, therefore, to acquiesce in the wisdom of the legislature, and so far from our feelings being hurt by the prosecution, we should rejoice that it has taken place.—It has given us an opportunity of shewing to the world what our principles are, and of assuring the Government of this country that while we exist, and have power to raise the ensigns of our Order, we shall use our utmost energies to preserve and strengthen the venerable fabric of the British Constitution, and if any sudden gust of stormy times should shake it, the Free and Accepted Masons of Ireland will be at hand, ready to restore the edifice, and, if necessary, to cement it with their blood, or perish in its ruins.

Be pleased, gentlemen, to communicate those sentiments of mine to the Right Worshipful the Grand Lodge, and assure them that their approval of my discharge of a professional duty has made the deepest impression on my heart.

Gentlemen, I feel most sincerely grateful to you for the kind and dignified attention you have shewn me on this occasion.—I shall remember it with gratitude to my latest hour.—And may you and the Freemasons of Ireland enjoy every happiness that pure principles and national peace can bestow.

JOSEPH ROLLESTON.

18th April, 1826.

Ordered.—That the Master shall have the foregoing read in open lodge.

Obituary.

BRO. WM. KIBBLE.

We deeply regret having to announce the death of Bro. Wm. Kibble, which sad event took place on Thursday week. Bro. Kibble, who was a member and a P.M. for many years of the Panmure Lodge, was highly respected and esteemed by all who knew him. Bro. Kibble's death took place at East Cowes, in the Isle of Wight, where he had been staying for the benefit of his health.

THE LONDON LIVERY COMPANIES.—On Monday the interior of the Guildhall was lined with the names of the freemen of the various Livery Companies—31 in all—entitled to vote in the election of Members of Parliament for the City of London. It may not be out of place to state that the Livery Companies derive their origin from the early associations termed Guilds, and were either ecclesiastical or secular, the former being for devotion and alms-deeds, the latter for trade principally. Both, in ancient times, were distinguished by various religious observances, and partook much of the nature of monastic institutions. The secular Guilds appear to have included the entire open gate of a town, and were originally named merchant Guilds. In England Guilds were at first political and one of the elementary parts of the Constitution. They originated in the Saxon custom of frank-pledge, and were established here before the Anglo-Saxons abandoned their vocation as husbandmen in detached habitations or farms to form municipal governments in towns and cities. The steel-yard merchants of London were a decided trade Guild, and gave existence to the famous Hansatic League—a commercial confederacy first formed on the east shores of the Baltic in the eighth century to protect their trade from the piratical incursions of the Normans. Pennant described them as our "masters in the art of commerce;" and they are known to have been settled here before the year 967, for a regulation of King Ethelred of that date declared that the Emperor's men coming with their ships to Billingsgate should be accounted worthy of good laws; only they were not to forestall the markets from the London burghers, and were to pay toll at Christmas in the shape, among other things, of 10 lbs. of pepper, five pairs of gloves, two vessels of vinegar, and as many at Easter. In those days if any one slandered an Alderman on account of his official decisions, or of anything which appertained to the common interests, he was subjected to a fine of 40s., and condemned to apologise to the magistrate in open Court. All these ancient customs practically ceased long ago, and the status of the Liverymen of London differs now in comparatively few respects from that of the general community.

On Wednesday morning, on the arrival of the Cape mail at Bristol from Plymouth, the letter sorters found in the bottom of the railway carriage a live Colorado beetle. As the carriage was used for the conveyance of the American mail from Plymouth on Monday last it was the opinion of the railway officials the beetle had remained in the foreign mail carriage for that day, having been deposited there from the American mail, and not from the Cape mail. The insect having been properly secured, it was sent on to London to be delivered into the hands of the foreign branch Post-office officials.

Mr. Alderman Finnis, presiding in the Mansion-house Police-court, had the satisfaction on Monday, of receiving a pair of white gloves. There was not a single prisoner nor a summons of any kind for hearing. Alderman Finnis expressed himself delighted to hear of such a state of things, indicating as it did a growing respect for the Sunday, and contrasting favourably with the time when he had the honour to fill the office of Lord Mayor.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism and Gout.—These purifying and soothing remedies demand the earnest attention of all persons liable to gout, sciatica, or other painful affections of the muscles, nerves, or joints. The Ointment should be applied after the affected parts have been patiently fomented with warm water, when the unguent should be diligently rubbed upon the adjacent skin, unless the friction should cause pain. Holloway's Pills should be simultaneously taken to reduce inflammation and to purify the blood. This treatment abates the violence, and lessens the frequency of gout, rheumatism, and all spasmodic diseases which spring from hereditary predisposition, or from any accidental weakness of constitution. This Ointment checks the local remedy. The Pills restore the vital powers.—ADVT.

There were present on this occasion Bro. James Robinson, M.D., W.M.; Bro. Casson, S.W.; Bro. J. Hankey, J.W.; Bro. Harrison, I.P.M.; Bro. J. Case, P.M.; Bro. T. Dodgson, P.M. 995 and 1231, P.P.G. Pur. Westmoreland and Cumberland; Bro. Remington, P.M., P.P.G.J.W.; Bro. R. Pearson, P.M., P.P.G. Reg.; Bro. Brook, P.M. 311, Secretary, &c. The visiting brethren were Bro. John Atkinson, I.G., and Acting Secretary of the Liverpool Dramatic Lodge, 1609; Bro. Burgess, Assistant Organist, 1609; and Bro. Booth, Lodge of Concord, Preston. The First Degree was given by the W.M. most impressively, Bro. Burgess presiding at the harmonium, and giving the musical portion of the ceremony in a highly efficient manner. At the conclusion of the business, Bro. Remington, P.M., P.P.G.J.W., moved, and Bro. R. Pearson, P.M., P.P.G. Reg., seconded a motion to the effect that the lodge should vote a sum of 15 guineas towards providing a portrait of the late Bro. Roger Dodgson, P.M. 995 and 1231, P.P.G.S.B. Westmoreland and Cumberland, to be hung on the walls of the lodge-room, in recognition of his services to Masonry in the district and the Furness Lodge in particular. The motion was carried with unanimity. Bro. Pearson referred to the able manner in which Bro. Burgess had presided at the harmonium and stated that he had never heard the musical portion of the ceremony so well rendered. He therefore proposed that the thanks of the lodge be tendered to Bro. Burgess. The motion was seconded by Bro. Casson, S.W., and carried with acclamation. Bro. Burgess suitably acknowledged the compliment, and the business then terminated.

LIVERPOOL.—Duke of Edinburgh Lodge (No. 1182).—As a pleasant sequel to the installation proceedings of the previous week, the brethren of the Duke of Edinburgh Lodge held their annual picnic on Thursday, the 16th inst. About 200 ladies and brethren started from Lime-street Station of the L. & N.W. Railway, and proceeded to Broxton, a few miles beyond Chester, where, at a pleasantly situated farm-house, creature comforts were plentifully provided for the whole party. Unfortunately rain began to fall during the afternoon, and spoiled the complete pleasure of the day's "out." The ample tent fitted up served to shelter the pleasure seekers, who made the best and the most of the unpleasant circumstances, returning to town shortly after 9 o'clock. Amongst those who greatly promoted the pleasure of the day were Bros. John Williams, W.M.; R. Martin, jun., I.P.M.; J. Edginton, P.M.; T. B. Myers, P.M.; T. Davis, S.W.; G. Masker, J.W., and nearly all the other officers.

GREAT STANMORE.—Abercorn Lodge (No. 1549).—The fourth regular meeting of this young lodge was held at the Abercorn Hotel, on Wednesday, the 1st inst. Bro. Osman Vincent, W.M., in the chair. The following brethren were present:—Bros. Tidcombe, S.W.; Ebbs, J.W.; Veal, Secretary; Marshall, J.D.; Roy, I.G.; Garrod, I.P.M.; Helsdon, P.M., D.C.; and Middleton, Tyler; and several other brethren. Visitors: F. H. Fletcher, M.M. No. 12; F. G. Baker, P.M. 753. The lodge was opened by the W.M. at 3.30, and after confirming the minutes of the last meeting the ballot was taken favourably for Mr. E. F. di Poutchalou and Mr. G. H. Hall as initiates. Bro. W. F. Middleton, who proved his proficiency, was then passed to the Second Degree, and after resuming his lodge the W.M. also duly enlightened the above gentlemen into the First Degree of Freemasonry, this being the first occasion of the new W.M. shewing his ability in these ceremonies. It is sufficient to say, to his great credit, that during his junior offices he had ably prepared himself for good service; both were worthy of an old P.M., and gave general and hearty satisfaction; the new officers also gave evidence of admirable working. Four candidates having been proposed for next meeting, making the three ceremonies then necessary, the W.M. announced an emergency for that purpose on the 4th September. The lodge was closed in peace and harmony at 5.30, and the brethren passed an enjoyable evening at banquet under the able presidency of the Worshipful Master, assisted by many musical brethren.

SALTBURN.—Handyside Lodge (No. 1619). On Monday, August the 13th inst., the installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. D. W. Dixon, took place at the Zetland Hotel, when there was a large attendance of members of the lodge and representatives of the district. The ceremony was performed in a most interesting manner by Bro. George Marwood, P.D.P.G.M. of the North and East Ridings, after which the following officers were appointed and invested for the ensuing year:—Bros. Charles Moore, I.P.M.; J. C. Simpson, S.W.; N. H. Ground, J.O.; A. B. Moss, Sec.; George Taylor, S.D.; Joseph Taylor, J.W.; H. Carruthers, I.G.; R. Deighton, O.G.; H. T. Adamson, S. After the ceremony the brethren dined together.

BRIDGNORTH.—Castle Lodge (No. 1621).—This lodge held its first annual installation meeting at the Crown Hotel, Bridgnorth, on Friday, August 10th, 1877. A lodge of emergency having been called for one o'clock for the purpose of raising Bro. Southwell, and to receive the report, of the audit committee, which was read, approved, and showed the lodge to be in a very good position considering that the whole lodge had to be furnished, the brethren, including the twelve initiated, passed, and raised, during the first year of the lodge, having very generously contributed to the fund for the purchase of the furniture. Several of the brethren, including Bros. H. B. Southwell, J.D., and F. F. Foxall, deserve the thanks of the brethren for their very generous gifts to the lodge. Bro. H. B. Southwell, always ready to render help and assistance, when required, very handsomely presented the lodge with a very beautiful harmonium (by Alexandre); Bro. F. F. Foxall, one of the three very beautiful pedestals which have been so much admired by the brethren. Bro. W. L. Southwell having been raised to the sublime degree of a M. Mason by the W. Master, Bro. Stokes, P.G.S.W. of Worcestershire, the lodge of emergency was closed in due form. The W.M., Bro. J. Stokes, immediately proceeded to open the regular lodge, which had been called for two o'clock, the following brethren and visitors present: Bros. J. Stokes, W.M., and P.G.S.W. Worcestershire; E. Jones Chitney, S.W. and W.M. elect; C. W. Lester, J.W., and W.M. 1120, Ironbridge; Hubert Smith, Treasurer and Secretary; H. B. Southwell, S.D.; Dr. A. Colles, J.D.; John Sewell, Organist; J. S. Vince, I.G.; G. G. De Lessent; T. Whitefoot, Clement Edkins, F. F. Foxall, T. M. Deighton, T. Pratt, C. Deighton, T. F. Nock, Elihu Price, A. S. Trevor, E. M. Southwell, and W. L. Southwell. Visitors: Bros. William Mansfield, P.M. 252, and D.P.G.M. Worcestershire; W. H. Spaul, P.M. 1134, and P.G. Secretary Shropshire and North Wales; James Fitzgerald, P.M. 337, P.P.G.D. of C. Worcestershire; Wm. Smith, P.M. 252, and P.P.G.P. Worcestershire; J. R. Harris, P.M. 773, and P.P.G.S.; Charles Brettall, P.M. 252; W. Wearing, J.W. 252; A. C. Green, I.G. 252; J. Russell, S. 252; F. C. Chitney, Lodge of Charity, 1521, Birmingham; J. Nicholson, 252; W. Waldron, 572; Wm. Pritchard, 573; Thos. Tyler, Tyler. The minutes of the previous lodge having been read and confirmed, the lodge was then opened in the Second and Third Degrees. A Board of Installed Masters having been formed, Bro. E. Jones Chitney, S.W. and W.M. elect was presented by Bro. H. B. Southwell to the Installing Master to receive at his hand the benefit of installation, which ceremony was very beautifully performed by the retiring Master, Bro. S. Stokes, and deserves the highest praise. The working tools in the several degrees were presented to the newly installed Master, and the brethren saluted him in ancient form. The W.M. appointed the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year, and they were duly invested by the Installing Master. Bros. J. Stokes, I.P.M.; H. B. Southwell, S.W.; Dr. A. Colles, J.W.; Hubert Smith, Treas.; Thos. Whitefoot, Sec.; F. F. Foxall, S.D.; C. Deighton, J.D.; J. C. W. Lester, D. of C.; C. G. DeCessant, I.G.; J. Sewell, Org.; Thos. Deighton, Thos. Pratt, and J. S. Vince, Stewards; Thos. Tyler, Tyler. The addresses to the W.M. and his officers were given in an impressive manner by the Installing Master. Before the lodge was closed the newly-installed W.M. presented Bro. Joseph Stokes, I.P.M., with a very handsome and valuable Past Master's jewel in recognition of his excellent services to the lodge during his year of office as its first Past Master. Heartly good wishes were given from the Prov. Grand Lodge of Shropshire and North Wales, the Prov. Grand Lodge of Worcestershire, the Lodge of Harmony, the Lodge of Charity, and several other lodges, and duly acknowledged by the W.M. Nothing further offering, the lodge was closed in ancient form, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting room in the Agricultural Hall, kindly placed at their disposal by Bro. Clement Edkins, who, with the assistance of Bros. Whitefoot, Foxall, Deighton, and others had tastefully decorated the walls, &c., adding much to the comfort of the brethren. The banquet was supplied by Bro. Vince in his usual liberal style, and gave general satisfaction. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and duly honoured. During the evening Bro. Sewell, assisted by his son, gave the brethren the benefit of their professional abilities of playing a selection of music, which was duly acknowledged by the brethren, who departed shortly before 8 o'clock; many, having come from distant towns, had to return early, thus ending the first anniversary of the Castle Lodge.

Red Cross of Constantine.

COCKERMOUTH.—Dykes Conclave (No. 36).—The annual assembly of this conclave was held on Wednesday, Aug. 15th, in the rooms of Skiddaw Lodge, Cockermouth. There were present:—Em. Sir Knights R. Robinson, P.S.; G. M. Tickle, P.M.; J. Pearson, P.S.; W. F. Lamonby, P.S., as Recorder and H.P. (Freemason); W. Shilton, P.S., D.C.; E. Tyson, V.E.; Six Knights T.

Mandle, Treas.; R. Bailey, J.G.; J. Evening, S.B.; T. Bird, Herald; W. H. Lewthwaite, Organist; D. Titterington, H. Moncrieff, Jas. Quay, W. Lamonby, Jas. Gardiner, S. Thwaite, J. Pearson (Lorton), and W. Potts, Sentinel. Em. Sir Knight—occupied the throne. After the minutes of the previous assembly were read and confirmed, it was resolved that a copy of the latter part thereof relating to the great loss sustained to Masonry in West Cumberland through the death of Em. Sir Knight Rev. W. Beeby, M.A., the last Sovereign of Dykes Conclave, be forwarded to the family of the deceased. Sir Knight T. Mandle, V.E. elect, was then presented to the presiding Sovereign, and all below the rank of Viceroy having retired, a College was opened, when Sir Knight Mandle was re-admitted, and duly consecrated to the priestly office. Em. Sir Knight Edward Tyson, M.P., Sov. elect, was next presented, and all below that rank retiring, a Senate of the Princes of the Order was opened, when the new Sovereign was re-admitted, and duly and solemnly placed in the imperial seat of Constantine. After the closing of the Senate and College, the main body of the Sir Knights were summoned, and the new officers invested as follows: Comps. R. Bailey, S.G.; T. Bird, J.C.; W. F. Lamonby, H.P.; W. H. Lewthwaite, Treas. and Org.; J. Evening, Recorder; Jas. Gardiner, Prefect; J. Pearson (Lorton), Junior Prefect; W. Lamonby, St.B.; R. Robinson, Orator; Jas. Quay, H.; S. Thwaite, Almoner; H. Moncrieff, Steward; D. Titterington, D.C.; and W. Potts, Sentinel. Sir Knight W. H. Lewthwaite, in consideration of his valuable services as Organist, was unanimously elected as honorary member of the conclave; after which three notices of motion were put in by Em. Sir Knights W. T. Lamonby and E. Tyson, the first proposing to alter the termination of the financial year from January to July; the second to remove the place of assembly of the conclave to the new rooms of Skiddaw Lodge; and the last to reduce the installation fee from two guineas to one guinea. The conclave was then solemnly closed, when the Sir Knights adjourned to the Old Hall for refection. Em. Sir Knight E. Tyson presided, and Em. Sir Knight T. Mandle was in the vice-chair. The usual toast list was gone through, interspersed with a selection of music, under the direction of Sir Knight Lewthwaite, Organist, which included the new song and chorus, by Bro. Mahon, official reporter of the Grand Lodge of New York, entitled, "The Mason's Beacon," and which was here introduced by Em. Sir Knight W. F. Lamonby, who also sang a Masonic piece, comparatively unknown in England, entitled, "A Wee Drappie o't," the words evidently written by a Scotch brother, whilst the music and accompaniments are by Sir Knights Lamonby and Lewthwaite, who propose publishing it at once. In the course of the proceedings some very profitable discussions ensued as to the future prosperity of the conclave, and it was the general opinion that, with all the arrears of subscription collected, and a little more vitality thrown into the concerns of the conclave than has hitherto been exhibited, the knightly Order would enter upon an era of success it cannot be yet said to have experienced in Cumberland. We may add that Dykes Conclave was instituted in April, 1873, that it now has on the roll 46 members, three of whom are honorary, whilst during the four years of its existence there have been five deaths, and three resignations.

Eighteen cases were relieved with sums varying from £5 to £40.

At the Board of Masters, held previously to the sitting of the Lodge of Benevolence, the agenda paper for next Grand Lodge was settled, and notices of motion for that meeting were given.

CHESHIRE EDUCATIONAL MASONIC INSTITUTION.

We have pleasure in publishing the following report of this Institution for the year 1876:—

To the Right Hon. the Lord de Tabley, Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of the Province of Cheshire, President of the Cheshire Educational Masonic Institution for the Education and Advancement in Life of Children of Distressed and Deceased Freemasons, and to the Vice-Presidents, Life-Governors, and Governors.

Your Committee have again great pleasure in presenting their annual report, being able to state that continued success has crowned their efforts.

The balance in hand at the close of the last financial year was £2500 19s. 5d., and after paying all requisite expenses, the amounts in hand, invested and otherwise, are £2858 13s. 10d., of which £270 has been invested on mortgage, and £250 in a bond of the Mersey Dock and Harbour Board.

During the year nineteen children have been educated, of whom has now finished; there were four old scholars who required assistance towards their advancement in life, which your Committee have extended to them, and there are two candidates for education.

It is a matter of congratulation that the report received from the various instructors of the children have been invariably satisfactory, and if any Life Governor of the Institution would like to see the reports, the Secretary will be happy to show them on application.

The Committee desire to convey their thanks to the brethren at Stockport for £17 8s., the net proceeds of a Masonic ball held in that town. They have also to acknowledge the receipt of £20 on account of the amateur performance held in Birkenhead, February, 1876, in aid of the funds of this Institution.

While expressing great satisfaction with the exertions of many lodges and chapters in increasing their subscriptions and donations, they would fraternally call the attention of all the brethren in the province to the great importance of adopting the recommendation of the R.W.P.G. Master, that a certain amount out of every initiation and exaltation fee should be appropriated to the funds of this Institution, for when a resolution of this kind is universally adopted, it will form a source of revenue on which your Committee can place more reliance than upon occasional large donations.

The following is the Treasurer's balance sheet:—

CONSECRATION OF THE FORT MARK LODGE, No. 206.

The R.W. Bro. Sir Frederick M. Williams, Bart., M.P., 32<sup>d</sup>, attended at Newquay on the 16th inst., and as Provincial Grand Master of the Mark Province of Cornwall, consecrated and dedicated the Fort Mark Lodge, No. 206. There was quite a goodly gathering of Mark Masters in honour of the occasion, representatives being present from the following Mark lodges in the Province, many of whom had travelled many miles to take part in the proceedings, so much is the worthy Prov. G. Master respected by the whole Province, viz:—Meridian Lodge, No. 73, Redruth; Fortitude Lodge, No. 78, Truro; Cornubian Lodge, No. 87, Hayle; Live and Honour Lodge, No. 94, Falmouth; Boscawen Lodge, No. 101, Chacewater; True and Faithful Lodge, No. 175, Helston.

The Mark lodge was opened by the R. W. Bro. W. J. Hughson, P.M. 78, Past Grand Warden of England, at 11 a.m., when some eight candidates were advanced, who were anxious to witness the ceremony of consecration, and on the degree being completed the Prov. G.D.C. announced the arrival of the Prov. G.M. R.W. Bro. Hughson deputed W. Bro. W. J. Johns, P. Prov. D.G.M. (Prov. G. Sec.); W. Bro. W. Lake, Prov. G. Reg.; Capt. Michell, Prov. G.S.B., and others to escort Sir F. M. Williams, Bart., M.P., to the East, when he resigned the gavel into the hands of the Prov. G.M., and the Prov. Grand Lodge was opened in due form, with R.W. Bro. W. J. Hughson, P.G.M., as Deputy Prov. G.M.; Rev. W. H. Bloxsome, M.A., Prov. S.G.W.; William James Johns, Prov. G. Sec., as Prov. J.G.W.; William Lake, Prov. G. Reg.; J. C. Polglaze, Prov. G.J.O.; Capt. Michell, Prov. G.S.B.; S. Mitchell, Prov. G. Supt. of Works; Samuel Harvey, Prov. G.D.C.; Charles Truscott, S.W. 78, P. Prov. G.S.B.; William Johns, Prov. G. Steward, and many other Provincial Grand Officers and others.

The Prov. G.M. announced the object of the meeting, and throughout carefully followed the programme which had been circulated by the respected Prov. G. Sec., for the information of the members. The consecration was then formally accomplished, the elements being carried by the brethren in the procession as follows:—

Prov. G. Master.

Acting Dep. Prov. G. Master (with corn).

Prov. Senior G. Warden (with wine).

Acting Junior G. Warden (with oil).

On the first circuit of the lodge, the corn was presented to Sir F. M. Williams; on the second, the wine; and on the third, the oil; each time the usual remarks being made, and finally, after the customary prayers by the Acting Prov. G. Chaplain, the Rev. W. H. Bloxsome, M.A., (who was ready throughout to discharge any part allotted to him), the consecration and constitution of No. 206 was accomplished by the Prov. G. Master in a most dignified and graceful manner.

The oration by the R.W. Bro. W. J. Hughson was considerably curtailed, to the evident regret of the brethren, but the business being considerable, he wisely shortened his discourse, but promised at another time to address the Province on the principles and customs of Mark Masonry.

The warrant was read by the Prov. Grand Secretary, W. Bro. W. J. Johns, P.M. and Treas. 78 (to whom all the arrangements had been entrusted by the Prov. G.M.) and the W.M. nominate, Captain William Edwards Mitchell, was duly installed by the R.W. Bro. W. J. Hughson, (senior P.M. of the Province, and the Wardens.) Bro. Bryant Wellington, Senior, and Thomas Hawker, Junior, invested.

The W.M., in a neat speech, congratulated the members of the new lodge on the day having passed off so successfully, and proposed that a vote of thanks be offered to Sir F. M. Williams, Bart. M.P., for his kind attendance as Prov. G. Master, which on being put to the meeting was carried by acclamation.

The principal officers of No. 206 were then appointed, viz., by the W.M., (the others previously mentioned being named on the warrant granted by the Right Hon. the Earl of Limerick, M.W.G. Master of England) Thomas Hicks, M.O., W.M. 1529, Craft lodge; Henry F. Whitefield, S.O., S.W. 1529, Craft lodge; Thomas G. Prout, J.O., W.M. 1528, Craft lodge; Rev. D. C. Brown, Chaplain; Samuel H. F. Cox, R. of M.; W. H. ymons, S.D.; W. W. Howard, J.D.; T. Crapp, I.G.

A banquet was served at the close of the proceedings the W.M., Captain W. E. Mitchell, in the chair.

BROTHERS WELL MET.—A LANCASHIRE SOJOURN.

For my transgressions I was cast a week in the dull, dirty, wet city of Manchester—a place rendered all the more miserable to my southern eye from the fact that to reach it I passed through, in sunshine, the beautiful counties of Huntingdonshire, Nottinghamshire, and Derbyshire, and in entering Manchester passed from the most beautiful parts of England into clouds of smoke and showers of rain. Then, to add to the depression which will naturally fall upon a stranger, there is the great contrast between the city and some of its people. One stands before marvellous palaces, such as the New Town Hall and the Assize Courts, which rival in beauty of adornment even Westminster, and around the gazer at these creations of wealth are multitudes of alms-seekers in little ragged children, seemingly God-forgotten.

To whatever part of Cottonopolis I wandered in my week of enforced stay these wretched children were to be found, not in ones and twos, but in dozens, fearless of School Board officers, and evidently being trained to viciousness and crime. The sight took off all the gilt from the gingerbread of the splendid architecture, and let me tell the ratepayers and citizens of Manchester that the waste of "material"—to put it on no higher ground—in permitting these wretched children to be dragged up in the streets in this way will knock away a good deal of the gingerbread with the little gilt which may be left in a few years' time. As it is, the existence of the Lancashire "rough" is no mystery. I saw many of the Manchester poor children of past years in the ruffians who, on Bank Holiday, were too ready to attack unoffending strangers on the least pretence, and on no pretence at all. When the attack comes on property the political economists of Manchester will deeply lament that they had not an efficient School Board system.

But it is not of Manchester streets and evils that I wish to speak. It is of those in the "Craft" I met there. It was a week of science we had, for I was there with the British "Med's." among whom there are no lack of brothers of the right sort, and their experience as "P.M.'s" was brought into requisition in being the organisers of the "Mess" which found favour in most of the hotels during that week in that noisy city. For instance, there was Dr. T., of Leamington, who gathered round him at the Royal a jovial crowd, filled to the brim with kindness and happiness—and most of his gathering were freres. But it is not of Bro. and Dr. T., of Leamington, that I have to speak, but of a little romance in real life—real existing life. In London some years ago I had a kind friend (and brother), a clever advancing medical man, whose devotion to the sick poor was only equalled by his talents and that sincerity of character which always marks the true man. Suddenly I heard that Dr. B. had broken down in health, had been obliged to resign his practice. I had been forced to travel; years had rolled by since then, and my joy was great on finding at Owen's College a letter from my long lost friend and brother. Soon after I received the letter we clasped hands, and then I learnt that visiting the Lancastrian shore in search of a health resort he fell among brothers, who discerning his talents urged him to stay. His health improved, and practice coming rapidly in, he had decided to found his home anew, and then he was an accepted among the accepted, who had found in him one of the worthy. He could not stay in Manchester, and I could not then leave, and he urged me to come over to the coast on the end of the week. Science ended its holiday in the grimy town, and I sped me away from the murky town of Manchester, not shaking the dust from my feet, for the dust stuck too thick, and then I made my way with a friend to Southport. The change was marvellous. The depression which had been cast over us departed as if by magic, as we walked that night in the sweet ozonic air of Southport, and late as time was, tired as we were, we walked up and down the long promenade, listening to the music of the rolling sea, and striving to get from our lungs some of that Manchester carbon which the manufacturer so wastefully distributes from his chimneys, and with which the lungs of every Manchester citizen are so charged, that a doctor told me a post-mortem will reveal the exact number of years a person has lived in the city, the thickness of the carbonic deposit being a sure guide to this fact. Well, now about Southport. We were taken in and done for most hospitably, and for the first time for a week awoke to sunshine. Out in the balmy air early, and we wandered across the deserts of sand, with the Cumberland Hills rising in the distance, and then come to Bro. Deussen's, who has the Queen's Hotel at Southport—Bro. Deussen being the well-known wine grower, of continental fame, whose products were specially appreciated by our lamented Prov. Grand Master of Staffordshire, the Earl of Shrewsbury, whose kindly letters to "Dear Bro. Deussen" are an honour to both. Our Bro. Deussen, let me say, gave up his whole morning to our company, for the doctor was on his professional visits to those poor patients who sought at Southport the health sacrificed at the shrine of Mammon in the Lancastrian towns, where sanitary appliances are disregarded and abhorred, as being opposed to the "interests of trade"—poisoned rivers and poisoned air thus being free to work their ill. To Southport—forty miles from Manchester and eighteen from Liverpool—the people flock like panting harts to pellucid streams, and to great natural beauties the energy and capital of men like Bro. Deussen have added many charms, until Southport stands pre-eminent as perhaps the finest and most enjoyable health resort in England. It has a constant wind from the sea—the south-west; a mild air in winter; never has snow or fog; and its created attractions include the finest series of baths in the world—all the swimming baths being filtered sea water—a winter garden, a glaciarium, a town built upon the continental system of boulevards, but without continental smells—for Southport is scientifically drained, and the sewage disposed of naturally and inoffensively. All these things were shown to the medical visitors from Manchester, whose fares were paid by the medical men of the town, and there is but one thing of which complaint can be made—Southport gave too much hospitality. A dozen places to visit in the course of a day and something to eat and drink at each, and a journey to sea in a steamer (from the end of a pier a mile long), was likely to prove upsetting to any ordinary visitors. There are at least two visitors who will remember Bro. Deussen's "extra sec." and his German biscuits. May his shadow never grow less, and long may this brother of a Southport lodge live to join hands with his brether; long may he wave his rod over his adjacent river, and may his memory never grow green among those whose town he has helped to glorify and improve by wisdom, strength, and beauty.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION AND THE FREEMASONS.

The Freemasons of Plymouth on Monday gave a reception to the Masonic members of the British Association at the Hayshe Temple, in Princess-street. Bro. L. P. The lodge was opened with Bro. Pengelley, W.M., of Lodge St. John, in the chair, and Bro. G. Y. Avery being in the S.W. chair, and Bro. Keates in the J.W. chair. The lodge was opened in due form, and the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, with the distinguished visiting brethren, were then received with the customary salutations, Bro. Gover ably acting as D.C. The formalities over,

Bro. Metham took the chair, and after expressing his gratitude at his recovery from a serious illness, and the pleasure which it afforded him at being present on such an auspicious occasion, he said he was extremely pleased that the first time which he had had the opportunity of meeting them should be to introduce to them the brethren who had come from so many parts of the country, and who had been attracted here by the great scientific meeting which was now being held in the town—a meeting with which all Masons in England and elsewhere ought to feel the deepest sympathy, because the questions broached there were questions which affected not only the progress of science, but, as a consequence, the happiness of the world—(applause). He might almost say that it was through the distant brethren themselves that the present meeting had been brought about, they having expressed a desire to meet their Masonic brethren of the neighbourhood, and it was impossible to have thrown cold water upon such a proposal. Accordingly they were now assembled, and he did not know that he could say any more than that they were most heartily welcome—(applause). He, perhaps, of all the brethren in the room, had the greatest reason for giving them a hearty welcome, because he had been most hospitably entertained when he had visited other parts of the country, and he should be indeed an ingrate if he did not, when the opportunity was afforded, join in exhibiting the same fraternal feeling now that they had so many brethren in their midst.

Bro. Professor Glashier acknowledged the heartiness of the reception which had been given him and his brethren from a distance, and offered some valuable advice as to the internal discipline and conduct of Masonic lodges, pointing out that private feeling ought to be sacrificed to the general welfare of the Order.

Bro. Bell followed, and mentioned that he had an old book in his possession (which he handed round to the members present) of lodges that existed in the last century, amongst them being three in Plymouth—the Oxford Inn Lodge, No. 67, in Plymouth Dock, in 1734; No. 233, the Three Crowns Lodge, in Southside-street, in 1758; and No. 237, the Second Division of Marines Lodge, Plymouth, in 1759. It appeared that Plymouth had been for many years past far in advance of other towns as a Masonic town, and he was exceedingly glad to have had the opportunity of fraternising with the brethren in the district.

Bro. Hyde Clarke also thanked the brethren of Plymouth for the cordiality of their reception, and said he was glad to find that the ritual of the Order was so closely observed as it was in this province, because it kept before the brethren the records of the past, and showed them the importance of maintaining and preserving them in the future.

Bro. Varley and other brethren also spoke, and before the lodge separated, cordial thanks were given to the Masonic body for their reception, as well as to the choir—Bros. Hele, Fly, Firks, Rendle, Bond, Harries, Goodall, Barter, Peck, and Clemens—for the excellence of their musical arrangements. During the evening refreshments were provided, and this department, together with other arrangements, was admirably controlled by Bros. Whitley and Aubrey Thomas, who did all that was requisite to contribute to the comfort of the brethren. The refreshments were provided by Bro. Thorn, who, as usual, performed his task in the most satisfactory manner, and altogether the evening was most agreeably spent.

DEUTSCHER - GEMUTLICH FREIMAUEREI.

By fortuitous circumstances and my good tutelary saint I happened to be on the frontier of Westphalia, and in the midst of that hive of industry called the Wupperfeld, which is the chief gem in the crown of Germany's Emperor. This part of Rhenish Prussia is, and truly may be, called the "Stockport of 'Unsers Vaterland,'" from Schwelm to Elberfeld, with the smaller towns being near Bei. A person knowing the district around Manchester might be led to suppose that he suddenly had dropped into this quarter, through the countless shafts reaching from the valley to the mountain's top, as far as the eye can stretch, looking from the Johannisberg to Schwelm, or, which is better, from the tower recently erected (in remembrance of those who fell in the late Franco-German war) in Barmen-Rittershausen—here on its top is one of the prettiest sights that the eye can behold. Down the deep Wupperthal, from mountain side to top, this long valley is studded with factories and mills, of unnumbered kinds, producing merchandise which is shipped to every quarter of the inhabitable globe. The people are very industrious, of the highest order of intelligence, and keen competitors with "Old England" in most of the markets in the world.

The river which passes through these centres of labour, viz., Barmen-Rittershausen, Unter Barmen, and Elberfeld, near to which town is Solingen, known for its cutlery and swords, is called the Wupper, and it is only some twenty yards to thirty yards wide. Sometimes it overflows its banks; at other times you could walk over it as you would a country ford in summer time. Be this as it may, this tiny river has made the wealth and continues to build up the fortunes of the inhabitants living in the aforesaid towns from its chemical properties; but it is larger in proportion than the small stream which produces the beautiful Lyon's black, and other colours, which are the admiration of the angelic mundane sphere. This Rhenish-Wupper river is generally as black as midnight, and I doubt if the Styx on which old Charon plied his boat can approach it for blackness. But to continue my happy coincidence, for the once I was staying at the grand Hotel-Vogeler in Barmen, and on Thursday evening, 7.30., whilst busily engaged in my chambers, there came three gentlemen, unknown to me, with the customary knock at the door, when the reply was, as usually is, "Herein," and in they came.

"Gentlemen, to what am I indebted for this visit, and let me ask what is the nature of your business?" "Permit us to enquire if you are Herr Yeoman?" "Yes, that is my name—but why this question?" "You shall soon learn, Lieber Herr. We three are given to understand that you are an Englishman (Dass ist wahr); and what is better, that you are an English Freemason?" "Yes; both statements are true; still I am at a loss to know the purport of your interrogations." "Well, mein Lieber Herr, we are three Freemasons. Our good brother, the host, having informed us that he knew you to be an English Freemason (my best thanks to him), and that no doubt you would like to be present in lodge to night, more especially so through the gathering being an extraordinary one; to-night is a grand festival (some four years back I left with the proprietor of this hotel a 'Cosmopolitan Masonic Diary')—we have been deputed to come and invite you to honour us with your society, which we trust you will accept, for the meeting and the occasion is 'Ausserordentlich.'"

I accepted their generous and complimentary invitation, in the following words, "Brethren, for your courtesy and kindness, permit me to thank you most heartily." On thus accepting their invitation, one of the three brethren said, "Permit me to introduce you to the Worshipful Master." This brother afterwards I found to be a merchant captain, who had informed me that one of the three was the "Meister Vom Stuhl."

For this voluntary information I at once said "Would you like to prove me, worshipful sir." My reason for saying so was that I had a latent doubt that he would like to prove me. Somewhat delicately, and with a twinge of diffidence, he said, "Yah, lieber Herr." No sooner affirmatively expressed than I placed myself in position, when he seized my hand, and the three regular grips were given, which were supplemented by another when he said "That will do, brother." I pressed for further proof. "No, I am satisfied, brother, we heartily greet you and invite you to join us on this very extraordinary occasion. I thanked the W.M. and brethren, at the same time asking at what hour. They replied, at 8 p.m. On being so unexpectedly invited, I was rather perplexed what to do, because the brethren were in full dress, which gratified me to see it, but I simply was attired in travelling gear, and had no "Blacks" in my portmanteau, to my chagrin. I stated this fact, and they kindly said "Of your attire have no regard, we will receive you." At this announcement half my trouble was allayed, with myself I was not satisfied. At last I said I would be ready in twenty minutes; they left and stated they would return at that time. On leaving my chambers, once within a minute again a knock—"Herein" my salutation was. "What a happy 'Puck' you are." Why? "Because I am in a dilemma, and require your aid to get me out of it." What's the difficulty? "Stated my case by relating to him that I had been invited by the W.M. of 'Lodge Lasing,' just now, that I had accepted, but was not in regulation order, being without any 'schwarze pump-hosen,' can you assist me? "Yes, I can—I have just received a new pair from London, I will run and fetch them." He brought them, I was soon into them, I was out of purgatory. To the tick of time the brethren returned, and straightway I was ushered into a large ante-room, capable of holding some 200 people; there were some one hundred and twenty to fifty or more brethren present. After a pro forma "introduction," I was led to a seat and received every attention. I was then challenged—all present being charged—acknowledged the salutation, chatted for a short time where we were, was soon summoned by the "Tyler" to enter the lodge. Prior to this I registered my name in the lodge book, &c. We entered to sound of sweet music, which was solemn and stately; every brother was gloved and every one kept his hat on his head, which was very strange to me. When the brethren were all within the Temple, so full was it that they sat four deep, and amphitheatrically. The door was closed and the ceremonies began, and in the midst of breathless silence and profound attention the W.M. began. Some slight difference was noticeable, but the old Landmarks of the Royal Craft were all beautifully made manifest. These were most acceptable, and testified to me the universality of our rites, and the oneness of the Order. The ritual was read, and impressively so—even the late Sheridan Knowles could not have thrown more pathos and charm into the utterances. I was delighted with the speech of the "orator," there was a volume of thought and a freedom of words which no spoken ritual can convey; not even a syllable awry, all was in conformity with the object and purpose of the Order. Permission was given for two others to speak, and they did so from out of the fulness of their hearts, with fervour and zeal. Whatever may be the divergence of opinions on this point, it at least intellectually shows the "orator" to be a man of thought, and by his power of speech to hold the brethren to attention; there was no apparent weariness nor noticeable yawning, neither leaving the lodge. I was pleased with all—charmed, delighted, spellbound. There was pervading the features of the brethren present a union of soul and mind. Music to hymns were sung, there was also a select choir.

This gathering was, as I have before said, an extraordinary occasion, for there was to be an initiation, and the gentleman was a man of note, Herr Traeger, the member of Parliament for Nordhausen, in the German House of Commons; in politics, "Sukunst-partei! a poet of the first order. On his entrance through the Temple doors in the usual form (accompanied by two) a solemn dirge was played, and all the brethren stood, after which the rites proceeded. The ceremony materially differed from our own, being more elaborate; in short, it reminded me of cathedral service, highly coloured. Before sealing the O.B. there was chanted a long kind of funeral solo, in very slow, measured time, and it appeared to me as if the voice came from the tomb; the effect was most singular, darkness was all around, the voice ceased to intone, and it died away gradually into a sound that could not be heard. The effect was that of awe. On restoration (all standing), he was kissed thrice by the W.M. (who on this occasion was no less a person than the well-known German poet, Emil Rittershaus, whose sonorous and magic voice gave a charm and attraction to the whole proceedings. The orator now delivered himself of his oration, another recited a poem written to greet the newly-made; and a third had permission to speak. All of their remarks had a tendency to show the beauties and soul grandeur of the Order and unity of the brotherhood, its usefulness, its fraternity, its charity, and its Divine foundation. The initiate was warmly greeted; he was told prior to the finishing of the labours, that the reason why hats were worn, which might appear at first sight out of place in so sacred a spot, was because it was the sign of equality and freedom. Lodge was closed in usual form, but before which a hymn was sung, led by the choir; and in which every brother heartily joined.

Banquet was announced, and in a very short time the great company was seated. To myself personally every attention was paid by three brethren, my seat being reserved for me to which I was led, and I was visited during the night on two or three occasions by the W.M., to know how I fared. I must here remark, that previous to soup being served attention was called, and the toasts began; these were much after our own fashion, to each personage from Kaiser Wilhelm and Vater, whose name was received rapturously, and each had his due meed of praise. It seemed rather strange and out of place to me, I must admit, to commence the toasts before banquet, after labour, like the student at college, I wanted to get at the pudding, at any rate it was not in accordance with my education, Masonic or otherwise. The usual routine of toasts were duly honoured, but some were exceptionally more so than others. That of the W.M. acting, Emil Rittershaus, who replied in an extempore poetical speech. The sound of his name drew forth much applause; it was an ovation. No doubt this special occasion added much to the greeting, because many brethren had come several hundred miles to be present, the D.G.M. from Berlin, and there were present many Grand Officers. There were brethren from Nassau Westphalia, Thuringen, and other distant states and kingdoms, to do honour to this meeting and its attraction, the making of the brother, the initiate, Herr Traeger. He was highly honoured and held in esteem. In reply to his health, he made a speech full of common sense, and replete with wit; he kept the company in continual laughter; he was both a powerful and an attractive speaker. Several brethren spoke. My health was proposed, and with it English Freemasonry. I replied, and my remarks were graciously listened to, and well received. There was some splendid singing and speech-making "ad libitum." In conclusion I was pro forma introduced to Bro. Emil Rittershaus, and received his thanks for having translated a poem of his, "Dem Papste." To all the brethren my hearty thanks, and more especially to those who paid me such profound and constant attention.

FREEMASONRY IN JERSEY.

A spontaneous, hearty, and sympathetic welcome was given to Bro. Dr. H. Hopkins (Bath), by his admiring friends and brethren, on Wednesday, August 16th, at the Masonic Temple, Bro. Dr. J. Le Cronier, the esteemed D.P.G.M. in the chair, having on his right Bros. Dr. H. Hopkins, P.P.G.S.W. (Warwickshire); A. Schmitt, P.P.G.S.W.; J. O. LeSueur, P.M. 491, P.G. Secretary; W. H. Chapman, W.M. 958, Assistant D.C.; Ed. Martel, P.M. 958, P.P.G.D.C.; on his left, Bros. F. Le Feuvre, W.M. 877, P.P.G.S.B.; J. Oatley, P.P.S.G.W.; J. Durell, P.P.S.G.W.; G. J. Renouf, P.P.S.G.W.; Ph. Binet, P.P.G.S.W.; Jos. O'Flaherty, P.M. 958, P.G.S.D.; Wm. Metherell, P.M. 1003, P.G.S.B.; F. G. Baker, P.M., P.G.D.C.; P. Bois, W.M. 1003; C. Kingsnorth, P.M. 245, P.P.J.G.W.; C. D. Bishop, S.W. 1003; T. I. de Bourcier, J.W. 958; Taylor, S.D. 958, and others. Bro. J. Th. du Jardin, P.M. 590, P.P.S.G.W., occupied the vice-chair.

The cloth having been removed, and after "The Queen and the Craft," the Chairman proposed in highly complimentary terms "The Health of the Guest of the Evening," pointing out his valuable services rendered to the Province during a period of several years of his residence in Jersey, his activity and usefulness in disseminating the fruits of his intellectual labour, his being the first Master of the St. Aubin's Lodge, No. 958, and discharging the duties thereof with ability and credit to himself, devoting his heart and soul to Freemasonry. What to another, said the Chairman, would have been an arduous task, was to him a labour of love; with him the points of fellowship have not been a dead letter, but an active principle inspiring every action of his life and guiding him in his conduct towards his brethren. Such a brother is well worthy of any honour and admiration which we can bestow upon him. The health was enthusiastically drunk, three times three and one more. Bro. Dr. H. Hopkins, on rising to acknowledge the compliment, felt at first much moved, but soon gathering his usual composure, addressed feelingly his brethren, briefly stating his past and always fresh connection with the Province of Jersey, by his joining the La Cesarée Lodge, No. 590, and founding afterwards St. Aubin's Lodge, No. 958, so much so that he could not but co-operate with his brethren to promote the best interests, both moral and material, of the Province. In the course of his address Bro. Dr. Hopkins favoured the brethren with some remarks as to his Masonic experience in other Provinces since he left Jersey, and entered on some comparisons arising therefrom. In conclusion, said he, may I reckon on your permitting me to say, that this evening's fraternal reception, while stamping this occasion as one of the white days of my life, will ever be prized and regarded with ardent gratitude as one of the brightest souvenirs in my Masonic career, never to be effaced from my memory. I tender you once more my sincere thanks, and I entreat you to believe that to retain the favourable position I have the happiness to hold in your goodwill will be ever the end of my endeavours, and the highest object of my ambition; and, finally, I pray the Omnipotent Ruler of the Universe to bless you and smile upon your families, your wives, and your children, concluding by a most effective and instructive recitation of "The Masonic Vows."

On resuming his seat, the distinguished guest was loudly cheered, and for several minutes the room was the scene of pleasurable excitement.

Bro. Dr. Hopkins, in a few well chosen sentences, proposed "The Health of the Chairman," reminding the brethren of the valuable services he has, and is still, rendering to the Province of Jersey, as its de facto ruler, and pointing him out as an example of truthfulness, fidelity, and charity.

The health was received with the greatest warmth by the brethren.

In the course of the evening several songs were admirably sung by amateurs belonging to the fraternity, but particularly Bro. Campbell charmingly entertained the company by his inimitable performance on his instrument, the concertina, and his highly melodious songs, and when 10 o'clock arrived the brethren separated.

The day was one of unmixed enjoyment, and nothing could have been more grateful to the feelings of the guest than to find himself surrounded by so large and distinguished a body of brethren, all of whom were anxious to testify by their presence how highly they appreciated his conduct and character in every relation of life.

IN THE SHADE.

By BRO. CORNELIUS MOORE.

From the VOICE OF MASONRY for August.

I wonder, Bro. Brown, if the bowers on the hill-sides of Lebanon, or those who wrought in the quarries of Zeredatha, endured such weather as this! With the thermometer at ninety-five, what could those old Craftsmen do in the great enterprise in which they were engaged? The hewing and squaring and marking required a good deal of physical effort: and if the heat were as intense as it is just now where your correspondent writes, though it be in the shade, the Temple would not have been completed in two or three times seven years. I received your request to-day for an article on the 10th inst., and this is the 9th in the afternoon, with the mercury standing at ninety-five. But I am in the shade, yet even there the heat is enough to disqualify any one from mental or physical effort. The demand is sudden and unexpected; the "conditions" are unfavourable; and the time too limited by half. Better, far better, repose in the shade of some gigantic cedar on the side of Lebanon, than make an effort to please or instruct your readers under such conditions as these. And yet the workman must not rest or the watchman slumber, when the "good of Masonry" requires his services.

Never, Bro. Brown, in all my varied experience of forty years of active membership in the Order, has there been more urgent need of tireless effort against the enemies of an institution, whose sole object is to benefit humanity, improve society, and make men better and wiser and more philanthropic. Editors of Masonic journals must be on the qui vive, Masters of lodges should feel the heavy responsibilities pressing upon them, and every Craftsman in the ranks should stand at his post, or labour incessantly "for the public good." We need not look abroad for the enemy; they are not filling up Lebanon with secret step and on evil intent, to entrap the faithful and prevent the work; they are not approaching by hidden paths the busy scenes of Zeredatha to drive the workmen from their toil, but they are domestic foes, not foreign foes, who are most to be dreaded at the present juncture.

Freemasonry, nor indeed any other good cause, is never so much in danger from avowed enemies as from its own professed friends. We can take care of the former; the latter are far the more insidious and dangerous. May I venture the assertion that popularity is more to be dreaded than avowed opposition? Yet it is so with all associations and ever has been.

The Order never stood higher in public favour than to-day. Why? In England it is increasing in a ratio never witnessed before; but it is solely because of its moral and social influence, its practical exemplification of its ancient teachings; or the eclat which results from the favour and patronage of the Royal Family? The Prince of Wales—his apparent to the throne—is the Grand Master, and his brother, a younger scion of the family, occupies a prominent position in the Craft. The reflections of light and influence from this source crowd the corridors of the Temple with earnest petitioners, each anxious to become a "brother" to "his Royal Highness," and thus bask, to some extent at least, in light reflected from the throne.

How is it in our favoured country? Each one who makes application to become a Freemason declares that he does so from no mercenary motives, but in order that he may be useful to his fellow men; yet how many of these declarations are sincere? They seem to be so, and possibly are intended to be so at the time when made; but if you could analyse the promptings of the movement, is it not possible that other motives and other objects too often suggest the action? I would not like to question the sincerity of these professions, but the after-glow, instead of throwing a halo around these preliminary actions, too often covers them with doubt and insincerity. The future frequently reveals the fact that underneath these glowing and apparently sincere professions there was (possibly unconsidered) a desire to add to the number of personal friends with a view to an increase of business or personal popularity, a position in society, or a vote at the elections!

You may smile at the suggestion, but I am persuaded that the real motive which induces an application for initiation is often hidden and unexpressed. There is a compliance with the form prescribed—an adoption of the verbal formula written or printed, but the secret purpose is behind all this—covered and concealed from the knowledge of others. This is not always the case—I would gladly believe not in a majority of cases; and yet the applicant's record in the future too often betrays the hidden motives which prompted his signature to that formal declaration. I will give an amusing instance, by way of illustration, and as an evidence of the truth of my averment.

Nearly forty years ago I was Master of a lodge when a young man made application for initiation. I had no personal knowledge of him, but he came "well recommended," and seemed to be a young man of good character and good common sense. His application was accepted, and he was elected to receive the First Degree. At the proper time he was initiated, but he did not appear to be pleased with the ceremonies attending his reception. I could not understand it, and subsequently enquired of his personal friend, who had brought in his application. He told me that the young man had acquired some peculiar notions about the personal identity and appearance of his Satanic Majesty. He had read the goblin stories published by the anti-Masons, then fresh in the minds of young men, and was infatuated with the idea that Masonry must have some kind of connection with the supernatural. He therefore expected, and hoped, at his initiation, to get a sight of "auld clouty;" and because he did not, he never applied for another degree! Such was the difference between the secret motive which moved him to make application and that expressed by his lips in the ante-room of the lodge. Others are moved by other motives, not expressed, instead of the correct ones; and, in the after years of their Masonic connection, give evidence that their first profession was false. And yet, after all, may it not be, in part at least, the fault of those who bring in the applications? Should they not, in advance, explain to the friends who desire admission the nature of our Institution, and what will be expected of all those who become members of it, and, in addition, advise them, if they have any other motives than such as are expressed in the declaration they will be required to make, that they had better remain "outside the Tyler's door?" We might not receive so many applications, and we should have fewer members of the Order, but we should have far better ones, and the Institution would be much stronger in every element of social and moral strength, and of far greater usefulness and influence in community. Indeed, it would be well if Masters of lodges were required to see that such explanations were carefully made in advance to all who proposed to become applicants for admission to our mysteries.

Charity is said to be the foundation and cope-stone of our mystic edifice, and every initiate is taught that, in addition to a strict morality, the exercise of a broad and liberal charity will be expected of him. Indeed, Freemasonry is supposed to be a great charitable institution, "doing good to all, but especially to those of the household of faith." But I utter it, not so much in the nature of a complaint, as in the statement of it as a fact—that a large percentage of our initiates in after life are, in this regard, "no better than other men." Where are the great institutions of benevolence we have founded for the widow and the orphan, for the aged and the infirm? "and echo answers, where?" Of all the Grand Lodges in the United States, I know of but one which has in this regard redeemed its implied promise to community. Kentucky has laid the foundations, broad and deep, of an institution which is an honour to the Freemasons within its jurisdiction; and though but partially completed, already provides for the care and education of more than a hundred orphans of deceased indigent Freemasons. In this great and good work she has excelled all her sisters on the continent, and won a distinction which may be her pride and boast in all the future. Her members remember the pledge and promise they gave when about to be initiated.

Ohio attempted to achieve the same "noble and glorious undertaking" before Kentucky. The membership at large were in favour of it, and were willing to give liberally for the establishment and support of a home for widows and orphans of deceased Freemasons, but the scheme was ultimately killed in Grand Lodge by men who, having ample means themselves, did not seem to care for the woes and wants of the helpless and destitute. They had forgotten that "sincere wish to be serviceable to their fellow men," the widow and the orphan were ignored in the scramble for place and power.

And now, how is it with Illinois? You have the largest Grand Lodge in America, with one exception, and that one has incurred a fearful debt in the effort to erect a magnificent structure for a Grand Lodge Hall. The intention, as expressed, was to provide a source of revenue for the orphan. I hope it will be accomplished, as it ought to be, with the large resources of that fraternal body; but I fear another generation will have passed away before the work is accomplished. There are noble men, genuine Masons, and vast resources among the Craft in New York, and the work should have been accomplished in one generation at farthest.

Masonic and General Tidings.

ROYAL VISIT TO THE THUNDERER.—The "Thunderer," a double-screw iron turret-ship, armoured-plated, Captain John W. Wilson, which has been lying for some days in Cowes Roads, in company with the "Lord Warden," as a guardship, on the 11th of August got up steam and left her moorings for the purpose of proceeding up the Solent to Osborne Bay, where she dropped her anchor, in anticipation of a visit from Her Majesty, who drove down from Osborne House for the purpose. The Queen arrived at the Royal Pier soon after three o'clock, and was rowed to the "Thunderer," where she was received by Captain Wilson, Commander Lord Charles Beresford, and the other officers of the ship, while the "Lord Warden" fired a royal salute. Her Majesty, who was here joined by the Prince of Wales, was conducted over the whole of the ship, which she minutely examined, expressing her great satisfaction with all the arrangements. After spending about an hour on board, Her Majesty returned to Osborne. In the morning the Prince of Wales went on board, when some torpedo practice was done. Each torpedo was charged with about 100lb. of gunpowder, and when the discharge took place a mountain of water was projected high into the air, preceded by a rumbling noise like distant thunder, and so severe was the explosion that hardly a vessel lying in any part of the roadstead but felt the shock. The Prince of Wales and a distinguished party again visited the ship on the 13th. His Royal Highness went on board at a quarter-past ten, and in fifteen minutes afterwards the ship was under way. After manœuvring in order to show her steering capabilities, she proceeded at a speed of eleven knots to the eastward, and on reaching the back of the Wight she cleared for action, and dropped a target formed of three flags fastened to three barrels lashed together. Steaming round a circle with the target as a centre, she fired four rounds from each of her great guns, namely, three empty common shells and one Palliser shell with full charges of powder. Although the target was not hit, yet, had the object fired at been an enemy, the practice was so excellent that the ship would have been hulled at every round. The target was also fired at by both of her Gatling guns and also by small arms, the practice being also very good. An electric broadside, consisting of two 38-ton guns and two 35-ton guns, loaded with Palliser shells and battering charges, was next fired by his Royal Highness from the pilot tower. The shot fell close to the target, the noise of the discharge almost stunning the spectators on the hurricane deck. The target was next rammed by the "Thunderer" for the purpose of showing in miniature the manœuvre of ramming an enemy in action. The vessel then returned to Cowes.—The Broad Arrow.

DECEASED SEAMEN.—The balance unclaimed arising from the wages and effects of deceased seamen was, as appears from a Parliamentary paper just issued, on the 31st of December, 1875, £12,061 11s. 7d. cash, and £50,000 in Exchequer bills.

The directors of the London and North-Western Railway recommend a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of six per cent. per annum, being at the same rate as that for the corresponding period of 1876.

MR. RUSKIN AND MR. LOWE.—We take the following "morceau" from the Times:—Mr. Ruskin's periodical Fors Clavigera contains the following letter from Mr. Lowe:—"My Dear Ruskin,—Thank you, for yours, which I have read eagerly, but without being able to make out what you are at. You are hard on Mr. Keble and the poor lady who 'dresses herself and her children becomingly.' If ever your genuine brickmaker gets hold of her and her little ones—as he very likely may do some day—he will surely tear them to pieces, and say that he has your authority for thinking that he is doing God a service. Poor lady!—and yet dressing becomingly and looking pleasant are a great deal harder and better worth doing than brickmaking. You make no allowance for the many little labours and trials (the harder to do and bear, perhaps, because they are so little) which she must meet with, and have to perform in that trivial round of visiting and dressing. As it is, she is at least no worse than a flower of the field. But what prizes would she and her husband become if they did actually take to dilettante (i.e., non-compulsory) brickmaking! In their own way almost all 'rich' people, as well as the so-called 'poor'—who, man, woman, and child, pay £5 each per annum in taxes on intoxicating drinks—do eat their bread in the sweat of their faces; for the word you quote 'is very broad,' and more kinds of bread than one, and more sorts of sweat than one, are meant therein." "A letter, this," Mr. Ruskin says, "which every time I read it overwhelms me with deeper amazement."

Another attempt has been made by Mr. Cavill to swim across the Channel, and with success. He started from Cape Griznez at forty minutes past three o'clock on Monday afternoon, and arrived within fifty yards of the English shore about forty-five minutes past three on Tuesday morning, but could not land in consequence of the roughness of the water. After a short rest at Dover he appeared none the worse for his trip.

ECLIPSE OF THE MOON.—On Thursday night there was a total eclipse of the moon, visible at Greenwich. The first contact with the penumbra took place at 8.4 p.m., and the first contact with the shadow at 9.14 p.m.; middle of eclipse, 11.11 p.m.; last contact with shadow (Friday morning), 1.9 a.m.; with penumbra, 2.19 a.m.

The Mayor of Limerick, Mr. James Spaight, formally opened the People's Park in that city, and handed it over in trust for the citizens. Lord Emly took part in the proceedings. The park, which is one of the prettiest in Ireland, is laid out as a tribute of respect to the commercial integrity, enterprise, and philanthropy of the late Mr. Richard Russell, brother of the late Francis Russell, who represented Limerick for many years. The ground was given by the Earl of Limerick.

The Great Western Railway Company has declared a dividend at the rate of 3½ per cent., carrying over a balance of about £14,700.

Grand Master for Cornwall, and family at Mount Edgcumbe, Devon, in order to be present at the nuptials of the Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P., and Lady Beatrix Lambton, eldest daughter of the Earl of Durham, and granddaughter of the Duke and Duchess.

CHANCERY LANE.—A correspondent writing to the Daily Telegraph, calls attention to a "petty abuse of power" by the Strand Board of Works, who, he says, refuse to meet the Holborn and City of London Boards, in completing the system of wood pavement; so that one-fourth of Chancery-lane is left with a stone roadway.

We are informed that Lord Skelmersdale, Seneschal of the Order of the Temple, has been appointed Great Prior of England in the room of the late Earl of Shrewsbury. The Prince of Wales, as Grand Master, could not have made a better appointment, or one which would be more universally popular.

A great fete in aid of the funds of the Metropolitan and City Police Orphanage took place on Wednesday at the Alexandra Palace. Sir Edward Lee has undertaken to manage the Dublin Exhibition Palace for one-and-twenty years. The worthy knight intends to approach his work with spirit. EVENING STAR LODGE.—The consecration of this lodge will take place on Tuesday next, at 4 o'clock, at Freemasons' Hall, Gt. Queen-street. The ceremonies will be performed by Bro. John Hervey, assisted by Bro. H. G. Buss, and the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C., as Chaplain.—A report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

The Times announces that the illness of Prince Albert Victor is at length approaching a favourable termination. The relapse, which occurred on the 11th inst., subsided after five days, and since Friday, the 17th, the course of convalescence has been satisfactory. It is hoped that the Prince may be able to leave for Osborne on Saturday next, and although the fever has been protracted, there is every prospect of a complete recovery without any permanent injury to the health. There must still, of course, be a long period of weakness to be passed through.

The Bavarian contingent having at last adopted the Mauser rifle, the whole of the German Army will shortly be equipped with that weapon.

We learn from the Daily News that at Toulouse the Prefect has dissolved all the Masonic lodges, on the ground that they had become centres of political propagandism.

NOTES ON ART, &amp;c.

The dispersion by auction, by Messrs. Potting and Simpson, of Leicester-square, of the old family library founded by Sir Edward Nicholas (Principal Secretary of State to King Charles I.) brought to light some unique and otherwise rare books, among others—lot 225, Blaeu, "Le Grand Atlas," 11 vols, 1662, £23; lot 228, Book of Common Prayer, 1662, the "Sealed Book," probably Charles II.'s copy, having the Royal arms on one side, £48; lot 517, "Mr. William Shakespeare's Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies," the third edition, 1664, with an additional copy of the verses by Ben Jonson printed separately on a fly-leaf, £107; lot 528, "Sully's Memoirs," two vols., 1638, a presentation copy to Sir Edward Nicholas, £30; lot 553, Earl Coningsby's collections concerning the Manor of Marden, privately printed 1722-27, £100.

An interesting discovery has just been made at Tamworth, in Staffordshire. While a man was engaged in excavating for the erection of a wall near the Board Schools, he came upon a small leaden box, which on being opened was found to contain some 300 coins. Some of them bear the impress of Stafford, Berwick, and Hereford. They appear to belong to the time of William I. and William Rufus, but it is intended to submit the coins to competent authorities for examination.

A public meeting of the inhabitants of Kew has been convened, to ask that the gardens may be opened earlier. The Surrey Comet says that on the last Bank Holiday about 500 persons were congregated before 11 o'clock in the morning in front of the principal entrance, waiting until the gate should be opened at 1 o'clock. There was a great deal of drinking and roystering in consequence of this delay, and many of those assembled could not have spent a happy day in the gardens. The Kew people have abandoned a request for the opening of the glass houses before 1 o'clock, as it is understood that this would interfere with the scientific work which has to be performed there, and they simply ask for admission to the grounds at an earlier hour. It is also intended to request the authorities to abandon the work of raising the existing wall. It is already ten or 12 feet high, excluding all view from the road, and the intended addition of three feet would materially add to its ugliness, without answering any useful purpose.

THE TELEPHONE.—"Practical Telegraphist" writes:—"In your report of the account given of the telephone by Mr. Preece, at Plymouth, on Friday last, it is stated that conversation could not be carried on at Exeter because the wire on which the telephone was being worked would come in contact with other wires used for business purposes. Will you allow me to suggest that what was probably intended to be conveyed to the minds of this highly scientific audience was, that a certain inductive action would be set up, which would neutralise or destroy the currents sent through the telephone wire? For this reason I imagine the telephone will never be workable on submarine cables of more than one wire; and if, as has been stated, its use on land lines in England will necessitate the erection of independent wires, its value for commercial or even practical purposes must be very doubtful. In America, with long lengths of single wire, and a fine dry climate, the telephone may perhaps come into use practically. But in England, with most of the telegraph lines already overweighted, and a damp moist climate, it is hardly likely to become more than an electrical toy, or drawing-room telegraph, or at most a kind of electrical speaking tube."

SWEDENBORGIAN RITE.

It may be interesting for our readers to learn what progress has been effected within a few months in the above rite, which is now gathering strength in this country.

The rite itself is only of recent re-introduction in England, but unquestionably was practised in London a century ago by the immediate Masonic friends of Swedenborg himself, and it contains much to interest members of the Craft who look philosophically into Masonic science. Past Masters and companions of the Royal Arch will especially gather many suggestive ideas from the very elaborate ceremonials of this rite, which is strictly conferred on Master Masons only. The Ritual is much longer than that of Craft Masonry, of which it is the complement, inasmuch as the lectures are incorporated into the ceremony, and require close attention in order that they may be appreciated.

The following lodges and temples now exist in the United Kingdom: 1, Emanuel, at Weston-super-Mare; 2, Egyptian, Masonic Hall, Manchester; 3, St. John's, at Baddon, Shipley, Yorkshire; 4, Swedenborg, Havant, Hants; 5, Edina, Edinburgh; 6, Liverpool; 7, Cagliostro, Keynshaw, Somerset; and 8, Hermes, London, each of these lodges being under the government of an experienced member of the Craft as Worshipful Master. Several other lodges are being formed, under dispensation, and the coming Masonic season will no doubt show a large increase in their strength.

A cheque for one hundred guineas has been received at the Mansion House from the Princess of Wales as a contribution to the Indian Famine Relief Fund.

The Countess of Leicester on Wednesday laid the foundation stone of a convalescent home at Hunstanton, which is about to be erected as a memorial of the recovery of the Prince of Wales from his serious illness a few years ago.

We hear that Mrs. Cralk, the authoress of "John Halifax, Gentleman," and other well known works, has been bitten by a dog. Although the wound was rather a severe one, the patient is doing very well, and no vil results are anticipated.—Medical Examiner.

THE SPECIAL COURT OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

By an unanimous resolution the proposed increase of the Boys' School, at an approximate expenditure of £3000, to take in 32 boys, was agreed to on Monday last, and measures will at once be taken to carry out the present needful and proposed extension. We are glad to state that it was distinctly understood that if the necessities of the Institution demand it, the School could be still further increased by another 100 boys, and we feel persuaded that in about two years the School will have to be enlarged to that extent, as the yearly demands upon it are increasing instead of diminishing. Then will be the time to consider both the admission of fresh orphans, and the need of a preparatory school. Both these contingencies are, in our opinion only a question of time, and when the requirements of the School and the Craft imperatively ask for such an addition, we have no fear or doubt what the response will be. But just now this moderate extension will suffice for our pressing wants, and we think it better to look always at the good old motto, "festina lente," than by unadvisable haste to arouse the complaints of the captious, or the opposition of the fault finding. We may add, from all that we hear, never was the School so flourishing or so thoroughly efficient as now. Under Bro. Dr. Morris, it is rapidly attaining a character for steady progress and good work. We believe that there is but one wish in the Order, namely, to afford to it a warm, a generous, and an united support.

A FEW WORDS TO THE ROMAN CATHOLIC AUTHORITIES.

We wish to ask these right reverend and sapient gentlemen whether they really think that any good can possibly accrue to religion or Roman Catholicism by the repetition of such acts of intolerance as disgraced the good town of Macclesfield on Monday? For there it was, it seems, that Canon Walker, (such was the good man's name), refused the rites of a religious funeral to a Roman Catholic Freemason, T. Tynan Delaney, an excise officer under supervisor Purchas, in the Macclesfield District. Delaney, who was 27 years of age, was only seized with illness on the previous Saturday, and he had attended the Roman Catholic place of worship a fortnight ago. Orders were given by the deceased's family for the preparation of a grave in the Roman Catholic portion of the Macclesfield Cemetery, and Canon Walker was requested to officiate. It appears, however, that it had come to the knowledge of the rev. gentleman that Delaney was a Freemason, and he therefore refused to commit the body to the grave, remarking that it was contrary to the rules of his church to inter a member of any secret society. Now we are quite aware what the Roman Catholic reply will be, to our complaint of intolerance, namely, that they are bound by the various allocutions of Pius the Ninth, based professedly on the anterior Bulls of Pius VII. Leo, Benedict, and Clement. The Roman Catholic position is this—"we are compelled to obey the orders of our superiors," and this, if true, is one, no doubt, which deserves every consideration. But two points come in here, which we beg to press upon the attention of the Roman Catholic authorities. Is not the Bull of Clement, now among the Bulls "non usitate," even in the Roman Catholic church, for many of the Bulls of the Roman Catholic Popes are admittedly in this category? Under the Bull of Clement not only are all Freemasons to be handed over to the Inquisition and the secular arm and their property confiscated but the master of the house in which the lodge is held is to be heavily fined, imprisoned, and his house pulled down. We apprehend that no Roman Catholic canonist, and no Roman Catholic lawyer would hold such a bull to be "foro conscientie," or obligatory. It is in fact altogether, "caput mortuum," a deceased bull in as far as Roman Catholic authority and discipline are concerned, and cannot be revived by the allocutions of Pius IX. The infallibility of the occupant of the see of St. Peter comes in here "proprio vigore," to render what is defunct, living, what is obsolete, new. And secondly have such Bulls any force in England whatever? We doubt it greatly, even on Roman Catholic teaching, inasmuch as they are illegal "ipso facto." The laws of Edward III and Richard II, as regards bulls and premunire have not yet been repealed, and no Roman Catholic Bulls, except under pain of premunire can legally be promulgated in England by any Roman Catholic authority. In consequence of their actual illegality, these Roman Catholic Bulls have never been published in England, nor can they be, and therefore, according to Roman Catholic canonists, they can have no binding obligations on the clergy or laity of the Roman Catholic obedience within this "Realms of England." "Lex non est nisi promulgata." We say nothing here of the scandal caused by such acts of unreason and intolerance to all who reverence religion and admire the divine teaching of pure charity, by the refusal of the last rites of the Roman Catholic Religion to Freemasons qua Freemasons. The only effect of such unwise perversity is to shake the authority of the Church of Rome over its own people, because such harshness to a Roman Catholic, only because he is a Freemason, is felt to be alike impolitic, unjust and even irreligious. We know of a case, for instance, where a poor foreign Roman Catholic Freemason was denied the rites of Christian sepulture by the Roman Catholic Authorities, because he refused to give up his Order, and where the whole Roman Catholic community, turned out and reverently listened to the service of the Church of England read over our deceased brother, by a Clergyman of the Anglican Church, a distinguished dignitary of our Order. So in the present case, Roman Catholics accepted the services of a clergyman of the Church of England, Mr. Hurst of Hurdfield, who we hope to hear, is also a brother of our Order. In the interests of common sense and true religion we protest against the disrespect to their own religionists thus evinced by the Roman Catholic Clergy, but as they are apparently in their present "scare" in respect of Freemasonry, lost apparently to the sense of what is kindly, what is even decent, and as moreover they are intent in their blindness on cursing the living that we cannot expect them to exhibit (as a recent South American case has shown us), either mercy or good feeling towards the dead.

THE ATROCITIES OF WAR.

We recur to this subject, because since we wrote, horrors seem to be accumulating on horrors, and disgrace upon disgrace to the sacred cause of civilization and humanity. Let our readers think over the following two paragraphs from a letter of a correspondent of The Times, under date August 3, and we feel sure that the one sentiment which will animate their minds, as it did ours, will be that of strong loathing and indignant shame at such fearful crimes, at such detestable barbarism. "Yesterday I visited a large Bulgarian village of upwards of 300 houses that had been sacked, burnt, and the people massacred by the Bashi-Bazouks on the 30th of July. The village is called Kara-atli, about 16 miles from Timova, towards Philippopolis. The place is a total wreck, hardly one stone standing on another. It is more completely destroyed than any other I have visited. The people had all fled, so it is difficult to say what became of them, though the account of the survivors seems probable enough. This is that a great many of them had left before the 30th, and gone to Philippopolis, but about 900 remained, chiefly women and children. They all ran away into the woods and fields on the approach of the Bashi-Bazouks, and many were caught and slaughtered at once, and others are roaming about until a similar fate overtakes them. Of the few corpses I saw, the most shocking was a woman with her head half hacked off, her clothes all torn away at the waist, and the body half burnt. Dogs and pigs were devouring the bodies, while donkeys and cattle strayed through the roads ownerless. The school had not been burnt, and had evidently been the scene of a terrible fray. Blood on the floors and doorposts, and all kinds of household gear, school-books and other things in the greatest confusion, told the same dreadful tale. The spelling-books and childish copy-books appealed powerfully to every human instinct within one. This affair of Kara-atli, however, sinks into insignificance before the appalling horror of the massacre at Geula-Mahilisse. It appears that on the 26th a strong force, under Raouf Pasha, made a reconnaissance from Yeni-Saghra, and spent a night near the village above named, which is situated a little off the line of rail between Yeni-Saghra and Tirnova. After the force had left, a large body of Circassians returned to the village, and in the first place carried off an immense number of young girls, whose fate can only be guessed at. They then returned to the village, and found that the remainder of the women and children had fled for protection to the church. There they slaughtered them all, and from that church Col. Lennox and Lieutenant Chermiside, R.E., military attachés, and Messrs. Leslie and Meyrick, of the Aid to the Sick and Wounded Society, brought out and buried 175 bodies of women and children. Besides these there were many others killed in different places about the village, and 36 wounded had their wounds dressed by the above-named medical officers. These eye-witnesses describe the scene in the church as something indescribably awful. The dead and the dying were piled in suffocating heaps, little children crawling about looking for their mothers, wounded mothers trying to move those ghastly heaps to find their children, and when found hardly able to recognize them with the fearful sword cuts about their little heads. Many women had been violated and subjected to fearful barbarities, pregnant women ripped open, while others had their breasts cut off, or their hands chopped off at the wrist. A mother lay stone dead and her baby was vainly endeavouring to get the food for which it was starving, while an older child was calling and pushing the dead woman to try and make her awake. Even while these gentlemen were in the village the murdering was going on at another part, and so threatening were these ferocious ruffians that their lives stood in very great danger. A Circassian from behind a hedge took a deliberate shot at Mr. Meyrick, but missed him. Now we do not insert this from any love of the "dreadful," or any tendency to sensationalism, but simply in the interests of that common Humanity so dear to our Masonic Order. Without entering into affairs of State or political complications, we cannot, but as Freemasons and lovers of humanity help expressing fervently the hope, that the day may not be far distant, (if the Turkish Government continues to allow the excesses as The Times correspondent says, of such "vermin,") when Lord Derby will think well to protest against such unmitigated atrocities, by the withdrawal of their representative at Constantinople of that great and generous Country, which has ever been foremost in the march of civilization, and in zealous endeavours in the holy cause of philanthropy and benevolence, and has no wish to participate, even by implication in deeds which are a dishonour to God and a horror to man.

THE DETECTIVE SYSTEM.

We quite agree with our contemporary The Times, alike in the need of enquiry, and in the general tenour of its leader. But we wish to point out a few considerations to day which may be lost sight of in the general excitement and "scare" on the subject. We must be on our guard against exaggeration and the deliberate "animus" of those closely and intimately mixed up with the criminal population. The great difficulty which the police of the metropolis have to contend with is the "Fence System," and it is evident that as many receivers of stolen property, many aiders and abettors of the swindler and the smasher, and the burglar, and the common thief, are in apparently reputable positions, and live on the "per centages," which necessarily are enormous, the business being properly considered "hazardous," the obstacles in the way of successful detection are increased a hundred fold. We do not then join in the public outcry, because we feel persuaded that it is essentially in the interest of those who do not object to spend money for the purpose of circulating any sort of report tending to the depravation of the Police Force in order that in the confusion they may "improve the occasion." But we confess that we think there are one or two points to which enquiry should be directed, and to which attention should be paid. We have long been among those who have thought that our detective force never would be what it ought to be, for the mere purpose, mind, of criminal detection, so long as a great change did not take place in the system under which it is formed, and the remuneration which is offered to the skilled detective. We hold it to be a radical mistake, at the bottom of much of the present dilemma, that all detectives should have served as efficient members of the divisional police, bound to be active policemen previous to being placed on the list of officers in "plain clothes." There are many men, born detectives, so to say, who will not go through the drudgery of day and night work; there are many men, per contra, whom you may call detectives if you like, but nothing will ever render them really detectives. Detection is, per se, a great art. It requires coolness of head and clearness of vision, a good character and sound judgment; a resolution to attend carefully to evidence, not to listen to prejudice, and above all, a thorough understanding of the constitutional position of a policeman, on the one hand, and of an English citizen on the other. Such men as these are to be found, and when found they are to be valued and made much of. For the real great defect is the insufficiency of pay. To ensure the services of such "skilled detectives" as we have hinted at, the rate of pay must be considerably increased, in order to enable them to be entirely independent of all external influences, and especially that "squaring" process, which, owing to other circumstances to which we will subsequently allude, is rather fashionable just now. Of course it is true that those "who will be squared," as someone has said, will be "squared," whatever their income may be, but as a general rule, we apprehend, when this regrettable state of things exists, it arises from circumstances over which detective officer Jones has no control, or rather from circumstances which control detective officer Jones whether he will or no. We think, therefore, that to a superior class of men, with a higher rate of pay, the detection of crime should at any rate be committed, and that the whole of our detective system requires re-organization and re-adjustment, especially on the two points we have mentioned. But there is, as The Times most justly reminds us, another system which has cropped up of late years, namely that of counterfeit police work, amateur detection, secret or special agency. That distinguished judge, Sir Cresswell Cresswell, originally pointed out the evil and degrading tendency of this pernicious system, and each year since he spoke has only served to show how true were his words, and how dangerous the profession in itself is to both the liberties of Englishmen and the administration of justice. We have no doubt of its absolute illegality. We feel sure, for instance, that we are laying down the law on the subject correctly when we say, that no one has a right to follow about an English citizen professing to be a police-officer, except on duty legally as a police-officer, and that any such conduct is "tending to excite a breach of the peace," and would be restrained by any of our police magistrates when properly stated to them. For the law happily assumes a citizen to be innocent until he is found to be guilty, and it is most unconstitutional for any special agent to assume as an amateur the functions alone belonging to the police, and to subject any Englishman whatever to the pain of "surveillance," the appearance of police observation. Sheriff's officers, and police officers have alone the power of carrying on such a process by the law of England. Many of the special agents are old police officers, naturally on terms of familiar acquaintance with the force, and as they are not particular as to what they spend if only they compass their ends, it is not to be wondered at that many a zealous police officer, many an able detective is unable to refuse the offers of bowls of "swiftly flowing champagne," or seasonable offerings of shining sovereigns and comfortable offers of crisp if slippery "flimsies." Owing to the mistaken "camaraderie," (for some of these "amateur policemen" bear the worst of characters—enquire at Scotland Yard) the line of demarcation between the police officer and the special agent is easily obliterated, and many deeds of wrong and robbery are constantly committed by those, who for the nonce assuming "leave and licence" pass themselves off as respectable detective officers, when they are nothing more and nothing less than disreputable special agents. We have written all this, in the best of feeling towards our Metropolitan Police Force, whether divisional or detective. We hope and believe that when this temporary cloud has passed away, it will resume its normal character, of energy, of zeal, of skill, of uprightness, and of steadiness, and retain, as we feel sure it can do, the good opinion of all classes in this great metropolis, to which it has rendered such signal services in times past, and of which it is alike both the watchful guardian and the effective protection.

THE ALBERT MEDAL.

We are glad to think that the Albert Medal has been most properly conferred by Royal authority on those gallant Welsh miners who so nobly laboured to extricate their comrades from a living grave. We are among those who have often thought that it would be well if there was some decoration by which civil merit might be recognised, and which, somewhat different from military rewards might well appeal to a chivalrous sense, both of honour and patriotic duty. We are therefore glad to record the grant of the Albert Medal to Welsh Colliers, and we call attention to a characteristic letter of one of the recipients. We do not see why the Albert Medal may not be more extensively utilized, and receive a wider application.

BRO. DR. MORRIS.

We are glad to hear that the Canadian authorities have made the English Grammars of Bro. Dr. Morris (Head Master of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys) the standard works on that subject in Canadian schools. We learn, to, that Dr. Morris' "Primer of English Grammar" has had a very extensive sale in India. Dr. Morris has in the press an exercise book, to be used with the "Primer."

Original Correspondence.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for, or even as approving of the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but we wish, in a spirit of fair play to all, to permit—within certain necessary limits—free discussion.—Ed.]

OUR GREAT METROPOLITAN HOSPITALS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I quite concur, for one, in the opinions you have, as Editor, expressed on this subject, and also with the general sketch you have given of the question.

Archæologically, it may interest your readers to know what the mediæval provision for hospitals, &c., was. Some of them seem to have been founded at "places of pilgrimage," others along the high roads, for the entertainment of pilgrims and travellers, while a large portion seem to have been conjoined with the monastic institutions.

Thus at St. Edmundsbury a hospital existed at the four gates of the town. At Reading there was the hospital at St. Mary Magdalene for leprous persons, and leazar houses existed at all the ports of embarkation, and there were many famous like houses, as at Sherburn, in Durham, and elsewhere.

There was a hospital at Fountains Abbey for poor persons and pilgrims, and a well-known one at Glastonbury for the same purpose. At one time there were 370 of these receptacles for the poor, suffering, and wayfaring, scattered up and down England. The earliest actual hospital, purely for certain brethren and sisters, the sick and infirm poor, and lying-in hospital for women, is St. Bartholomew's, which was founded in the 12th century, by "Rahere, first Canon and Prior."

It was not, however, as you have said, until the last century that the infirmary and hospital movement took firm foundation and actual development in England. Abroad, as some of us may know, the hospitals for the sick poor are of early date and long continuance. The whole theory of the hospital and infirmary is of gratuitous medical treatment as an act of humanitarian and personal kindness, and any proposal to change such a system is alike revolutionary and absurd. It is change for change sake.

Yours fraternally,

ARCHÆOLOGIST.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A is a subscribing member to a lodge; B, a visitor to the said lodge. A, objects sitting in lodge with B, and his reason for acting as such is that, having been libelled and grossly insulted, it is a thing impossible. C., the W. M., requests that the two brethren retire and settle their difference. A. declines to retire. C. rules that the two brethren remain in lodge; if this don't suit, A. may retire from the lodge. A. protests against the ruling of the W. M. and asks to retire.

The question arises, is the W. M. "censurable" by the Grand Lodge of England, for the partiality shown to the visitor?

In my humble opinion a visitor cannot claim entry to a lodge if the subscribing member finds it impossible to sit with him.

Yours fraternally,

E. M.

EXPRESS FOR THIRD CLASS FARES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I was much pleased to see your paper had given notice of the above movement, which has been talked of in Yorkshire, Lancashire, and Derbyshire.

There is no doubt that the public generally owe Mr. Allport, of the Midland Railway, a debt of gratitude for what he has done in reducing fares and adding to the comfort of railway travellers. Besides which the directors of the Midland system act with more liberality to their servants and their wives and families in giving them free passes during the excursion seasons, to enable them to enjoy themselves at the sea side or elsewhere as their inclinations lead them.

I have been a railway servant about twenty years, and have always had a pass for myself and wife until now; when, through some freak of the directors (not the Midland) I have been mulcted of the one for my wife this year.

I suppose railway servants ought not to have wives.

I do hope the public will respond to the proposition you have made in your journal.

Yours fraternally,

H. W.

THE TYNEWYDD COLLIERS.

[We take the following characteristic letter from The Times of August 17th.]

Sir,—I should be much obliged if you would be so kind to put these few lines in your newspaper. I wish to thank Her Majesty the Queen for the First Class Albert Medal which Lord Aberdeen was commissioned to present. And next, I thank Major Duncan for presenting me with the Medal of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem. Then I wish to thank the Lord Mayor and the subscribers to the Mansion House Fund and others for the money I have received from them; and I wish to thank the Members of Parliament for their kindness in presenting me with a watch and chain. I wish to say I am very proud of the rewards that I have received, and little did I think the public would take as much interest in it as they did when we were working to rescue the men.

Porth, Rhondda Valley.

ISAAC PRIDE, Collier.

THE RUBENS TRICENTENARY.—The Queen has permitted photographs to be taken of the Rubens pictures at Buckingham Palace for the Antwerp Exhibition of copies of works of the master, which begins on the 19th inst. The King of Sweden, the Madrid Museum, the galleries of Oldenburg, Munich, Dresden, Cassel, the Hague, Dublin, and several French galleries have contributed copies of their pictures, as have the Duke of Buckingham and Earl Spencer. The Madrid Museum has sent not less than 30 new photographs. There are 1500 pictures known as the works of Rubens in existence, and the catalogue of the Exhibition shows the variety of subjects treated. It is in the following sections:—Old Testament, New Testament, sacred history and allegory, virgins, saints, fable, profane history and allegory, portraits, hunting pictures, landscapes, miscellaneous subjects. There are very many different treatments, which it will be interesting to compare, of the Adoration of the Magi, the Adoration of the Shepherds, the Descent from the Cross, the Assumption of the Virgin. Besides the photographs and engravings of Rubens, some relics of the master will be exhibited, such as the sword given him by the Emperor, his collar, the diamond he wore in his hat, his autographs, and remarkable tapestry belonging to him at the time when, in the character of a leading citizen of Antwerp, he arranged the triumphal entry of Ferdinand of Spain. About 500 pictures by divers artists will be exhibited, with objects of ancient art, besides the Rubens exhibition. The Plantin-Moretus exhibition, in Plantin's house, illustrating the history of printing and engraving in the Low Countries for two centuries and a half, will be opened. The choir for the cantata was to consist of 1000 voices. It is now announced that there will be 1200 performers, and that the chimes of the ancient city and a peal of cannon will be laid under contribution by the composer (Paul Benoit) to increase the volume of sound.

WELSH SPEAKING CLERGY.—The Bishop and the Dean of Bangor have put forth an appeal for £1500 per annum to educate Welsh students at Bangor and Oxford (giving a course of eight years, instruction), to secure a cultured clergy speaking Welsh.

Reviews.

"Deeds of Daring Library.—The Victoria Cross in the Crimea." By MAJOR KNOLLYS, 63rd Highlanders. Dean and Son.

Major Knollys is an agreeable writer, and his works are popular and interesting. We all of us, whatever our age may be, delight in reading feats of heroism, of danger bravely encountered, of perils nobly overcome, and Major Knollys also appeals to an Englishman's pride in the acts of a gallant and devoted army. As Freemasons, we do not lose our sense of patriotism or our admiration of the heroic, and to none do the records which describe how men have won the Victoria Cross in a great war, come with more personal and abiding sympathy than to our many readers, Freemasons though we be all. We need not recur to an "oft told tale" to day, neither will our space permit it. Suffice it to say that to all who like to pore over the accounts of individual gallantry and soldierly daring and which have won the sovereign's approval and the most honourable of distinctions, the Victoria Cross, Major Knollys book will be both acceptable and very readable. We recommend it to those of our numerous friendly subscribers who have not yet forgotten, (let them never forget), their old admiration for the brave, or parted with their pleasure in the annals of the chivalrous and true, like those who compose that fine army we are proud to call our own. People often talk to-day of the degeneracy of the age, but we are among those who firmly believe that wherever the English Army may be, "Quo fas et gloria ducunt" our gallant hosts, they will always manfully do their duty, deserve the approbation of the Queen, and uphold the honour of Old England.

"Eight Years a Blue Coat Boy; or Dundalk's School Days." Dean & Son.

We have read this publication with much pleasure. It is no doubt one of those numerous gay and fluttering little "brochures" which the present "crisis" in the history of the school has called into the full blaze of daylight and which probably otherwise would have been born to "blush unseen and waste their sweetness in the desert air." But still, like Bro. Blanch's work, to which we alluded last week, we are glad to have read it as we think, just as in the former case that it does all credit to the writer, and is likely to do much good in removing prejudice and obviating injustice. It is very amusing in its individuality, so to say, and we think we can fairly predicate for it much popularity and many patrons. We cannot unfortunately, deal with it in detail, but the account of the medical partnership between Dundalk and Gab lot will raise in many of our readers a hearty laugh, though some of us perhaps may think that those eminent practitioners, like some of our acquaintance, have skilfully traded on very little indeed. We shall perhaps be inclined to say that, like the partnership between Bob Sawyer and Mr. Allen, of immortal memory, there was something very "rum" in the whole transaction. To all our readers who have not lost all memories of pleasant school-days and sturdy mates,

The forms, the books,

The glories, the disgraces,

The presence of kind friends,

The looks of old familiar faces, this little work will be very welcome. We are most glad to note that the writer manfully states that the "training and education" he had received at Christ's Hospital are an invaluable preparation for the great battle of life.

"The Church of England Pulpit and Ecclesiastical Review." No. 85, Vol. IV. R. H. Mason, 160, Fleet Street.

We have received this number of a well-known theological journal, which contains two sermons specially deserving attention, namely, one by our esteemed Past Grand Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, and the other by Canon Liddon. It is of course impossible in the Freemason to review as only they can properly be reviewed, sermons, quater sermons, at all, except purely Masonic ones, inasmuch as they impinge on the limits, which in our peaceful Order restrain us carefully and confessedly from all religious controversy and speculation. But we may be permitted, we think, to observe that the sermon of our worthy Past Grand Chaplain is an able and eloquent production, and one which to many will appear alike most effective and convincing; of course, such is the inevitable consequence of all theological positions, that it is almost impossible to dilate upon any point on which the "rabies theologorum" or the "odium theologicum" will not lift up its unhealthy voice. It is a very curious fact per se, account for it how you may, that in nothing do men's minds differ so much and so widely as in religious teaching, and in the assumption of religious dogma, and we shall not, we think, exceed the truth when we say, that with very few exceptions indeed, there is scarcely any assertion of religious doctrine concerning which we do not differ, and must agree to differ now. That it will always be so we do not say; but so it undoubtedly is "pour le moment," regret it as we may, deny it as we will. All that we can say, therefore, is, (for if we said more we should be outstepping the goodly line of demarcation which Freemasonry lays down for all its alumni), that our brother the Past Grand Chaplain maintains effectively, in the sermon we have mentioned, his well-known reputation as a zealous and eloquent preacher.

We need hardly add anything here, as indeed, we equally are estopped Masonically in respect of Canon Liddon's remarkable discourse. His fame as an almost unequalled ecclesiastical orator in his generation is well known in the city of London, and those who venerate the "sanctitas loci" of old St. Paul's may be glad to feel that they are able, within its venerated walls, to listen to arguments alike weighty, striking, logical, and which, while they challenge the admiration of the intellectual and the critical, also strike a most harmonious chord in the sympathies of the believing and the associations of the earnest and religiously minded of those vast congregations who admire his great gifts and listen with rapt attention to his moving words.

"Death of Saul and other Eistedfodd Prize Poems." By J. C. MANNING. J. C. Manning, Swansea.

We have perused this collection of poetry with a great deal of gratification, and we only wish that our space permitted us, (which it does not), to give some specimens of very unique extracts, and some (as we hold) true poetry to our many indulgent readers. We are, however, happy to learn that a full review of this little work will appear in the Masonic Magazine for October, and to it we refer our friends; we have, however, no hesitation in saying that we augur very favourably of the future promise of the writer, and that we shall look forward to still more elaborate representations, both of his power and his ability. Unfortunately so many are the demands on the pages of the Freemason that we have been compelled, despite the pleasing temptation, sternly to proscribe all poetical contributions from our hebdomadal columns. And while we sincerely regret that we cannot give those who honour us with their patronage any selections from Bro. Manning's book, we emphatically recommend it to their favourable notice and perusal. We trust that the review in the Masonic Magazine for October will do full justice to Bro. Manning's meritorious little volume.

"Industry and Idleness: A Moral Contrast." Williams and Son, Eton.

We have received and read with pleasure this useful and interesting little tale. It is alike well put together and suggests a very valuable moral, especially for our young men, who are rather apt to think just now, that others have worked like bees in the hive, and laid up a goodly store of honey, and that, therefore, they may act the part of spendthrift wasps, or idle drones. No greater mistake was ever committed than to suppose that any of us were intended by the Great Architect of the Universe to live in sybaritic idleness here below. It is true that we do not and cannot all walk in the same way, for some must work with their hands and others with their brains, if the fabric of society and of the world is to be safely kept in order, is to move on aright for the happiness and well-being of all classes, the most severed and the most contrasted, rich and poor, all alike. In our opinion no more sad social heresy was ever propounded than that which would maintain the absence of a golden link of brotherhood and common interest running through all classes and all conditions of mankind, and, above all, which would encourage the tendency to make the labours and stores of the past, minister to the selfishness and hurtful habits of a relaxed morality, or the idle follies of the dissipated and the thoughtless. All, remember, have to do something for the common welfare of mankind, be they who they may, "pro bono publico," and nothing is so sad to note in the aimless lives and garish follies, often of all classes amongst us, but especially of far too many of our younger generation, a forgetfulness of their solemn responsibility in this respect. We thank the writer of this effective little tale for calling our attention carefully to the condition and consequences of industry and idleness, as affecting the "morale" of society and the happiness of the "home," and we trust that his ingenious and interesting narrative may have much success and many readers.

Mulum in Parbo; or Masonic Notes and Queries.

ACCOUNT OF THE BUILDING OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.

I have always heard that among the Tanner MSS. in the Bodleian are to be found many of the accounts of the building of St. Paul's Cathedral. Will any kind brother amuse himself during the long vacation by looking over them, and noting their contents.

LELAND'S MSS.

In a history of London it is stated that Leland's MSS. were formerly in the Library at St. James's Palace. If this should meet the eye of our esteemed Bro. Holmes, the Royal Librarian at Windsor Castle, he perhaps might tell us where they are now. I do not know whether there is a library at Buckingham Palace. I have in the meantime asked at the British Museum if they by any chance they are there.

MASONIC STUDENT.

NEW ZEALAND ARCHÆOLOGY.—At a recent meeting of the Christchurch Philosophical Institution, President Haast gave an account of the discovery of remarkable ancient rock paintings in the Waka Pass Ranges. He exhibited careful drawings of them. Some of them are 15 ft. long; they represent animals of foreign countries, weapons, and dresses of semi-civilized people; underneath are characters like those of the Tamil language, and those on the ancient hill found in the North Island. The New Zealand Herald has been informed by a gentleman who has lately returned from Rotorua that a notice has been issued by the natives prohibiting any persons from taking photographs of the scenery unless they pay £5.

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs set to popular airs, written by Bro. E. P. Philpots, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. Sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—ADVT.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

A Special General Court of the Governors and Subscribers of this Institution was held on Monday, at Freemasons' Hall, for the purpose of considering the recommendation of the General Committee that the report of the House Committee on "extension of accommodation," as submitted to the General Committee, be approved and confirmed, and that in accordance therewith the building at Wood Green be enlarged for the reception of 32 additional boys, at the estimated expenditure of £3000. The chair was occupied by Bro. John Symonds, Vice-Patron, and among other brethren present were Bros. Col. Creaton, Joyce Murray, R. B. Webster, John Dennison, S. Rawson, Hyde Pollen, Rev. Dr. Morris, (Head Master), H. Massey, (Freemason), C. F. Matier, A. Durrant, S. B. Wilson, John Healey, John Dence, and F. Binckes (Secretary).

The Chairman said he supposed the Institution had sufficient money to carry out the object proposed without trenching on the invested funds.

Bro. Binckes said they had.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford thought there were some other points which should be brought before the attention of the brethren besides the simple increase of accommodation. If the brethren were going to decide to make an extension of the building, it would be fair to the school to look a little further. It would be advisable that the brethren should see the plans of the proposed new buildings in order that they might clearly understand that if at a future time a greater extension was necessary, there would be room at Wood Green to erect the necessary buildings.

Bro. Binckes said that the present scheme did not interfere with any future scheme.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford said that if two or three years hence the brethren should decide on a further increase in the number of boys to be admitted to the school, they should now understand that it would be possible to add to the building so as to admit altogether 300 boys.

Bro. Binckes observed that the scheme now before the Court would not interfere in any way with such a proposition.

Bro. S. Rawson thought the most serious part of the proposal now before the Court was that it would interfere with the playground.

Bro. Binckes said it was only fifty feet, and it was proposed to give additional playground room from the kitchen garden from the back; and this kitchen garden had always been intended for a playground.

Col. Creaton said that in that case there would be a quid pro quo.

The Chairman asked whether there was space sufficient to give the boys a swimming bath.

Bro. Binckes said there was already a large plunge bath.

The Chairman said that with 180 boys in the school it was necessary there should be a large swimming bath.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford thought the brethren should really know what they were going to do, and not legislate in the dark. This was a special court to select the plans, and the brethren had not yet seen them and knew nothing of them.

Bro. Binckes thereupon left the room and shortly afterwards returned with Bro. S. B. Wilson and the plans. These having been submitted to and examined by the brethren were explained by Bro. Binckes.

In answer to Bro. Webster, the Rev. Dr. Morris said that there were 170 boys already returned to the school, but there were eight who had not yet come back.

The motion before the Court was then proposed by Bro. H. Browne, seconded by Bro. R. B. Webster, and carried unanimously.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford said that before the meeting separated he thought it should go forth, as he knew a great many brethren were anxious about it up and down the country, that if it should be necessary to increase the school, there was plenty of room for an additional wing, which would admit of another 100 boys being placed in the school.

The Chairman ventured to hope that the House Committee would not lose sight of his suggestion, to endeavour to provide swimming baths for the boys.

Bro. Joyce Murray said this was a very important point.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the proceedings.

Bro. Binckes requested the press to take notice that the candidature of William James Parker had been withdrawn.

Experiments have been made with the electric light apparatus on board the Temeraire, at Chatham. The apparatus worked well, the whole of the Dockyard, the Medway, and the surrounding country being illuminated for a considerable distance, so that it would have been impossible for any hostile vessel to have approached within a mile or two without being seen.

FREEMASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

GENERAL GRAND CHAPTER.

The triennial convocation of the General Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of the United States, was to be held in Buffalo on the 21st of August. The triennial assembly of the General Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters was to be held in that city at the same time. The members of the four Chapters and two Councils in Buffalo were making preparations to give their distinguished guests a hearty welcome. The reception will include a procession of the Royal Arch Masons of the city, escorted by the two Commanderies. The public reception was to take place at St. James's Hall, and it was understood that the Hon. George W. Clinton has been invited to deliver the address of welcome. The session will continue three or four days, and the arrangements for entertaining the visitors include a grand banquet and an excursion to Niagara Falls. About two hundred prominent R.A. Masons of the country were expected to be present.

These representatives are eminent in the councils of the fraternity, and will be called upon to deliberate upon several important subjects of more than ordinary interest.

THE NEW JERSEY CONSISTORY.

This body began its quarterly session on Monday, July 30, at 3 p.m. A large amount of business was transacted, occupying several hours. In the evening, after a long and spirited balloting, Ill. Marcus Higginbotham, 33°, was elected First Lieutenant, the vacancy caused by Ill. J. W. Cosad, 33°, succeeding, by virtue of the Constitution of the rite, to the position of Commander-in-Chief, on the death of Ill. Daniel W. Wyman, 33°.

The illustrious brother who thus takes the second office in this Consistory was greatly surprised at his election, he not having been a candidate. Neither party, after many shifts and ballots, being able to maintain a majority, his name was brought forward and obtained it. His acceptance was urged by those who stood from the beginning to the end solid for Ill. Bro. M. M. Drohan, 32°, and by Ill. Bro. Drohan himself.

The selection gives universal satisfaction, and means a compliance with the late amendments to the Constitution, in respect to the number of degrees to be worked before advancement to the 32°, that is, in plain language, that the material for work in this body enlarges, and that half a dozen new men are ready to step forward, to share the honours of the increased labours of the body.

The Thirtieth Grade was conferred on four initiates in the same unrivalled manner and spirit with which Ill. Bros. John H. Aekerman, 32°; John G. Watkins, 32°; C. D. V. Gibson, 32°; Peter Dobbs, 32°; and their fellow workers have done it before.

The attendance was good for so warm a day. A splendid banquet, under the charge of Ill. Bro. Hardford Lindsley, 32°, was had at 6.30, and those who felt tired, or arrived later, kept the waiters moving till 11 p.m. Visitors were present from Elizabeth, New Brunswick and this city.

In the important business of the afternoon, Ill. Bro. George Scott, 33°; Jerome B. Borden, 32°; Perry Seymour, and McIlhenny, participated.

The Grand Sentinel of this body is William Grice, 32°. His labours are arduous, and his method merits all commendation.

Ill. Bro. J. W. Cosad, 33°, Commander-in-Chief, though in very delicate health, was at his place from the beginning to the end of this long session. He will find in his new Lieutenant a safe and tried counsellor and a skilled officer, who has no ambition to gratify, so far as rank goes, and whose ambition will be, we trust, the calming of waters disturbed, and the harmony and continued progress of the body in the power it wields.

GRAND LODGE OF NEW YORK.

The Rochester Sunday Herald has the following, which is of interest in this latitude:

Through the courtesy of R.W. Jacob G. Maurer, D.D.G.M., Twenty-second District, we have before us a copy of the proceedings of the recent annual communication of the Grand Lodge. There are a few facts which will be of interest to the fraternity. There are thirty-three lodges in this district, with an aggregate membership of nearly 4000. We give the number of the five lodges in this city, as returned to the Grand Lodge:

	Members.
Valley, No. 109.....	418
Yonondio, No. 163.....	303
Genessee Falls, No. 507.....	337
Rochester, No. 660.....	320
Germania, No. 722.....	128

While this district is large both in territory and membership, there are several others that exceed it in numbers. The smallest district is the Fifty-seventh—taking in only the lodges on Staten Island or Richmond county—and embraces just five, with an aggregate membership of 400. The District Deputy has comparatively light work in contrast with the like official of the Fifteenth District, who has three counties (St. Lawrence, Franklin, and Clinton), and 34 lodges, aggregating 2800 members.

In the report of D.D.G.M. La Rue, of Dansville, to Grand Master Hustod, we find this just statement of facts:

"The Masonic Temple at Rochester reflects great credit upon its founders for their spirit of enterprise and liberality, and is commensurate in its magnitude and convenience with the growth and prosperity of one of the most flourishing cities of the Empire State—a city in which our fraternity embraces among its members shining lights in the professions, men of the highest order of talent, and who are themselves living illustrations of the morality they teach."

R.W. Bro. La Rue tells us "that at the last annual election throughout the district a remarkable change occurred in the selection of officers, whereby in upwards of three-fourths of the lodges new men were placed in the East, and others advanced to stations of responsibility." From actual observation and correspondence he feels warranted in saying that the lodges have not suffered by the change, and are officered by brethren of intelligence and good moral character, well skilled in the standard work of the jurisdiction, and "whose skill and fidelity to the interests of the Craft are above question."

After a careful examination of the statistical tables, we have discovered only one lodge in the State which reports a larger membership than Valley Lodge, No. 109—namely, Commonwealth, No. 409, in Brooklyn. The latter reports 465, and the former 418—the only two returning over 400 members. The total number of Master Masons in the State is 78,913, holding membership in 718 lodges.

SKETCHES OF MASONIC CHARACTER.

No. I.

BRO. JENKINSON AT THE SEA-SIDE.

Our worthy and esteemed friend and brother, Jenkinson, P.M. of the well-known Lodge of Amiability, No. 2244, is now happily at the seaside, with the wife of his bosom and the little Jenkinsons, male and female.

He is supremely happy doing nothing, and in this his agreeable family kindly and conscientiously help him.

Jenkinson, in a straw hat, and a light blue pea coat, and white trousers, and white shoes, looks very well indeed, and one of the Coast Guardsmen is said to have touched his cap to him, taking him for a naval officer in "mufti."

Sister Jenkinson is also supremely flourishing and radiant, of course, and intent on making everything pleasant; though she says the quantity that everybody eats is simply extraordinary, and that even baby is quite voracious since she has been at the sea-side.

If you meet Jenkinson, you find him cheery and elate, smoking a mild cigar, and looking carefully through a pair of Callaghan's opera glasses at the distant shipping, and must we confess, a party bathing. One only drawback affects his manly bosom, only one affliction lies heavy on his waking thoughts and nightly dreams, and it is this, that when he reached the South Eastern Station, he found, that in addition to the family party, "all a mort" as the old writers have it, and very lively indeed, he saw that his excellent mother-in-law had come, with four bonnet boxes, a French poodle, and an elderly maid. Bro. Jenkinson, is a good fellow, but Junes says, though we do not believe him, that our worthy friend and Bro. made some rather startling remarks, of course sotto voce, to his smiling and affectionate wife. Bro. Jenkinson's kindness is proverbial, but as he says to his friend and Bro. the W.M., who is also at Spylleby with a pleasant wife and a blooming daughter, "now I did not bargain for this."

She is a first-rate old gal, when at home and by herself, but she will interfere with everybody and everything when she comes to the sea-side, and my wife hardly knows what to do, for she is, as you know, so considerate for everybody. "The old gal," he continues (we think Bro. Jenkinson might speak a little more respectfully of a lady, and so near a relative), "means well I know, but she worries everybody—she worries the children, and she worries the servants, and they are always catching it. She is a good one for talking and blowing up." Still, as Bro. Jenkinson says, "Freemasonry teaches us to be philosophical, and we cannot expect the sweets of life without the bitters, therefore we must do as well as we can," though we confess that like many other of our friends, we, as well as Jenkinson, have to suffer somewhat from "Mother-in-law on the brain."

Thus even our distinguished Bro. P.M. Jenkinson, who lays down the law "ore rotundo" at his lodge, has to succumb, we note, at home, to his determined "Mother-in-law." Such is the fate of mortals. Well, this life of ours is made up of sweets and bitters, and, as Bro. Jenkinson himself observes, Freemasonry teaches us to be patient and enduring. Yes, says sister Jenkinson, with a little touch of feminine sarcasm, though very pleasantly, it is always the part of a true brother "to suffer and be strong."

If Bro. Jenkinson's cup is somewhat mixed just now, if there is a little "fennel" floating at the top, so to say, making the draught somewhat bitter, let us hope that he will be none the worse for it.

We have no doubt that he will survive his heavy trial, the more so, as like many other mothers-in-law, the "bark" of the good lady is probably worse than the "bite."

We feel bound to compliment Bro. Jenkinson for his expression of patience and assurance, by pointing out that mothers-in-law, like everybody else, except editors, must have a holiday, and that they naturally go where they are likely to be best done by, and we also think it right to point out that that well abused and persecuted section of the community has its merits, as well as its defects. If it is a little talkative and imperious, fond of management, yes, and meddling, it is very affectionate and very confiding, very tender-hearted and very kindly disposed. We have found many agreeable and, we deem it only proper to add, good looking mothers-in-law. Sam Weller saw some excuse for mothers-in-law under such circumstances, and so should we. Very often they are not by a long way so bad as they are described, and we recommend our brethren now rejoicing in "rus," though we are still perforce, in "urbe," and who may be dreading the advent, or growing at the presence of a too "exigent" and interfering mother-in-law, to remember that the chances are, if they are agreeable to their "mothers-in-law" they will find, as many a "fella" has found before them, that there are worse things in this world than a mother-in-law; and that at any rate in the truest spirit of Masonic wisdom "the least said is the soonest mended;" "what can't be cured, must be endured."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Extract from "INDIAN ECONOMIST."

"We direct the attention of the medical men to a fact observed some years since by ourselves, and corroborated by our subsequent experience, that Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is in many cases of Low Fever immensely superior to Quinine in curative power. We cannot persuade ourselves that the true value of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is yet properly appraised in India.
It may be given with absolute safety even to a child three days old. Were medical men but to make a fair and exhaustive trial of it we are persuaded that it would work a revolution in the treatment of two-thirds of the diseases to which children are subject. Its curative power is simply amazing."

"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet
Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon. F.R.C.S., England,

Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti Spasmodic and Sedative. I have tried it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From JNO. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship Great Eastern.

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmotic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOUTON and Co., Horncastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent Sedative and Anti-Spasmotic. It seems to allay pain and irritation in whatever organ, and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See "Times," 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

HIGH CROSS LODGE (No. 754).—The installation meeting of this highly successful lodge was held at the Seven Sisters' Tavern, Tottenham, on the 22nd ult. The attendance was great, and the working was really good and showed that each and every one who essayed to perform his duty was fully up to the mark. A great many of those present came from town to honour by their presence such a respected brother as Bro. Dance on his elevation to the chair, which every Mason looks upon as the attaining of the height of his ambition. The officers present were Bros. C. F. Barham, W.M.; G. Townsend, P.M.; Jas. Lingell, P.M.; W. S. Steedman, P.M.; W. Dance, S.W. (W.M. elect.); H. Stevens, J.W.; D. Roberts, P.M.; Treasurer; Thos. Cunningham, P.M. Secretary; H. V. Clements, Geo. Burford, S.D.; J. Farrin, J.D.; W. T. Turner, I.G.; W. Peckham, O.; J. Verry, Tyler. Amongst the members present were Bros. E. L. Cross, W. Cooper, H. M. Tegg, J. A. Rogers, J. Garrod, Evans, Horton, Sawyer, J. H. Thompson, R. Burford, W. H. Shepherd, S. Cunningham, T. Paul, G. Rowe, W. H. Stevenson, W. Mattocks. Amongst the visitors were Bros. H. J. Turner, Wright, Wm. H. Hall, (Freemason), W. B. Kidder, Pinder, G. Young, Press, A. Smith, H. Cleverley, J. Green, W. Gilbert, D. Moses, Driscoll, etc. After a most successful installation, which was gone through in a manner entitling all—especially the outgoing Master—to credit, the brethren adjourned for a short time, and then sat down to a most recherche repast, provided by the worthy host. The meal was placed on the table in excellent style, the viands and wine choice, and the waiting far above the average. Dessert having been placed on the table the W.M. essayed to give the first toast which, like all the succeeding ones were not too long and to the point. The Worshipful Master, who was enthusiastically received on rising, proposed the first toast—one that is well known amongst the Craft at large—"The Queen and the Craft." He stated that this toast required no encomium from him, for "it was well known and well received in every assembly of Englishmen throughout the world, and probably, if it were possible, best in lodges of Free and Accepted Masons. The forty years of Her Majesty's reign were forty years of intellectual progress in the kingdom. She had given to the world many and various exhibitions of her high character, and it would ever be remembered that she was the mother of the M.W.G.M., and also of other members of the family identified with the Craft. He therefore with great pleasure gave "The Queen and the Craft," a toast that was received with every feeling of loyalty and enthusiasm by the brethren present, who, as will be seen by the list we give above, were as thoroughly representative of the Craft as one could well wish. In proposing the next toast, the W.M. said it would be idle for him to dilate on the excellences of Masonry, as they were well known to all the brethren present. No doubt the M.W.G.M. had many other engagements of a public character; but since he became the head of the Craft he had given a great impetus to it, and the numbers who had joined the noble Order had increased even to a surprising degree. He did not for a moment say that it wanted Royalty to be at the head of it to make the Craft successful, for that was accomplished by its own inherent excellence and purity. The toast was drunk with every token of regard for the M.W.G.M. Afterwards one of the brethren present, sang, much to the satisfaction of the members of the lodge and the visitors, "God bless the Prince of Wales." The next toast was that of "The Pro G.M., the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, and Lord Skelmersdale, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Officers of the Grand Lodge, Past and Present." In giving this toast the W.M. spoke of those respected and honourable members of the Craft as being, as it were, the head centres. There was no doubt as to their ability to perform their duties, as they had done over and over again; and all they had to do was, as good Masons ever had done, show their obedience to the Grand Lodge. The Immediate P.M., having taken the gavel in his hand, proposed a toast which was very acceptable to all those present, namely, that of the W.M., whom the lodge so unanimously elected to that high and distinguished honour to which every Mason aspires. He stated that the office was by no means an easy one; but he had no doubt that it would be fulfilled by Bro. Dance with that ability that he had shown during his tenure of inferior offices. He himself had done what he could to the best of his ability; and if anything were wanted to help the W.M. in the discharge of his duties he should only be too glad to give him every assistance in his power. The W.M., in response, thanked Bro. Barham for the manner in which the toast had been received. He would not detain them long, but would thank Bro. Barham for the kind manner in which he had introduced the toast. There was a good deal to be done in bringing the lodge to the position it now occupied, and certainly this was in a great measure due to the P.M.'s, of whom he was glad to see so large a number present. The W.M. next gave "The Health of Bro. Barham," which was well received. He pointed out what a very successful year the lodge had under his rule, and of the perfect manner in which he performed the duties connected with his high office; as one who had held office under him, the W.M. could speak as to his attention to his duties, and every one spoke of him in the highest terms. Bro. Barham always held his position and whatever he did he did well, and he had to thank him for the way in which the ceremony of installation had been performed that day. He had the pleasure of stating that a P.M.'s jewel had been granted to their I.P.M. (hear, hear), which was a token of the esteem and respect in which he was held (applause). The I.P.M. amid much cheering was then invested with the jewel which was manufactured with great taste and workmanship. The I.P.M. in responding, thanked the brethren present for the bearty manner in which his health had been proposed, and said that it was one of the proudest moments of his life when the W.M., as the mouthpiece of the lodge, had given utterance to the words he had; and if he, (Bro. Barham) had been at any trouble and anxiety he was amply repaid, whatever he had done had been for the good of the High Cross Lodge. He was glad to state that he had never missed a meeting, except through illness, and he always went home feeling better for being at the lodge. The W.M. then rose to propose the toast of "The Visitors," which he characterised as a most important one, and one that was always well received amongst the brotherhood. The visitors had an opportunity of seeing the working of the lodge they visited, and that was an advantage, and at the same time there was a great deal of fraternal good fellowship arose from going to each others' lodges. The toast was heartily responded to by some of the visitors present, who had every good reason to be satisfied with their hospitable entertainment. The brethren who responded dilated on the advantages of Masonry both here and abroad. The toasts of the P.M.'s of the lodge and the officers were then given, and duly replied to, and the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close at an advanced hour, many of the brethren returning to town by the late train. The evening's entertainment was much enhanced by some excellent singing by Bros. Young, Burford, Farrin, Stevens, and others.

W. J. Messenger, P.M., kindly undertook the office and was duly invested. Bro. S. H. Wagstaff stated his intention to give notice of motion at the next regular lodge meeting, that in recognition of his zealous service during ten years as Secretary, a testimonial inscribed on vellum, and expressive of the thanks of the lodge and the regards of the brethren, should be presented to Bro. Grant in recognition of his services as Tyler during the past ten years, he being disabled by severe illness and infirmity. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to supper, which was served in the canteen of the corps, and the customary agreeable re-union of members and visitors, void of all formal ceremony, and the more "jolly" in consequence, terminated the proceedings.

The circumstance that the meeting was held during the week of the visit of the British Association, as a fraternal communication with the Masonic members of that body, caused a very large attendance of the brethren, over 500 being present. The Secretary stated that he had not received the returns of Lodg. 230 until he had written his report, and with the omission of that lodge 2422 contributing brethren were returned.

The Treasurer's report showed a return for the year of £499. The payments included £100 to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Fund, £70 on petitions, £59 to the Fortescue Annuitant Fund, £35 for printing bye-laws, and £11 expenses of the Committee of Petitions. There was a balance in hand of £213. The report of the Treasurer of the Fortescue Fund stated that the revenue for the year had been £148. £112 had been paid on annuities, and the invested capital increased to £2054. The Committee of Petitions reported complete success in all the cases so which their votes had been given. A girl candidate had been elected on the foundation of the Royal British Female Orphan Asylum, thus, for the fourth year in succession, relieving annually the funds of the province from a claimant. The experience of the past year showed more clearly than ever that the system of collective voting adopted by the province in supporting its candidates for the various charities was the only course which held out the slightest chance of success. At their meeting at Exeter in February the committee voted £5 to the widow of a brother of 223, and now recommended that the P.G.L. should vote a further sum of £10. At their meeting at Plymouth in May they voted £5 to a distressed brother of 164, and £5 to the widow of a brother of 39, and they recommended that a further sum of £5 should be voted by the P.G.L. At the meeting held that day the committee had voted £5 to a distressed brother of 251, and recommended a further grant of £15 to the widow of a brother of 70. The committee recommended that the remaining available balance of the funds of the P.G.L. for this year should be applied thus:—To the Fortescue Fund £50, to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys £52 10s., to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Masons and their Widows £50.—The reports were unanimously received and adopted.

R.W. Bro. Metham, in proposing the adoption of the report of the Committee of Petitions, of which he was chairman, said the London Masonic charities had large claims upon that Province, which had at present thirteen annuitants on the Aged Masons' Fund, receiving a benefit of over £500 per annum, five or six girls in the Girls' School, and a boy in the Boys' School.

Discussion on certain motions in the agenda paper was postponed, the P.G.M. ruling that they could not be legally considered until the next meeting.

W. Bro. Thomas Perry, of Lodge No. 1382, was unanimously elected Treasurer for the ensuing year, and W. Bros. J. Way, 39, and Vincent Bird, 954, were elected Auditors. Past rank of P.G. Purs. was conferred upon W. Bro. W. Haynes, 106.

W. Bro. the Rev. W. Whitley proposed to give notice of a motion that, to prevent the introduction of improper persons into the Order, every lodge in the province should send copies of its circulars to every other lodge within a radius of three miles of its place of meeting, and that no candidate should be initiated at a distance from his residence without the Secretary or Master of the lodge in which he was proposed writing to the Master of the lodge nearest to the candidate's residence to inquire into the candidate's character. The P.G.M. said it would be very desirable to effect some check upon the present mode of admitting candidates, but he could not accept Bro. Whitley's notions, as the P.G.L. would not have any power to compel their being carried out; neither could he compel the Masters to inquire into the characters of the candidates. These matters rested entirely with the Masters, and the brethren should be careful whom they appointed as masters.—The D.P.G.M. considered it was very desirable that where a candidate had been rejected the circumstance and the cause should be intimated to other lodges. Such matters, however, could not be rendered compulsory. It was for Masters and Wardens to prevent the admission of candidates who, from temper and habits, were likely to be sources of discomfort to the lodges.

The P.G.M. invested the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year:—

Sir F. M. Williams, Bart., M.P., 112	Prov. S.G.W.
Lieut. the Hon. W. H. Jolliffe, 1205	Prov. J.G.W.

A committee was appointed to inquire into and report on the condition of the collars and jewels of the P.G.L.

In the evening a large party of the brethren dined together at the Royal Hotel, Devonport.

Von Der Heyde, P.M. of 195; T. Lawler, Moira, 92.

The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. Thos. Lawler, who had the assistance of Bros. C. S. Jekyll, G. T. Carter, and W. Hodges.

The ceremony throughout was of a very impressive character, being admirably performed. Bro. Hervey, as Consecrating Officer, delivered all his addresses with great force and much animation, two qualities which are not often found when consecrations are performed in places which are not confined exclusively to Masonic rites, and where there is frequently the possibility of what is said being overheard by the uninitiated. In Freemasons' Hall there is not this liability, and consequently brethren may speak in full voice, and thus deliver what they have to say to their hearers with all the earnestness which they feel should be imparted to Masonic ceremonies. The same remarks apply to the oration of the P.G.C., whose admirably conceived and carefully worked out oration received the full benefit of an impressive delivery. Not a word was lost to one of his hearers, who, while listening attentively to his fervent elocution, frequently interrupted it by expressions of approbation of the various sentiments and facts to which he gave utterance.

The evening was highly successful, notwithstanding one unfortunate circumstance.

Bro. Filer, the W.M. designate, was very unwell previous to the meeting of the lodge. Nevertheless, he continued at the ceremony to its close, and afterwards took his place at the banquet table, presiding with his usual efficiency. After he had responded to the toast of "The W.M." he was, however, obliged to leave, greatly to the regret of the brethren, who sympathised with him in his misfortune.

After the lodge had been formally opened,

Bro. John Hervey said—"Brethren, it is not my intention to trouble you with many observations on the present occasion, more especially as the government of this lodge is about to be entrusted to a brother who is well known to the Craft, and who is well able to carry out the duties of the new office which will devolve upon him without any admonitions or any instruction from me, and the Past Grand Chaplain, my excellent Brother Woodford, will presently address you in a strain of eloquence which I, of course, cannot be supposed to have attained to. It is not the first time that the Master designate of this lodge takes the chair of a new lodge. As many as three and twenty years ago I was present when he was installed as the first Master of the Canonbury Lodge. He is now its Treasurer, and therefore, brethren, you can well imagine that he has not only carried out his duties to that lodge to the gratification of the brethren, but that he has proved himself in the position which he occupies as W.M., and subsequently to his holding that position, as a person who was to be entrusted, inasmuch as the brethren of that lodge have entrusted him with the funds of that lodge; and the prosperity of the lodge also fully evinces that he has done his best to look after the prosperity of the lodge; and those who visit it can always look to Bro. Filer as one with whom they are glad to associate, and one whom they respect for the good service which he has done to the Craft. Brethren, these are stirring times in Masonry, and new lodges are crowding upon us, I may almost say in vast profusion. I sometimes look at the number of petitions which come in, and almost grieve to see that we are advancing at the rapid rate we are; for I fear that, although there is such a great state of prosperity at the present time, yet the time may come, and the time must come, when greater demands will be made upon our funds, when the number of members who are added, I was going to say each month, but I may say each week, to the Craft, will have to be provided for, and their claims will come upon us, I hope, not faster than we shall be able to satisfy them. But when I look back to the time when I was first made a Mason, when £100 at a Lodge of Benevolence was considered a very large amount to expend in one evening, and that now it has risen to something like £600 or £700 a month, it may be readily conceived that either there is more want in the world, or that our numbers have increased almost disproportionately to our funds. At present we are able to meet the claims upon us, and I hope we may always continue to be in that position. But I am somewhat fearful that men do join the Craft, I do not say are brought into it, but do join the Craft not simply for the love of the Craft, or the love which they imagine they shall have for the Craft, but they are beginning to think that we instead of being a society—a sociable society—are a large munificent society, and that they come in for the sake of the schools, and for the sake of the benevolent institutions, and for the sake, not of Masonry, but of what they can get. I may be wrong, I hope I am so; but I cannot help sometimes fancying that that is the case, and fancying, and grieving, almost, that we are advancing at the rate we are. However, that is a subject apart. I can say with very great truth, however, that when lodges like the present are brought into existence, and when class lodges, which it appears a favourite pursuit of the Craft to start, are established, I have no fears. Lodges are now started for the convenience of those who follow one pursuit. The present is an engineers' lodge, a gas engineers' lodge, a lodge to throw light upon the world; and I trust that those who associate in it will throw light upon the world, inasmuch as it is to be composed of men who only are connected with gas engineering, and who are more or less connected with that pursuit. I trust that the Evening Star Lodge, as its name implies, will, when the day draws to a close, light up the world, and will show that its members at any rate are anxious to throw light upon the Craft, which no doubt they themselves love, and that they will bring into the Craft such men as will be an ornament to it, and not only an ornament to the Craft itself, but an ornament to this lodge in particular. Brethren, I will not detain you longer, but I will call upon my good friend, Bro. Woodford, for the opening prayer.

The ceremony then proceeded up to the point at which the Chaplain delivers the oration, when Bro. Hervey called upon Bro. Woodford to address the brethren.

In compliance with the request, Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C., then delivered the following oration:

V.W. Presiding Officer, Bro. Wardens, and Brethren,—Though I esteem myself highly privileged in being permitted to address you on the present occasion, I yet feel how very difficult the function of the Orator becomes when he has to avoid trespassing on the ground of others abler than himself, or repeating an "oft told tale." What, then, shall I say to you to-day—what can I say about Freemasonry, the nature and design of its institution, which may in any sense be worthy of the occasion, or of that great Order, to which we all belong? You have so often listened to eloquent disquisitions on Freemasonry, to forcible representations of what it is, and what it is not, of what it ought to be, and what it cannot be, that there seems on these recurring ceremonies, but little left, even to the most expert and the most enthusiastic of us all, to advance, or to enounce. And yet, Sir, I make bold to think, (though I may be wrong), that as things best known to us are often undervalued and things closest to us are often overlooked, so there are some "points" in Freemasonry, which, on such celebrations as these, it is good for us all alike to be reminded of; it is improving for us all alike to realize and record. Leaving then, all the abstract dogmata, and well-known technicalities of Freemasonry behind, let us go on to-day, Sir, to consider carefully a few suggestions which may be valuable and edifying to all ranks and conditions amongst us. And, first of all, is it not wise for us, as a body, I make bold to ask, always most anxiously to give heed to the salutary advice of our Illustrious and Royal Grand Master, "Keep clear of Politics?" I do not mean to say that we in England are in any danger of becoming a political club, or a heated caucus of hysterical politicians, because undoubtedly we are not. But what I apprehend our Grand Master meant in his kindly and seasonable words was, that we should sedulously guard against all tendencies which might lead to anything like an avowal of opinions as Freemasons favourable to this party or that. For Freemasonry is absolutely colourless as regards political cries and prepossessions; it knows nothing of them, directly or indirectly; it utterly abjures them one and all. Outside the lodge, indeed, as free citizens, we may range ourselves under this or that party banner, we may avow ourselves, as Englishmen, loyal followers of this or that leader, and no blame can attach to any of us. But inside the lodge, within the sacred portals of Freemasonry, our political opinions ought to be in suspense, in quiescence, yes, and altogether unknown! It is one of the greatest charms of Freemasonry, that many of us most conscientiously severed in the world without, can meet as Freemasons, ignoring all party distinctions. We agree to differ, we differ to agree; and the only politics we know of amongst us, are, that Masonic Conservatism, which strenuously upholds the ancient custom of labour and refreshment, that Masonic Liberalism, which renders our hearts and hands open and free as "Melting Charity." And while then, we may honestly congratulate ourselves in England on the happy privileges of our Order in this respect, what do we often just now see or hear of abroad? Alas, but this, that an utter forgetfulness of the goodly axiom, "Keep clear of Politics," has brought discredit and doubt on Masonic professions and Masonic Lodges. Nay, we listen constantly, at this very moment, to accounts of the closing of foreign lodges. Why? Because in the eyes of the authorities they have become only "centres of political propagandism." I do not stop to-day to enter upon, as indeed I cannot, the right or wrong of such acts, or the justice or the injustice of such allegations. Sufficient for me that they take place, that they are put forward at all, to strengthen my argument, to uphold my contention. But I feel bound in justice to say this, that the proceedings and professions of some foreign lodges appear so contrary to all that we are taught in England to consider as agreeable to the true doctrine of Freemasonry, that I for one am not the least surprised when I hear, that lodges which are so forgetful of the leading principles of Freemasonry as to discuss affairs of state and publish purely political resolutions, are "closed by authority." For we must always bear in mind a truth which we sometimes forget, that all states, qua states, have a right to object to professed secret societies, discussing public affairs. In England, we exist as a secret society by express permission of the legislature, but with this proviso, and on this distinct undertaking, that we have nothing to do with politics, and that we associate together only for the purpose of social union, and benevolent efforts. No lodge of Freemasons, then, anywhere, has a right to claim the condition of secrecy in order to discuss matters which only belong to the legislature, and then express astonishment if it is forbidden to meet, or closed altogether by the state. So let us rejoice that here in England no such reproach can be addressed to us. We are emphatically a loyal order, "Charity and loyalty" are our motto, we are loyal to the Throne, loyal to our Grand Master, loyal to Grand Lodge, loyal to those great principles of public order and personal freedom which constitute the strength and cohesion of society, and without which we should inevitably drift into social confusion and public anarchy. We are, as Freemasons, if lovers of peace and progress, opponents of all revolution and intestine commotions, the mischievous principles of violent change, because we know so well from dearly bought experience, the blessings of civil and religious liberty, the onward and tolerant dissemination of those distinguishing foundation-truths, which constitute the safety of nations, advance the happiness of society, and tend to maintain the greatness and glory of that mighty empire of which we all are confiding and rejoicing citizens. I think, Sir, that I have said enough on this topic, and which I perhaps should not have troubled you with at all, had not recent proceedings abroad led me to think that such remarks might be both suitable, and seasonable, and not unacceptable in this present assembly, by way of protest so to say, against unwise proceedings and unmasonic theories elsewhere, which seem to detract from the august and loyal character of Freemasonry. And now Sir, I wish to call the attention of this numerous and important gathering, to the need of firm adherence to our great principle of toleration. In English Freemasonry, happily, we have no requirement, (let us hope), to insist on its necessity, or to enforce its sacred and abiding duty. We properly admit all within the Masonic Family, who, venerating and acknowledging T.G.A.O.T.U., as children of one Divine Parent, are willing to associate to gether for the purpose of Masonic beneficence and humanitarian sympathy. We repudiate, it is true, the Atheist, and we reject the libertine, wishful that our lodges, symbolical ever of what is good, of what is beneficent, of what is true, and lightened up by wisdom, strength, and beauty, should be rallying points in a world of division and dispersion, for virtuous aspirations and intelligent minds, linked in bonds of fraternal friendship; and animated, directed, and restrained by all the moral and all the social virtues. And in order to ensure the attention, and carry conviction to the minds of all our members, we base all our moral teaching on the Divinely given law of God, and we make His Word the distinguishing ornament of all our lodge rooms, and the mentor and sanction of all our actions through life. By it, as Freemasons, we profess to govern our tongues and our deeds, to control our tempers, and our strivings, to direct our footsteps, and to dominate our hearts. But beyond this we do not go, we neither stop to dogmatize, nor do we wish to denounce. And though there will always be in English Freemasonry, probably, a more limited and a more expansive school of teaching, yet our avowed and authoritative formularies are based on the broad foundation, let us always remember, of a simple Theistic teaching on the one hand, and a Universal Fraternity on the other. Hence under our beneficial and kindly lodge, Christians and Hebrews, Hindoos, and Parsees, Mahomedans and Buddhists, can all assemble in our lodges because, without the surrender of any individual principle of personal creed, they all concur in accepting a common formula of belief in God the Father, the Creator, the Ruler, the Judge of all men, the Supreme Grand Master of the great brotherhood of us children of the dust. It is very remarkable that just now, from various opposing points, we have to contend with a serious infraction of the great principle of toleration! Yes, in this world of ours, there still lingers a spirit of direct intolerance, which as Freemasons we ought always to disavow. In Germany for instance, in more than one Grand Lodge Hebrews are not admitted, as they have every claim to be, to the privileges of Freemasonry, and I feel for one, bound on the present occasion, to point out, that such proceedings are contrary to every principal of abstract justice and true toleration. I need say nothing to-day of the worth or kindly spirit of our Hebrew brethren. They are well known to us all, and here in England, we happily boast a large number of hard-working members of our Order, who are ever animated by its excellent principles, and prove themselves indeed to be worthy men and true Masons! Truly, then, we must all deplore that in any lodges of Freemasons, Hebrews are inadmissible, simply because they are Hebrews, and that any Hebrew should be excluded by any possible law, or on any possible grounds, as a Hebrew, we must feel is a proceeding worthy only of the dark ages and bye-gone seasons of cruel oppression and slander. It is of course always very difficult to interfere with independent Grand Lodges, which have a right to make their own laws, but I think we may say this, and shall say this in England, that the exclusion of the Hebrews from Masonry is unworthy of any body of Freemasons, is a discredit to our Cosmopolitan Order, and utterly at variance with all the principles of true Freemasonry. Equally worthy of animadversion, as I regard it, is that attempt now being made in France and Belgium to exclude the name of God from the Constitutions. They have long since banished the Bible from their lodges, and it is not unnatural, perhaps, that they dislike any longer to assent to any belief in God. It is a sad, if logical corollary on the previous act of intolerance and injustice. For, in my humble opinion, it is an act of the highest intolerance and injustice combined, so to act, and it can only result, humanly speaking, in the bringing down to the ground that most unhallowed fabric, which like the building of Babel of old, some French and Belgian "libres penseurs" seem to think can do without the name and presence of God to bless their labours, and consecrate their undertaking, forgetting the best of all teaching "Except the Lord bless the house, their labour is lost that build it." And what, Sir, can I say of that gross intolerance of an Ultramontane party, which is now cursing the living, refusing to bless the dying, and even disinterring the bones of the dead? I think our best position is dignified silence, only premising that in my opinion the acts of intolerance which the Church of Rome daily rejoices in and applauds, must only recoil upon itself, and are in truth a parody on all religion, a discredit to civilization, and a dishonour to God!

There are two more points to which I think it well to allude before I sit down. We have amongst us, just now, a prejudicial tendency to admit, too rapidly and unreservedly, new members. There is a teaching popular with some of us, that if a man can pay his fees, and is in reputable circumstances, all the prerequisite conditions for initiation are complied with, and that we ought not to be too particular! Now, Freemasonry, I think it right to remind you, can never be strong, simply in numbers, especially, if we are admitting those who, for many reasons, ought never to have been received amongst us, at all. Unless we take care we are in great danger of making Freemasonry a great benefit society, against which, sir, as you will remember our old and admirable G.M., Lord Zetland, so often protested. For so great now are the material advantages which our Order possesses that many, I fear, come into it, not for what it is, or may be to them, but for what they themselves may receive from it. As a great, charitable and benevolent Order, Freemasonry, has perhaps, the highest position of any earthly Society in England; but reduce it to the level of a large benefit Order, not only do we destroy its "prestige" and do away with its utility, but we certainly pave the way for its eventual dissolution and fall. Let us, then, be on our guard against any proposal, or any teaching that would lose sight of the essential distinction between Freemasonry and every other benefit Order in existence. And one more point, let us as Freemasons keep out of the law courts. Of course, Her Majesty's courts are open to all of us, Freemasons though we be, when need requires it, but what I mean is, (to use a vulgar expression) "let us wash our dirty linen at home." Let us submit all Masonic causes of complaint to our own proper tribunals. If we have differences, let us employ Masonic arbitrators, and you, sir, in any difficult or delicate question would be willing to give combatant brethren the great benefit of your healing counsels and friendly advice. But let us be ashamed to parade Masonic questions of dispute before an amused public, and let us lay to heart the salutary and impressive rebuke of Bro. Justice Field. Verbum sat sapienti. And now, sir, I have done. I am very glad to have been permitted to say a few more words in favour of our great Order, to which a long apprenticeship has deeply attached me, and to commend earnestly its claims of utility, good, and value, to the attention and affection of my younger brethren especially. You and I, sir, are both, as we say, "getting on" in years, and we have seen many days of work in "Auld Lang Syne," and you will agree with me when I assert that the principles of Freemasonry, rightly understood, and duly carried into practice, tend as well to the public welfare, as to individual happiness, to the honour of God and the peaceful progress of man. The true Freemason always rejoices to think, that he has been permitted to form part of our religious, our cultivated, our generous, our pleasant brotherhood, and like the Masonic poet would say, in the very spirit of the truest Mason teaching,

"Oh, Power Supreme, unsearchable thy views,

Omniscient or to give, or to refuse;

Grant me, as I began, to end my days,

In acts of humble charity and praise.

In Thy own paths my journey let me run,

And as in Heaven, on Earth 'Thy will be done.'

With one sincere aspiration for the new lodge I conclude my imperfect address. May the members of the Evening Star Lodge, now about to be consecrated, ever shine forth before the Craft as worthy Masons, and good men, zealous for the unchanging principles of Masonic light and toleration, earnest supporters of our great charities, and distinguished on the roll of English lodges, by their loyalty to their Grand Master, their obedience to Grand Lodge, and that prevailing character for works, hospitality, and true Masonic sentiments, which will raise them high in the good opinion of their brethren in Freemasonry. Above all, may all their labours and efforts tend to the honour of our wide-spread brotherhood, the welfare of the human race, the comfort, unity, and edification of all the present and future members of this lodge, whose consecration we are privileged to witness to-day, and which claims our "hearty good wishes," and our sympathetic and cordial support, when, as to day, it opens out its Masonic career, and begins under solemn sanctions its Masonic life, as an offshoot of our great Masonic tree.

Hearty applause followed the delivery of this oration. The ceremony of consecration was then completed, and Bro. Hervey installed Bro. Alexander James Duff Filer as Master of the lodge. The officers appointed were Bro. Dr. Whitmore, P.M.; Bro. John Aird, S.W.; Bro. T. N. Kirkham, J.W.; James Glaisher, Treasurer; M. Ohren, Secretary; W. Sugg, S.D.; T. A. Greene, J. D.; Hodgson Jones, I.G.; and C. T. Speight, Tyler. Several joining members and initiates were proposed for an emergency meeting to be held on the 23rd of October, and Bro. Ohren informed the W.M. that all the furniture of the lodge, such as the collars and jewels, all of which were very beautiful, had been presented by the officers of the lodge, and at the next meeting the lodge would propose a vote of thanks to them for their handsome presents.

On the motion of the W.M., seconded by Bro. Magnus Ohren, a vote of thanks was passed to the Consecrating Officer, and the honorary membership of the lodge was conferred upon Bros. Hervey, Woodford, Fenn, Hyde Pullen, and Buss; and Bro. Hervey having acknowledged the compliment, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Freemasons' Tavern, where a banquet of the choicest description was provided by Bro. E. Dawkins, the manager. At the conclusion of the repast grace was sung by the musical brethren, and the W.M. proceeded with the toasts.

The toasts of "The Queen and the Craft," and "The M.W.G.M." having been disposed of, the W.M. proposed the toast of "The Pro G.M., the Dep. G.M., and the res:

of the Grand Officers." To these Officers, he said, the Craft were indebted for their good government, and for the keeping together of the large body of Freemasons throughout the world who belonged to the Grand Lodge of England. This they did, assisted by the Grand Secretary of England, who was the life and soul of the whole of the Grand Officers. The brethren appreciated the labours of all the Grand Officers, whom they bore in their minds with that kindness and distinction that they deserved. He would call on Bro. Woodford to respond.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, in reply, said I should upon the present occasion, in the presence of so many distinguished Present and Past Grand Officers, have felt greater pleasure in listening than in speaking; but as your W.M. has done me the honour to call upon me to return thanks in the name of my brother Grand Officers, I feel it my duty as a good Mason to obey the orders of my commanding officer. I ventured, in the short address which I delivered to you in lodge to-day to point out to you that which I conceived now was the great feature of our Masonic struggle namely, the important point of toleration. Some of you may have read a few days ago that a very eminent statesman was interviewed by a considerable number of clergymen with relation to the present conflict going on in Germany; and he made a very remarkable statement, a very truthful statement, and one which I think commends itself to the feelings of every good Freemason. He said this in his terse and epigrammatic manner that "no human being in the world has a right to claim that he only is in possession of the truth." (Cheers.) It never has been the case, it never can be the case in the world, and the struggle at present is that a certain number of persons profess that they are in possession of truth, and they excommunicate everybody else (cheers). I venture to think that the axiom which was proclaimed by that great statesman strikes the key-note of Freemasonry. We admit in our lodges, and we always will admit men of different opinions. We do not agree, perhaps to all they say, or in all which they believe; we only ask them to look to the Common Father of the Universe and to assist us in deeds of charity and good-will to man. Beyond that we do not go, and beyond that we do not impose on them a belief; and as long as Freemasonry stands on that ground, in England it will be secure, and so long will it be for the benefit of the brethren and the welfare of mankind. The reason I have always felt very strongly on the subject of toleration is this, that I was made a Mason myself in Gibraltar in the Lodge of Friendship in 1842, and when I saw the light of Masonry the following sight presented itself to my view. We had a very beautiful lodge-room for the Lodge of Friendship, and when I saw the light I found myself surrounded by Hebrews from Gibraltar, by Moors from Tangiers, by Genoese from Genoa, by Greeks from Greece, by men of almost every nationality and creed under Heaven; and there were a band of brethren, all agreeing in the same feeling of kindness and love, in lodge, and the moment we went out of the lodge we went each our way, honestly holding our own religious opinions. In that view of Freemasonry I have lived ever since I have had the honour of being a brother. At the present moment we have to contend with two difficulties, especially abroad. There is a tendency to press on one side Ultramontane views, condemning Freemasonry in toto, and making us bigoted, on the other the unbelieving view, the result of which is to take away from us belief in God, and is weakening Freemasonry; and I, therefore, thought it my duty while addressing the Evening Star Lodge to call the attention of the brethren to the importance of the great duty of true toleration (cheers). I hope I have not wearied you with the expression of my feelings to-day; they are most sincere and they are generally known to my brethren. You see I am not a young man; I have grey hairs in my head; but the more I know of Freemasonry the more I value its truth, and discern clearly how it binds together all nations, and all creeds; and I am sure you will accept my words as conveying the truth as I feel it in my heart. Once more offering to you my acknowledgements for the kindness and patience with which you have listened to me I thank you most sincerely for the honour you have done us, as the Grand Officers, and I assure you that our highest ambition is to do good to our Order, and to retain the confidence of the brethren. (Applause.)

Bro. John Hervey proposed "The Health of the W.M." He said he had not had the advantage of being initiated at Gibraltar, and hence he had not the recollection to fall back upon that the excellent Grand Chaplain had had, and could not tell the brethren or expatiate in the eloquent language of Bro. Woodford, on what took place at Gibraltar or the impressions which were patent to his (Grand Chaplain's) mind when he was initiated. He must confine himself to the inner circle of England, and he was on the present occasion that if the toast which he had to propose did not meet with the feelings of the Evening Star Lodge, at any rate it would meet with the feelings of the guests round the table, who would all respond to that toast, apart from the members of the Evening Star Lodge, with the greatest enthusiasm. By virtue of the position he had occupied that day it devolved upon him to give "The Health of the W.M. and success to the Lodge." As he had said before, if that would not unite the feelings of the members of the Evening Star Lodge, at any rate it would those of the guests, who would drink the toast with hearty good will and with the greatest cordiality. It was now, as he had said in the lodge, some 22 years since he had the pleasure of seeing his good friend on his left installed as Master of the Canonbury Lodge, and at that time he was invited to consecrate the lodge. But he was a modest man at that period, and therefore suggested that a good friend of his, also a modest man but not quite so modest as he (Bro. Hervey) was, Bro.

Sir Daniel Gooch, would carry out the ceremony much better, consequently Sir D. Gooch took the office of Consecrating Master, and he (Bro. Hervey) had the honour of assisting him. Bro. Filer was first Master of the Canonbury Lodge; he was now Treasurer to that lodge, and the Senior Past Master. The brethren therefore might imagine what he would be in the next twenty-two years, when the Evening Star Lodge had risen somewhat in the hemisphere. He (Bro. Hervey) was digressing, but that was his awkward way of putting the toast. But be that as it might, he was sure the brethren would all be gratified at finding their good old friend, Bro. Filer, in the chair of this lodge; they would all feel that the duties of the lodge would be well carried out, that the lodge would be governed in a way which would conduce to its success with the outer world, and with Freemasons; everything would be conducted in that methodical manner, without which a Freemason's lodge must be a chaos. The brethren would all join with him in drinking success to the lodge, and they would all feel that it had a brother at its head who could and would do his duty. They all felt that he had done his duty hitherto, and therefore they would not doubt what would be the case for the future.

The W.M., in reply, said, After the observations which had been made by Bro. Hervey, he has not left me the excuse which many young Masters would have of speaking of the diffidence with which he undertakes the office, and the fear he may have lest he should not carry it out to the brethren's satisfaction. That is one of the favourite, I should have said, probably, if Bro. Hervey had not made the observations he has. But I must now say that I have not that excuse left me, because having been a Mason for now some thirty-five years, and passed through the chair of three lodges, there is no such excuse left me. I only require that which I know I possess to the fullest extent, the confidence and good feelings of the lodge, without which I defy any Master of a lodge to carry out the duties to the satisfaction of the brethren. Our brother has been kind enough to speak of me in very flattering terms, and to wish me good health. Now, it may appear somewhat curious to you that a man advanced in years as I am should be W.M. of a new lodge; but to those who do not know anything of the circumstances I may just as well tell them it is intended as a mark of respect to the members of this lodge, who are now all young Masons, that I should accept it. I have the same wishes with regard to my health as Bro. Hervey has expressed, but coupled with the fear lest I may not be blessed with it for many years to come. If his good wishes are realised, by the blessings of God and by attention to my health on my own part, I may have the pleasure, I hope, of presiding over you for my year of office, and of being with you for some years. I beg to thank him for his kindness in proposing my health, and I beg to thank you, brethren, for the hearty way in which you have received it.

At this point the W.M., greatly to the regret of the brethren, was obliged to leave on account of ill-health. His place was for the remainder of the evening, occupied by Bro. Hervey.

Bro. J. C. Parkinson, P.G.D., in replying to the toast of "The Visitors," proposed by Bro. Hervey, said:—Your visitors are deeply indebted to you for their reception this evening, and feel privileged in offering their congratulations upon the evidently successful establishment of the Evening Star, and perhaps the longer their experience in Masonry the more deeply they may feel how important it is that a branch institution of this character should be launched successfully, and should have that support from various influential quarters which it is quite clear the Evening Star now possesses. We have been greatly gratified to-night by the proceedings of the evening, and speaking for myself I must say that the speech delivered by the Grand Chaplain, coming, as it did, after a self-congratulation, at seeing the persons, first of your W.M., an old and dear friend of mine, and secondly of your S.W., a brother member of my lodge, and a brother in whom I have always seen genius of great future usefulness, seeing that you have secured such distinguished brethren, and so well known to myself, respectively as the W.M. and S.W. Coming upon that fact, the speech of your Grand Chaplain, who has acted to-night in the consecration, and who has given us so admirable a speech, I must say, his remarks upon toleration and upon what the essence of Freemasonry really is, came upon me with particular force on the occasion of the establishment of a new lodge; for really intolerance means, want of light; either it is that people who have light have darkly kept it to themselves, or there is no light in the community. That they all hate each other, one or the other must be the moving cause of intolerance. Where there is a genial equitable flow of light, it is quite clear to my mind that intolerance cannot long "rear its malignant head." Now, if I understand anything of the Evening Star Lodge, certainly its component parts, the individuals who compose it, have not themselves, any fundamental objection to diffusion of light, (laughter); and therefore I hope that the spirit of tolerance which had been so eloquently foreshadowed will attend ministrations of the Evening Star Lodge, and that the light may be of the highest quality, (laughter); that there may be nothing in the mechanical appliances or in its organisation which may tend to impurity of quality; that its illuminating power may in short, be of the highest quality, is the fervent faith of your visitors; and we shall in future years, if we are spared to look back at the establishment of the Evening Star Lodge, as presenting in itself both symbolically, practically, and truthfully, one more "main" of Masonic light giving forth the purest and the highest quality of truth, which is only another word for light, to all members, and all brethren who come under its rays. W.M., I beg to thank you.

Bro. Henry Green, P.M., proposed "The Health of Bro. Hervey, the Consecrating Officer." He was sure he need not recall to the brethren's minds the extremely interesting ceremony which they had participated in that evening. It was now some 20 years since he had the opportunity of witnessing a similar ceremony, and he must say that the first occasion must have a tendency to fix it very deeply upon any man. No one could have listened to the various proceedings which had taken place—at least he could imagine no one could have witnessed them without thinking he was taking part in the performance of the ceremony, which would leave upon his mind a most agreeable impression, and create in him a solemn respect for the Order to which he had the honour and gratification to belong. No one could have listened to that remarkable address which proceeded from his Rev. Bro. on his right, without feeling that he was listening to some deep and solemn injunction, which was being laid upon him as to the importance of acknowledging as we English Masons did, the Supreme Being as the author of our existence, and as the author of everything that concerned our welfare. It was impossible but that we must contrast, and in a remarkable degree, the order and regularity which pervaded the whole of the ceremony that evening, with what he could imagine was the disorder of our continental brethren meeting under similar circumstances. He, for one, believed he spoke the sentiments of every one present, though it was impossible to listen to those deep and solemn words which proceeded from the mouth of their friend, without believing that they were themselves joining in a very deep ceremony. They had on this occasion to express their great acknowledgments for the kind manner in which those dignitaries of our Order had come to assist at the ceremony, they had to thank the Grand Secretary for the important part that he kindly took, and the Grand Chaplain also, the brethren who occupied the respective chairs, and to Bro. Buss. He would be wanting indeed in proper respect to them if he did not ask the brethren to join him most heartily in expressing most cordial acknowledgments to them for what they had done that evening.

Bro. Hervey responded, and then proposed "The Treasurer and Secretary," and placed before the brethren the difficult duties which the Secretary had to perform in the getting up of a new lodge. The brethren had all to thank him for the way in which he had carried out the duties of his office, and for the manner he had demeaned himself towards them.

Bro. Magnus Ohren in replying apologised for the absence of the Treasurer, Bro. James Glaisher, which was caused by his having to go to France after the meeting of the British Association, and carry out some arrangements which had been made some time ago. With respect to himself (Bro. Ohren) when he was asked some time ago to take the Secretaryship of this lodge it was a question with him whether he should do so or not, as his professional engagements occupied so much of his time, and he was already connected with several lodges. But the wish of the brethren who were founders of the lodge was very strong that he should join them, and he did so. He must say that Masonry with him was one of his greatest pleasures. It was an old saying that "all work and no play made Jack a dull boy." Now possibly they might know that his play was work in Masonry. He loved Masonry; and it was a relief to him after his professional duties, to undertake the duties of Masonry; and whatever lodge he was connected with and whatever duties he undertook he considered them duties, and he carried them out to the best of his ability. And it had been so with this lodge, and with other lodges with which he was connected. The brethren knew what these lodges were, and that in them he performed his duties. He should continue to do so with this lodge to the best of his ability. This lodge was the lodge of light, the Evening Star Lodge, the Gas Lodge and the lodge of light. Many went by the old light. They were not going to introduce anything new, no electric light, but the old light, the old Masonic light, would guide them the same as the old light would guide them in their professional duties, and they would always find that the old light would carry them through. Whatever might be said of the electric light (and there was no doubt it had its advantages in many cases, although it would never in his time or his children's time be introduced for public lighting), it was the old gas from coal which would light the public streets well. In this lodge they would carry on the old Masonic creed as long as they lived, that old creed which was laid down for them, and they would carry it out with the same amount of zest as they imported into their professional duties.

Bro. John Hervey proposed "The Masonic Charities." He said he proposed this toast with great gratification because from the earliest period of his career in Masonry he was well associated with the Masonic Charities. The success which attended them had continued for many years, and he hoped it would be continued for many years to come.

Bro. Binckes replied: The present year of grace had been the most successful that had ever been experienced by the charities, the very large sum of £40,000 had been collected at the anniversary festivals of the three Institutions. Looking forward to the future, he confidently hoped that that sum would be exceeded in years to come. It must be so; it was a matter of necessity, from the great increase in the number of brethren who came into the Order. No one could testify to this better than Bro. Hervey; and no one could testify to the great increase in the support given to the Institution than he could himself. He would leave these facts to the brethren's consideration, to take them to heart as much as they could, and he had no doubt that the lodge that day consecrated, whose W.M. was a shining light, and many of whose members were shining lights, would shine with greater brilliancy than any other lodge. Whatever might be the success and prosperity which might attend the lodge he was quite sure there was one duty which would never be forgotten, the duty of practical Masonic charity. Bro. Binckes concluded by saying that Bro. John Aird, S.W., had kindly consented to represent the lodge as Steward at the 86th anniversary festival of the Boys' School in June, 1878.

Bro. Hervey proposed "The Recommending Lodge, the Canonbury Lodge," coupling with it the name of Bro. Edward Cox, P.M. 657.

Bro. Edward Cox said in his association with Freemasonry he had become conversant with this one fact, which he hoped was patent to all, that there was much more in Holy Writ that could be discerned by a studious person than would appear on the first blush. He remembered reading in the Psalms that which forcibly impressed on his mind that King David himself must have been a Freemason. David said that "promotion cometh neither from the east nor from the west, nor from the south." Why he should have omitted the north he (Bro. Cox) could not tell, unless King David was a Freemason. He supplemented that with this remark, that "He setteth up one and putteth down another," clearly exemplifying that the S.D. of this year might not be the J.W. of the next, but that the J.G. of this year might become the S.D. of the next. To go further, he remembered reading that Abraham, in his old days, begat children, and they were promised to him. They had that day introduced into the chair an aged brother as the W.M., and he would introduce children into the Craft, and become a father in his old days. He did not know any brother who was more to be respected as the father of children in the Craft than was Bro. Filer. In associating his (Bro. Cox's) name with the Canonbury Lodge he could only say that his connection with it and Bro. Filer had been such that he hoped it might last for many years yet to come. Bro. Filer was the father of the lodge which was consecrated by Bro. Hervey and Sir Daniel Gooch. That lodge reflected honour upon Bro. Hervey as it did upon the Craft. The endeavour of its members was at all times to promote the interests of Freemasonry, and introducing Bro. Filer's name to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, as the first Master of the Evening Star Lodge he felt they were not wrong, as by its association with the Canonbury Lodge they were reflecting honour on those who were brought into the Evening Star Lodge. He could not conclude without complimenting Bro. Hervey on having occupied the position of Consecrating Master. He had frequently seen the ceremony of consecration, but he had never seen it so beautifully performed as it had been that evening. He did not know whether it was the association of this lodge with the Canonbury that made him think so. Certainly he did feel that what he had heard had taken hold of his mind with a greater tenacity than words of mortal ever did before. He hoped they would be spread abroad ad infinitum.

Bro. Buss, who was also called on to reply said, the Canonbury Lodge for years past had sent up stewards to each of the charity festivals, with a list of £100 on each occasion. He thought that no lodge in London could boast of greater success. If the Evening Star Lodge did the same, or even surpassed them, the Canonbury would not feel any jealousy.

Bro. John Aird, in reply for the officers said; that all the brethren must feel that the Evening Star Lodge had been inaugurated most satisfactorily, and he and his brother officers would feel that they would be greatly wanting in their duties and in showing their appreciation of it, if they did not use their best efforts to make the lodge a success. It was his earnest endeavour to do so, and he trusted it would be the earnest endeavour of all.

Bro. F. A. Greene also replied, and the brethren having drunk the Tyler's toast shortly afterwards separated.

THE RIGHTS OF TRAMCARS.—At the close of a case tried before the Sheffield magistrates on Friday last, in which the Tramways Company were the complainants, Mr. Rodgers, one of the magistrates, remarked that many of the drivers of the cars drove as if they thought the whole world ought to make room for them, but the real fact was that they must make room for all the world. The 57th section of the Act enacted that notwithstanding anything there might be in the Tramways Act, the company should not acquire any right other than that of using the road. Therefore if they had no right beyond the use of the road, their right stood like the right of all the rest of the public to the use of the road, and they had no priority. By the 62nd section of the Act it was also provided that nothing in the Company's Act, or in any bye-law, should abridge the rights of the public. He did not at all admit that the slow traffic was to cross the road to allow the cars to pass when the other side was full of business, as the practice was a dangerous one, though it might be adopted when convenient. The rights of the public had first to be considered, not the rights of the company. The Town Council could pass bye-laws, but no bye-law could abridge the rights of the public, and when it did that it was void. In the metropolis the feud is as bitter as ever against the tramcar companies, who have disregarded the memorial of several thousand inhabitants respecting the bell nuisance. Proceedings in Parliament are to be taken to compel the company to abate or discontinue the nuisance; meanwhile towns which are threatened with the introduction of the tramway system should exercise jealous supervision over the bills introduced during the next and succeeding sessions of Parliament. In London the tramcar is turning out to be the old man in "Sinbad the Sailor," and a large and influential omnibus company to run them off the road is not improbable.—Colliery Guardian, August 24, 1877.

The members of St. Luke's Lodge of Instruction, 144, will reassemble on Friday, September 7th, at the White Hart Tavern, King's-road, Chelsea, at 7.30 p.m.

Masonic and General Tidings.

THE CONSECRATION OF THE EVENING STAR LODGE.—The consecration of the Evening Star Lodge as will be seen by our report elsewhere took place on Tuesday, at Freemasons' Hall, under brilliant auspices, and before a goodly gathering we shall call attention to their interesting report of the consecration of this promising new lodge next week.

We have much pleasure in drawing the attention of our numerous readers to a proposed Masonic Tour, starting from London on Monday week the 10th inst. It is organized by Bros. Gaze the well known Tourist directors and hotel contractors, of 142, Strand, and will be personally conducted by Bro. Oscar Dietrich. The persons forming the party will be informed he strictly limited to Master Masons. Arrangements are in progress for the fitting reception of the party by brethren of the various lodges in Paris, Geneva, and Berne and for fraternal intercourse at Geneva. To those brethren who have not already partaken of their summer Tour, we would commend the inspection of the detailed programme, which we have perused with care and interest and must acknowledge it forms a tour of a most novel and attractive character. These features in addition to the grand national scenery to be visited, we are confident will attract many to join the party. Full particulars are given in the detailed programme which may be obtained direct from Bros. Gaze and Son, 142, Strand, London.

CRICKET.—An interesting cricket match will be played in the Alexandra Palace ground, on Saturday, the 15th inst., between the boys of the Royal Masonic Institution at Wood Green, and the boys of the Grocers' Company's School.

Bro. John Aird, S.W., of the Evening Star Lodge, No. 1719, consecrated on Tuesday last, has promised to represent the lodge as Steward at the 88th Anniversary Festival of the R.M.I. for Boys, which will take place in June, 1878.

The East Anglian Daily Times announces the death on Sunday morning, at his London residence, of Mr. Edward Wilson, the eminent civil engineer. Mr. Wilson was consulting engineer to the Great Eastern Railway Company, and acting engineer to some of the largest undertakings in the United Kingdom. Death arose from a carbuncle upon the head.

INTERNATIONAL MONEY ORDERS.—On and after the first of this month international money orders will be issued and paid at all post offices in France and Algeria, instead of at the limited number of offices hitherto authorised to transact international money-order business. A complete list of post-offices in France and Algeria will be kept at every money-order office in the United Kingdom.

The amount received by the executive of Dulwich College for the last year from rents, tolls, and capitation fees, &c., was £32,000, the whole of which was expended upon the purposes of Alleyne's Charity.

OXFORD LOCAL EXAMINATIONS.—The Division lists for the present year were issued on Saturday, and comprise a total of 1402 who were successful out of 2304 candidates, being an excess of 214 on last year's numbers. Of the 1402, 633—viz., 329 boys and 304 girls—were senior candidates, and of these 211 boys and 201 girls will receive the University distinction of Associate of Arts. Of the 1671 junior candidates examined 1341 were boys and 330 girls, and of these 823 boys and 167 girls will receive certificates of having passed the junior examination. The first division of seniors in the Order of Merit contains but 21 names, of which Mr. H. T. Lilley, of St. Olave's Grammar School, Southwark, Rev. A. Johnson, Principal, stands first. Mr. Johnson, besides supplying the first name in the list, also sends the fourth in order of merit, Mr. W. J. Ashley, and the fifth, Mr. R. W. Cousins. Mr. F. Hughes, of the Liverpool Institute, is second in order in merit.

FLEET STREET.—The City Press acknowledges the receipt of complaints from several correspondents as to the loss occasioned by the dilatory way in which the work of repaving Fleet-street is being carried on. This most important thoroughfare is stated to have been closed for eight weeks. Considering the amount of traffic which has to be diverted, the inhabitants think that the work should be pushed on to the uttermost.

CAUTION TO BATHERS.—With the view of diminishing the loss of life which annually occurs from drowning, and which, according to recent returns of the Registrar-General, has increased between 30 and 40 per cent. during the past year as compared with corresponding periods of the previous year, the Royal Humane Society has issued the following important advice to bathers:—"Avoid bathing within two hours after a meal, or when exhausted by fatigue or from any other cause, or when the body is cooling after perspiration, and avoid bathing altogether in the open air if, after being a short time in the water, there is a sense of chilliness with numbness of the hands and feet, but bathe when the body is warm, provided no time is lost in getting into the water. Avoid chilling the body by sitting or standing undressed on the banks or in boats after having been in the water, or remaining too long in the water, but leave the water immediately there is the slightest feeling of chilliness. The vigorous and strong may bathe early in the morning, on an empty stomach, but the young and those who are weak had better bathe two or three hours after a meal; the best time for such is from two or three hours after breakfast. Those who are subject to attacks of giddiness or faintness, or who suffer from palpitation and other sense of discomfort at the heart, should not bathe without first consulting their medical adviser."—City Press.

STABILITY LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.—The session of this popular lodge will commence on Friday next the 7th inst., at 6 p.m. and will meet regularly every Friday evening from 6 till 8 p.m. until April, 1878. The place of meeting is the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street.

The appeal of the Lord Mayor to the clergy and ministers of religion throughout the country to assist him in raising a fund worthy of England, to relieve the sufferers by the famine in Southern India, has been so far well responded to, but not to anything like the extent which is still anticipated. The efforts of the Indian Government to mitigate the disaster need, it is said on high authority, to be largely supplemented by private munificence. The Lord Mayor earnestly commends the matter to the sympathy of the clergy, and, through them, to the compassionate liberality of their respective congregations, feeling assured that their attention has only to be drawn to the great need that exists for help to ensure at their hands a generous response.

Amongst the objects in the Oaxton Exhibition, is a copy of the "Freemasons' Magazine" of March 1796, containing a portrait memoir of Miss Elizabeth Caslon, the wife of the founder of the eminent firm of type foundry represented by H. W. Caslon & Co.

MR. LOWE AND MR. RUSKIN.—The letter which we quoted from the current number of Mr. Ruskin's Fora Clavigera as having been addressed by some distinguished friend to Mr. Ruskin was not, as we were led by the context to infer, from the pen of Mr. Robert Lowe.

CITY PROPERTY.—Many instances have been given from time to time of improvement in the value of City properties, but one of the most remarkable is that of a house in Lombard-street, the property of the Drapers' Company, which in 1668 was let for £25 a year. In 1877 the site lets for £2600 a year ground rent, and the lessee having expended £10,000 on the building covering it, gets a return of £7000 a year rent.—City Press.

Mr. G. B. Newton, for many years secretary of the North London Railway, has been appointed the general manager of the same line jointly with his post as secretary, which he still retains.

Owing to the rough weather both Folkestone and Ryde Regattas have been postponed. The former which was to have taken place on Tuesday last has been put off for some days. The latter which was promised for Monday and Tuesday the 27th and 28th ult., will now take place on the 11th and 12th of September.

ROYAL STANDARD LODGE OF INSTRUCTION, No. 1298.—This lodge will re-open for the season, on Friday next, the 7th inst., and will meet every Friday evening at 8 o'clock, at the Castle Tavern, Holloway-road, Bro. Cull, Preceptor.

The Manchester Guardian understands that the Manchester Aquarium was sold on Wednesday, by private contract, for the sum of £6,950. The purchaser is Bishop Vaughan, of Salford, who, it is stated, proposes to carry on the institution as an aquarium and museum.

Constitutions of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the Charges Regulations, E.A. Song, &c. A copy should be in the possession of every brother. It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. Address, Publisher, 198, Fleet-street, London.—Advt.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee meeting of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls was held on Thursday afternoon in the Board Room, Freemasons' Hall, Bro. John Boyd in the chair.

There were also present Bros. Griffiths Smith, Joshua Nunn, H. Browne, R. B. Webster, Jesse Turner, Major Finney, Thomas W. White, H. Massey, (Freemason); H. Potter, C. F. Matier, F. J. Baker, F. W. Hedges, and R. W. Little, Secretary.

Bro. C. F. Matier gave notice of motion for the next Quarterly Court that the rank of Vice-Patron be conferred on Bro. John Constable, in consideration of his services to the Institution.

A lady having, by her will, left a legacy of £50 to the Institution, on condition that her daughter be made a life governess, notice of motion was given by Bro. H. Browne that that rank be granted to the testator's daughter.

The Committee then adjourned.

Bro. E. West, M.A., M.C., 1st Class, Lodge 1271, successfully prepares for all competitive examinations. Boys especially trained for Naval Cadetships, &c. The sons of Merchants receive a thorough and practical education. Terms moderate.—Address, Bro. O. Pland's, Spring Grove, Middlesex, W.—[Advt.]

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Weariness of Life.—Derangement of the liver is one of the most efficient causes of dangerous diseases, and the most prolific source of those melancholy forebodings which are worse than death itself. A few doses of these noted Pills act magically in dispelling low spirits, and repelling the covert attacks made on the nerves by excessive heat, impure atmospheres, over-indulgence, or exhausting excitement. The most shattered constitution may derive benefit from Holloway's Pills, which will regulate disordered action, brace the nerves, increase the energy of the intellectual faculties and revive the failing memory. By attentively studying the Instructions for taking these Pills and explicitly putting them in practice, the most desponding will soon feel confident of a perfect recovery.—[Advt.]

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1877.

THE AGENDA PAPER FOR GRAND LODGE.

The Agenda Paper for September 5th is one of the most important that has been for some time submitted to Grand Lodge, inasmuch as it alters entirely the composition of the Board of Benevolence. Henceforth it is to be a Board of forty-five members with a President, fifteen appointed by the Grand Master, and thirty elected by Grand Lodge. The Grand Master, Pro Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, and the Grand Wardens, are to be ex-officio members, and the President is nominated by the Grand Master. The Board is to nominate a Vice-President. We think on the whole that such a change will tend greatly to the uniform administration of our charitable fund, which is now too much affected by chance attendance and special appeals. But we should like to suggest one or two amendments of the general proposal. We venture to think that the Grand Treasurer, the Grand Registrar, and the Grand Chaplains for the time being should be also ex-officio members of the Board, and we cannot see why two Vice-presidents should not be nominated by the Grand Master, as well as the President. But in the limitation of the Board of Benevolence we fully agree, as we have for some time been convinced that the present system is neither the fairest to the petitioners, nor to the funds of Grand Lodge. We feel sure that under the proposed alterations, needful and wise in our humble opinion, our grants of charity will be made with more systematic carefulness, and with better effect than at present.

KEEP CLEAR OF POLITICS.

The admirable advice of our Royal Grand Master, impressively given, as those of us will remember who listened in pride and satisfaction to his ringing words, "Keep clear of Politics," is always seasonable advice for Freemasons. For though it be true that in Great Britain, and in the Canadas, in the United States, and British India, in all the dependencies of our mighty empire, and among our good German brethren, this is the normal condition of Masonic life and teaching, yet there is sometimes a little tendency in us all to forget it, and in some parts of the Masonic world it is too often forgotten altogether. In France and Belgium, especially of late years, the weak point in Masonry in each country has been the habit of certain lodges of discussing subjects not at all akin to Freemasonry, subjects which closely trench on affairs of State, subjects which may fairly be called political, whether as leaning on a particular view, or on the "politeia" of public considerations generally. In the dark days of the Commune at Paris, French Freemasonry sank itself, in the eyes of all thinking Freemasons, by the grotesque form it assumed, and the baneful feelings it aroused, and in our opinion from that shock to its own principles, Freemasonry will take a long time to recover in "La Belle France." But having said this, we think it fair to observe, that those most regrettable proceedings were the acts of a "section," of a "clique," of a party, and were not participated in by the Grand Orient of France. It may, however, be feared, partly owing to its vicious organization, (for Freemasonry has no Grand Master, unfortunately, in France), whether the authority of the French Grand Orient is sufficient to curb the excesses of those wilder spirits who seem to wish to make Freemasonry a bastard offshoot of violent political partisans, of a hurtful, irrational and inflated Communism. The "libres penseurs" seem to be getting the upper hand among the French Masons, and a licence in religious teaching, and the excess of mournful speculation often accompany political theories, more or less violent, more or less "irreconcilables." There is a party in French Freemasonry which seeks to introduce into it the views of revolutionists, hurtful to man, as well as the reveries of "incredulity," dishonouring to God. Hence for some time past, a battle royal, so to say, has been fought between two great parties in French Freemasonry. One of these consists of those moderate men and brethren, who wish "quieta non movere," and who desire rightly to preserve the sanctions of a religious acknowledgment of the name of God Most High for French Freemasonry, following its early and continuous teaching to this hour. The others are those who, imitating untoward example, are desirous, apparently, of cutting away the cosmopolitan foundation of Freemasonry. And in this melée, principles have been put forward, by individual lodges, and by individual brethren, alike unmasonic and undesirable, which, if not opposed and "stamped out," will assuredly bring down French Freemasonry with a crash! We noticed some time back the absurd proceedings of the Lodge Orion of Galliac. We have since heard that other lodges have been passing political resolutions, which have brought on them the censure of the French authorities; and now we are assured that five lodges have been closed in Toulouse, because they had become political bodies; and we fear that we have not yet heard the last of similar proceedings. What the "overt act" of these lodges was, which constituted, as the lawyers say, the "corpus delicti," we are not told, but after all that has passed, we are not surprised to hear of such acts of authority, neither shall we be. In their present unwise state of agitation and revolution, (as we regard it), the mere "jaseurs," "the windbags," the noisy, undisciplined irresponsible orators, are pretty sure to get the upper hand, and reduce, we fear, French Freemasonry to a position alike absurd and disingenuous, opposed to all true Freemasonry, and destructive of any further cosmopolitan solidarity, (to use a French expression). It is quite clear to us that the moment French lodges begin to pass political resolutions, as secret societies, they forfeit the "placitum" of the state, and can expect nothing but suppression. We of course assume that the words and acts of the lodges implicated give colour to the charge, and we fear that in this "tourbillon" of unseasonable controversy into which French Freemasonry has been plunged volens nolens, many unwise speeches will be made, many unmasonic resolutions arrived at, which will justify alike the fears, the disapproval, and the interference of lawful authority. Under these circumstances we cannot too earnestly and affectionately press upon all our readers, at home and abroad, and especially our brethren in France, to beware of the temptation to forget that Freemasonry is not and cannot be a political institution, and that in our lodges we can only properly discuss those matters which relate to the affairs of our Order generally, or our own individual lodge in particular, and above all the great claims of Masonic charity, but that with affairs of state we have nothing whatever to do, and that we eschew and ignore alike the heated and often idle jargon of cantankerous politicians, just as we deprecate and abjure the angry outcries of obnoxious controversialists.

THE VOICE OF HUMANITY.

Happily for us all, in this world of ours, the great voice of Humanity can still be heard, even trumpet-tongued, above the din of contending armies, and the outcries of licence and anarchy. It survives alike the fortunes of empires and the overthrow of republics, and seems, if we may so put it, to rise superior to all the "embroglios" of diplomacy and all the shortcomings of human statesmanship. The great pulse of Humanity still beats true as ever amid all the vicissitudes of ages, and all the complications of mankind, and the humanitarian sympathies of our race lie deep within us all alike, say what we will, act as we may, reflecting credit on the very weakness of Adam's descendants, and glory on a Divine Original. It is both refreshing and consoling to the reflective and the benevolent to realize and record that the great and tender voice of Humanity, both enduring and cosmopolitan in character and purpose, belonging to no one epoch, confined to no one country, will still exert itself to-day. For as it is one entirely consonant with our best appreciation of all that is noble, and all that is beneficent, it is one, we take occasion to say, which none can afford boldly to criticize or perversely to disobey, for it sometimes rings truer than even the honied words of legislators, or the empirical debates of childish assemblies, and speaks home both to the individual and public conscience in language, if of the sternest, yet the most beneficial, which none can effect to misinterpret, none can pretend to misconstrue. Surely it is a good thing for us all to keep before us, that, doubt it as we may, call it sentimental or term it visionary as we will, it will be heard, and will lift up a warning note, amid the shrieks of the dying and the tortured, amid the foul orgies of rapine and the heartrending desolations of dishonour, amid all those various and all those fearful scenes which war incites to, and which war is powerless to restrain. It is not without some natural if homely feelings of pride that we turn to-day from accounts teeming with savage ferocity, and all that degrades, all that stains, all that brutalises humanity, to a record of noble efforts in the great and sacred cause of simple Humanity. We read of many funds collected for the suffering, the maimed, and the penniless in this Oriental war, and we note them with genuine satisfaction. Lady Bardett-Coutts, always benevolent and large-hearted, has set on foot a fund which has already reached noble proportions, £6000 having been sent in a few days to our Ambassador at Constantinople for "Fugitive Women, Children, Non-combatants, Christians, Hebrews, Mahomedans," whose destitution is dreadful, whose misery is extreme. We wish this goodly and philanthropic effort all the success it merits. We also read of similar funds on one side or the other; and to each and all, as offering the succours of Humanity, we bid God speed! This is surely a more pleasant topic to think of than burning villages, massacred wounded soldiers, dishonoured helpless women, and executed Bulgarians. These are scenes from which humanity turns away in grief and detestation. Yet, the angel of Humanity seems as it were to lift its wings of peaceful protection over all those fiery combatants, and if it had its way, amid the wretchedness and hateful passions of war, it would say to these surging masses of deplorable conflicts, "Peace, be still." We also gladly call attention to the Famine Fund for our afflicted fellow citizens in Hindustan, and we trust that the Lord Mayor's kindly efforts may be fully rewarded by the warm-hearted "largesse" of a great people. As Freemasons, amid many regrettable events and mournful episodes, we still venture to believe in that great voice of Humanity, which never spoke more seasonably than now, when offering to the helpless and innocent victims of a sanguinary war all that philanthropy can counsel, all that beneficence can supply.

THE METROPOLITAN POLICE.

At a time when so many discussions, and so many sensational statements are carried on and scattered about relative to this most meritorious body of men, it seems well to note and remember its hourly and daily services of remarkable importance to that vast population which is agglomerated in our sweet "little village." Colonel Henderson's report for 1876, deserves careful perusal, not only for its own intrinsic value as a careful and authoritative record of statistical weight, but also for the lucid manner in which the main points of detail and the chief facts of public interest are brought before us in a skilful and convenient grouping. The strength of the police on the 31st of December, 1876, was 10,268, being an increase of three sergeants and 38 constables only, over 1875. Special duties absorb the services of 4 superintendents, 53 inspectors, 146 sergeants, and 1054 constables; and of these 4 superintendents, 89 sergeants, and 536 constables constitute the dock-yard service, the rest being employed by the government, public offices, and private individuals. 21 superintendents, 224 inspectors, 907 sergeants, and 7859 constables are available for police duty of various kinds in the metropolitan districts. It seems that no less than 226 new streets, and 3 new squares have been opened in 1876 and are now under the police arrangements; they extend over 36 miles and 1074 yards. 12,938 new houses were built in 1876, and 4151 were building, and building is still on the increase. Since 1850, 1247 miles of new streets have been opened in London, and so far the tide has not been turned, but is moving on. Where it will end, who can say? 76,214 persons were arrested by the police, during 1876; an increase of 3608 over 1875, and 8511 over 1874. This increase is due to the apprehension of drunken and dissolute persons, and females especially, we are sorry to note. The arrests for drunkenness show a decrease of 208, being 15,842, against 16,050 in 1875, but drunk and disorderly show an increase of 1560 over 1875. We regret to add that the total arrests for drunkenness amount to 32,325, while drunk and disorderly and bad characters, male and females amount to 38,746. We quite concur with Col. Henderson's remarks, that though the average during the last six years has been higher than that of the preceding years, there does not appear to be any great increase of drunkenness among the population, and much of the apparent increase of late years is due to the activity of the police. The convictions against "drink houses" have decreased from 1034 in 1868, to 186 in 1876, and if some apparent incongruity exists as to the large amount of drunkenness still exhibited, and the conviction of "drink houses" it is just possible that, like as with the first constitutional Texan judge, the action of the police in this respect may be "Justice modified by circumstances." The number of indictable offences were 13,990 in 1876, as against 12,228 in 1875, while the apprehensions were 4334 as against 4018, and convictions 2476 as against 2343. 11,904 summonses were issued on the application of the police in 1876, and which resulted in 10,971 convictions and 933 dismissals, a very striking proportion indeed. 3203 persons suffering from street accidents were conveyed by the police to the hospitals; 130 persons were killed and 2740 were injured by cabs, omnibuses, light carts, &c. The irrepressible butcher boys and "cheeky hansom" seem to be the principal delinquents. 4152 persons have been apprehended as vagrants, and 18,881 stray dogs have been taken up and conveyed to the Dogs' Home, or otherwise disposed of. Since 1867, 97,886 dogs have been removed from the streets. During 1876, 8530 windows and 16,767 doors were found open or insufficiently fastened, so that out of 4834 felonious entries 3511 were through the doors and windows, and 239 into unprotected houses; 477 into unfinished houses, being 4229 felonies the result of, more or less, of carelessness out of 4834. During 1876, 172 police officers have been removed through misconduct, though from all causes the police lost 1122. The conduct of the force, Colonel Henderson says, has been "exceedingly good." The police attended 479 fires in 1876. Assaults on the police seem to be on the increase, 2941 being reported in 1876, many very aggravated. Would it not be possible in gross cases of assault to levy fines as well as imprisonment, or give an additional term of prison discipline? During 1876 11,805 persons were reported as missing. Of these 8531 were children under ten. 3128 children and 779 adults were found by the police and restored to their friends, and all accounted for, except eight children and 140 adults, a very serious and even alarming proportion, suggesting many painful considerations. With respect to public carriages, Colonel Henderson says:—"The inspection of public carriages and horses has been satisfactorily carried out by the inspectors specially appointed for that duty. During the year 386 horses and 3431 public carriages were reported as unfit for public use, and notices not to use the same served upon the proprietors. In most cases in which proceedings were taken before the magistrates convictions were obtained; 95 omnibuses, 272 hansom, and 363 four-wheeled cabs were rejected as unfit for public use. During the year 50 new omnibuses and 400 new cabs (principally hansom) were placed on the streets. No new style of Hackney carriage demanding special notice has been introduced. The following licenses were issued during the year:—Metropolitan stage carriages, 14,488; Hackney carriages, 8262; drivers of stage or Hackney carriages, 13,012; conductors, 3742. I regret that I cannot report any diminution in the convictions for drunkenness and furious driving, there being a slight increase in both classes of offence. The regulations regarding property left in licensed carriages came into force in 1870, and during the last seven years 83,393 articles have been found in public carriages and deposited at the Lost Property Office. In the year 1876 15,680 articles were deposited. Many valuable articles were deposited during the year, the principal of which were a bag of jewellery valued at £1000, a case containing £1000 in Bank of England notes, a diamond necklet at £2000. The driver was suitably rewarded in each case for depositing the same. We have perhaps been a little prolix with this important report, but we wish, for obvious reasons to show the magnitude of the work the Metropolitan Police daily and hourly carry on, and how great and valuable are their services to property and order in our great metropolis. With regard to the detection of great offences especially large robberies of jewels and the like, the difficulties of our police are many and serious. Unlike other countries, the operations of a secret police are a good deal objected to in England, and our skilled detection in consequence hardly deserves that name, but is detection carried on under difficulties. That many rascals and scoundrels trade on criminality, and live in riot and plunder of the goods of the public, is we fear the inevitable accompaniment of all large cities, and is too true as regards London especially, but let us hope that Colonel Henderson's next report may announce a larger and more satisfactory development of skilled and successful detection.

NAMES OF NEW LODGES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I note an increasing tendency amongst us to call lodges by the names of living individuals, and as I doubt the policy and propriety of such a custom, Masonically speaking, I think it well to ventilate the matter in your columns. I exclude from my remarks the names of various members of our Royal Family, because that may fairly be defended on the grounds of Masonic loyalty. Neither do I for one complain of the names of distinguished rulers of the Craft and worthy Masons, whose services to our Order are well known. But I do object to the use of names of persons of whom little is known, Masonically, and whose local reputation may perhaps depend on this or that political party, this or that section of society, this or that denomination. Several instances have of late occurred of such injudicious selection of names for lodges, and as your columns are always open to the complaints of Masons, I make mine to-day.

Yours fraternally,

ROUGH ASHLAR.

SOME CORRECTIONS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Let me call your attention to some needful corrections in my leader, "A Few Words to the Roman Catholic Authorities." For instance, "foro conscientie" should read, "to be binding foro conscientie, or obligatory on any one;" a "caput mortuum" should be "mortuum;" and the reader must please insert "unless, indeed, the personal," before "infallibility," &c. "This realm" should read "this realm," and "larty" "laity," and your readers must strike out a very superfluous "that" before "we cannot expect them," &c.

Yours fraternally,

THE WRITER OF THE ARTICLE.

GRAND LODGE OF CUBA.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I suppose you may have known, by the Chaine d'Union de Paris, and the Monde Maconnique, that we have an Independent Grand Lodge of F. and A. M. at the Island of Cuba, whose official journal is mine; La Voix de Hiram.

Our new Grand Lodge has been highly greeted and successful in the United States and Europe. We have, besides the recognition and treaty of friendship, of the "Grand Orient of Spain," the recognition of the Grand Lodges of Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland and New York; a number of triumphs, quite enough for the short time of life we yet have reached.—from 1st August, 1875.

I suppose you may occasionally have seen this news in the American Masonic papers, and in the Grand Lodge Proceedings of the U. S.

We have in due time requested the recognition of your three Grand Lodges; but, as we sent the papers by Prov. Grand Master Burke, of Jamaica, I cannot be sure that they have been duly received; and have not been able to adopt another conveyance, because I do not know the address of the Great Britain Grand Secretaries.

I commence, then, my new periodical relations with you as a brother and colleague, asking of you this favour—to tell me the precise and sure address of the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of England, the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and your own address.

And secondly, I'll ask you another favour—to publish the enclosed paper in your journal. It is intended to be distributed from New York by our Grand Representative; but I hope you will not have any objection to make it known, whereby you would be in a great manner useful to the Grand Lodge of Island of Cuba.

Finally, I offer you my monthly correspondence to your paper, should you deem it agreeable or worth while for your subscribers.

On every one of these points I will be most happy to know your mind, which I shall endeavour to follow directly. And, meantime, I take heed of this occasion to offer you my humble services as a brother, a colleague, and a lawyer, who will be very glad to make friendship with you.

AURELIS ALMEIDA.

Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of the Island of Cuba.

Office of the Grand Representative of the M.W. Grand Lodge of the Island of Cuba. New York, August
3rd, 1877.

To the R.W.G.M. of the M.W.G.L.F.A.M., of the State of ———

WISDOM. VIRTUE. FRATERNITY.

R.W. Sir and Bro.:

The irregular Masonic group bearing the name Colon, in the Island of Cuba, has lately been subject to original events, which my Grand Lodge deems proper to make known, in order to prevent any possible mistake about the new meaning and worth of the so called Grand Lodges of Colon.

We gave you notice, in due time, of the origin and history of the primitive Grand Lodge of Colon, established at Santiago de Cuba, Dec. 5th, 1839, by three regular lodges, chartered by South Carolina: Fraternidad, Prudencia, and San Andres.—We have told you how the jurisdictional rights of that primitive Grand Lodge decayed, and were lost, on account of its having submitted to the Supreme Council of Colon, Sept. 30th, 1867. You know that this Sup. Council, since that day, assumed all the powers of a Grand Lodge; that in 1873, it reinstalled the Grand Lodge of Colon, though only as a section thereof. Finally, we have told you how and why the lodges of Havana, Matanzas and Cardenas—6 of which chartered by the Grand Lodge of Colon before its submission—met in a convention, and established the Sovereign and Independent Grand Lodge of the Island of Cuba.—Aug. 1st, 1876.

In this state of things the few lodges yet acknowledging at Havana the authority of Colon, sent (June 4th, 1877) a proclamation to the Grand lodge at Santiago de Cuba, requesting the immediate removal of that body to Havana, and threatening to revolt and to establish another Grand Lodge of Colon, in case their request should not be granted.

The Grand Lodge of Santiago de Cuba, under this pressure, divided: the representatives of the three primitive lodges, with those of the two lodges at Guantanamo and Manzanillo, and those of two lodges more at Havana, supported by the Grand Secretary, the Deputy Grand Master, and the Grand Treasurer, refused their consent to any removal of the Grand Lodge from Santiago de Cuba, striked the petitioners with irregularity, and professed to be the only regular Grand Lodge of Colon, having the seal, archives, and treasury, and possessing the three primitive lodges.—May 27th, 1877.

The Havana band met in another place as the true Grand Lodge of Colon—June 3rd, 1877—voted their removal from Santiago de Cuba, and are at present installed in the city of Havana, as the only Grand Lodge of Colon; though void of the representation of the three primitive lodges, and of the seal, archives, and funds, with every other appurtenance hereto belonging to the Grand Lodge called Colon.

We have now, then, two Grand Lodges of Colon in the Island of Cuba; both irregular, yet both claiming to be the only genuine Grand Lodge in that country.

Those are the facts which my Grand Lodge finds convenient to make known to all regular Grand Lodges in the world.

Fraternally yours,

RAMON ILLA,
Grand Repr. Gr. L. I. of C.

[The addresses of the three Grand Secretaries in Great Britain are as follows:—John Hervey, Esq., Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, London, England; D. Murray Lyon, Esq., Freemasons' Hall, 98, George-street, Edinburgh, Scotland; Samuel B. Oldham, Esq., Freemasons' Hall, Molesworth-street, Dublin, Ireland. The office of the Freemason, 198, Fleet-street, London, England.]

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. ALLPORT, OF THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Since the letter appeared in the Freemason I have been told that a Scotch paper has taken the matter up, and I beg to enclose you extracts from two other papers.

It is a subject worthy of all good Masons, and I trust you will give it all the aid you can.

Yours sincerely,

TRAVELLER.

A correspondent of the Lowestoft Journal says:—

Sir,—Having lately been enjoying the sea breeze from your coast, and on reckoning up the cost, I see very plainly that but for the system of third-class fares and quick travelling introduced by Mr. Allport, the general manager of the Midland System of Railways, we should not have been able—financially, I mean—to get our customary holiday: and I feel thankful at having once more been able to give the little ones the treat of digging sand and making puddles to their hearts' content.

With your permission, I should like to thank Mr. Allport for bringing about the system of quick travelling and cheap fares, and I have no doubt thousands of others do in their hearts. May he live long and die a happy man is the hope of PATERNAMILIAS.

The Railway Sheet and Official Gazette of Aug. 15 writes:—THIRD CLASS BY ALL TRAINS.—THE PROPOSED TESTIMONIAL TO MR. ALLPORT.—This matter is still kept before the public. A cutting has been sent us from Engineering, from which we gather that the Freemason, the Builder, Builders' Weekly Reporter, and other papers have expressed their concurrence with this movement. We would venture to suggest that the object in view would be considerably advanced by a committee being formed and a start made. A newspaper cannot well take the initiative, and many may be waiting for something more definite than mere suggestions. It is said that commercial men are greatly indebted to Mr. Allport. If they think so, they, as a class, could suitably set such a movement on foot.

AN INTRUSION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

With reference to proceedings announced on page 337 of the Freemason, as arranged for, though not ultimately carried out, permit me to ask what (if any) justification could a W.M. or other officer plead for the admission into "open lodge assembled," of a person who has not been initiated?

Believe me, yours fraternally,

HERKWARD.

[The two following letters appeared in the Times of Tuesday:—]

CAXTON EXHIBITION.

Sir,—Although you have done justice to the very remarkable character and great value of the typographical collection at South Kensington, which in a few days will be dispersed, by admitting many articles and letters respecting it in your columns, I hope there may still be room for some statements partly supplementary to and partly in correction of the information which the Exhibition and its catalogue afford. The Exhibition would have been more popular and more instructive if the specimens had been more promptly and more completely furnished with descriptive labels, or at least with numbers corresponding with those in the catalogue. Unfortunately, it is about to close just as it is approaching the condition in which it ought to have been at its opening.

The collection is, if anything, rather too large and miscellaneous. Yet there is more than one deplorable hiatus in the chain of typographical history, which might, I think, have been easily supplied. Even to this day, strange to say, the question of the first inventor of printing with moveable type is sometimes disputed, and it was in this Exhibition that one would have most reasonably have looked for an example of a work which seems to furnish the most valuable evidence on the subject. I mean the "Chronicon Eusebii Cæsariensis Episcopi," printed by Ratdolt at Venice in 1483, about 30 years after the earliest extant example of printing, and continued by a later author to the date of publication. In this Chronicle, printed at a period when a false claim could hardly have been made without exposure, the invention is expressly affirmed to be that of John Gutenberg, of Mentz, on the Rhine, in the year 1440.

One looks in vain also for the earliest known instance of musical notation by types, which is in the "Colectorium super Magnificat," of John Gerson, supposed to be printed by Eggesteyn, at Strasburg, in 1473. The notes, which are used in gradation to express the mental emotions from joy down to grief, through the intermediate stages of hope, pity, and fear, have no staff, the intention being, as it seems, that this should be supplied by lines ruled in by hand, which however, has not been done in my copy.

As some space in the Exhibition is assigned to phonetic printing, I am surprised to find no allusion to the phonetic publications of Charles Butler, Head Master of the Holy Ghost School at Basingstoke, whose illustration of the language of bees by musical notation in the "Feminine Monarchie" is referred to in your last week's article on music-printing. As early as 1634 an edition of this work and also an English grammar were published by Butler of Caxford in phonetic spelling, of which the present one is only a revival, and with certain special forms of phonetic type.

I did not observe in the collection any examples of the magnificent typography of Bodoni, of the Royal Press of Parma in the 18th century, nor of his contemporaries, Renouard and Didot, at Paris. Foulis, of Glasgow, is represented only by his less important productions. But, above all the truly noble achievements of the Chiswick Press (C. Whittingham's), for W. Pickering, the only man of later days who has really rivalled, and perhaps equalled, the typography of the 15th century, ought surely to have been prominent in an English exhibition of printing. His folio series, in six vols., of the various editions of the Book of Common Prayer and his Wycliffe's New Testament might have stood side by side with the Mazarine Bible or the Mayence Psalter without losing by the comparison.

It was, by the way, the Mazarine Bible, not the Mayence Psalter (as stated in the "Handbook of the Exhibition") of which two copies were sold in the Perkins sale. It is, however, after all, an ungracious task to point out defects in an Exhibition which has afforded me, and I hope many others, extreme pleasure, and I will not trespass further on your space.

TEMPLE BAR.

Sir,—The repaving of Fleet-street having now entirely stopped the traffic through Temple Bar it would seem to ordinary minds the proper time for removing that already condemned obstruction, the lease of it having expired some time ago. Common Councilmen, however, have not common minds. If I rightly understand their debates, as reported in your columns, they decline to remove the Bar until the Government or Board of Works make some satisfactory arrangement about the space left vacant by throwing back the frontage of the New Law Courts. In other words, they say that if the street be not widened exactly to their fancy, they will do their best to obstruct it.

Is not this much the same policy as that pursued in the House of Commons by Messrs. Parnell, Biggar, and Co.?

Your obedient servant,

A FLEET-STREET BARRER.

UNITED GRAND LODGE.

The following is the agenda of business for Wednesday, 5th September, 1877:—

The minutes of the Quarterly Communication of the 6th June for confirmation.

The M.W. Grand Master will move—

(1) "That in consideration of the dreadful fire which has occurred at St. John, New Brunswick, and which has devastated that city, this Grand Lodge do grant the sum of two hundred guineas, to be paid out of the Fund of General Purposes, in aid of the fund now in course of formation for the relief of the inhabitants."

(2) "That this Grand Lodge do grant the sum of one hundred guineas, to be paid out of the Fund of General Purposes, in alleviation of the distress caused by the 'Cataclysm' which has recently occurred on the coast of Peru."

Report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter, in which are recommendations for the following grants, viz:—

A brother of the Tyrian Lodge, No. 253, Derby	£50 0 0
A brother of the Lodge of Concord, No. 323, Stockport	50 0 0
The widow of a brother of the Saint James' Lodge, No. 765, Southwark	100 0 0
A brother of the Duke of Athol Lodge, No. 210, Denton	75 0 0
The daughter of a brother of the Stoneleigh Lodge, No. 725, Kenilworth	50 0 0
The widow of a brother of the Lodge of Faith and Unanimity, No. 417, Dorchester	300 0 0

Report of the Board of General Purposes.

The Board of General Purposes have to report as follows:—
1. Arising out of the opinions for some considerable time expressed in Grand Lodge, and more especially the recent debates of that assembly, the Board have had under their careful and special consideration the constitution of the Lodge of Benevolence, and having referred the question to a committee of the whole Board for consideration and report, have received from such committee the following report thereon:—

To the Worshipful Board of General Purposes.

The Committee of the whole Board, to whom it was on the 19th day of June last referred to consider the advisability of recommending Grand Lodge to alter the title and constitution of the Lodge of Benevolence, beg to report unanimously as follows:—Having fully considered the subject we are of opinion that it is advisable to recommend Grand Lodge to alter both the title and the constitution of the Lodge of Benevolence in manner herein-after mentioned.

1. The "Lodge of Benevolence" to be in future designated the "Board of Benevolence."

2. The Board of Benevolence to consist of the Grand Master, Pro Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, the Grand Wardens, a President, and forty-five other members. The President and fifteen of such members to be annually nominated by the Grand Master at the Quarterly Communication in December, and the remaining thirty members to be elected by Grand Lodge from amongst the actual Masters and Past Masters of lodges, such election to be conducted in the same manner as that of the Board of General Purposes, but it should not in our opinion be a regulation that one-third or any other proportion of the members should retire annually.

3.—The Board to elect one of its members to be Vice-President.

4.—Five members to form a quorum.

All which is submitted to the consideration of the Board.

(Signed) JOHN B. MONCKTON,

Chairman.

And the Board of General Purposes unanimously agreeing with such report do recommend the same to Grand Lodge for adoption.

2.—The Board have had under their consideration and that of the Premises Committee the question of improving the accommodation in the Grand Secretary's office, and have arrived at the conclusion that the best and most satisfactory mode of effecting the desired end would be to utilise the lavatory on the ground floor at the back of the grand staircase and the front room known as the library, which, by means of communicating openings, would, in the opinion of the Board, afford, for some time to come at least, sufficient and proper accommodation for carrying out the work in the Grand Secretary's office, and more especially would provide a private office for the use of the recently appointed Assistant Grand Secretary, an arrangement greatly needed; and that the lavatory, &c., in the rear of the present waiting room and Grand Secretary's office be reconstructed, with enlarged accommodation.

3.—It having been represented to the Board that a brother had been passed to the Second Degree in twenty-six days only after his initiation, the circumstances were fully enquired into, and it was ordered that the brother be re-obligated, in the Second and Third Degrees, at a due interval, and that the Lodge of Benevolence (No. 489, Bideford) be fined one guinea, and admonished to be more careful in future.

(Signed) JOHN B. MONCKTON,
President.

To the report is subjoined a statement of the Grand Lodge accounts at the last meeting of the Finance Committee, held on Friday, the 17th day of August instant, shewing a balance in the hands of the Grand Treasurer of £7280 8s. 3d.; and in the hands of the Grand Secretary, for petty cash, £75; and for servants' wages £96 15s.

The President will move:—

1.—That the report be received and entered on the minutes.

2.—That Grand Lodge do adopt the recommendations of the Board of General Purposes with reference to the reconstitution of the Lodge of Benevolence.

3.—That the Grand Registrar be requested to make such alterations and additions in the Book of Constitutions as may be necessary for the purposes of such reconstitution.

4.—That the recommendations of the Board of General Purposes with reference to the proposed increased accommodation for the Grand Secretary's office be adopted, and that the same be referred back to the Board for execution under the direction of the Grand Superintendent of Works.

IN THE SHADE.

But Illinois; what have you done to accomplish "the grand design" of the Order? You have established lodges all over your vast prairies, and added thousands to the ranks of the mystic brotherhood. Have you by precept or example engraven upon their hearts the memory of their word and promise; the declaration of unselfishness; the pledge of fealty to the great work of charity; the vow that binds all hearts and all hands to the cause and the work of benevolence? What fruits have you to show for all this? What evidence that these pledges were intended to be redeemed, and have been redeemed? You have, I believe, over seven hundred lodges in your great State; are there no orphans of your deceased brethren who need, home and shelter, food and raiment, care and education? Are there no "aged and infirm" brethren who need, not alone your active sympathy, but your filial care? Where is the great life-work of Masonry in Illinois? Have you accomplished it? Or are you only editing its commencement? I remember when your Grand Lodge was organised, and but a few solitary lodges were in the State. I knew your first Grand Master, and several of the succeeding ones. The membership then was very limited, and they were building up homes in a new country; family first—this was right—but then the Craft. Your members now are rich. Your broad, productive prairies bring forth bounteously in response to your labours, and, by the providence and blessing of God, you can do much for "blessed charity," if you will. Your Grand Lodge, being the largest and among the wealthiest in the West, might lead in the "glorious work of Masonry," and thus furnish an example for the rest. It has been long since I was in Illinois, and longer still since I attended your Grand Lodge, and may not, therefore, know what you have been and are doing to promote the Royal Art; but I would be glad to know that profession has been reduced to practice, and avowed principles crystallised into a great fact. Build your asylums, your homes, your rests, for the orphan and the aged, the widow and the helpless, where the weary may find rest and the helpless a home. Adorn your grand Prairie State with a great temple to benevolence, in which your brother's orphan may be fed and clothed and educated, and forget that his Mason-father is in the grave, because every Mason has become to him a father, and the extra resources of the entire brotherhood are pledged for his protection and support. Let it (or another) be a home for the aged and indigent who have wrought faithfully in the quarries, where they may "rest from their labours," and the evening of their days be warmed and lighted by the glow of Masonic care and Masonic benevolence. Can you not do this, and still have to spare?

I have long since lost all respect for that Masonry, and those Masons whose devotion to Masonry is always being declared and never practised. I would not give a farthing for the Order if its professed principles are not crystallised into great works—if the words of its members do not become deeds, and its sacred vows are forgotten as soon as uttered. Freemasonry must live as a reality, not as an ideal; it must do more and profess less, if it would retain the respect of community or the real regard of its own thoughtful members. A Grand Lodge, like Ohio, for instance, can spend from twelve to fifteen thousand dollars to pay the expenses of a two days' session, but the widow and the orphan are remitted to an occasional scanty donation of a lodge. Let Freemasonry redeem its promises, and it need have no fears of the future; if it would live, it must build its own monument of benevolence and usefulness. A dead church, and an idle, useless Freemasonry, alike tend to decay and ruin. Yet, after all, there are elements in Freemasonry, though dormant for the moment, that may be stimulated into activity, and make their impress for good upon the present and future.

Let me once more point to England as an illustration of promises remembered and pledges redeemed. Though many at the present day, may become members of the Institution because it basks in the smiles of Royalty, yet the great mass of the membership prove their devotion to their principles by their grand achievements in the cause of benevolence. Orphans by the score and by the hundred are cared for and educated in their "schools"—one for boys and another for girls. A comfortable and beautiful home is provided for "aged and decayed Freemasons," their wives and widows. The free-will offerings of the English Craft to sustain these "schools" and "homes" amount to more than two hundred thousand dollars per year! Royalty smiles upon them and lays its offering of gold upon their altars; wealth stops in its pursuit of gain to contribute of its abundance; official distinction deems it an honour to devote a portion of its emoluments to the cause of Masonic charity, and labour contributes of its earnings to help swell the volume of benevolence. Hail, grand old English Masonry! It is doing a work which humanity applauds and God approves. May not America, with all its conceits and prejudices, learn to emulate the good deeds and grand achievements of English Masons? Every Grand Lodge should either have its orphanage or home or asylum, or something to denote its active efforts to redeem the general pledge of the Order; or it should be laying aside its annual revenues to accumulate a fund for future work. The expenses of Grand Lodges are too great. The "per diems" and the "mileages" and the printing, and the salaries of Grand Secretaries, should be reduced, at least, one-half, and some of them might be abolished altogether; while the savings from these useless expenditures would, in a few years, enable the Craft in each State to do something to redeem their pledges, private and public, and in the shape of homes and asylums for the orphans and the aged, build monuments to the glory and re-nov of our grand old Institution. As matters go now, though we may be increasing in numbers, we are losing the spirit of Masonry, neglecting its noble mission, and forfeiting the respect of the communities among whom we live.

But the reader may say I am writing "in the shade," and therefore do not see all that is being accomplished by my brethren. It is true that I am in the shade, not only literally sheltered from the sun, but the shade of years is gathering about me, and the twilight of life's evening begins to obscure the horizon. Yet, forty years of active labour in the forest and in the quarries, and on Moriah as well, have given me a knowledge of the dangers which surround our beloved Order. Effects follow causes in Masonry as they do in nature, and blessings unimproved will surely become curses. Nations rise to power and influence, and for centuries, perhaps, shine as great landmarks to the world. But with power comes corruption; ambition lures to deceive; the foundations of the national structure, neglected, soon decay; and influence, instead of being properly directed, changes its course and that influence, "like gravitation, turns the other way." The downfall of that nation is but a question of time. Like causes will produce like results in Freemasonry. With principles as pure as "Siloa's Stream," they may be neglected or misapplied. With power and influence capable of performing great achievements, they may pass away by non-user, or be directed by selfish or ambitious men to ruinous and destructive results. But the Institution need have no fear if its acknowledged principles are practically exemplified before the world. "To do good unto all,"—this is the glorious inscription upon the old banner, and underneath is added by way of a particular admonition—"Especially to the household of faith." To "aid and assist all" the Craft, and especially "their widows and orphans,"—these are the inspiring words—the clarion call to active usefulness and glorious rewards.

But while as Masons we are urged to the discharge of these duties, and permitted to boast of the capacity of our Order to be useful in the world, we must not forget that all of Masonry is not confined to our Institution. It is in the warm heart and sympathetic nature, whether within or without our Order; its symbolism is seen and read in the alphabet of nature; and as well "from the flowers that bloom beneath us," as "from the heavens that bend above us," we may learn the lessons and be urged to the duties of our mystic Craft. And so Freemasonry may triumph, though never another neophyte should pass the threshold of our Temple.

I rejoice to see that the journals of the day, devoted to the interests of Masonry, are not only "disseminating light and information" among the Craft, but also calling them to duty. Let the editors keep this in view, and urge upon their readers the discharge of every Masonic duty—promptly and heartily; then shall the Temple of Freemasonry stand up a glory and a power for good throughout all the earth.

Reviews.

"Die Geheim Statuten des Ordens der Templerherren;"

Edited by Dr. MERZDORF, with an after statement by Dr. GUSTAV SCHWETSCKE. Halle, 1877.

We have received and looked over this important work, which its original and able editor, Bro. Dr. Merzdorf did not, however, unfortunately live to see published. It consists of three parts; 1st. "Regula Pauperum Commilitonum Christi Templique Salomonis," said to be extant in the Vatican Library, among "Acta Inquisitionis contra Ordinem Militie Templi (Cod. xv.)," and which have already appeared generally in the work of Münter, Wilcke, Maillard de Chambure, the "Histoire de la Chevalerie," and many other similar publications. We say generally, in an agreement with the published texts, as time and space forbids us to make a careful collation of the "Regula." They are 72 in the present collection, and may be assumed to be correct. There are also seven "Accessiones Novae," or new regulations added to them, and which profess to have been transcribed, together with the old rules, by "Frater Mathæus de Tremelay, Anno Domini bis centesimo et quinto supra miliesimum die S. Felicii"—that is to say on St. Felicia's day, 1205. We do not think it needful to say anything more on these "Regulations of the Poor Soldiers of Christ," as they are known to all who have studied the subject, and until shown to be unauthentic, may be accepted fairly as such. We wish however, that a collation of the Code X had taken place, and a facsimile of the handwriting had been made, so that palæographers might be able to express an opinion on its actual date. The second document is thus headed:—"Incessant Statuta Secreta quæ Fratribus Electis de Militia Templi tradiderunt prout acceptant Ff. Rogerius de Montagu Praeceptor Normannie, et Robertus de Barres, Procurator Maisnagiorum in Normania;" That is to say we have here the secret statutes which Roger de Montagu, Preceptor of Normandy, and Robert de Bar, &c., delivered to the elect of the Militia of the Temple, as they received them. This important collection professes to be extant, alas, in the Vatican Library, Codex XXIV. among the "Acta" of the Inquisition against the Templars, and to have been transcribed by Bernard de St. Omer in 1252, the 15th of the Kalends of August. We may observe here that the history of these MSS. seems to be this. They are all written by one hand, and were formerly in the possession of a Russian official Böber about the beginning of this century. He died about 1820, and his MSS. fell into the hands of a Dr. Buek in Hamburg, and are now among the archives of the Grand Lodge of Hamburg, and from them this copy has been printed. We must again repeat our regret that no search has been made in the Vatican Library, no collation attempted, and beyond the heading "Codex XXIV.," it is not apparently known whether any such manuscript exists. We also desiderate greatly a facsimile of the hand writing, for when we carefully study the document, we are struck by this fact at once, that the language is not the language of the 13th century, and expressions are made use of which clearly are of later date. If these documents are genuine, they would clearly demonstrate that the Templars in 1252, were in alliance with the Waldenses, and the various dissidents from the Church of Rome, were acquainted with the controversy of Anti-Christ, and had at the same time an affinity with Eastern Gnostics, and Mahomedan teaching, and were in union with the Freemasons, and had in fact a Masonic ceremonial. We cannot accept any such theory, even on the internal evidence of the MS. itself, and can only presume it to be a "pious fraud," either by some contemporary enemy of the Templars, (if the MS. be really forthcoming), or of those members of the Masonic Order who in the latter end of the 18th century were determined to have a Templar origin for Freemasonry. To the last view we, on the whole, lean, for the entirety of the phraseology is clearly of late date, after known controversies and admitted facts. The use of the words elect, "Synagoga, Anti-christi," the wonderful hostility to the Church of Rome, all express a much later period of thought and feeling than 1250. The doctrine of "election" could hardly have been a familiar subject of discussion in 1250, and whether the MS. be a forgery or not, it is not a 13th century one in our humble opinion. In the XXVII. regulation, allusion is made to "Magistri Massonerii," (Master Masons), which in our opinion is fatal to the reality of the MS. as of date 1250. The word Massonerii is of quite late use, and we doubt if any good example can be cited of its appearance until those brethren set to work who drew up the Charter of Cologne. We regret to say, that the more we study these rules, the more we feel persuaded of their unreality, by whomsoever as Merzdorf has it, (for he clearly comes to the same conclusion with us), the forgery was made. Whatever they may be they are not 13th Century Regulations. We may add that the alleged MS. contains 36 Regulations. The same remark applies to the "Liber Consolamenti" which is said to be Codex. XXXI., in the Vatican Library of the "Acta contra Ordinem Militiæ Templi." This contains 20 regulations, and is said to have been transcribed by "Frater Robertus de Samford" Procurator of the Templar houses in England, the 4th of the Kalends of July, 1246, and to have been put together by Frater Roncelinus. We are struck with its incongruity, and even impiety, its mixture of the devout teaching of the baptism of the Holy Spirit, and the extraction of the "Idol" Idolum Baphometum from the "Pyx." The proceedings of the chapter are termed "Perfectione Consolamenti," which may be translated as Merzdorf has it, the perfection or fulfilment of the spiritual baptism, answering to the Illumination mentis of the Gnostics. No collation has been made, as we said before, of the other MSS., and we confess to the fear that in some mistaken zeal this is also a "fraus piæ." The 4th MS. is a "Rotulus Signorum" a roll of signs which mark the "Fratres Militiæ Templi," and all those, lay or clerical, who belong to the Secret Order of the Elect. It is said to be Codex. XXXII. Vatican, as before, but has not been collated. It professes to have been translated by Frater Roncelinus, in 1240, also.

We regret that we must pass the same judgment upon this collection as on the others, saying that it is unreal, unhistorical, and unauthentic.

Whether Mûnter, as the late Bro. Merzdorf seems to surmise, had some hand in these documents, when at Rome, it is perhaps impossible to say, but until their reality as MSS. is established, they must be open to the gravest doubts, and even if the handwriting be of the 13th century, they would still, we fancy, be a controversial preparation, to justify the arbitrary acts of Pope and King in the destruction of the Templars, though, as we have before observed, the absurdity and impiety of these regulations must strike all conversant with the annals of those times and the sentiments of that epoch. To suppose, for instance, that the Knights fighting in the East were conversant with the controversies and sectional movements of offshoots from the Romish Church, the "benihomines," of Lyons, the Waldenses, the Albigenses, &c., is too much for our credibility. It is quite impossible to conceive that any possible connection could exist as between Mahomedan teaching and Christian Knights, or that the Templars could sympathize with the alleged Pantheistic writing of Amalaricus de Bena and David de Dinanto. In fact these statutes would make the Templars a sort of originators of freethought, to say nothing of free love! In our opinion the internal evidence of the collection is fatal to them, and they constitute a deliberate forgery, for some purpose, which does not yet clearly appear. We have clearly pointed out that the words "Magistri Massoneri" are not the Latini of the 13th century, and there we leave the matter, though the fact of a connection between the Operative Masons and the Templars may be true enough per se. The allusion to "Abrac" in respect of the Masons is also a late expression, and clearly points to a compilation for a purpose. We shall await curiously the result of a possible search in the Vatican Library, as though we may be wrong, we are inclined to think that the existence of these alleged MSS. is not only questionable in itself, but that if they be extant, they certainly do not represent the chirography of the 13th century. As 13th century documents, we reject them without any hesitation whatever, simply on that internal evidence which sometimes speaks most clearly, and renders the task of the expert comparatively easy.

SKETCHES OF MASONIC CHARACTER. No. II.

BRO. TIMMINS IN WALES.

We all of us know Bro. Timmins, of the Lodge of Gaity, No. 3000, and what a rising young man and Mason he is. Hear him talk, you would suppose that in him were centred all the learning of Anderson, and all the archaeology of Oliver, all the indefatigable labours of W. J. Hughan, all the steady application of D. Murray Lyon; and we need hardly add, that, in his own lodge, he is considered a first-rate authority on all Masonic matters, whether they be of history or etiquette. So much so that no one ventures to contest his opinion, no one dares to dispute his "dictum." He is excessively strong, above all, on the Book of Constitutions. Once upon a time, in an evil hour for us, we ventured—actually ventured—to take the exception alike to an antiquarian assertion, and a constitutional exposition.

And we shall never forget Bro. P.M. Snigger's look of mingled astonishment and awe.

"Bro. Tomkinson," he said, solemnly, to us, "are you aware that our Bro. Timmins is considered a first-class authority on all points; so much so that we do not like to controvert his opinion? As a friend and a brother, let me warn you that you will offend many of the brethren if you openly question Bro. Timmins's authority, which we, in this Lodge of Gaity, always respect; he is such a clever young man and Mason."

Well, we took the hint, and "drew in our horns," though on both points Bro. Timmins was lamentably wrong and ignorant.

But so it is, and we know not a few lodges where a "Timmins" exists, and where he does a frightful quantity of mischief.

Bro. Timmins, like all great men, must have a holiday, and so he has started for Llandudno, with his three sisters, and a very agreeable party they make, as some young

Oxford men, reading with a tutor, have found out, and who seem to prefer the bright eyes and good looks of Miss Emma, Miss Jane, and Miss Katharine, to all the classical studies and all the natural science in the world.

Timmins is not a bad fellow in himself, if he was not so bumptious and set up, and as they say "revenge is sweet," so I have mine in the fact specially and solely reserved for the Freemason, that he is terribly bullied, and perfectly kept in order by his sisters, who will "stand none of his nonsense," as they say, and, like British Maidens of the hour, are neither to be "put upon" nor "trampled down."

If he makes a show and stir in his lodge, it is comfortable to reflect that he is fully appreciated, and constantly snubbed at home, and as no one, as the French say, is a "hero" to his "valet de chambre," so when our outward tinsel and public padding are taken from us, how often do we appear, like the citizens of "Lilliput," to the discerning vision and the calm understanding of our home circle.

If the "whirligig of time brings strange conceits" with it it also carries with it a Nemesis as well.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

ST. ALBAN'S ABBEY.—An interesting discovery has just been made at St. Alban's Abbey during the laying down of gas pipes for the purpose of lighting up the Cathedral portion of the building. It has been considered by many authorities that the ancient Chapter-house, which was destroyed, to fix the latest time, at the early part of the eighteenth century, stood on the south side of the slope, and this conjecture has been confirmed by the discovery of the responds and of the northern, western, and eastern walls. The responds are deemed the most elaborate zig-zag traceries Norman mouldings yet found in this country. It was necessary at once to cover up the interesting remains discovered, as a public footway passes over the spot.

THE GROSVENOR GALLERY.—We are informed that it is intended to open this gallery early in November with a representative exhibition of water-colour drawings and studies by deceased masters. As far as possible the collection is to be completely illustrative of the rise and growth of this branch of art in the English school. The loan of several important collections has already been promised.

SOUTH KENSINGTON MUSEUM.—The carpets and embroidery, the gift of His Majesty the Shah of Persia to the South Kensington Museum, have arrived, and are now exhibited in the portion of the Museum devoted to Persian objects of art.

DEDALUS OR LAPUTA.—Among the patents for which application has been made at the German Patent Office is one worthy of special notice. The object is a "Lenkbare Flugel-Luftschiff" (steering-winged aerial ship). Its inventor is George Baumgarten, Royal Chief Ranger at the forest-house, Gruna, near Chemnitz, in Saxony.

A BUST OF THUCYDIDES.—A marble bust which has been at Holkham Hall, the property of the Earl of Leicester, since the middle of last century, has just been identified by Professor Michaelis, of Strasburg, as a portrait of Thucydides; more than that, as a much finer portrait of the historian than the only hitherto known example in Naples, where he is conjoined with Herodotus in a double term inscribed with his name. In spite of certain peculiarities there seems to be no good reason for doubting the genuineness of the inscription. And since it would not be at all fair to suppose that the name was selected at hap-hazard, as has often been the case in modern times, we must conclude that the sculptor had before him a portrait to copy from traditionally known as that of Thucydides. It is a different question when we come to inquire whether this original portrait may not after all have been, if not imaginary, at least very much idealised, as it is called sometimes. Against this possibility it can hardly be safe as an argument, but perhaps rather the contrary, to extract a man's character from his works, and then to find this reflected in his features and expression. The Holkham bust appears to have been brought from Italy, but it has this advantage over the Naples one, that it has been copied, as Professor Michaelis points out, in detail from an original dating from the period of Greek portraiture which followed the influence of Lysippus. A full discussion of the question relating to this very interesting portrait is given by Professor Michaelis in the "Festschrift" sent by the University of Strasburg to the sister University of Tübingen on the occasion of the fourth Sacularfeier recently held at the latter place. Two photographs from a cast of the bust are also given, and, to compare with them, a small engraving from the Naples bust.—Academy.

A COMPANION OF FAUST.—A. T. Castaldi writes to the Times:—"The Caxton celebration being an event which by its very nature can only recur at a stated future time, all that refers to it should be at once presented. Is it presumptuous in me to wish to add my mite, which I do not see mentioned in any of the interesting information afforded hitherto? John Gutenberg, or Gutenberg, one of those to whom the invention of the art of printing is attributed, had for partner, as is well known, one John Faust. John Fust, or Faust, had passed some time in Italy, namely in Venice, with a certain Panfilo Castaldi, of Feltre. This last is the person to whom I would call attention, as a link in the chain concerning the yet doubtful awarding of the palm for the invention of printing. Castaldi having seen several Chinese books which Marco Polo, of travelled celebrity, had brought from China, printed by means of wooden blocks, constructed moveable types, each type containing a single letter, and with these printed a number of sheets, some of which are preserved to this day among the archives of Feltre. With Castaldi John Faust spent some time, and acquired from him his invention, which, after his return to Germany, Gutenberg developed with him into the art of printing. As the inventor of this art, Castaldi's fellow-citizens erected a statue to his memory in his native town of Feltre, which lies on a height near the Piave. Is it not somewhat of a duty to recall Panfilo Castaldi (at different times or periods variously written Castaldi and Cataldi) at this time, to partake with others, even after so many centuries, of his meed of the appreciation which is being expressed through the present celebration in memory of one of the greatest workers in the art of printing? To the duty of this sentiment permit me as a descendant to call attention."

THE SATELLITES OF MARS.—Mr. R. A. Proctor says:—"I am surprised that so little attention has been as yet publicly drawn to the interesting discovery just made, that Mars has two satellites. This discovery has been made with the great Washington refractor by Professor Asaph Hall, who has recently made many valuable observations on that exceedingly difficult object, Hyperion, Saturn's seventh satellite (eighth and last in order of discovery). It might be worth while, by the way, with so powerful a telescope as this, to look for other Saturnian moons in the space between the orbits of Titan and Japetus, or even for small satellites of these satellites. Mars can no longer be called, as by the Poet Laureate, 'Moonless Mars,' though his moons must be very little ones; for Jupiter's least, though so much more remote, and no larger than our own moon, is among the easiest of telescopic objects, and can even be seen in a good opera glass. From the brief telegram sent to Leverrier from Washington, it would seem that the periods of the two moons are about 30 hours and about 15 hours; their distances about 13,800 and 8600 miles respectively from Mar's centre. I deduce these values from the statement that on August 18 (11 Washington time) the outer attained its western elongation, distance 80 min., and that the distance of the inner is 50 min.; period of outer 30 hours, whence distance of inner follows by Kepler's 3d law. From the period and distance of the outer satellite, the mass of Mars would appear to be only 94-thousandths of the earth's mass, instead of 118-thousandths, as heretofore estimated. The apparent diurnal motion of the outer satellite, as seen by Martians, must be from east to west and very slow, the planet itself rotating in 34 hours 37 min. 22.7 sec. The inner satellite presents the unique peculiarity of gaining by its revolution motion on the planet's rotational motion, thus rising in the west and setting in the east. Moreover, it moves faster, in appearance, this way than the other moon moves in the usual way."

Albert, P.G.P.; the Grand Stewards of the year, and the Masters, Past Masters, and Wardens of the Grand Steward's Lodge, H. Massey (Freemason), and the Masters, Past Masters, and Wardens of other lodges.

The Grand Lodge was opened in form and with solemn prayer.

Grand Secretary reported that he held in his hand several apologies from Grand Officers for their inability to be present at this Grand Lodge. The Grand Chaplain was absent in Scotland, and he was sorry to say that the Junior Grand Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. W. Lake Onslow, as was known to many of the brethren, had departed this life since the last meeting. Lord De Tabley was unable to be present. Bro. the Rev. C. R. Davy, P.G.C., Bro. Willing, G. Organist, and several other brethren also sent letters of regret that they were unable to be present.

Grand Secretary then read the minutes of the last Quarterly Communication, which were put to the brethren and confirmed.

The next business on the paper was the motion by the M.W. Grand Master. "That in consideration of the dreadful fire which has occurred at St. John, New Brunswick, and which has devastated that city, this Grand Lodge do grant the sum of 200 guineas to be paid out of the Fund of General Purposes, in aid of the fund now in course of formation, for the relief of the inhabitants."

(2) "That this Grand Lodge do grant the sum of one hundred guineas, to be paid out of the Fund of General Purposes, in alleviation of the distress caused by the 'Cataclysm' which has recently occurred on the coast of Peru."

Dr. Hamilton said: Brethren, there is no doubt that you all regret as much as I do myself that these two motions are not to be moved by our M.W.G.M., who finds it impossible to be present this evening, and also that we should not have the advantage of the eloquence of our Pro G.M. or of our Deputy G.M. It has fallen upon me by accident as being the senior officer present, to represent them this evening. I cannot bring before you the amount of statistics and the other points connected with the subject which no doubt would be submitted to you had they been brought forward by the M.W.G.M. You all know the effect of fire, and you have read, and are no doubt well aware, of the devastation that has been caused in New Brunswick by the dreadful calamity that has there occurred. I therefore will move for the Grand Master, "That in consideration of a dreadful fire which has occurred at St. John, New Brunswick, and which has devastated that city, this Grand Lodge do grant the sum of 200 guineas, to be paid out of the Fund of General Purposes, in aid of the fund now in course of formation for the relief of the inhabitants."

General Brownrigg seconded the motion. The Grand Master in the chair (Dr. Hamilton) then put the motion, which was carried unanimously.

Dr. Hamilton then said: I have further to propose "That this Grand Lodge do grant the sum of 100 guineas to be paid out of the Fund of General Purposes, in alleviation of the distress caused by the 'cataclysm' which has recently occurred on the coast of Peru." Here we know very little of this calamity; but I have no doubt that there are many brethren who have travelled, and can testify to you to the fearful calamities that are produced by those earthquakes and derangements which occur to the parts of the world, among which is the place named in this notice of motion. I therefore move as I have mentioned.

General Brownrigg seconded the motion, which was put and carried unanimously.

Dr. Hamilton then said: Before we proceed further I will ask the Grand Secretary to read a letter he has received from the Province of Dorset.

Grand Secretary then read a letter from the Grand Treasurer of the Province of Dorset, in which he announced that the Provincial Grand Lodge of Dorset had subscribed £150 towards the Indian Famine Relief Fund.

The next business was the Report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter, in which are recommendations for the following grants, viz:—

A brother of the Tyrian Lodge, No. 253, Derby	£50 0 0
A brother of the Lodge of Concord, No. 323, Stockport	50 0 0
The widow of a brother of the Saint James' Lodge, No. 765, Southwark	100 0 0
A brother of the Duke of Athol Lodge, No. 210, Denton	75 0 0
The daughter of a brother of the Stoneleigh Lodge, No. 725, Kenilworth	50 0 0
The widow of a brother of the Lodge of Faith and Unanimity, No. 417, Dorchester	200 0 0

Bro. J. M. Clabon having moved, and Bro. Joshua Nunn having seconded, the grants proposed by these recommendations, they were put and carried.

The next business was the consideration of the report of the Board of General Purposes, which was as follows:—

Report of the Board of General Purposes.

The Board of General Purposes have to report as follows:—
1. Arising out of the opinions for some considerable time expressed in Grand Lodge, and more especially the recent debates of that assembly, the Board have had under their careful and special consideration the constitution of the Lodge of Benevolence, and having referred the question to a committee of the whole Board for consideration and report, have received from such committee the following report thereon:—

To the Worshipful Board of General Purposes.

The Committee of the whole Board, to whom it was on the 10th day of June last referred to consider the advisability of recommending Grand Lodge to alter the title and constitution of the Lodge of Benevolence, beg to report unanimously as follows:—Having fully considered the subject we are of opinion that it is advisable to recommend Grand Lodge to alter both the title and the constitution of the Lodge of Benevolence in manner hereinafter mentioned.

1. The "Lodge of Benevolence" to be in future designated the "Board of Benevolence."

2. The Board of Benevolence to consist of the Grand Master, Pro Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, the Grand Wardens, a President, and forty-five other members. The President and fifteen of such members to be annually nominated by the Grand Master at the Quarterly Communication in December, and the remaining thirty members to be elected by Grand Lodge from amongst the actual Masters and Past Masters of lodges, such election to be conducted in the same manner as that of the Board of General Purposes, but it should not in our opinion be a regulation that one-third or any other proportion of the members should retire annually.

3.—The Board to elect one of its members to be Vice-President.

4.—Five members to form a quorum.

All which is submitted to the consideration of the Board.

(Signed) JOHN B. MONCKTON,
Chairman.

And the Board of General Purposes unanimously agreeing with such report do recommend the same to Grand Lodge for adoption.

2.—The Board have had under their consideration and that of the Premises Committee the question of improving the accommodation in the Grand Secretary's office, and have arrived at the conclusion that the best and most satisfactory mode of effecting the desired end would be to utilise the lavatory on the ground floor at the back of the grand staircase and the front room known as the library, which, by means of communicating openings, would, in the opinion of the Board, afford, for some time to come at least, sufficient and proper accommodation for carrying out the work in the Grand Secretary's office, and more especially would provide a private office for the use of the recently appointed Assistant Grand Secretary, an arrangement greatly needed; and that the lavatory, &c., in the rear of the present waiting room and Grand Secretary's office be reconstructed, with enlarged accommodation.

3.—It having been represented to the Board that a brother had been passed to the Second Degree in twenty-six days only after his initiation, the circumstances were fully enquired into, and it was ordered that the brother be re-obligated, in the Second and Third Degrees, at a due interval, and that the Lodge of Benevolence (No. 489, Bideford) be fined one guinea, and admonished to be more careful in future.

(Signed) JOHN B. MONCKTON,
President.

To the report is subjoined a statement of the Grand Lodge accounts at the last meeting of the Finance Committee, held on Friday, the 17th day of August instant, shewing a balance in the hands of the Grand Treasurer of £7280 8s. 3d.; and in the hands of the Grand Secretary, for petty cash, £75; and for servants' wages £96 15s.

Bro. Peter de Lande Long, Vice President of the Board of General Purposes, moved that the report be received; and this having been seconded and carried, Bro. Long said he had been requested by the President of the Board, who, unfortunately, was not able to be present, and for which he expressed his sincere regret, to say that, looking at the very important alterations rendered necessary by the adoption of the report of the Board, and, also, at the fact that the President and the Grand Registrar were compelled to be absent, he thought it better that so much of the report as related to the Lodge of Benevolence be postponed (hear, hear, and applause,) until the next Quarterly Communication in December. (Cries of "Withdraw.") He, therefore, would move that it be postponed till December.

The Grand Master on the throne having put the motion,

Bro. James Mason, P.G.S.B., hereupon rose, and said he begged leave to propose an amendment to the resolution suggested. The amendment he had to move was that this, which was a most important matter, should be deferred until the Quarterly Communication in March next. Things of moment should be done with due deliberation. (Hear, hear.) That was a fundamental axiom of our Order, and although he was prepared to say that on consideration he might give his vote in favour of the resolution which had been proposed, yet he was not prepared to do it until he had well considered the matter (hear, hear,) and he was sure that in making this great alteration in our constitutions—

Bro. S. Rawson rose to order. There was no question before the Grand Lodge.

The Grand Master in the chair overruled the objection.

Bro. James Mason continued. He was about to say that this was a matter deserving of their most mature consideration, because it was, in fact, the fundamental position in the constitutions of Masonry. If these resolutions were carried they would disfranchise every lodge in the Order (hear, hear, and applause); and he was not prepared, nor would any Mason—because all Masons he believed—and he was ready to give them credit for this—desired the good of the Order. The Masons as a body, and Masons as individuals if an alteration was for the good of the body, would be prepared to make that alteration; but not without consideration. He said again, that this alteration disfranchised every lodge in the Order as far as the Board of Benevolence was concerned, and it would disfranchise every Grand Officer, who had at present a right to be a member of that Board of Benevolence.

Bro. Brackstone Baker rose to order. The worthy brother had no right to go into the question. (Hear, hear, and applause.)

The Grand Master in the chair ruled that Bro. Mason was in order.

Bro. James Mason said this was the point. He wished to speak to the purpose. He wished to say only so few words as would suffice to convey his opinion to the brethren freely and frankly that there should be more deliberation about it. They would be disfranchising every lodge in the Order, and every Grand Officer, who was a member of the Lodge of Benevolence. He had been a member of that lodge for about twenty years, and he had the pleasure to attend its meetings.

Bro. Joseph Smith rose to order. They were not now discussing the question contained in the report of the Board of General Purposes, but only the question whether the consideration of the subject should be postponed. (Confusion.)

The Grand Master in the chair said he wished to state that Bro. Mason was about to give the reason why he wished the subject adjourned to March at the same time he (the W.G.M.) deprecated his going in to any discussion of the question beyond explaining why he wished the subject postponed till March.

Bro. James Mason was much obliged to the G.M. in the chair, and he would make his remarks very brief indeed. He desired that there should be food for reflection between then and March next, and that the brethren should know what it was they had then to consider. For about twenty years he had been a member of the Lodge of Benevolence ("Time, time," and great confusion.) He knew there were grievances to be dealt with; he knew there was a great number of brethren also attended; and they were now so large in number that perhaps it was not desirable to have so many present; but the question was whether the mode proposed was the proper method of dealing with the evil. Without further comment, he begged leave to propose that the consideration of this resolution be postponed until the Quarterly Communication in March next. (Hear, hear, cheers, and no, no.)

Bro. Raynham Stewart rose to second the amendment. He quite agreed with Bro. Mason's remarks that the matter required consideration; but he also agreed with what that brother said as to the proposition, if carried, disfranchising the lodges. It would be giving away a great privilege which now belonged to lodges, and would be another step towards that centralised action which was now being brought forward in other branches of Masonry. If the brethren allowed the proposition to be carried they would be stripping themselves of freedom. He had great pleasure in seconding the proposition. Let them come forward in March prepared with a scheme, but not the scheme now proposed. (Confusion.)

Bro. Binckes was quite prepared to discuss the question if it had been gone into that evening; but he thought after the very graceful concession made by the President o the Board of General Purposes they ought to accept his proposition, and postpone the consideration of the subject till the Quarterly Communication in December. (Cries of "No, no.") He quite agreed with those brethren who were in favour of the amendment, to postpone the matter until March, that this was a question of the very gravest importance, affecting as it did the rights and privileges of every Master in the Craft; but because he thought it of that importance he did not think it should be hanging over them for six months. He should have voted against the report of the Board if it had been brought on that night, because he believed that no Master of a lodge had been able to give that consideration to the subject which it demanded; but he nevertheless was of opinion that three months from now was quite sufficient time. (Cries of "No no," and "Yes, yes," and confusion.) He repeated that he thought three months was quite long enough. He was glad when he saw the Vice-President of the Board of General Purposes move that the subject should be postponed till December. It was most important however that it should not be hanging over the brethren's heads till March (cries of "No, no" and "Yes, yes" and he thought that as the Board had recommended that it should be postponed till December the Grand Lodge should accede to their request. (Cries of "No, no," and "Yes, yes," and withdraw.) If the brethren wanted the proposition withdrawn altogether let them have it withdrawn, but he did not think it would be polite or courteous to the Board of General Purposes to do so. He would say that any one of ordinary intellect or intelligence would have time enough if granted three months to make up his mind. If he did not make up his mind in that time he would not by March or March twelve month. Although unfavourable to the change proposed he felt that it should be left for consideration till December.

Bro. H. Browne, P.G.D., agreed in this view.

Bro. James Stevens said no doubt six months was a long time; but a great number now present were prepared at once to make up their minds on any point which involved the disfranchising of lodges. The proposition before the brethren excluded the Masters of lodges during their year of office from carrying out those principles of Masonry which they were bound to discharge fully and efficiently. It was not the fault of the whole body of the lodges that some members did not attend. It was really and absolutely one of the duties imposed on the Masters of lodges that they should attend the Lodge of Benevolence. Those who represented lodges as Masters would be extremely sorry to have their privileges taken from them. Brethren could make up their minds in three or four months as well as in six; but still the matter was of sufficient importance to stand over till March, at which time he was quite certain the verdict of Grand Lodge would be as it would have been to-night, against the proposal made by the Board.

Bro. J. M. Clabon, as President of the Lodge of Benevolence, said it was of little consequence whether the question was postponed till December or March. He gathered from all that had fallen from the brethren that it would meet the feelings of the majority that they wished it postponed till March. No evil would happen in the meantime, and he would ask the representative of the Board of General Purposes if he could not meet the wish of the brethren by making his proposition that the matter should be postponed till March.

The original proposition having been withdrawn, the amendment was put and carried, and the consideration of so much of the report of the Board of General Purposes as related to the Lodge of Benevolence was postponed till March.

On the motion of Bro. Peter de L. Long, the portion of the report relating to increased accommodation in Grand Secretary's office was put and carried.

Bro. J. M. Clabon then rose to move the grant of 1000 guineas to the Indian Famine Relief Fund. In doing so he said: Most Worshipful Grand Master in the chair, and brethren,—I will hardly say that I rise oppressed with a sense of the greatness of the subject which I have undertaken to bring before you, because I believe that I shall have the sympathy of every one present. (Hear, hear.) The grand principle of Masonry, as I understand it, is universal charity and benevolence, and we are now in presence, I venture to say, of the greatest calamity of this century, a calamity in which hundreds of thousands (I am not overstating it) of our fellow creatures are dying by the roadside of sheer stark famine. Now I apprehend and hope there will not be a voice raised to-night against some grant being made. You have already granted 200 guineas and 100 guineas to good objects, but small in their way to that which I now propose; and the manner in which you have granted those sums is, I think, conclusive evidence that you will grant this sum; but if I wanted other evidence, I have only to refer to what one provincial lodge has granted. The Provincial Grand Lodge of Dorset has granted £120 by themselves. I would ask you to consider the dreadful state of things some of our own fellow-creatures are enduring. I might dilate on the miseries of hunger for a long time, although none of us know what it is. I have a letter before me which is very short, from which I will read an extract. It is from a young lady at Kolapore, in the Madras Presidency, to her sister in England, and it tells the tale of the sufferings which are endured there. (Bro. Clabon then read a letter which has appeared in the daily papers, which stated that the old and the children were the principal sufferers, that they lie down and die by the roadside; and the writer went on to say that a mother was seen dying by the side of her two dead children, whom dogs were eating, and she had not strength to drive them away. The writer concluded by asking for subscriptions to be sent out immediately.) Bro. Clabon continued. One word more: on the question of the amount. I have just heard it whispered that an amendment will be moved to make the amount 500 guineas. (Cries of "No, No.") Now, let us be unanimous. (Cries of "No amendment.") We have £42,000 in the Lodge of Benevolence; but we cannot touch that. We know the Board of General Purposes erected this building with money borrowed from the Fund of Benevolence, which they afterwards paid back. We have in the Fund of General Purposes an annual surplus of some £6000 or £7000, and we invested £8000 last year. Therefore we can well afford 1000 guineas for this excellent object. (Hear, hear, and loud applause.)

Col. Creation seconded the motion, which was then put and carried amidst general cheering.

Bro. Samuel Tomkins (Grand Treasurer) said he had had great pleasure on former occasions, when sums of money had been voted for benevolent purposes, in stating that he should have much gratification in paying at once the amount voted without waiting for the confirmation of the grant by next Grand Lodge. (Hear, hear.) So on this occasion to give the relief which they wished to afford the money ought to be paid at once, and not postponed for three months. Being convinced from the unanimous expression he had seen in this Grand Lodge, that what had been done that night would be accepted and confirmed at their next meeting, he would immediately carry out the brethren's intentions by paying at once the thousand guineas to the Indian Famine Relief Fund, as well as the two hundred guineas for the relief of the sufferers by the fire at St. John, New Brunswick, and one hundred guineas for the alleviation of the distress caused by the cataclysm on the coast of Peru—two objects, not perhaps of equal importance, for which relief was voted in the earlier portion of the evening. (Cheers.)

The Grand Master in the chair hoped that all the Provincial Grand Lodges would follow the example of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Dorset. (Hear, hear.)

Grand Lodge was then closed in ample form, and adjourned.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

HALLIFORD.—Acacia Lodge (No. 1309).

—The eighth installation meeting of this well-established lodge was held at the Ship Hotel, on Tuesday, 28th ult. Bro. C. G. Rushworth, W.M., opened the lodge. The minutes of the last lodge meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The minutes and report of the Audit Committee were read, received, adopted, and ordered to be entered in the lodge minute book. The W.M., Bro. C. G. Rushworth, completed his year of office by raising Bro. T. Noton to the Third Degree. All his work has been done in an able, painstaking, correct, and efficient manner. He vacated his chair in favour of one who may well be called the founder and father of the lodge, who performed the ceremony of installation in a manner which elicited the admiration of all assembled, he having received no intimation that so arduous a duty would be imposed upon him without a moment's notice. However, his strength of memory stood him in good stead, and the ceremony was worked to perfection.—Bro. James Wm. George, W.M., appointed and invested his officers, and afterwards conferred the Second Degree on Bro. Dr. T. Gurney. Bro. C. G. Rushworth, P.G. Steward, M.D., I.P.M., was presented with a Past Master's Jewel, one of the most valuable and chastely-elegant in design that we have ever witnessed, and no jewel ever was more justly bestowed. The meeting was an entire success. The officers for the ensuing year are Bros. J. W. George, W.M.; C. G. Rushworth, P.G. Steward, M.D., I.P.M.; C. G. C. Stahr, P.M. 871, S.W.; R. P. Tebb, J.W.; Rev. J. Fothergill, Chaplain; F. Walters, P.P.G.D. M.D., P.M., Treasurer, (reinvested third time); Rev. T. W. Cave, LL.D., Secretary, (reinvested second time); J. Davies, Assistant Secretary; J. Scott, S.D.; C. L. Smiles, J.D.; J. Sutcliffe, I.G.; Sjöberg, D.C.; Cave, jun., W.S.; Tremer, Organist; W. Y. Laing, P.M., Tyler. The visitors were Bros. H. C. Levander, P.G. Secretary M.D., P.M.; C. E. Young, 122, Scottish Constitution; Pitt, 890; R. Jennings, J.W. 907; Gordon, 907; and Kimbell, 1541. The brethren who have filled the chair of this lodge are Bros. Frederick Walters, P.P.G.D. M.D.; G. J. Lee, J. H. Butten, P.P.A.D.C. M.D.; E. W. Richardson, the late R. Limpus, P.P.G. Organist; Charles Horsley, P.P.G.R. Middlesex, &c.; and C. G. Rushworth, P.G. Steward, M.D. The late Bro. E. Sillifant, P.P.G.D. M.D., was first Treasurer until his lamented decease.

SOWERBY BRIDGE.—Ryburn Lodge (No. 1283).—The monthly meeting of this lodge, held on the 29th August, was numerously attended, and will long be remembered as one of the pleasantest evenings spent since the lodge was formed. Bros. Joseph Senior, W.M.; Joseph Greenwood, S.D.; and Michael Scholefield, J.D., were all in their places, and there were also present several Past Masters. There was a goodly muster of visitors from Bradford, Elland, Halifax, and Todmorden, &c., as well as Bro. Berghem, of the King Solomon Royal Lodge, Jerusalem. The business of the evening was introduced by balloting for a life subscribership to one of the Masonic charities. This was in accordance with a system brought forward by Bro. John Marshall, P.M., about three years ago, which has worked so successfully that nearly all the members of the lodge are life subscribers to at least one of the charities. A copy of the bye-laws of this system appeared in the Freemason a few weeks ago, as used by the St. James's Lodge, No. 448, but which were first used by Ryburn Lodge. By command of the W.M., Bro. John Marshall, P.M., raised Bro. Rev. T. Galland Hartley to the Sublime Degree of M.M. The ceremony was gone through in a most business-like and impressive manner. Bro.

Atkinson presided at the harmonium, and accompanied by Bros. Wood, &c., from Bradford, rendered very efficient service. An excellent supper was provided by Bro. Shaw, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. The evening was spent with the greatest harmony and enjoyment.

INSTRUCTION.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE (No. 1524).

—This lodge, held at the Havelock Tavern, Albion-road, Dalston, met on Wednesday evening, the 5th inst., when there were present Bros. J. Lorkin, W.M.; Woolley, S.W.; Francis, J.W.; Maples, S.D.; McMillar, J.D.; C. Lorkin, I.G.; W. Fieldwick, Preceptor; E. Dietrich, G. Ferrar, J. Lovelock, J. B. Shackleton, A. Little, O. Dietrich, and others. The lodge was opened in ancient form and the minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Bro. J. B. Shackleton then worked the Sections of the lecture in a most able manner, assisted by the brethren. Bros. W. Fieldwick, G. Ferrar, and E. Dietrich were respectively elected as Preceptor, Treasurer and Secretary for the ensuing year, and Bros. Lovelock, Francis, and Lorkin as Auditors. It was resolved that the Audit Committee meet next Monday evening at 8 p.m., at the Havelock Tavern. A cordial vote of thanks was unanimously passed to the officers of last year, and Bro. J. B. Shackleton, in responding, expressed his regret at having to relinquish the Secretaryship through other urgent engagements. Bro. Woolley was unanimously appointed W.M. for the ensuing week. The annual dinner of this lodge takes place on Wednesday, 10th of October, when we feel confident a most enjoyable evening will be spent by those who can make it convenient to be present.

Levander installed Bro. E. H. Thielley, W.M. for the ensuing year. Bro. Thielley then invested his officers, one brother was proposed for advancement, and one for joining. The lodge was then closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to dinner.

PANMURE LODGE (No. 139).—The seventh installation meeting of this prosperous lodge was held at the Balham Hotel, Balham, on Monday, the 3rd inst., and was well attended by officers and brethren. The lodge was opened by the V.W. Bro. James Stevens, P.M., P.G.J.O., acting for the W.M., Bros. Mark S. Larham, S.W.; W. Poore, J.W.; M. Spiegel, M.O.; J. W. Gibson, J.O.; J. J. Joseph, R.M.; C. P. McKay, Sec.; W. Ackland, J.D.; W. Mitchell, Steward. There were also present Past Masters D. Trusler, C. Pulman, Thos Poore, G.I.G., and G. Lilley, and Bros. J. Barney, H. G. Gush, W. R. Sheadd, W. B. Miller, Edward Mitchell, W. Steadman, W. Cachett, Rawles, and others. Although several candidates were proposed for advancement "holiday time" prevented attendance of all but one, Bro. Osman Vincent, W.M. of the Abercorn Lodge, who having been duly approved, was advanced into the honourable degree with full ceremony. Bro. Thomas Poore, P.M., G.I.G., then installed Bro. Mark S. Larham into the chair of A., and the new W.M. was cordially saluted both in the board of I.M. and subsequently in open lodge. The officers were then appointed as follows, and were severally invested and addressed at the request of the W.M. by Past Master Stevens: Bros. W. Poore, S.W.; M. Spiegel, J.W.; C. P. McKay, M.O.; J. W. Gibson, S.O.; W. Ackland, J.O.; James Stevens, P.M., Sec.; George Lilley, P.M., Treas.; J. J. Joseph, R.M., and S.D.; W. Mitchell, J.D.; W. B. Miller, I.G.; Edward Mitchell, Steward; W. Grant in recognition of his services as Tyler, and received his resignation of office with regret. Bro. Wm. Steadman was unanimously elected to the vacant office. Further propositions for advancement were received, and the lodge was then closed. A well provided table was speedily surrounded by the members of the lodge, and under the genial presidency of the new W.M. the usual formalities were observed, and a social evening thoroughly enjoyed by all.

CONSECRATION OF THE ELEANOR LODGE, No. 1707.

At Edmonton, on Wednesday last, a new lodge was consecrated. Bro. John Hervey, G. Secretary, performed the ceremony of consecration, assisted by Bro. Buss, A.G.S. It is needless to state that all through the proceedings were marked by the regularity and eloquence always displayed on such occasions by those brethren. Bro. the Rev. P.M. Holden, Prov. G. Chaplain of Middlesex, officiated as Chaplain, and delivered an appropriate oration.

The chair of the Senior Warden, was occupied by Bro. A. Durrant, and that of the J.W. by Bro. J. W. Berrie.

At the close of the ceremony of consecration, Bro. J. Tanner was installed as the first W.M. of the new lodge, and he afterwards invested his officers as follow:—Bros. J. Howard Thompson, P.P.G.S.B. Middlesex, S.W.; Charles Lovebond, J.W.; C. Oliver, Treas.; R. J. Leaman, Sec.; J. H. Wood, S.D.; Garnett, J.D.; Meen, Organist; Ramsey, I.G.; R. W. Goddard, Tyler.

It was then proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously that the thanks of the lodge, be accorded to Bros. Hervey, Buss, and Holden, that the same be recorded on the minutes, and that those brethren be elected honorary members of the lodge.

Numerous proposals for initiation and joining were made, and which completing the business of the day, the lodge was closed in ancient form, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet.

The pleasures of the evening were considerably enhanced by the musical abilities displayed by Bros. Moss, Perry, Thomas, and Musgrave.

Reviews.

THE MONDE MAÇONNIQUE.

We have received and read our contemporary for August, and we are glad to be able to refer to its interesting contents, for the information of our many readers.

Among other items of Masonic intelligence which it contains are the following:—

The receipts of the "Orphelinat General Maçonique" (The Orphan Institution) amount to 21,265frs. 25c. The expenditure reaches 17,561frs. 30c. Seven orphans have been admitted during the last twelve months. Since its foundation, 15 years ago, it has had to deal with 93 orphans, of whom 5 girls and 25 boys are still in the institution. One of the orphans is still yet an infant, 26 are apprenticed, and 36 have finished their apprenticeship. The total receipts of 15 years amount to 168,699frs. 52c., and the expenditure to 156,073frs. 5c. There is a balance up to the present of 12,626frs. 47c. Thus the expenditure up to the present has reached about £6000, and there is a balance of £400 in round numbers.

We wish sincerely that, imitating our English example, our brethren in France would leave the sterile field of quasi-political discussions and most doubtful topics, and give themselves up to the work of Masonic benevolence, leading, let us hope, to a result worthy of French Freemasonry.

It is but fair to observe, that the Grand Orient of France has also a "Maison de Secours," the revenue of which amounts to 23,000frs. annually. This sum is distributed by a commission, presided over by Frere Cammas. But we need hardly point out that £1200 a year in round numbers is not and cannot be a proper result of the active principle of French Masonic benevolence. No doubt special subscriptions and lodge grants also are made, but give the whole in, as Bro. Hubert has well put it, French Freemasonry ought to do a great deal more for pure charity if it is true to its mission. We must not, however, forget those special funds, such as for the war and inundations which reached to large amounts. But we repeat French Freemasonry ought to do more! Let our good brethren look to it!

It seems that among the lodges already closed by authority in France, are the Lodge of "Fraternité," Avalon; the Lodge of "Orion," Gallia; the Lodge of "Triple Essence," St. Malo; the Lodge of "Egalité," Paris; the Lodge of "Les Amis Perseverantes et l'Etoile de Vesone Renuis," Perigeux; the Lodge of "Auguste Amitié," Condom; the Lodge of "Fraternité," Brive; the Lodge of "La Libre Pensée," Aurillac; the Lodge of "La Justice," Marmande; the Lodge of "La Cosmopolite," Vichy. To these must be added five lodges at Toulouse, if the Daily News is correct.

The Monde Maçonique, (page 159) gives a very amusing extract from the Echo Universel, which reviews a little book, called "Le Diable," published at Toulouse, by M. Resplandy. Is the closing of the lodges reported in the English papers to be attributed to the impression produced by the truthful statements of 'The Devil' on an excitable population and nervous authorities. But listen, brethren, to these remarks of "Monsr. le Diable." "Can one, ought one to say that the 'Devil' is the head of the secret societies? We answer affirmatively and without fear, we speak here of those infamous societies, which term themselves 'Free Masons' in France, 'Carbonari' in Italy, 'Comuneros' in Spain, 'Illuminati' in Germany. These societies have been condemned by the most terrible anathemata of the Popes. This shows us evidently that they have the 'Devil' for their head. This is also proved by the words of the Freemasons themselves. Our one end is, they say, the entire destruction of Catholicism, and even of all Christian belief." This is their end, and now regard their proceedings. "It has been decided in our councils that we will have no more Christians, we will not make martyrs, and we will popularize vice in the masses, that so they may breathe vice in their five senses, make vicious hearts, and you will have no more Catholics." As the Monde Maçonique truly remarks, such absurdities and such monstrous calumnies are hardly worth notice, but as we know how "la calomnie" works, according to "Bartholo's" famous "Rescript" we note such ridiculous and lying statements to brand them as the "outcome" of a conscienceless superstition.

We do not agree with our foreign brethren in all they say or do, but such ignorance of their teaching and such marked meaningless falsehoods deserve the indignant denial of all in whom Ultramontane fanaticism has not eaten out, so to say, every principle of truth, justice, and honour. We are pleased to see that the Monde Maçonique and the Freemason agree as to the remedy, in the untoward conflict between the Grand Orient and the Rite Ecossais. Let the Grand Orient boldly cut the "Gordian Knot," by severing the connection with the High Grades and claiming the supremacy of all symbolic lodges, and it will receive the warm support of all Craft Grand Lodges.

THE DUKE OF ABERCORN.—The Duke and Duchess of Abercorn and Lady Georgiana Hamilton, has left town for Baroncourt for the autumn.

Bro. Stone opened the lodge in the several degrees, and Bro. Sherwood having presented Bro. P. M. Congdon as the W.M. elect, he was inducted into the chair by Bro. Stone according to all the ancient rites and established customs of the Order.

The W.M. then thanked the brethren for having given him their unanimous trust, and said that he deeply appreciated the honour they had done him, and invested the following brothers as his officers for the ensuing year: Bros. B. C. Wood as S.W.; A. F. Durlacher as J.W.; W. Samson, Treas.; W. R. P. Smith, Sec.; L. Henderson, Org.; F. W. Oakley, S.D.; W. Mills, J.D.; W. Johnston, I.G.; and C. Sherwood, Tyler.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of the subscribers to the Masonic Boys' School, met on Saturday last, at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Henry Browne in the chair. The other brethren present were Bros. Geo. J. Row, Wm. Roebuck, S. Rosenthal, Rev. Dr. Morris, Jessie Turner, W. F. C. Moutrie, C. F. Matier, S. B. Wilson, R. B. Webster, F. Adlard, H. Massey, (Freemason), and F. Binckes (Secretary).

Bro. Binckes reported the withdrawal of J. Parker from the list of candidates for election in October. He also reported the purchase of the following stock, after £503 had been set aside for the Sustentation Fund:—

£2853	14	11	at	105	£2996	8	8

£3150	0	0

£3153 15 0

The subject of obtaining increased accommodation for secretary and clerks was also brought before the brethren, and the minutes of two meetings of the Special Committee to consider the matter were read. Various plans had been inspected by the Committee, and the Grand Secretary had been corresponded with; but no definite result had yet been arrived at. Bro. Binckes reported that the subject was still under consideration.

The Committee then adjourned.

CURIOSITIES OF THE POST OFFICE.

The Postmaster-General's annual report, issued on Wednesday, contains many curious facts. In Aberdeen a person was observed to deposit a letter in a disused street hydrant, and on the cover of the box being removed three other letters were found, the senders of which had similarly mistaken the water pillar for a pillar letter-box. The letters had been passed into the box through the space formerly occupied by the tap-lever. In a newspaper which reached the Returned Letter Office were found to be enclosed four sovereigns, and in another a gold locket. Nor does this kind of recklessness appear only in connection with newspapers; for a letter having a very large seal at the back was observed in course of transit, and on the seal, which had become slightly chipped, being examined, gold coins of the value of £1 10s. were discovered to be embedded in the wax. Miscellaneous articles, numbering 14,346, reached the Returned Letter Office, wholly destitute of covers. The senders of newspapers very often infringe the regulations by sending unauthorised articles of various kinds concealed between the folds. Of such enclosures the following amongst others were observed: Cigars and tobacco, collars, seaweed, ferns and flowers, gloves, handkerchiefs, music, patterns, sermons, stockings, lace, postage stamps, and money. During the 15 months ended the 31st March last no less than 593 registered letters were returned to the countries of origin in consequence of their containing coin or jewellery, contrary to the provisions of the general postal union. Of these more than three-fourths were from the United States.

The Post Office continues to be made the medium for the transmission of small articles of almost endless variety. Among others the following articles were observed:—Musical instruments and cutlery, artificial teeth and eyes, wigs, flowers, fruit and vegetables, game and fish, medicine and perfumery, articles of dress, leeches, frogs, snakes, and lizards. Several of these, however, being prohibited articles, were sent to the Returned Letter Office. A live snake which had escaped from a postal packet was discovered in the Holyhead and Kingstown Marine Post Office, and at the expiration of a fortnight, being still unclaimed, it was sent to the Dublin Zoological Gardens. A packet containing a live horned frog reached Liverpool from the United States, and was given up to the addressee, who called for it. Another packet, also from America, reached the Dublin Post Office containing two live lizards, and was similarly given up to the addressee on personal application.

Complaints of the alleged loss of letters (adds the Postmaster-General) are not unfrequently made, and much trouble given to the department in investigating them, when the letters inquired for have not been posted at all. In one case it was stated that a letter containing £95 in bank notes had been lost, but upon the complainant being closely questioned he admitted that his statement was untrue and that it was invented to stave off for a few days the importunities of a creditor. In another case complaint was made that a letter addressed to a "Naturalist" had failed to reach its destination, but it was afterwards found in a cage on the premises of the addressee, where it had been placed by a monkey.

Letter carriers are peculiarly liable to be attacked by savage dogs. In one large town in the north of England the postmaster has reported that 20 per cent. of his men were bitten by dogs during the past year.

The want of information on the part of the public in regard to postal matters of the most ordinary kind cannot at times but give rise to wonder. A person in a fair position of life, residing in one of the Eastern counties, having obtained a money order from his postmaster, payable at a neighbouring town, called again a few days afterwards, and complained that his correspondent could not obtain payment in consequence of some irregularity in the advice. Thereupon a second advice was sent, but a few days later the sender called again, stating that the payee was still unable to obtain payment. The sender added that he was quite sure that he had sent the money, as he had the receipt in his pocket. On being asked to show it he produced the original order, which should, of course, have been forwarded to the payee, and without which the money could not be obtained.

Applications on the most various subjects are frequently made to the Post Office by persons both at home and abroad, indicating that the functions of the Postmaster-General are by some minds assumed to be of the most universal character. The following are specimens of such applications:—

Sir,—I have just been hearing of 3 men that was drowned about 9 months ago. I hear there was one of the men went under the name of John—. Could the manager of the office give any particulars about that man,—what he was like, or if there was such a name, or if he had any friend.—He just went amissing about that time. I here enclose a stamp, and address to, &c.—

To the Manager of the Dead office, Post Office, London.

To the General Post Office, London. I right these few lines to ask you if you would be so kind as to tell me if there is such a person living in 'England.' She was living at Birmingham last Rimmus—this his mi sister and brother-in-law—they hant in Birmingham now—let this letter go to every general post office there is.

To the Editor of the General Post Office, London.—Will you please oblige Susannah—and Walter—with the particulars of an aspecial licence to get married—is it possible for you to forward one to us without either of us coming to you—if you inclose the charge and have it returned would we get one before next Monday week to get married at—. If you will kindly send per return to the address inclosed the particulars we should feel greatly obliged.

United States.

My dear Sir,—Will you do me the kind favour, as you are the Postmaster and able to know, as I judge of. It is this, give to me the full name and address of any "Mac—" that you know of in England, or in Scotland or Ireland or Wales or in India, or at or in any other country that you may know of, with their full names and correct address, so that I can write to them myself. If you have any list, or book, or pamphlet, with the names of parties who have died and left money or land to their heirs-at-law, or by will legacy left to their heirs, as I want such information, &c.

To his most honoured Sir, the Postmaster of London, England.

—Massachusetts.

My dear Sir,—I have tuke the liberty of addressing you, wishing to know if I could ask the favour by paying you for the trouble I ask to know. I have an old clock in my collection made by Henton Brown, London, in the first part of 1700. I would like to know where he was in business and when he died if it could be ascertained. Please inform me if you could find out by any record in London. I would pay you for all trouble. This darling—is one of the loveliest places in Massachusetts.

The Postmaster, London, England.

—Kent.

Sir,—Will you please inform me if there is to be a Baby show this year at Woolwich; if so, where it is to be holden, and what day. I have enclosed stamp.

United States.

Mr. Postmaster,—I have always had a great desire to visit your country, but as I probly never shall, I thought I would write. I am a young lady attending the high school at —, a pictorest town bordering on the — river. Our country seat is four miles and a half west of —. My father is a rich gentleman farmer. We have four horses, 30 or 35 head of cattle, 15 or 20 pigs, and a large henery. We have about 250 acres of land, so of course we have to keep a house full of servants. We are quite well off in worldly goods, but should be better off if you could inform me about that fortune I expect from a great-uncle, great-aunt or somebody. It is about half a million either on my father's or mother's side. If you would be so kind as to write and inform me, I would be a thousand times obliged. If you would assist me in getting it I will reward you handsomely. The name is —. They used to be very fond of me when I was a crowing infant in my mother's arms. It is a very pretty country out hear, with rolling prairies enter spersed with fine forests. There is a stream of water running through our land, a stream so softly and peacefully wild that it looks as if nature had only just made it and laid down her pencil and smiled. The school-room is just a little ways from—the name of our farm. It is the school-room where I learnt my A.B. abs, but I probly never shall go there to school again. It is the vacation now and I have come out on to the farm to stay till school commences again. It seems so nice to be where I can have new milk to drink, and nice fresh eggs again. I intend to enjoy myself till school commences again. Father has sold off most all of our horses, but he saved my riding horse, so I intend to have rides and drives without number. Well as I have said as much as you will care to read, I will stop. I hope you will excuse all mistakes as I am not a very old young lady—only 13 years old.

A depositor in the Post Office Savings Bank wrote to the department as follows: "Having lost my parents I am desirous of taking a housekeeper's situation where a domestic is kept—must be a dissenting family, Baptist preferred. Thinking that such a case might come under your notice, I have therefore taken the liberty of sending to you." Another depositor, apprehensive lest some person might withdraw money from his account, proposed to send his likeness to be used for indentifying him, and then made the following curious request: "There are some little articles I would like to get from London, and one of them is some natural leaf tobacco, which I would be glad if you sent an ounce of and charge me for it—it is only to be bought in the largest tobacco stores." In a further letter, the depositor expressed surprise that his request was not complied with, observing that—"the commonest person in America (my country) can speak to General Grant, and there is nothing said wrong about it." In another case, a woman forwarded her will, and requested to be informed whether it was "correct in case of death."

BRO. THE REV. WILLIAM LAKE ONSLOW.

We sincerely regret the melancholy duty that devolves upon us this week of announcing to our readers the death of Bro. the Rev. Wm. Lake Onslow, the Junior Grand Chaplain. Many will learn of this sad event with some surprise, and we have no doubt but the majority of those present at Grand Lodge on Wednesday last, were somewhat startled by the announcement from the Grand Secretary. Bro. Onslow who was the rector of Sandringham, and Chaplain to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and formerly tutor to the Prince, was in his 58th year. He had been in failing health for some little time and died at the Rectory, Sandringham, on Friday morning the 31st ult. We think the following account of his Masonic career will prove of some interest to our readers.

Bro. Onslow (while serving in H.M.S. Euryalus, Captain J. W. Tarleton, C.B., as especial Naval Instructor to H.R.H. Prince Alfred) was initiated in the Union Lodge, at Malta, on the 28th of Dec., 1859, and duly received the Second and Third Degrees; was admitted into the Royal Arch on the 30th day of Dec., 1859, in the chapter attached to the Union Lodge, No. 558, at Malta; was received into the degree of Mark Master Mason on the 3rd day of July, 1861, in the Virgin Lodge, No. 588, Halifax, Nova Scotia; while serving as Chaplain and Naval Instructor of H.M.S. St. George, Captain the Honourable F. Egerton, he became Chaplain of the Virgin Lodge, and on leaving for England the brethren presented the rev. brother with a beautiful Mark jewel, made of pure gold of Nova Scotia; while acting as Chaplain and Naval Instructor of H.M.S. Raccoon, commanded by the Count Gleichen, he became Chaplain of the Lodge of Friendship, No. 278, at Gibraltar, from Dec., 1863, to May, 1864, and was appointed Provincial Grand Chaplain for the province of Gibraltar. Returning to England to take the living of Sandringham at the kind desire of our M.W. Grand Master, he became Chaplain of the Philanthropic Lodge, No. 107, King's Lynn, in 1866, and which office he held until his death; he was appointed, during the regime of the Honourable Fred. Walpole, Provincial Grand Chaplain for Norfolk; he preached the sermon on the occasion of the Provincial Grand Lodge meeting at North Walsham, in 1870. Bro. W. Lake Onslow's services as Chaplain in H.M.'s navy were many and brilliant.

BRO. JOHN THORNTON.

One of the oldest Freemasons in the province of West Lancashire has passed away, and another blank has been made in the circle of Masonic worthies in Liverpool. After a short illness, Bro. John Thornton, at the ripe age of 73, died on the 27th August, at his residence, 41, Park-lane, Liverpool, deeply regretted by numerous brethren in his own and other lodges. He was a zealous Freemason, an unassuming and amiable man, and greatly respected by all who came into contact with him, both in and out of the Order. He was a P.M. of the Lodge of Harmony, No. 220; the St. John's Lodge, No. 673; and the Senior P.M. of the Duke of Edinburgh Lodge, No. 1182, as well as M.E.Z. of St. John's Chapter, No. 673. He took an active interest in all Masonic charities, and was ever ready to give the helping hand of true brotherhood to the needy and distressed.

The mortal remains of Bro. Thornton were interred in St. James's Cemetery, Liverpool, on Thursday, the 30th ult. The fact of his being so old a Mason and so widely known and respected by the body induced the brethren of the two lodges and the chapter to which he was attached to pay every possible respect to his memory; accordingly the brethren of St. John's Lodge and Chapter and the Duke of Edinburgh Lodge were summoned to meet at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, at 1 p.m., which they did in large numbers, there being present among many others (of St. John's) the W.M., Bro. H. Burrows; P.M.'s Wm. Thos. May, J. T. Callow, Thos. Clark, Joshua Hocker, Thos. Roberts, Martin Corless, R. Pearson, and E. Kyle; Bros. D. Jackson, S.W.; W. Brackbenbury, J.W.; L. Herman, S.D.; John Seddon, J.D.; T. Firthshaw, I.G., &c. Of the Duke of Edinburgh Lodge, the W.M., Bro. J. Williams; P.M.'s R. Martin, jun., T. B. Myers, J. Edginton, J. W. Williams, and P. R. Thurn; Bro. W. Brown, Treasurer; Thos. Davies, S.W.; G. Murker, J.W.; A. D. Hesketh, Sec.; J. C. Lawson, &c. Among the visitors were Bros. the Rev. H. G. Vernon, P.P.G. Chaplain W.L. (who conducted the service); W. Doyle, P.P.G.D. W.L.; J. Jackson, P.M. 667; W. Vaughan, P.M., and a large number of other representatives from various lodges. After the lodge had been opened up to the Third Degree by the W.M. of St. John's Lodge, the chair was taken by Bro. W. T. May, P.M., Bro. R. Martin, P.M., in the S.W. chair, as representing the Duke of Edinburgh Lodge, and Bro. T. Clark, P.M. and P.Z., in the J.W. chair, as representing St. John's Chapter. When the beautiful Masonic ritual appointed for the lodge room was gone through, the brethren then proceeded to the late residence of the deceased, 41, Park Lane, and preceded the funeral cortege to the cemetery. After the religious ceremony in the chapel and at the grave side had been gone through by the P.P.G. Chaplain, Bro. W. T. May, P.M., delivered the Masonic exhortation, prayers being read by the Chaplain amid the most solemn attention of the relatives and brethren around the grave. The brethren then returned to Hope-street, and duly closed the lodge, the whole of the proceedings throughout being conducted in the most regular and decorous manner.

ROBBERY OF FOREIGN BONDS.

Yesterday, at the Mansion-house, John Carr, 48, described as of no occupation, and as residing at 20, Osborne-terrace, Clapham-road, was brought before Alderman Sir Robert Carden, charged on suspicion with being concerned with Charles Martin, in custody, and others still at large, in stealing on or about the 1st of June last, while in transit from London to Paris, foreign bonds of the value of £70,000, the property of Messrs. Henry Louis Raphael and Sons, bankers, 25, Throgmorton-street. He was also accused of feloniously receiving, well knowing them to have been stolen, Peruvian bonds of the nominal value of £20,000, belonging to Messrs. Louis Cohen and Sons, stockbrokers, 31, Throgmorton-street.

Mr. George Lewis, jun., solicitor, conducted the prosecution; Mr. Blanchard Wontner, solicitor, the defence.

Robert Outram, a detective-sergeant of the City of London Police, said on Tuesday morning he received ten Bank-notes for £100 each, which he produced at the offices of Messrs. Lewis and Lewis, solicitors, Ely-place, Holborn. In company with a person whom he met there he went to the Gower-street railway station. He arrived there at 20 minutes to 1 o'clock. At 1 o'clock he was introduced to the prisoner as "Mr. Fox, of Brighton," by the person who accompanied him and whose name he did not know. They all went into a publichouse together and had something to drink, for which witness paid. The prisoner, having given them a cigar each, said to witness, "Well, you know our business?" He replied, "Yes; I am prepared to buy those bonds." The prisoner said, "All right," and witness, addressing him, said, "You see I have got the flimsies (showing him the notes), but where are the bonds?" He replied, "They are not far off." They all three then left the publichouse. In the Euston-road the prisoner said, "I only do business with one person; you and I (meaning witness) will take a cab." A cab was called, and witness and he drove to the Great Northern Hotel. On the way there the prisoner said, "You know the price of these bonds." Witness replied, "Yes, a thousand." The prisoner inquired, "What are you going to do with them?" Witness said he had got a market for them. The prisoner then said, "They are as good as sovereigns if you get them into the hands of the right people." Witness replied, "Yes, my man has had two or three lots before." The prisoner asked him if he was "a square man," and the witness said he might rely upon that. On reaching the Great Northern Hotel they went into a room on the fourth floor. The prisoner bolted the door carefully, and from a bag which he unlocked produced a parcel, which proved to contain Peruvian bonds. He said, "There they are." Witness tied up the parcel, and said, "I am a detective-sergeant from the City, and you must consider yourself in custody." He drew back and exclaimed "What!" Witness said, "My name is Outram, I am a detective-sergeant in the City Police; these bonds have been stolen, and you will have to go with me to the City," adding, "We had better do the thing quietly." The prisoner said, "All right." On going down stairs and while waiting for the cab, he said, "You are very premature about saying these are stolen." Witness replied, "Perhaps so." They then drove to the Police-station in Bow-lane, where he was afterwards charged. Witness found two keys upon the prisoner.

Mr. Lewis said the prisoner had had a safe at the National Safe Deposit Company's premises.

Mr. Charles Waugh, a clerk to Messrs. Louis Cohen and Sons, stockbrokers, 31, Throgmorton-street, deposed that he had examined the bonds in question (Peruvian Five per cent., 1872), and found that they were of the nominal value of £20,000. In June last the firm delivered these bonds, with others, for transmission to their correspondents in Paris. He took the numbers of them. The bonds produced were among those in the parcel.

Mr. Lewis said that was all the evidence he proposed to tender that day.

Sir Robert Carden remanded the prisoner until Friday next, when he will be brought up with the prisoner Martin, and then again remanded formally for another week.

FREEMASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

CENTENNIAL LODGE, No. 763.

In this lodge, last Tuesday evening, transpired one of those events which illumine the path of the true Mason, as he toils on behalf of the fraternity to which he devotes so many hours of thought. The lodge was crowded to witness the presentation, by Centennial Lodge, of certificates of honorary membership to Masons well known to the Craft as honourable men, honoured and titled by their brethren. After the usual routine business of the lodge, M.W. Bro. John W. Symons, P.G. Master of Masons of the State of New York, said in substance. Worshipful Master, Wardens and brethren,—in a part of the ritual, perhaps never better exemplified than by you Master, you have been told of the seven liberal arts and sciences, to which should be added another art, or rather science, known as that of Magnetism. Not the electric spark, which by the wire is flashed around the globe; but that personal magnetism, which attracts to the possessor of it the hearts of his brethren. The magnet here to-night is R.W. Chas. L. Arthur, who is unsurpassed in drawing to him the hearts of the members of this lodge and the Fraternity. On their behalf it is my pleasant duty, R.W. Sir, to present to you this certificate of honorary membership in Centennial Lodge. Take it, with my hand, and God bless you: may you live long to enjoy your well-deserved honours.

R.W. Bro. Arthur replied as follows: Most Worshipful Sir, Worshipful Master, Wardens and brethren of the Centennial Lodge, I have been the recipient of so much kindness from my brethren that to me it is often a matter of doubt as to which lodge I belong. From my first crossing the portals of this lodge I have been met with courtesy and kindness which I have done nothing to merit. The obligations are all on one side, but I assure you, brethren, if it is in my power, morning, noon or night, to benefit in any way the brethren of Centennial Lodge, I will be most happy in doing so. Brethren, I thank you.

The R.W. Bro. took his seat amid loud applause.

The Master then presented, in eloquent and fraternal words, R.W. John C. Boak, Grand Marshal of the Grand Lodge of the State of New York, with a certificate of honorary membership.

The R.W. Bro., in reply, said: "It was my good fortune to assist at the organization of Centennial Lodge, and to be with it at intervals to the present time. His remarks conveyed fraternal feelings towards the brethren in choice words, which were received with great applause.

R. W. Bro. Wm. V. King, of the Seventh Masonic District, was selected by the Master to present to W. Bro. Flandreau, of John Hancock Lodge, a certificate of honorary membership in Centennial Lodge. This was bringing in juxtaposition two brethren known for their merit and modesty; consequently the brethren had short speeches, but eloquent ones, and received them with applause.

The next recipient of honours was W. Bro. Frank Meyers, of Emmanuel Lodge. In this instance also the Master was happy in making a selection, the eloquent and fraternal remarks of W. Bro. Malignon meeting with a like response from W. Bro. Frank Meyers, who said, among other pleasant things, that he was not only glad to meet the members of Centennial in the lodge, but out in the world, they being not only gentlemen, but Masons.

The brethren who occupied the east, at the invitation of W. Bro. Godchaud, were: M. W. John W. Simons, R. W. Chas. S. Arthur, R. W. John C. Boak, W. Bros. Benj. Flandreau and Frank Meyers, R.W. Bros. Wm. V. King, C. H. King, Henry C. Banks, and J. B. Conover, W. Bros. D. Wile, Chas. H. Mayer, B. Martin, Dessoye, Malignon, Bunnell, and Barbour.

The Master Mason's Degree was conferred on five Fellow Crafts by the Master, Wardens, and staff of Centennial Lodge in an excellent manner.

The music of Bro. Graham was appropriate, and well rendered.

The lodge closed in harmony, and the brethren departed satisfied that Centennial Lodge had had a gala night, seldom equalled in the Masonic reunions of the great metropolis.—New York Dispatch.

A magnificent service of plate, which cost 6000 guineas, and is the result of private subscription, has been presented to the Manchester Corporation by Mr. Alderman Curtis, the ex-Mayor, during whose mayoralty the subscription was promoted, and will be used at the banquet in celebration of the opening of the new town hall next week.

"THE CHINESE EMBASSY."—Le Shu Chang, Chief Secretary Imperial Chinese Embassy; Fung Yee, Chief Interpreter; and Szu Tinfau Chang, attaché, have this week left London on a short visit to Bro. Dr. Vincent Ambler, K.C.S., at Brighton. Bro. Ambler is also at present entertaining some members of the Japanese Legation.

The Romford Local Board have made their arrangements for the lighting of the town by oil-lamps. It is stated that their clerk has received applications from various local bodies, asking to be informed of the result of the experiment.

SKETCHES OF MASONIC CHARACTER.
No. III.

BRO. JONES AT COWES.

Few of us there are who do not know "Bro. Jones, of ours." He is a most admirable Mason, and a very worthy fellow, with a good deal to say for himself, pleasant and humorous, conciliatory and considerate. He is universally popular, and always welcome.

Whether at the "Ajax" or the "Xenophon," whether at the "Undeniability" or the "Verity," whether at the "Boadicea" or the "Cecilia," he is equally to the fore, and equally in the good esteem of his brethren. In fact he knows everything and everybody, and is emphatically one of the "Lights of Masonry," as he always has a neat little anecdote to retail to an admiring circle, a good story to announce, with a smiling face, and a cheery voice.

He is a very zealous Mason, has been W.M. several times and has served the Stewardships of all the Charities over and over again. So well is Jones known, so widely are his good qualities realized, that he is an authority on most matters, from a lodge dinner to a lodge testimonial, from a prince to a pedigree, from a glass of Moët's champagne to that "special bottle of very dry sherry." He is a sort of "arbitrator elegantiarum" and "ductor dubitantium" combined, and brethren often await earnestly and breathlessly his decision on a dispute, a point of constitutional law, or an axiom of social etiquette! In fact Bro. Jones is a very useful fellow, as well as a good fellow, and when "Atropos" snips his thread of life he will be a "missed man."

And then he has many good qualities which render him valuable as a citizen of the world, as well as a brother Mason. He is warm-hearted and straight-running, an enemy to slander and mischief-making, kindly and tolerant, friendly and forbearing.

In more than one lodge his virtues and his value are warmly appreciated, and some even go so far as to say that the lodge meeting is hardly the lodge meeting without Bro. Jones, that the festive symposium seems dull and heavy when his cheery voice is unheard, when his smiling face is "non est." But Jones, like all great men, has his weaknesses, and those are a love of yachting, and fear of Mrs. Jones—facts, stern stubborn facts in themselves, which often interfere with his usefulness, and often diminish his influence, for, strange to say, home life reacts on social life, and vice versa, and the hero of a successful assembly, and the favourite of hearty plaudits, is often (if you could, like Asmodeus, take off the tiles of his abode), a sorry representative of us "Lords of the Creation." Yes, strip off the masks from our faces, and the drapery off the scene, and we are too often like wearied actors who sit dejected at the wings, for the applause is over, the stalls will rise no more.

And so when Jones returns in November to his lodge, his best friends avoid the subject of yachts and Cowes, for once start him, there is no stopping him; he will go on eloquently by the hour about that "stiff breeze," and "hard over," and "luff," and "smashing" his jib boom. He will inform you what a narrow shave we had, and had he not said "up helm, round in your weather braces," or, "till and wear round; bear a hand every soul of you," "we had better get a reef in the mainsail," "keep her away a bit," "bail up the mainsail," he does not know what would have happened. Bro. Lt. Warriner, R.N., a very zealous Mason, often laughs at Bro. Jones when he talks of "old Salts," and says something about "land-lubbers." But good fellow as he is, Lt. Warriner, like all professionals, dislikes the "civilian element."

Well, he is not singular. Of Jones's wife we say nothing at the lodge. There are awful stories about her. They aver that Jones catches it whenever he is late, and Bro. Finucan, who knows Jones and his wife very well—they live up in Maida Vale—says, "Bedad, sir, Jones has his troubles. You would hardly believe it, sir, but the other night that obdurate woman kicked up a deuce of a row about some hot water for our potheen. If ever we get 'home rule' in the Green Island, we will somehow or other legislate for snarling females and bad-tempered wives." Much, no doubt, that is retailed about Mrs. Jones is a "canard," though we agree with Bro. Templeman, who states, "If I had a wife like Jones I would remain single." So let us pity poor Jones of ours, and make the lodge room very pleasant to him, for it is just possible that for him the good old national melody, "Home, sweet home, there is no place like home," has not much attraction, but to him there floats, rather as it were, on the pinions of memory, a classic strain of festive hours, with much more of pleasure, which declares "We won't go home till morning, till daylight does appear."

We do not wish our readers to infer that touching "Refrain" lingers still among Masonic lodges, for we have altered all that for years; and the normal condition of the lodge to which we belong is that at 9.30 the Tyler gives his toast, and at 10 we wend our way to our Laras and Penates, and

"Some have gone home to their slumbers,
And some have gone home to their wives."

When next you see Bro. Jones be very considerate and courteous to him, for his public merits are many, and his home trials are great.

Masonic and General Tidings.

Lord Carnarvon, M.W. Pro Grand Master, arrived at Highclere Castle, near Newbury, on Tuesday, from Pixton Park, his lordship's Somersetshire estate.

The annual Court of Governors of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution will be held at the Town Hall, Southport, on Wednesday, October 3rd, at 12 o'clock.

Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Waveney, R.W. P.G.M. Suffolk, has left town for his shooting quarters in Inverness-shire.

There are, according to the Keystone, 555 Commanderies in the United States, and 46,235 Knights; while the whole number of Commanderies in the world is 687, and of Knights, 48,735. The United States has thus the lion's share.

Lord Sandon has consented to preside at the annual meeting of the Burslem School of Science and Art and to distribute prizes to the successful students on the 17th inst.

The Chinese Ambassador has written to the Lord Provost of Glasgow regretting that he is prevented by ill-health from visiting Glasgow as he had intended.

The appointment of Mr. G. B. Newton as General Manager of the North London Railway, in succession to Mr. Mansell, at a salary running into three figures, is another indication that the directors of the various systems are beginning to see that it is better to have direct communication with the heads of departments than to obtain information through a chief official. For Mr. Newton is still to act as secretary, which signifies the post of General Manager is virtually abolished, in the same way as the London and North-Western Company made Mr. Findlay Chief Traffic Manager when Mr. Cawkwell resigned the position of General Manager, and left the latter office to lapse. On the London and North-Western system the chiefs of the other departments now report direct to the Board, instead of through a General Manager as formerly, and this will probably be the rule on all lines as soon as vacancies occur in the management. Indeed the South-Eastern soon followed the lead of the London and North-Western, for upon the death of Mr. C. W. Eborall, the position of General Manager was conferred upon Mr. Shaw, the Secretary, who now describes himself as "Secretary and General Manager."

The Choir states that Bro. C. E. Tinney is the successor to Mr. Thurley Beale, who has resigned his post of vicar choral of St. Paul's Cathedral.

THE SEA SERPENT AGAIN.—The bark Georgina, Captain Melhuish, arrived at Falmouth this week from Rangoon. The chief officer, Mr. William Douglas, says that when the vessel was in lat. 2 N., long. 90 53 E., at 6 o'clock in the morning of May 21, a large snake or serpent of a dark gray and yellow colour crossed the Georgina's bow from the starboard side, disappearing on the port quarter. The reptile, which was about 50ft. long and 11in. in thickness, was seen for 20 minutes by the mate and all the crew, who were on deck. Captain Melhuish was below in his cabin at the time. For some days previously the crew had seen several smaller ones of from 6ft. to 10ft. in length playing about the vessel.

THE DANGERS OF BICYCLES.—The watch committee of Liverpool, in view of the dangers arising from the noiseless approach of bicycles, have recommended to the council that a bye-law should be passed rendering it imperative that bicyclists and velocipedists generally shall have a bell attached to their vehicles to indicate their approach, the penalty for non-compliance with the bye-law being £5.

News has been received in Calcutta from Burmah of the destruction of the Krishna lighthouse, which marked a dangerous shoal near the entrance to the Rangoon river. The lighthouse was an iron structure, built on piles. It has entirely disappeared.

The proposed site for Cleopatra's Needle has called forth a number of objections, and various suggestions have been made respecting other and more prominent positions for the monument. Of course the great difficulty is the conveyance of the Needle through the streets, and it is for this reason that a river-side site has been most favoured; but could this difficulty be overcome we think that one of the best positions has been suggested by a correspondent, namely, the Kensington Gardens end of Rotten Row, close by the bend of the road. From here the Needle might be seen from a considerable distance, and would be clearly visible from Hyde Park Corner. In the meantime the Needle has now been completely encased in her iron hull at Alexandria, and by last advice was in course of launching. After the vessel has been floated she will be towed to the old harbour, in order that her masts, sails, &c., may be fitted.

It is with some pleasure that we announce that Fleet-street, which has been closed for upwards of eight weeks for wood-paving, was opened at a few minutes to eleven o'clock on Thursday morning.

We are asked to state that the La Tolerance, No. 538, meets every Wednesday evening, at 7.45, at the Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, under the able preceptorship of Bro. T. A. Adams, P.G.P.

It was decided on Wednesday to present General Grant with the freedom of Dundee on the occasion of his visit to that place.

A new building is about to be erected in Queen Victoria-street to accommodate temporarily the Central Savings Bank, until permanent provision can be made for that and other departments for which there is at present no accommodation in the General Post Office buildings, St. Martin's-le-Grand.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.—

The friendly challenge of the Grocers' Company's Schools to a trial of cricketing strength on the Alexandra Palace Ground, promises, with fine weather, to result in a very agreeable half-holiday for the boys on the 15th inst. The assent of the Committee having been given to the match, the leasees of the Alexandra Palace kindly extended their invitation to the whole establishment at Wood Green, and 2 or 3 cricketing prizes have been kindly promised by the Crystal Palace Lodge and the Lewis Chapter. It is not improbable that prizes for other sports may be offered before the day.

The first boat presented by the Jewish community to the National Life-boat Institution was launched at Newhaven on Tuesday last.

The Mansion House Indian Famine Relief Fund now exceeds £100,000.

A serious scaffold accident occurred inside of Anderton's Hotel (Bro. Clemow's), Fleet-street, on Wednesday afternoon. It appears that a workman stepped on a loose pole, which broke, and the whole of the scaffolding gave way, precipitating a number of men to the ground. One of them, George Lake, a married man, sustained severe injuries, and was removed to St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

ST. JAMES'S PARK.—It is announced, for the convenience of the public, that the road between Buckingham Gate and Storey's Gate will be closed on the 10th for a few days, for repairs.

The death is announced of Mr. Edward Wilson, consulting engineer to the Great Western, Great Eastern, and Metropolitan Railways, and to many Irish lines.

We are informed that the Lord Mayor (Bro. Sir Thos. White) will be proposed for election as treasurer of St. Thomas's Hospital, in succession to the late Sir Francis Hicks.

THE SPANISH POST OFFICE.—In consequence of the representations made by the English and French governments to that of Spain respecting the numerous losses of letters and packets containing valuable enclosures originating in France and England, addressed to Spain, the Spanish government has arranged for the investigation of the matter by a mixed commission, which will meet at Madrid about the 18th of September. Sir John Walsham, Her Majesty's Charge d'Affaires at Madrid (who will be assisted by Mr. Phillips, of the Secretary's Department of the General Post Office) will represent the English, and the Comte de Montebello, the French Post Office; a special commissioner appointed by the Spanish government also taking part in the proceedings.

Bath is not the city, neither are the Assembly-rooms, in which Mr. Pickwick made the acquaintance of Angelo Cyrus Bantam, Esq., M.C., the exact place in which one would expect to hear of a positively indecent spectacle. Yet such a spectacle was announced the other day as on view at the Bath Assembly-rooms. "Tour of the Rescued Tynewydd Miners" was the heading of the sensational advertisement which "respectfully informed the public that arrangements have been made for an entertainment to be given by the Five Entombed Miners, Moses Powell, David Jenkins, Geo. Jenkins, John Thomas, and the Boy Hughes, who were entombed in the Tynewydd Mine through the flooding of the Cymer Pit for the period of ten days and nights without tasting food. Nothing in the annals of history has ever caused such a profound sensation throughout the whole country." As a finishing stroke, it was proclaimed that "Moses Powell, one of the entombed, will give a touching account of the sufferings in the pit, and also describe the various illustrations." This seems to me a reductio ad scandalum of a very detestable custom, which may, perhaps, be traced to the starting tour made by Sayers and Heenan after their international prize-fight. That champion pugilists, swimmers, and pedestrians should display themselves to a provincial or any other public at so much a head is an undignified and mercenary proceeding enough. But that men who have been snatched out of the jaws of death by the heroic and most perilous exertions of their brother-miners, whose prolonged agony of suspense, hunger, and thirst, patiently endured, excited the admiration of the whole country, should be introduced as lay figures in an entertainment; that one of their number should recite an ad captandum account of sufferings which danger, deliverance, and sympathy have alike rendered sacred,—is an outrage on taste and feeling contemptible in the entrepreneur who perpetrates, and the public which witnesses it.—The World.

POSTAL TELEGRAMS.—The Postmaster-General has issued the following notice to the public: "The address of the sender of a telegram is not required for any purpose of signalling, and should be omitted in all cases where the addressee will be able to identify the sender without it. For reference, the address should be added at the bottom or on the back of the message form. In sending telegrams, firms and public companies should adopt their briefest 'style,' and should avoid the use of stamps containing full name, title, and address. The prefixes 'Mr.' and 'Messrs.,' and the affixes 'Esq.,' 'Limited,' &c., should be omitted, as far as possible, in the addresses of both senders and addressees. Brevity in these respects ensures swifter transmission without any attendant risk."

THE BALACLAVA BANQUET.—Lady Cardigan has presented a magnificent donation towards the expenses of the banquet to the survivors of the Balacava Charge, to be held in London on the 25th October. It has been ascertained that out of the gallant 600 there are 100 survivors, the majority of whom will be present at the banquet.

The title of the forthcoming Christmas number of the "Quiver" is "The Archer."

THE LAST QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION.

Owing to the early hour at which we go to press on Thursdays, we are unable to call the attention of our readers, as we should have wished to do, fully, to the proceedings of the last Grand Lodge. This is one of the penalties of early publication, though it is possibly counterbalanced by the fact that our London subscribers receive our paper on Friday morning, and our country friends on Saturday morning. We propose in our next issue to consider the meeting of the last Quarterly Communication, the agenda paper, and the result achieved, carefully in detail. The Grand Lodge unanimously voted the grants to St. John's and Peru, and most wisely and liberally also passed with unanimity Bro. Clabon's motion to vote £1000 to the Indian Famine Relief Fund now being organised by the Lord Mayor. With respect to the proposed limitation of the Board of Benevolence, the suggestion of the Board of General Purposes was deferred for consideration until March. We shall recur to the subject in our next, as we said before.

THE CONSECRATION OF THE EVENING STAR LODGE.

The consecration of this new lodge, which we fully reported in our last, was a great success, and reflects no little credit on all concerned, especially on our esteemed and energetic Bro. Magnus Ohren. We have attended many consecrations, but we hardly ever attended one in which all the work of Freemasonry was so smoothly, so effectually, and so impressively performed, and in which all felt that the ceremony they were taking part in, despite the cavils of the censorious, or the depreciation of the antagonistic, was a very "real thing." To some Freemasonry is an idle form, a convivial meeting, a benefit order, and nothing more. To others it appears a "goose club," an unreality, and a sham. Now we confess that for all these classes of minds we do not affect to write to-day, we regret their dislike or depreciation, we laugh at their sarcasms, or their contempt; and we do not mind either their fault-finding or their condemnation, while we deplore their ignorance of our tenets and our practice, and quietly put on one side their censures, and their anathemata. To us Freemasonry is something both very pleasant and very true, very interesting, and very cherished. It recalls old days and ancient friends; it summons up before us gracious hours of youthful harmony and harmless gaiety; it tells us of "Time's encroaching hand," yet of friendships which have never faltered, of honest hearts which have never grown cold, and kindly faces which have never ceased to smile on us! Indeed, to many of us Freemasonry represents the best part of our life, which kindly associations have graced, and a genial fellowship has dominated. We look back to-day. We can recall in kindly vision, the old lodge and the assembled brethren, and if some are wanting from that brilliant circle, if we discern gaps in the serried rows of cheery companions, memory still speaks to us, full voiced and tenderly, of those whom we never more shall hail, dear members of our mystic tie. Yes, the waning hour recalls in pleasurable emotion many a hardworking fellow labourer, many a true-hearted companion of "Auld Lang Syne." Aye, and more than this, when the decorated lodge room and the festive scene fade from our sight, there rises up before us the goodly memento of much honest work, for God and man, in the best of all toils, gentle, goodly, loving charity. Why, then, should any of us be timid or hesitating when we speak of our good old Order, to-day? Why should we whisper in "bated breath," or treat with half-hearted callousness, the windbag or the fanatic of the hour, who rail at what they do not understand, and depreciate the worth of an Institution which, through density or selfishness, they cannot realize? Far be from us any such mealy-mouthedness or fearfulness, any want of faith in Freemasonry. The more we see of it, the older we grow, the greater appear to us to be its claims on our intelligence and our affections, and therefore our heartfelt aspirations for "our brave old Craft" is "Esto perpetua" as long as Time itself shall last, to witness the struggles of man, to declare the Providence of God. We congratulate all, we repeat, who were concerned in the consecration of the Evening Star Lodge, for their motto was truly "thorough," and most efficiently did all perform their duty, most signal was the success of the day. We wish to this new lodge all prosperity. The only ingredient of disappointment and of regret arose from the indisposition of its most worthy and respected W.M., Bro. A. D. Filer. We rejoice to be able to say, on the authority of Bro. Magnus Ohren, that our most respected and esteemed brother is better, and that it is hoped that when the lodge next meets, it may gladly hail in the royal chair the brother so judiciously selected to preside over them as its first W.M., whose zeal for Freemasonry is so well known, and who lives in the hearts and memories of his brethren.

OUR LATE GRAND CHAPLAIN.

We deeply regret to have to announce to the Craft the lamented death of our esteemed Grand Chaplain, the Rev. W. Lake Onslow, Vicar of Sandringham. He had served his country efficiently as a naval chaplain, and wore the Baltic and Burmah medals, the fifth class of the Mejidje, and the star and order of the Osmanli. We are told that his amiable disposition and kind consideration for all made him a great favourite. By all, from the Prince and Princess downwards, he was held in the highest estimation, and his death has created a blank at Sandringham which will not be easily filled. His health has been very precarious for the last year or two, but a fortnight ago he was at the public luncheon in connection with the sale of Short-horns and Southdowns at Sandringham, and few who heard his cheery voice on that occasion could have thought his end so near. We feel sure that the regret of the Order will accompany those of his parishioners, family, and friends.

SEASIDE MANNERS.

We publish elsewhere from one of our contemporaries, The Times, the great organ of public complaints, and private grumbling, "more Britannorum," a selection from a host of letters in respect of some recent unfeeling behaviour to passengers landing at Folkestone, sick and suffering, and which undoubtedly deserves both reprehension and repression. Indeed, Sister Jenkinson writes to us to say, that it must be "put down," for she continues "women weak, ailing, and unprotected, will no longer submit to the taunts of an uncivilized crowd, and the horsey jokes of young men, dressed as groom boys." Mrs. Jenkinson, when she chooses to be severe, as Jenkinson admits, can be severe. But seriously, it is only fair to observe that the evils of long standing. It has long been the privilege of the "Beau Monde" at Folkestone, to witness the departure for, and the arrivals of the steam boats from Boulogne. Indeed it may be said to be part of the daily life of the average Folkestonian, whether visitor or resident. At the appointed hours you may see groups of old and young wending their way to the pier, and as the boat disgorges its load, the passengers, male and female, weak, unsteady, and "pale with suppressed emotion," have to run the gauntlet of a critical and not always silent crowd of "impassioned gazers." It is well then, philosophically to observe, amidst this chorus of complaints in various pitches of tone and temper, that though such a greeting on landing on the hospitable shores of England is not an agreeable episode, especially after a two hours "bucketting on the treacherous main," yet that like eels, we can all for the most part, become accustomed to anything, and our great remedy is unfailing patience. The present

"loud" grievance seems to have arisen, from some idle excursionists, and some silly young men, neither uncommon bores just now, and we think that it is an abnormal occurrence, one at any rate "above par" in respect of the wonted facetiousness and polished amenities of a Folkestone crowd of "waiters" if not on "Providence," on the "Bowlong Steam boats." While then, we feel that we cannot always expect "smooth water," and that we must all "rough it a little," we yet strongly object to remarks on elderly, middle-aged, and young females, just landed from a rough passage, as alike unmanly and unseasonable. Our fair sisters, always an object of sympathy to us, seem especially so to be, in that depressed and crumpled condition in which they too often land after a boisterous crossing, and deserve all pity and consideration, instead of chaff and criticism at the hand of that pitiless monster man. We also venture to opine that if ladies, (yes, ladies), and gentlemen, old and young, will chaff unoffending passengers, they should do so "sotto voce," as surely the "horrors of the mid-channel" are enough for sensitive bosoms and shivering frames, without the "horse laugh" or the vapid joke of the idle and the witless, and the useless lounge. Still our young men must have something to do, and at present their idea of amusement does not go very far. This perhaps, is as harmless as any, even though they do hurt the feelings of some suffering women, the feeble, the lame, the ailing—what does it matter? There are things which a "fella" must see, do, and say, at Folkestone, and why deprive him of an avocation marked by so much good taste and such good feeling? They might do worse, poor young fellows. Let us hope that good sense and kindly consideration will put an end to proceedings which seem only worthy of "roughs," and which, to say the truth, are a disgrace to the good manners of the public, and indeed to all concerned.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

If "E. M." will refer to a correspondence which appeared in the Freemason a few weeks back, under the head of "The Right of Visiting," he will see in a letter from Bro. Hervey, G.S., an opinion given by the Grand Registrar which will, I think, answer his query.

AN URGENT APPEAL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

After the meeting of the De Warren Lodge, No. 1302, held on Monday night, in submitting the toast of "The M.W. Grand Master," the acting W.M. introduced the subject of the shocking famine at present existing in India, and the noble sum announced to be proposed at the next meeting of the United Grand Lodge to be voted towards the fund now being raised in this country to afford relief to the poor starving inhabitants.

A general conversation then took place upon the great amount of misery caused by the famine, and the smallness of the sum required to furnish food sufficient to sustain each native for a week, and the opinion was expressed that neither the vast extent of the famine nor the awful amount of suffering entailed thereby was sufficiently thought of by the people of England.

It was suggested that if the members of every lodge in this country would subscribe only one shilling each (a sum small enough in itself)—and you would consent to receive the amounts and forward them to the proper authorities—many hundred pounds extra would very easily be raised, a great amount of suffering would be alleviated, while no brother would feel the loss of his contribution.

The brethren present at once paid their shillings (13), which I was requested to forward to you for the above purpose, in the hope that the scheme would meet your approval, and be the means of causing the brethren of other lodges to reflect seriously upon the evils resulting from that most dreadful of all calamities—death by famine.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
WM. COOKE, P.M., Sec. 1302.

AN APPEAL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

The death of Bro. John Noon, Quarter-Master Royal Marines, of the Wellington Lodge, No. 784, at Deal, on the 8th March, 1877, aged fifty-one, left his widow with nine children, and only a small annuity. One of his sons, Albert Allen Moon, has been placed on the list for election into the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, to which his father was a subscriber, and some particulars of his services may interest your readers, who have votes for the Institution.

He commanded a detachment serving in the Arctic Regions, from 1850 to 1854, during the discovery of the North-West Passage, and is thus mentioned in the records: "One person especially distinguished himself not only as a sportsman, but in the execution of any service requiring unflagging energy and marked intelligence; and this man was the non-commissioned officer of Royal Marines, Sergeant Noon."

He did good service everywhere; but no better instance can be given of the metal of which such men as he are made than what occurred on the 4th of January, 1852. A coloured man serving in the ship, whilst out sporting, wounded a deer, and, after following it awhile, discovered he had lost his way just as a fog came on. The temperature was very low, the man was tired, and the peril of his position caused him to lose his presence of mind, and to wander about. By great good fortune Sergeant Noon, who was likewise out in quest of game, joined him, but the poor creature was so beside himself with excitement and horror that every endeavour to soothe him, by promising to take him safely on board the ship, failed. Fits came on, which, when they passed off, left the man quite prostrated in strength.

By entreaty and remonstrance the serjeant induced him to walk a little; but at 2 p.m., when the glimmering twilight, called the day of that season, was fast closing in, the unfortunate man's energies entirely failed, and he sank upon the ground, bleeding at his mouth and nose, and writhing in convulsions. The serjeant saw now that all hope of the man saving himself was at an end, and to leave him where he was, many miles from the ship, was to leave him to certain death—he would have been devoured by the wolves even before the process of freezing to death would have released him from his misery. There was no alternative but to drag him to the ship—no easy matter, when the serjeant dared not part with his gun, and the man was one of the heaviest of a fine crew. Serjeant Noon, then, with heroic resolution set to his task. Slinging both muskets over his shoulder, he took the man's arms round his own neck, and commenced dragging his half dead shipmate towards the Investigator. The labour was, as may be supposed, excessive; and the only relief the serjeant had was, whenever he had dragged the body up one side of a hill, or when he came to a ravine, to lay him down, and roll him to the bottom; rather severe treatment for an invalid, but it had the merit of arousing the man somewhat from his lethargy. By eleven o'clock at night the gallant marine had thus conveyed his burden to within a mile of the ship; but ten hours of such toil, and darkness, cold, and snow, now began to tell upon him. He could drag his burden no longer, and, as a last resource, he implored the unfortunate man to make an effort, and tried to cheer him up by pointing to the rockets which the captain of the Investigator caused to be thrown up as a guide to the missing men. Finding, however, that all his entreaties were replied to only by a request to be "left alone to die," the serjeant laid him in a bed of deep snow, and started off for assistance from the ship. This was already on its way; and Noon met and conducted two out of three parties to where the man lay, and just in time to save him. He was found with his arms raised, and rigid in that position, his eyes open, and his mouth so firmly frozen as to require much force to open it for the purpose of pouring restoratives down his throat, whilst his hands, feet, and face were much frost-bitten. His life was however, saved, and for that the courage and devotion displayed by the serjeant deserved all the credit.

He served with the battalion in China during the war in 1857—1859, was at the storming of Canton, the taking and destruction of Shektsing, and other engagements. He accompanied the expedition to the North; and at the attack on the Peiho forts on 25th June, 1859, was thus mentioned in the official gazetted dispatches:—"The conspicuous gallantry of Sergeant-Major Noon and Quarter-master Sergeant Halling also attracted his notice."

In March, 1860, at a general parade at Woolwich, General Sir A. Blaxland Strausman, then commanding the division, presented him with the silver medal awarded him by the Lords of the Admiralty for "meritorious conduct, especially for his gallant behaviour while serving in China." He was also granted an annuity of £10. He saved the life of one of his officers, and also of a drummer boy, about 14 years of age. The poor lad had been struck down by a round shot, which completely carried away the inner part of his thigh. He was lying hopelessly in the mud, the missiles of every description flying thickly about him, when he called to Sergeant-Major Noon to take him to a place of safety, which he did at the imminent risk of his life, and deposited him in a boat at some distance. On this occasion the loss sustained by his corps amounted to no less than 19 officers and 190 men killed and wounded. On leaving China he was presented with a piece of plate, as a token of esteem in which he was held by his comrades there.

He was commissioned as Quarter-Master, 13th Sept., 1867, and received the medal for the Arctic service, and a medal with clasps for Canton. Exposure to climate and the hardships he endured brought on the illness which caused his death, and obliged his son to seek the support of the brethren for his election to our school.—Voting papers may be sent to Lieutenant Des Barnes, R.M., W.M. Lodge 1096, Walmer Barracks, Kent, or to Captain Mascall, R.M., at the office of the Dorcas Beneficent Society, 7, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

W. PORTLOCK DADSON,
Captain Royal Body Guard,
Bayard Lodge, No. 1615.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

I am led to believe that the little brochure, "Industry and Idleness," reviewed in your paper, is by Bro. Bolingbroke Ribbons, well known to the members of "21," then held at the George and Vulture, Cornhill, some 44 years ago.

Will you permit this, my humble tribute to the universal kind feeling which that worthy brother's acquaintance then engendered in the hearts of some old brothers—Lofty, Norris, White, Hamden, Majors, Edward, Unwin, Henckey and Shakeshaft—most of whom have been gathered to their fathers; but maybe one or two of the galaxy will appreciate the pleasure of this allusion to what is recollected of Masonic society in 1833.

Yours truly,

GEORGE FRERE, Slough.

SEASONABLE ADVICE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

I think this little offering of "seasonable advice" from Figaro, quoted by The Times, may interest some of your writers. It is very neat:—

Une pauvre grand-mère écrit une lettre d'adieu à son petit-fils, "jeune drôle, condamné pour quelque bagatelle, aux travaux forcés à perpétuité—Conduis-toi bien, et surtout évite les mauvaises connaissances!"—Figaro.

Yours fraternally,

A FRIEND.

THIRD CLASS BY ALL TRAINS. PROPOSED TESTIMONIAL TO MR. ALLPORT, OF THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

I was very much struck with "H.W.'s" letter in your last impression, because he actually states a parallel case to what is daily happening on the Great Northern Railway. Servants of many years' standing have this summer been refused a pass for their wives, with a few exceptions, which, Mr. Editor, I blush for shame when I write, are given to men getting the greatest salaries, while their poorer brethren have in many cases to forego their annual excursion to the sea-side.

Thanks to the Midland directors, who pursue a different policy, their servants can take their wives and families to any sea-side place they choose.

I hope the testimonial to Mr. Allport will prove a good one, not in a large amount of cash, but in a host of small subscribers, showing him how grateful his fellow country men and women are.

Yours fraternally,

A POOR MASON.

THE BOYS' AND GIRLS' SCHOOLS—ENTRANCE BY PURCHASE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

Will you kindly allow me to ask on what principle the above is calculated, as the amount demanded seems to others than myself quite inadequate for the maintenance and education of the children for the stipulated time; that is if such maintenance and education be as good as we are accustomed to consider them to be. I cannot but think that this is a matter worthy of very grave thought, for it seems that one party or other must be a loser. If the child or its parents, then it seems a source of income unworthy of our Order and therefore of our Charities; if the latter be the loser, the sooner the system is put an end to the better; for why should any part of our Charities (however fragmentary) be taken from those who urgently want it, in order to confer a very questionable benefit upon those who do not—witness their ability to raise the purchase money.

One other consideration—Is the purchase system beneficial to the children in the schools?

Certainly not to those who so enter, for it must tend to make them think more highly of themselves as a class than the rest.

Certainly not to those ordinarily elected, for, whilst it may give room for them to suspect favouritism, it must make them sensible of a certain sense of inferiority.

Lastly, to the management of the schools it must be extremely detrimental, as must always be the existence of any possibility of the formation of cliques amongst the children.

Faithfully and fraternally yours,

Q.

"SEASIDE MANNERS."

[We take the following from a vast number of amusing letters in the Times for several days, sufficient to point out a nuisance and suggest a remedy.—Ed.]

Sir,—In a letter signed "S.P.," and published in your columns to-day, the writer declares that the scandalous conduct of some of those who daily await the arrival of the steamboat passengers is exceptional, was confined to a particular occasion, and was a source of annoyance and distress to the regular visitors to Folkestone, to the inhabitants of that place, and to "S.P." himself. These last assertions I readily believe, but I wholly deny that the conduct complained of is exceptional. I have watched the arrival of the passengers scores of times, and have constantly heard jeering and insulting remarks upon their appearance made in loud tones by bystanders, not by "inhabitants or regular visitors," but by young men who are out for their holiday, and employ it in exhibiting their vulgarity at the expense of those whose age, sex, or infirmity makes the pastime safe. On none of the many occasions that I have witnessed these scenes do I remember to have heard any able-bodied unnumbered young man chaffed. There can be discretion when impudence is likely to secure a thrashing.

The South-Eastern Company ought to be ashamed of themselves that they have not long since devised means for protecting their passengers from the insolence of the fellows who infest Folkestone in the summer and autumn.

Your obedient servant,

EDW. VAUGHAN RICHARDS.

Sir,—I have twice landed at Folkestone during the past fortnight, and each time have witnessed the extreme rudeness of the Folkestone crowd. Some nervous people of my acquaintance dread the landing almost as much as the horrors of the middle passage. It is not generally known that only privileged persons are allowed on the Folkestone Pier to witness the arrival of the steamer; therefore "S.P.'s" excuse, which appeared in The Times of to-day, falls to the ground. I am sorry to say that the fellows who congregate on the pier are of better position than the regular excursionist.

Yours obediently,

C. F. D.

Mr. B. Robinson writes from the Verulam Club, 54, St. James's-street, S.W.:—"Seeing some sensible letters in the late impressions of The Times on the subject of "Seaside Manners," may I be permitted to ask in your columns, what is being done by the South-Eastern and the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Companies to alleviate the wretchedness of their Continental passengers on their Channel passage? This has been the occasion (most improperly, no doubt) of the miserable three young men's amusement at Folkestone. The scenes which I myself have witnessed in bad weather this season in crossing the English Channel are a disgrace to modern civilisation. It has been proved that something can be done for the comfort of the travelling public, by the Castalia boat; and yet economical considerations prevail, and the public are suffered to travel between England and the Continent like cattle."

Sir,—Will you allow me to endorse emphatically all that is said by your Folkestone correspondent? It is disgraceful conduct in any one, but most of all in young ladies, who, I am sorry to say, in the boisterous excitement of sea-side spirits, sometimes forget all that is "gentle" on the arrival of the boat at Folkestone. It is not only grossly rude, but exceedingly cruel to subject suffering members of their own sex to their thoughtless and unfeeling remarks. In the case of "men," summary vengeance taken by the objects of criticism would be richly deserved. I do sincerely hope that the South-Eastern Railway will close its pier in future on the arrival of the boats; but it is a sad reflection upon English manners that such strong measures should have been rendered absolutely necessary. We are apt to be very exacting with our foreign friends across the water, but I have never seen any approach to the conduct of the Folkestone visitors out of England.—I am, Sir, yours very obediently,

CHANNEL PASSAGE.

GRAND LODGE MEETING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Adverting to the meeting of Grand Lodge on Wednesday last, I mean no disrespect to the M.W. the Grand Master in the chair when I say that the resolution for granting one thousand guineas to the Indian Famine Relief Fund was unduly hastened to a vote, immediately after the motion was proposed and seconded; not an instant of time was permitted for criticism. For myself I did not intend to move an amendment, and I think I may say as much for Bro. Raynham Stewart, but I wish to remind the brethren that in June, 1874, at the last Grand Lodge at which the Marquis of Ripon presided, he himself proposed a grant of five hundred guineas towards the relief of the famine in Bengal, and that amount was then deemed sufficient. If the tendency of the brethren present was to make a grant of double the amount on this occasion, it would have been easily demonstrated, and the vote would have been carried in spite of opposition, even had an amendment been proposed. Bro. Clabon, with characteristic benevolence, desired to obtain the grant, but I submit that members of Grand Lodge who did not attend the Board of Masters might fairly have been entitled to express their views on the subject, without fear of his motion being negatived. The question was an open one, on which discussion might have been permitted. The previous grants of two hundred guineas to the sufferers by the fire at St. John, New Brunswick, and of one hundred guineas to alleviate the distress caused by the "cataclysm" (what that may mean?) in Peru, were proposed under the auspices of the M.W. Grand Master, and not a word was uttered on the motions. The grant proposed for the Indian Famine Fund might have been discussed, if an opportunity had been afforded.

Yours fraternally,

BRACKSTONE BAKER, P.G.D.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

With all due deference to your correspondent "E.M.," I dissent from the views he expresses that, under the circumstances, the W. Master of a lodge would be censurable for admitting a visitor to his lodge. A having had an opportunity of retiring to arrange with a brother, a visitor, which he declines.

Will you, Sir, kindly favour a brother with your valuable opinion in your next edition?

Yours fraternally,

P.M.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF SOUTH WALES.

On Thursday, the 30th ult., the first meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons since the installation of Bro. Sir George Elliot as Provincial Grand Master, was held at the New Masonic Hall, Working-street, Cardiff, under the banner of the Glamorgan Lodge. There was a good attendance.

The lodge was a special Grand Lodge of Emergency, called for the purpose of passing two resolutions—one having reference to the late Prov. G.M., Bro. Mansel Talbot, and the other Bro. E. J. Morris, junior, Grand Deacon of England.

Bro. D. Watson, W.M. of the Glamorgan Lodge, opened the lodge in due form at one o'clock, after which the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master and his officers, headed by the new Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Tennant, honoured the lodge with their distinguished presence.

The Provincial Grand Master having taken the chair, proceeded to open Grand Lodge according to ancient custom.

In commencing the business of the lodge, the Worshipful Provincial Grand Master spoke very feelingly of his predecessor. He said that this meeting was called for the express purpose, as they were aware, of bearing testimony to the worth with which both he and Bro. E. J. Morris, the late Deputy Prov. G.M., were held. The lodge, he added, had been called at the earliest possible moment, and he assured the brethren that both the resolutions had his entire concurrence.

Bro. E. S. Hill, of Cardiff, P.P.G.W., then moved:—"That the brethren of the Province of South Wales, Eastern Division, with grateful recollection of the very eminent services rendered to Masonry by the late R.W. Bro. Theodore Mansel Talbot during the eleven years he held the distinguished office of Provincial Grand Master—an office the duties of which he performed with untiring zeal, with dignity worthy of the Craft, and with urbanity endearing him to the brethren—desire formally to record their high appreciation of his services, and their profound regret at the irreparable loss they have sustained by his early death." He said that all who had been acquainted with the late P.G.M. would cordially support the resolution, for they would be aware of the generous nature, the kindly spirit, and the devotion to Masonry which animated him. Bro. Hill spoke at great length upon the social and public qualities of the late Bro. Talbot, and was frequently applauded.

Bro. Dr. J. G. Hall, of Swansea, seconded the resolution in a speech of great power, dealing principally with the subject from a Masonic point of view. Dr. Hall said he had accompanied the late Bro. T. Mansel Talbot in his visits to the various lodges of the Province, and could bear testimony to the rare knowledge which he possessed of the mysteries of the Craft, and to the loving care which he devoted to every detail relating to Masonic subjects which came under his notice. This, said the speaker, was a matter with which all the brethren were well acquainted, for the late P.G.M. by his communications with the various lodges was well known to all of them. This portion of the speech made a deep impression, and at its conclusion there was a warm outburst of applause.

The P.G.M. having, in a few well-chosen words, put the resolution to the meeting, it was carried with the greatest unanimity.

Bro. Charles Bath, P.P.G.W., then moved, "That this Provincial Grand Lodge desires to record its grateful acknowledgments of the eminent services rendered to the Province by the W. Bro. Edward James Morris, Junior Grand Deacon of England, during the long period he filled the office of Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and to which the present high position held by the Province is due, and its regret at the loss which the Province has sustained through his withdrawal from active Masonic life." Having given an outline of Bro. Morris's career, he spoke kindly of him as a man, as well as a Mason. When Bro. Morris took office, the Masonic charities were in a very low state; but, by his efforts, the Grand Lodge of the Province had become one of the most liberal contributors of all the Provincial Grand Lodges in the kingdom. He had also improved the condition of the lodges, which from having been few in number, sparsely attended, and inefficient in their working, were now increased in numbers, and well attended, while the work was admirably performed.

These statements were earnestly applauded.

Bro. Bassett, P.P.G.W., seconded the resolution.

The Worshipful Master, in putting it to the meeting, regretted that he had been unable to induce Bro. Morris to continue to hold the rank. He was sorry that he was not personally acquainted with one who was well spoken of by every Mason in the province.

The resolution was then carried unanimously.

Bro. E. S. Hill moved, and it was resolved, that a copy of the first resolution should be sent to Mr. C. R. M. Talbot, Lord-Lieutenant of the county, and a copy of the second to Bro. E. J. Morris.

There being no other business, the Right Worshipful Grand Master closed the Grand Lodge, after which Bro. D. Watson, W.M. of the Glamorgan Lodge, closed the Master Masons' Lodge. The brethren then proceeded to the Royal Hotel, where a banquet was provided, presided over by Worshipful Grand Master Sir George Elliot. The usual toasts were given, and several songs were sung by Bros. E. W. Shackell, F. Baker, and D. R. David, of Margam. Bro. F. Atkins accompanied on the pianoforte.

The Duke of Connaught is staying for a week with the Knight of Kerry on his island of Valentia, on the west coast of Ireland.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF LANARKSHIRE.

On Friday, the 24th ult., the installation of Bro. John Clark Forrest, of Auchinraith, Provost of Hamilton, as Provincial Grand Master of the Middle Ward of Lanarkshire, and of other office-bearers of the P.G. Lodge, took place in the Town Hall, Hamilton.

The occasion was made a gala day by the "brethren of the mystic tie" in the province, there being present, in more or less force, deputations from Lodges Hamilton St. John's Kilwinning, No. 7; St. Mary's, Wishaw No. 31; Montrose, New Monkland, No. 88; Royal Arch, Cambuslang, No. 114; Royal Arch, Rutherglen, No. 116; Airdrie St. John's, No. 166; St. James, Old Monkland, No. 177; Airdrie St. John's Operative, No. 203; St. Andrew, Strathaven, No. 215; St. Andrew, Hamilton, No. 233; St. John, Woodhall, No. 305; St. Thomas, Larkhall, No. 306; St. John, Dalzell, No. 406; St. Clair, Cambusethan, No. 427; Clydesdale, Larkhall, No. 551; High Blantyre, Kilwinning, No. 557; Livingstone, St. Andrew, Motherwell, No. 573; St. Bryde, Uddingston, No. 579; Livingstone, Blantyre, Stonefield, No. 599.

By permission of His Grace the Duke of Hamilton, the various lodges were permitted to muster in front of Hamilton Palace, which they did shortly after 2 p.m., and were then and there arranged in order of procession by Bro. William Forrest, P. G. Marshall, and his assistants, Bros. Robert Thomson and William Somerville.

When all was in readiness, the procession, which included various instrumental bands, started from the policies, en route for the Town Hall, by way of the Almaden-street Gate, Cadzow-street, Townhead-street, Patrick-street, and Duke-street.

We need hardly say that the inhabitants, young and old, turned out in force to witness the display; and, very fortunately, although during the forenoon, and indeed almost up to the hour of assembling, the weather had been more than threatening, the procession throughout was made under the auspices of sunshine and clear sky. The steeple over the Town Hall, and other "coigns of vantage," were decorated with flags, while the bells of the former were kept tolling for half-an-hour or so previous to the arrival thereof of the brethren, and the town may be said, in fact, to have been "all agog."

Shortly before 4 p.m. the Grand Lodge was opened in the Town Hall by Bro. Henry Inglis, of Torrance, R.W. Depute Grand Master Mason of Scotland; Bros. William Mann, P.S. Grand Warden, and F. A. Barrow, Past P.D.G.M. Glasgow, being acting Senior Grand Deacon and Junior Grand Deacon respectively. Amongst the brethren on the dais were Bros. Hay, Grand Jeweller; D. Robertson, Grand Bible-Bearer; D. Murray Lyon, Grand Secretary; D. Kinnear, Grand Cashier; D. M. Nelson, Grand Senior Deacon; J. C. Forrest, P.G.M. of Lanarkshire, Middle Ward, elect, and his office-bearers—A. G. Simpson, of Carfin, D.M.; James Mackie, S.M.; Colin Spalding, S.W.; L. Johnstone, J.W.; Wm. M'Murdo, Secretary; King, Treasurer; Gilchrist, S.D.; Neilson, Dir. of Ceremonies; J. Andrew, Sen. Steward; and D. Wright, Inner Guard; as also Bros. W. H. Bickerton, P.G. Sec. of Glasgow; Robert Robb, P.G. Marshal Glasgow; Robert Jack, R.W.M. Lodge St. John, Shettleston, No. 128; John Monro, R.W.M. Lodge Commercial, No. 360; John Scott, P.M. Lodge St. Mungo, No. 27; Thos. Halkett, P.M. Lodge St. Mark, No. 102; Alexander Bain, P.M. Lodge Union and Crown, No. 103, and others.

The lodge having been opened, Bro. Rev. R. Dickson, G.C., asked a blessing on the proceedings of the day, after which the R.W. Depute Grand Master asked Bro. Forrest to stand up, and said that he (Bro. Forrest) having been elected by the P.G. Lodge of the Middle Ward of Lanarkshire to be their Master, he (Bro. Inglis) should have much pleasure in now formally installing him into that office. Bro. Forrest accordingly stood up, and took the oath de fide in the usual manner, and was invested with the jewel of his office by the R.W.D.G.M.

Immediately thereafter the following of his office-bearers were similarly installed and invested with their respective jewels, viz.:—Bros. A. G. Simpson, D.P.G.M.; J. Mackie, Sub. P.G.M.; Spalding, P.G.S.W.; Johnson, P.G.J.W.; and M'Murdo, Sec.

The Chairman then, after a few remarks of congratulation, called upon the brethren of the province to give three cheers for their new P.G. office-bearers, which were awarded with a will, after which thanksgiving was offered up by the P.G.C.

The lodge was then called for a brief space to refreshment, when the toast of "The Queen and the Craft," and that of "The Prince of Wales and other members of the Royal Family," were given from the chair and duly honoured. That of "The Three Grand Lodges" was proposed by Bro. D. M. Nelson, and acknowledged by the Chairman on behalf of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. "The Provincial Grand Lodges of Glasgow and Upper Ward of Lanarkshire" was commended to the acceptance of the brethren by Bro. A. G. Simpson, and, in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Colonel Montgomerie Neilson, P.G. Master of Glasgow, was acknowledged by Bro. John Monro, R.W.M. No. 360.

The remaining toast on the programme, that of "The Provincial Grand Lodge of Lanarkshire Middle Ward," was given by the Chairman, who, in coupling with it the name of Bro. Forrest, said that under no circumstances could the brethren of the province have elected as their chief a more worthy man than they had done. The compliment was duly acknowledged by Bro. Forrest, who, in conclusion, proposed "The Health of their esteemed Chairman, the Deputy Grand Master of Scotland." Bro. Inglis having replied, the lodge was recalled to labour, and closed in due form.

AFTER AN ADVERSE BALLOT—
WHAT?

That the ballot upon the application of a candidate for the degrees in Masonry must be secret, and that it must result in an unanimous approval of the petitioner, in order to give him admission, is an unquestioned law of our Institution. In the common usage of the Craft, and in the general regulations, expressly laid down, or implied, respecting the ballot, it is provided that all the members of a lodge, present at a meeting regularly called to act upon the application of a candidate, shall vote unless excused for some special reason by action of the lodge. This requirement that all shall exercise the privilege of the ballot is essential to the maintenance of its secrecy; for, if any other usage were to prevail, it would be easy to put a mark upon the brother who might cast an adverse vote. Thus in a certain Masonic organisation, not long ago, when the ballot was to be repeated, it having been found at the first trial, the presiding officer declared that "friends of the candidate" were excused from voting, and then voting himself with one or two of his officers, he announced the ballot as clear and the candidate elected. In this case there was some strong provocation for the course pursued, and there was no intention of wrong doing, nevertheless such a course could not stand, and the ballot was set aside by the proper authority.

The intention of Masonry is that the conscience and judgment of each individual member shall be regarded as paramount in this matter of the ballot, and that no brother shall be called to account, or be made to suffer in any way, by reason of his having cast this reverse vote. This being the case, there does not seem to be any justification for the course sometimes taken after an adverse ballot, when the friends of a rejected candidate seem determined to discuss the action on its merits, and to ascertain if possible from whom came the opposing vote or votes. Many years ago, Past Grand Master Drummond, of Maine, expressed what seems to us the only proper view to be taken. He said: "It is a Masonic crime to discuss the result of the ballot in the lodge or out of the lodge. When the result of the ballot is declared, there should be an end of all discussion and all action until a new petition is presented. To borrow a term, it should be a finality. Such was the practice among the fathers. But now the practice is as soon as a negative ballot is declared, the friends of the candidate begin to consider who the objector was. They discuss the matter with themselves, if not with others. All the acts of the suspected brother are canvassed. They see a deep meaning in the most common acts. 'Trifles light as air' are to them 'confirmation strong as proofs of holy writ.' Sinister motives are not unfrequently attributed to him. They feel estranged from him at once."

Such ought not to be the result of an adverse ballot. In passing upon the application for degrees or membership each member has the right to exercise his own judgment in the use of the ballot. More than this, it is his sacred duty to exercise the privilege—to vote independently and conscientiously. To enable him thus to act, the manner of taking the ballot should be absolutely secret, and when the result is arrived at, it should be accepted without fault-finding, or reflections upon the brother or brothers who presumably voted in the negative. Any other course will be very likely to bring in discussions and heart-burnings, to create parties, and lead to practices subversive of the true character of the Masonic institution.

But what shall be done where it is known and felt by almost the entire membership of a lodge that two or three brethren, perhaps only a single member, acted from some unworthy motive in causing the rejection of a candidate? Is there no way of reaching these base, cowardly ones who are Masons only in name? Can they not be held accountable; the reasons for their course be inquired into and passed upon by the lodge, and they be summarily dealt with, if it shall be shown that they have abused the privilege of the ballot? By no means, only provided that such brethren are wise enough to keep their own lips closed.

If in open lodge, or elsewhere, they should boast of an adverse vote that they had cast, declaring that their action had been predicated on some reason that ought not to come into the account at all, then no doubt they might be dealt with for unmasonic conduct. But the rule laid down always prevails, viz: Every brother must be protected in the right to vote, that vote to be given without the knowledge of any other person; the nature of that vote must not be inquired into by the lodge, or by individual brethren outside the lodge; nor must he be called to account for his adverse vote on any surmises or suspicions that he may have abused the use of the ballot. This was the law laid down by the fathers of our institution, and it cannot be departed from without grievous risk. Under some circumstances adherence thereto may seem to work badly, and to be in opposition to the equities of a particular case; but in the long run such a course will be found to justify itself and to be promotive of the harmony, good fellowship, and abundant prosperity of the institution.—Freemason's Repository.

THE TUNBRIDGE WELLS COACH HORSES.

—Thirty-eight of the horses which have worked this coach in and out of London were sold on Tuesday, at Tattersall's, by auction. Several were old hunters, of good blood, and realised high prices.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—A lady, long a martyr to dyspeptic troubles, writes that Holloway's Pills made her feel as if a burden had been taken off her. Her spirits, formerly low, have greatly improved; her capricious appetite has given place to healthy hunger; her dull, sick headache has departed, and gradually so marvellous a change has been effected, that she is altogether a new creature, and again fit for duties. These Pills may be administered with safety to the most delicate. They never act harshly, nor do they ever induce weakness; they rightly direct deranged, and contro excessive action.—Advt.

PRESENTATION TO A LIVERPOOL
BROTHER.

A ceremony of a most interesting nature took place at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on the evening of Friday week. There was then a large gathering of brethren for the special purpose of presenting to Bro. Joseph Skeaf, P.M. 216, P.G. Organist West Lancashire, a testimonial in recognition of his long, valued, and willingly given services in his musical capacity. Bro. Skeaf, whose talent has long been acknowledged, has for years not only been indefatigable in the performance of his duties as P.G.O., but he has also been a most invaluable assistant at many of the private lodges throughout the province.

The testimonial consisted of a handsome clock and two vases of the value of £20, and a purse containing £180. Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec., occupied the chair. The testimonial was provided by means of funds raised at a Masonic concert which was held at the Philharmonic Hall some time ago. Bro. Dr. Smith, P.P.G.R., the treasurer of the fund, having presented a statement of the results of the concert, it was passed, after which Bro. Alpass made the presentation of the testimonial to Bro. Skeaf. Upon the clock was this inscription: "Presented to Bro. Skeaf, Provincial Grand Organist, with 180 sovereigns, by his Masonic brethren in the province of West Lancashire, as a mark of their esteem and in recognition of his services to the Craft. Liverpool, 1877."

Bro. Alpass said that Bro. Skeaf had devoted a great amount of time to the affairs of the Craft, and to a man in his position time was capital. In all his various offices as a member of the Harmonic Lodge, Bro. Skeaf had fulfilled his duties in a most creditable manner, and in every way had shown ability and diligence. The articles selected for the testimonial had given general satisfaction to the committee, and he hoped that they would also give satisfaction to Bro. Skeaf and to Mrs. Skeaf, and that he and his friends would live many years to read with pleasure the inscription upon the clock.

Bro. Skeaf, in returning thanks, said that it was an overpowering sight to him when he witnessed the large number of persons who assembled in the Philharmonic Hall on the evening when the concert was held. The presentation of the beautiful clock and vases and the handsome sum of money was indeed a matter of great gratification to him, and he hoped that if his past services had rendered him worthy of such a testimonial that his future services would not be less zealous on behalf of the Craft.

Votes of thanks were passed to Bro. Dr. Smith, the Treasurer, and Bros. R. Brown, P.M. 241, and Dr. S. Kisch, 216, the Hon. Secretaries to the testimonial committee.

THE BRITISH INNKEEPER.

A friendly word with the British hotel-keeper. I pay your bill, my dear sir, without a murmur; perhaps because my feelings at that moment are often too deep for utterance. Your ideas and mine as to what constitutes a good meal may possibly differ. 'Am and eggs for breakfast, with a fried sole, are all very well for once in a way, but are apt to become monotonous after a while. So are the early village cock, the "nice steak," the apple-tart with the elastic crust, and your other choice delicacies. Moreover, I prefer my sound and honest Bordeaux at two shillings a bottle to that barefaced impostor you uphold, the "very fine" Château-Margaux at twelve-and-six. But these are mere details. Here is my grievance. In that admirable document, my bill, you charge eighteenpence per head a day for "attendance." I will only pause to remark that the 'attendance is generally all on my side, as, ring I never so assiduously, it is seldom that any one comes. I do not venture to assert that a baby in arms is liable to this tax; but this I know, that if I occupy rooms containing my wife, self, and two children, I am charged six shillings a day for services which they never receive. Again, I do not remonstrate with you, good mine host; I merely congratulate you inwardly on the superior financial advantages you possess over me. Therefore be kind enough to do away with that system of "hovering" which you, tacitly at least, encourage. Having eased my mind by paying your bill on the morning of my departure, and stifled my conscience, which whispers extravagance, I observe the head-waiter smirking at me in the coffee-room while he pretends to fold up a napkin which no one will want till dinner-time. I give him—nothing; why should I? But I feel a wretched calf. In the passage I meet the Boots, who wears on his countenance an expression which, being translated, plainly says, "I gave them 'ere boots of yours a hextra polish, but I know it's charged in the bill, if you mean to take a base advantage of me." I do take that advantage of him. Like a guilty being I am about to jump into the fly, when I find I have left my keys up-stairs. Ah! then, indeed, I reach the meridian of my misery. I am at once face to face with the chambermaid. I may wrong her, or she may or may not have been wronged in early youth, but from the abject sorrow depicted on her countenance, and the imploring reluctance with which her hand is now thrust forward and now drawn back, she ought, if she is not lost to all sense of decency, to have thirteen children at least depending upon her for support. What is a florin, after all? I give it her in despair, am unjust to Boots and waiter, and, what is worse, I have created a precedent by which after-comers, who have more moral courage than I, will suffer. Be pleased, then, worthy Boniface, to put down these "hoverers," and spare your guests much sweet sorrow at parting. It is easily done. Pay your servants well, and put up a notice that any one receiving a gratuity will be instantly dismissed. I have spoken.—The World.

NOTES ON ART, &amp;c.

By the death of Mr. Henry Rogers, on August 20, in his 71st year, the literary world is deprived of the services of a vigorous and learned essayist. Educated at High-bury College for the work of the ministry, he was for a few years the pastor of an Independent congregation. When ill-health compelled his retirement he obtained the more congenial post of Professor of English Language and Literature in University College, London. In 1858 he became Principal of the Lancashire Independent College. When the doctrines of the Tractarians were exercising their greatest influence in English life he was distinguished for the force of his attacks against their aims and ultimate results. "The Eclipse of Faith" has passed through at least fourteen editions, and a defence of its principles, in reply to the strictures of Professor F. W. Newman, arrived at the dignity of three editions. The most valuable of his contributions to general literature were given to the world in the columns of the Edinburgh Review. These have been frequently reprinted; the last edition appearing in 1874. A sketch of the life and genius of Fuller, an admirable specimen of his taste and talents, was included in the volumes of the "Traveller's Library," while his life of Howe, a divine of equal honesty, if not of equal wit, with Tom Fuller, obtained a well-deserved popularity. To the eighth edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica" he contributed the lives of Bishop Butler, Hume, and many other English and foreign celebrities of the last century. These have never been separately published in England, but some of them were reprinted in America in a collection of "New Biographies" (Boston, 1857).—Academy.

Colonel Bourne, M.P. for Evesham, has presented a piece of sculpture, executed by Professor Fedi, of Florence, to the Walker Art Gallery at Liverpool. The picture by Sir John Gilbert, R.A., "An Army on the March—the Rearguard with the Baggage Waggons," has been presented to the same institution by a local gentleman, Mr. John Parrington.

The case of l'homme à la fourchette, upon whom Dr. Léon Labbé performed gastrostomy with at least temporary success a few months ago, is brought to mind by an instance of swallowing foreign bodies recorded in a recent number of the Southern Argus (S.A.). A convict in the Gundagai Gaol, undergoing a term of imprisonment for stealing a ring, used to gain a living by travelling from town to town by giving performances in which he offered to swallow any article his audience might select. The ring for the stealing of which he had been convicted he had swallowed, and he asserted he could swallow a bagful if he got them. The prisoner at present is being treated by Dr. McKillop, visiting surgeon to the gaol, with a view of making him disgorge a steel Albert chain and a large brass ring. The chain can be distinctly felt at the bottom of the stomach, and the patient says he swallowed it nine months ago, and that it is the only article he has had any difficulty about. He avers that he has had two pounds weight of jewellery in his stomach at one time, and that he has harboured watches in that viscus for 24 hours. The gaoler is said to have a collection of Albert chains, penknives, brass rings, &c., which he asserted he had succeeded in causing the prisoner to vomit by means of emetics. This case, if correctly reported, presents features worthy of being studied from a physiological point of view.—Lancet.

"PEINE FORTE ET DURE."—W. W. T. writes to the Times:—"In your review of the work by Mr. Paterson, 'Commentaries on the Liberty of the Subject,' &c., allusion is made to the fact that so late as 1726 a gentleman underwent the 'peine forte et dure' for refusing to plead guilty or not guilty at Kingston Assizes. The 'London Magazine' for August, 1735, contains a horrible and detailed account of a man who was actually pressed to death at Horsham for obstinately remaining dumb when placed upon his trial at Lewes Assizes. In this case the weights placed over the unhappy man were gradually increased to a total of 350lb., when the executioner completed his task by adding his own quota of 16 stone."

The Grosvenor Gallery will be opened in November with a representative exhibition of water colour drawings and studies by deceased masters illustrative of the rise and growth of a branch of art which holds such a distinguished place in the history of the English school.

A University is to be established in Siberia, at Omak, on the River Irish, the centre of government for Western Siberia. The scheme was first started by a landowner in 1863, and the chief difficulty has been the choice of a site, the place first proposed—Tomsk—being objected to as it was a penal settlement. The buildings are to be begun at once, and are to be opened in July, 1880.

MADAME ADELINA PATTI.—The report that Madame Patti has retired, or intends retiring, to the Convent of the "Sacré Cœur," with the purpose of "taking the veil," is, like so many other reports about this celebrated artist, what the French term a canard, and the English a "hoax."

An Albert Hall is to be built at Jeypore in commemoration of the Prince of Wales's visit, and the designs have just been submitted to the Maharajah.

The disagreeables of travelling in Italy have recently been a warm subject of discussion, but even Italian authorities are marching with the advance of time, according to a correspondent of the Paris Figaro, who has been astonished by having to pay nothing for his letters at the Poste Restante at Rimini. A few years ago he applied for a letter at the same office, and was met by a demand for "Quaranta soldi." "Forty soldi for a letter from Naples?" he exclaimed. "Nonsense; I will give you four." "Twenty, then," replied the post-mistress, with a beguiling smile. "No; four," was still the answer. "Ten," then demanded the siren, who, however, ultimately handed over the missive for the sum originally offered with a sigh, remarking, "Ah, indeed, times are bad nowadays."

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

STOCKPORT.—St. John's Lodge (No. 104).—At the regular monthly meeting of this lodge, which was held on Monday, September 10th, at the lodge rooms, Ashton House, Greek-street, Stockport, the W.M., Bro. Walter Schofield, was supported in full complement, viz.: Bros. J. Kirk, S.W.; W. Harrison, J.W.; W. W. Sheldermine, Treas.; T. Bullock, Sec.; J. Swindells, S.D.; G. Platts, J.D.; W. Booth, D.C.; H. Collier, Organist; G. T. Barrow, I.G.; G. Rodgers and T. B. Birch, Stewds.; also by Past Masters J. Beresford, P.P.S.G.D.; W. Sykes, and H. Finch; and a good muster of members. The visiting brethren included Bros. J. C. Chetham, P.M. 322, P.P.G.S.B.; T. Wilkinson, W.M. 1126; G. A. Robinson, I.P.M. 1126; Captain Ballantine, I.G. 1126; Renshaw, 322; Strangeways, S.D. 111; McKinley, 424; Whiteley, 1077; and Edmondson, 322. Lodge was opened punctually at five o'clock, and after the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for two initiates, with a favourable result. At five-thirty the W.M. called the lodge off for tea, after discussing which the brethren resumed labour. There were five candidates for initiation on the agenda, who had been balloted for and approved at previous meetings. Four of these were in attendance, and were duly admitted to the light of Masonry, viz., Mr. W. Bradley, and Mr. J. H. Beattfield by the W.M.; Mr. A. A. Williams by Bro. H. Finch, I.P.M.; and Mr. T. Axon by Bro. Beresford, P.M., P.P.S.G.D. About nine o'clock the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the festive board, the proceedings at which were made more than usually agreeable by the excellent harmony that was discoursed. The St. John's Lodge, 104, is fortunate in numbering among its members several brethren of acknowledged musical ability, and the vocal efforts of the lodge choir, supplemented on this occasion by visiting Bros. Edmondson and Wilkinson, of special renown, were of a very entertaining and enlivening character, and the result was a musical treat, such as one rarely hears at a Masonic Meeting. Song, and glee, and toast (in the course of which the W.M. and his officers were highly complimented on the efficiency of their working) followed each other in quick succession until the Tyler's toast was called for, and the brethren separated with the feeling that this was one of the pleasantest meetings ever held in connection with this ancient lodge. The annual picnic was held on the previous Thursday, Sept. 6th, when a merry party of members and their ladies assembled at the Nelson Hotel, Stockport, and being favoured with a bright, if not sunny day, proceeded by omnibus through a beautiful tract of country in Mid-Cheshire to Hoo Green, near Knutsford, a well-known and favourite resort for picnic parties. At the "George and Dragon," Cheadle, a halt was made, and the worthy proprietor of the hotel (Bro. W. S. Booth, who is a member of Lodge 104), and his lady joined the party. Passing through Gatley, Temperley, and Altrincham, and the picturesque Dunham Park, the party next alighted at the Nag's Head, an old-fashioned and cosy roadside inn, just beyond Bowdon, where the ladies busied themselves in providing an al fresco luncheon, to which ample justice was done. The bus then made a detour to Tabley Park, which, by gracious permission of the R.W.P.G. Master (previously arranged), was thrown open to the party. The interesting old hall and chapel, the lake and island, the park and gardens, all received due "attention." The quaint little chapel especially, so picturesquely situated, with its unmistakable air of antiquity, its beautiful stained-glass windows—the work, as a brass tablet records, of the present Lord de Tabley's own daughters—was an object of particular interest, and the party lingered here for some time. Here the musical brethren were called into requisition, and the lodge choir sang two pieces, "O Sanctissima," and the hymn, "Days and moments quickly flying," from Hymns, Ancient and Modern, with a thrilling effect, after which the whole party joined in the well-known hymn to the tune of St. Anne, "O God, our help in ages past," Bro. Collier presiding at the organ. On leaving Tabley a short drive brought the party to their destination—the Hoo Green Hotel, where "mine host" had an excellent tea in readiness. For two or three hours after tea the brethren and their "better halves" enjoyed themselves after their own bent, some in the ball-room, some on the bowling green, and others in strolling through the fields. Shortly after seven o'clock the signal was given for returning, and after a call at Bro. Harvey's (P.M. 1045), the Unicorn, Altrincham, and at Bro. Booth's, Cheadle, where Bro. Past Master Bidder, with his felicitous eloquence, proposed a vote of thanks to "the ladies," the party arrived in Stockport about half-past ten, well pleased with the day's outing.

BRIXHAM.—True Love and Unity Lodge (No. 248).—The monthly meeting of this lodge, held on the 5th September, at the Masonic Hall, Bolton-street, was well attended. Bros. William Brown, W.M.; Jas. Hanwick, S.W.; Samuel Woolley, J.W.; Henry Cowell, S.D.; and G. C. Searle, J.D., were all in their places, and there were also present several Past Masters and others. The lodge was opened in the First Degree at 6.30 p.m. prompt. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and Bros. Gillard and Barter having answered the questions leading to the Third Degree, they were entrusted. The lodge was opened in the Third Degree, the candidates admitted, properly prepared, and raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason, according to the ancient custom and usages of the Order, the charges being most impressively delivered by Bros. G. T. Barry, P.M., Prov. G. Purst; and Jas. Hanwick, S.W., and the working tools by Bro. C. Gregory. The ceremony was gone through in a most business-like and impressive manner by the W.M., assisted by W. Bro. S. B. Colston, P.M., P.P.G.S.Wks. The lodge was then closed in the Third and Second Degrees. The business of the evening was continued by the Secretary reading the Grand Lodge report. Bro. Woolley, J.W., then brought forward his motion (of which notice had been given at the last meeting), "That he should call attention as to the desirability of having a new lodge." The worthy brother enlarged on the great disadvantages under which the brethren at present labour, and the comforts they lack, when compared with other lodges, not forgetting also to place before them the lofty advantages which would accrue by the erection of such an edifice. Bro. Woolley concluded his earnest appeal by proposing "That we have a new lodge, and that a committee be at once appointed to solicit subscriptions to carry out the same." Bro. Hanwick, S.W., said it gave him great pleasure to support the proposition, and felt confident that success would crown their efforts, and promised to collect a goodly sum. Bro. Colston, P.M., P.P.G.S. of Wks., in seconding the motion, spoke of the lodge (which now reaches its 96th year) as in a dilapidated condition and needed renewal, at the same time promising all the support possible. On the motion being put to the meeting it was carried nem. con. The committee consist of the W.M., Bro. Brown, Bros. Colston, Hanwick, Woolley, Barry, Barter, and Crauford, with power to add to their number. It was then proposed by Bro. Searle, J.D., and seconded by the W.M., that Bro. Barry, P.M., and Treasurer of the lodge, be congratulated on being invested with the collar of Prov. Grand Purs. (at the last Provincial meeting at Devonport), and that he be saluted with three, which was heartily responded to. The Secretary gave notice that the fortnightly meetings would commence this month, according to former resolution. All business being ended, the lodge was closed in due harmony and accord.

CROYDON.—East Surrey Lodge of Concord (No. 463).—The first meeting after the recess was held at the Greyhound Hotel, Croydon, on the 6th inst., the W.M. (Bro. W. Sharp) being supported by all his officers and the members of his lodge to the number of over 40. The ballot was taken for four gentlemen, of whom two were in attendance, and duly initiated into the mysteries of the First Degree. Those for passing not being present, the Third Degree was conferred upon Bro. Silvester in a manner that he cannot easily forget. The W.M. upon rising for the first time in a few well chosen remarks proposed a vote of £10 10s. from the lodge funds for the fund now being raised for the dreadful famine in India, which was voted unanimously, the brethren feeling that they could not do better than instantly follow (to the utmost of their power) the good example of the Grand Lodge on the previous night. The petition of a widow of a brother who was one of the founders of this lodge, to become an annuitant having been signed in open lodge, the lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to banquet, and the evening was spent in harmony in more senses than one, and all left with the regret that time waits for no brother.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge (No. 1002).—The ordinary monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 4th inst., the brethren meeting for the first time in their new rooms, Station-street. Originally it had been intended to consecrate the premises on the occasion of the Provincial Grand Festival, (28th inst.), but the Grand Secretary, on being communicated with, decided the ceremony of consecration and dedication was unnecessary, and Bros. W. Taylor and W. Shilton were accordingly directed to proceed with the decoration and furnishing at once, so as to hold the regular meeting in September, the lodge having stood adjourned from July. Although the building is necessarily in an incomplete condition at present, every portion of the furniture and decorations have been so well utilised and fitted into their proper positions that, when thoroughly finished, which cannot be till the walls are well dried, the lodge room, of itself for chasteness, ornamentation, and orthodox arrangement of appointments, will be a credit to the province, and to the decorative skill of the two brothers named above. Those present on Tuesday evening, the 4th inst., were Bros. W. Taylor, W.M. (in the chair); W. Shilton, P.M., as S.W.; Jas. Black, as J.W.; R. Robinson, P.M., Treas.; W. F. Lamony, P.M.

and Sec. (Freemason); W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Organist; Dr. Dodgson, P.M.; Tom Bird, S.D.; C. Gibson, I.G.; W. M. Quhae, Steward; W. Potts, Tyler; Stephen Thwaite, T. C. Robinson, H. Peacock and W. Rule. After the minutes of the last ordinary, emergency, and committee meetings had been read and confirmed, Bro. Rule was presented with his Grand Lodge certificate. The lodge then resolved itself into a committee of the whole, in order to arrange details for the approaching Provincial Grand Festival. It was decided to hold a lodge of emergency on Monday evening, the 24th inst., for the purpose of passing Bro. the Rev. Canon Hoskins, M.A. The lodge was then closed in form.

GREENWICH.—Star Lodge (No. 1275).—The installation of the above lodge was held on Friday, September 7th, at the Ship Hotel. Bro. H. L. Green, W.M., raised three to the Third Degree, completing his year of office by installing Captain R. W. Williams, S.W., and W.M. elect, as W.M., for which he received a vote of thanks. His work being (as described by the two veteran Masons, the Treasurer and Secretary) perfect. He afterwards had a Past Master's jewel given to him of the value of ten guineas, part subscribed from lodge funds, the remainder, about one half, by a few of his friends who belong to the lodge. The newly installed Master soon proved his proficiency by the superior manner he initiated a gentleman into the mysteries of the Order. He showed himself to be the right man in the right place. Some propositions were received for initiations. The lodge was closed and adjourned to Friday, December 7th. The usual good banquet followed and a happy evening was agreeably spent. The officers for the ensuing year are Bros. C. M. Williams, S.W.; M. Kipps, J.W.; J. Smith, P.G.P., P.M. Treasurer; F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middlx.; Sergeant-Major W. E. Williams, P.M.; E. W. Chetwynd, J.D.; A. Tisley, I.G.; S. Markettis, D.C.; F. S. Seaper, W.S.; Rev. J. Collis, Chaplain; E. Mann, Organist; G. S. Elliott, Assist. Sec.; J. Gilbert, Tyler. Five Masters were present Bros. W. Ough, P.G.P.; C. F. Hogg, P.G.P.; H. Keeble, T. J. Limebeer, and H. T. Green, besides some twenty other members. There were a large number of visitors—Bros. Rev. P.M. Holden, P.P.G., C. Middlx.; M. Clarke, Butler, Dennis, and others whose names we could not ascertain.

MANCHESTER.—Lodge of Truth (No. 1458).—This lodge having adjourned during the months of July and August, assembled at their private rooms, Newton Heath, on Saturday, September 1st, and lodge was opened at 4 p.m. by the W.M., Bro. James Batchelder. The minutes of the June meeting were then read and confirmed, after which the brethren proceeded to ballot for two candidates for initiation, who had been proposed by letter during the vacation. In each case the ballot was unanimous in their favour—the gentlemen, however, were unable to present themselves for initiation; but, all being well, intend doing so at the October meeting. Two other candidates were proposed for initiation, one by the W.M. the other by the J.W. Providing, therefore, that investigation is of a satisfactory nature, and the ballot unanimous, the October assembly will produce quite an array of initiates; may they prove men of the right sort—"Brethren good and true." The Secretary informed the lodge that Bro. Barber had signed his certificate during the recess. Certificates were also signed by Bros. Duckworth, Brown, and Smith, and presented to them by the W.M. in open lodge. Attention was drawn by the Secretary to the fact that several brethren were considerably in arrears with their subscription; it was arranged that unless some arrangement was made by the "defaulters" on or before the next lodge meeting, October 6th, that they be then excluded—an intimation to that effect the Secretary received instructions to forward to all in arrears. Since the last meeting of the lodge, Past Master Caldwell, D. of C., has been bereft of his partner in life, the companion of his joys and sorrows. The sleep of death does separate for a season; may the awakening joy again unite them in Grand Lodge on high. A vote of condolence with Bro. Caldwell was proposed by Bro. C. J. Kent, I.P.M., and seconded by Bro. Tyers, and carried unanimously. Instructions having been given for the same to be forwarded to Bro. Caldwell, P.M., the lodge was closed in the usual manner, and the brethren retired to the social board. "Moderation in all things" was there exercised, and the brethren separated at an exemplary hour, 8.30.

WOOLWICH.—Henley Lodge (No. 1472).—The first monthly meeting of the above lodge was held on Tuesday, the 5th inst., at Bro. E. West's, "The Three Crowns," Bro. W. Steele, W.M., in the chair. The other officers present were Bros. W. T. Turner, J.W.; J. Henderson, P.M., and Secretary; N. Stanford, S.D.; J. Plume, J.D.; E. J. Lloyd acting as I.G. most efficiently. Bro. Steadman, P.M. and Tyler, of many other lodges, was present, and was as usual most kind and courteous in the execution of his duties. The Past Masters present were Bros. J. Ives, I.P.M., E. West, and P. Brayshaw. Among the visitors were Bros. Gaskill, P.M. 1076; W. J. Millington, 1382; J. C. Parker, 1327; T. S. Green, 1076; C. Jolly, 19 (Freemason), &c. The lodge having been opened and the minutes and accounts confirmed, Bro. J. Bickerstaff, late of No. 700, was proposed and passed as a joining member. Messrs. J. Perry and Worboys were then balloted for and approved of, but were not present. Bro. Palmer then was passed to the Second Degree, and the lodge duly closed. The brethren and visitors then adjourned to another room, where a cold collation, nicely served, awaited them. Upon re-assembling round the social board the regular loyal Masonic toasts were honoured "in the usual way among Masons," some excellent singing by Bros. J. and A. Plume adding no little charm to the occasion. Altogether it was a most enjoyable gathering.

CLAYTON-LE-MOORS.—Albert Edward Lodge (No. 1519).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, Sept. 3rd at, the Albion Hotel. There was a good attendance, both of brethren and visitors. Bro. John Tennant, the W.M., presided. The officers present were Bros. Levi Wilkinson, S.W.; R. H. Catterall, J.W.; C. Hall, Sec.; Thos Hargreaves, S.D.; Jas. Sharples, J.D.; J. T. Hall, I.G.; T. Hodgkiss, Tyler. Amongst the visiting brethren were Bros. John Brooks, 369; E. Walmsley, 79; John Magereson, 345; J. Walsh, 79; Wm. Walmsley, 79; T. Holland, 126, and 1504, Sec.; A. Balmforth, Ferrers and Ivanhoe, No. 779, Ashby-de-la-Zouche. The lodge having been opened with the usual formalities of the Craft, the minutes of the last regular meeting were read by the Sec., and unanimously confirmed. The lodge was then opened up to the Third Degree, when Bros. George Bray and Thomas Thompson, who had previously given proof of their efficiency by answering the usual questions in open lodge, were raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Masons, Bro. John Tennant, the W.M., in both cases performing the impressive ceremony in a very effective manner. The lodge was then closed down to the Second Degree, when Bro. John Tennant, the W.M., performed the ceremony of passing Bro. John Chatburn to the degree of Fellow Craft, in his usual and impressive style. The lodge was then closed down to the First Degree. There being no other business of importance after receiving from the visiting brethren the "hearty good-wishes" of the lodges which they represented, the lodge was closed according to ancient custom with solemn prayer by the W.M., and the brethren adjourned for refreshment, when the usual Masonic toasts were drunk, and a very pleasant evening was spent. In responding to the toast of the visiting brethren, Bro. Jno. Magereson, from Lodge 345, Blackburn, expressed his great pleasure at meeting with the brethren of Albert Edward Lodge, and especially with the W.M. He had known him a good many years, and since he had become the W.M. of the Albert Edward Lodge he had felt a strong desire to come over and see how he conducted himself in the chair. He was highly pleased with the working of the lodge generally, but he was especially pleased with the able manner the W.M. had gone through the ceremonies. He appeared to be perfectly at home in the work. He was also highly pleased with the hearty manner the visiting brethren had been received, and he gave the brethren of Albert Edward Lodge a hearty invitation to their lodge (345), assuring them whenever they felt disposed to visit their lodge they would receive a hearty welcome.

Royal Arch.

HAMPTON.—Era Chapter (No. 1423).—A convocation of this newly formed chapter was held at "The Island" Hotel, on Saturday, the 8th instant. Amongst those present were Comps. T. J. Sabine, P.Z., P.G.P.S. Middlesex, M.E.Z.; Thielley, H.; Dubois, P.Z., Treasurer; F. Walters, P.P.G.A.S. Middlesex, P.Z., S.E.; Mason, P.Z., S.N.; T. C. Walls, P.S. 185, 1st Assistant S.; Falconer, and Assistant S.; Baldwin, M.E.Z. (Mount Lebanon); W. S. Johnston T. W. Ockenden. The minutes of the July convocation having been read and confirmed, it was reported that through unavoidable circumstances none of the seven brethren whose names were upon the agenda for exaltation could be present that day. There being no other business of moment before the chapter it was closed, and the companions partook of refreshment. There were no speeches. This chapter was formed for a twofold purpose, firstly to give those brethren residing in the locality or being members of the mother lodge an opportunity of belonging to a summer chapter, and secondly to enable companions in town to combine Masonic work with the pleasures of a rural outing. The quiet beauty of this part of the picturesque valley of "Old Thames" is very attractive under favourable circumstances, but the members of the "Era" Chapter this season have had to contend with weather the reverse of genial, which rendered outdoor enjoyment almost impossible. The next meeting will take place on the second Saturday in May next.

MARK MASONRY—ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES.

We are very pleased to notice the friendly and appreciative notice of our Mark Grand Lodge in the excellent Masonic Review, edited by the well-known M.W. Bro. Wheeler, P.G.M. of Tenn., and we believe the anticipations herein stated will be fully realised.

We cannot for a moment believe that the general Grand Chapter of the United States will any longer delay recognition, especially when it is evident that the Supreme Grand R.A. Chapter of England cannot by the "Articles of Union" have sought to do with the Mark Degree. It will then only remain for the Grand Chapter of Scotland to hold out the right hand of fellowship, and we in advance extend our right hand to save time!

GRAND MARK LODGE OF ENGLAND.

The General Grand Chapter of the United States will be called upon at its coming Triennial Convocation to recognise the Grand Mark Master Mason's Lodge of England. The Grand Lodge of England, by the terms of the union of the three Grand Lodges in 1813, "can not recognise any degrees in Masonry save the first three and the Royal Arch. The Grand Chapter of England confers only the Royal Arch; the Mark Degree, not being recognised, is under a separate government. Should the Grand Mark Lodge be recognised by the G.G. Chapter, the Royal Arch Masons of England will probably be allowed to visit chapters within the jurisdiction of the United States. Bro. Drummond, of Maine, has anticipated this question coming before the General Grand Chapter, and in his report to the Grand Chapter of his State has given so much information concerning the Mark Degree as practised in England, and its history, that it will probably aid in the recognition of the Grand Mark Lodge of England by the United States. We hope so, for we believe the influence will then become greater to eliminate from the chapters in this country the Past and Most Excellent Master's Degrees.

OPENING OF THE WALKER ART GALLERY IN LIVERPOOL.

The ceremony in connection with the formal opening of the Art Gallery, presented to the town of Liverpool by Mr. Alderman A. B. Walker, now Mayor for the second time, at a cost of about £30,000, was possibly the most imposing and impressive which has taken place within the memory of the "oldest inhabitant." Lord Derby performed the pleasant task of inauguration, some 10,000 representatives of the various trades "processioned" the town; the inhabitants turned out in hundreds of thousands, and the whole of the day's proceedings were worthy of the munificence of the donor, and the princely gift which will for generations delight and instruct the denizens of the "good old town."

The whole of the vast procession having arrived before the Art Gallery, and Lord Derby, the Mayor, and the guests having taken up their position, the ceremony of formally opening the Walker Art Gallery was proceeded with.

The Mayor presented the key of the building to Alderman Weightman, chairman of the Finance and Estate Committee, on behalf of the Corporation.

Mr. Alderman Weightman acknowledged the gift, and presented an address from the Corporation to the Mayor, which was read by the Town Clerk, and was as follows:—

"To the Worshipful the Mayor of Liverpool, Andrew Barclay Walker, Esq.: We, the Deputy-Mayor, Aldermen, and Councillors of the borough of Liverpool, desire most respectfully, on behalf of the inhabitants, to offer to your Worship our grateful acknowledgment of your noble gift of the Gallery of Art to-day presented to the town. We assure you that your Worship's generosity is warmly appreciated by all classes of the community, and we trust that you may for many years witness the benefits conferred upon your fellow-townsmen by your munificent liberality. Sealed with the corporate seal of the said borough, this 6th day of September, 1877."

A public address and casket were then presented to the Mayor by Lord Derby, on behalf of the subscribers, the address being read by Bro. J. B. Cooper.

The address was as follows:—"To Andrew Barclay Walker, Esq., Mayor of Liverpool. Sir,—It is with no ordinary feelings of gratification that we ask the favour of your acceptance of this address from a very large number of your fellow-townsmen. We present it, and the casket containing it, as a slight memento of the opening of the beautiful Art Gallery which has this day been dedicated to its most elevating uses; and, likewise, as a cordial mark of our high appreciation of your public services, as Mayor of this great community, during a period of two years. By thus munificently providing this splendid edifice for the reception, from time to time of our art treasures, you have not only supplied a long-felt want, indeed a most pressing educational necessity, but, furthermore, you have given a much needed stimulus to art in Liverpool, at a time when so many are earnestly striving to promote the higher as well as the elementary education of our people. We also propose to ourselves the pleasure of placing in the vestibule of what we may venture to term the Walker Art Gallery, as soon as the work can be executed, and with your Worship's approval, a marble statue of its generous donor, so that we, in our time, and those who come after us, may look upon the features of their most liberal friend, the founder of this highly attractive, recreative, and most improving educational resort. We pray that you may long be spared in health and happiness to enjoy all the pleasures of domestic family life, and of the innumerable friendships which have grown up about you, as the natural outcome of your genial and kindly disposition; and also that you may be gratified by witnessing a rapidly growing love of art, in all its varied forms of beauty and instructiveness, as one of the surest and most important agencies in the elevation and refinement of the tastes and habits of all classes of our population. Signed this 6th day of September, 1877, on behalf of the Subscribers. (Signed) Thomas Edwards-Mess, Chairman."

The Mayor replied to the address, and the Earl of Derby then, in a brief speech, declared the building opened.

The large silver-gilt casket bears on its top a splendid model of the Art Gallery, to be repeated in oxidised silver. Around the casket are bas reliefs of "The Triumph of Love"—Fleming Cupids. The Arms of Liverpool in enamel on gold are in the centre panel of the front of the casket, upheld by two silver figures representing Sculpture and Painting. At each corner of the casket are four exquisitely carved ivory figures, on silver pedestals, representing the four quarters of the globe. At the sides are the monograms of the Mayor and Mayoress in enamel on gold. Accompanying the casket is a splendidly bound album in crimson and gilt, with a silver plaque in the centre of cover of "Neptune being driven by sea horses," and medallion typical of wind and water. In this album is contained the address of the subscribers, splendidly illuminated by Mr. J. O. Marples, who also designed the casket and was the originator of the memorial—the scheme being taken up most readily by all, and most ably managed by Bro. J. B. Cooper, who has acted as hon. secretary to the testimonial committee.

A banquet for the grantees, and a display of fireworks for the people, by Mr. Brock, of London, were the evening attractions.

THE LAST QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION.

(FROM THE DAILY CHRONICLE.)

The proposal to alter the title and constitution of the Lodge of Benevolence, of which the readers of the Daily Chronicle were apprised on Saturday week, was virtually withdrawn at Grand Lodge on Wednesday by the voluntary motion on behalf of the Board of General Purposes to postpone the consideration of the subject till December. The brethren will probably never hear of the proposal again, for, although an amendment to this motion was adopted, and the discussion deferred till March next, the Board immediately discovered in what direction the feeling of Freemasons lay on the main question, and it is not likely that they will throw themselves open to the disaster of a crushing defeat. While, however, they saw that there was no hope of their carrying their proposal on a future occasion, they must have seen that the object which the original instigator of the scheme had in view was in a fair way of being attained—to secure from the Lodge of Benevolence such a careful estimate of the claims of applicants for relief, that not even the large annual surplus which remains to the lodge after the liberal satisfaction of all demands shall be an inducement to the brethren to give away one single sovereign in excess of the merits of any individual case.

There is a notion outside the ranks of Freemasons that the Order is a benefit society, and this notion is somewhat confirmed by the reports which appear of large sums of money being given away by Grand Lodge, and by the existence of the three Masonic charitable institutions—the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. Of the two first of these institutions the uninitiated or popular world believe that if a man becomes a Freemason he has a right to have his boys or girls educated there; and, with respect to the latter, they think there is a provision in old age which a Mason, by virtue of his being a member of the Craft, may claim. These conceptions of the nature of the Order are altogether wrong. Freemasonry is not a benefit society, and it may be as well to inform our readers who have not the great honour of belonging to so noble and excellent an institution, that if they enter it they will find it possesses far more of the nature of the leech than the pelican. Freemasonry has been frequently styled a luxury, and it is unquestionable that only men of good and sufficient means should enter into it. The charitable institutions of the Order were afterthoughts. They were never intended as inducements for men to join the Craft, but only to meet the exigencies of such persons as, having been in good circumstances, from calamity or misfortune, might experience a reverse in life. The oldest of these charitable institutions has not been established 100 years, and the youngest is not half a century old. It is only within the last 15 years that large subscription have flowed into their coffers, and it is certainly within that time that Masonry has become the popular institution it now is. With its popularity have come the great demands made upon it, and, as the Grand Secretary pointed out at the consecration of a lodge on Tuesday week, there is too much reason to fear that many men join the Order now, not so much for the benefit which they may render to it as for the benefit which they conceive it may be to them. The institutions are simply and solely charities, however much some members of the Order may object, as they frequently do, to their being so styled. The donations to them are voluntary and it is only on charitable efforts that they depend for their maintenance. Their great success of late years is attributable to the enormous accession to the ranks of Freemasonry, and to the fact that each institution possesses a most energetic Secretary. The grand day of the year with every lodge is the day on which the new Master is installed, and to this great festival almost every lodge deems it its duty to invite the Secretaries of the Masonic Institutions. The toast of "The Masonic Institutions" is always on the list of toasts, and the Secretaries in reply enforce the claims of the institutions. A member of the lodge proposes himself as Steward for one or other of the institutions; the lodge generally heads his list with a good round sum, (for which it receives an equivalent in a certain number of votes at the elections of candidates), and other brethren put down their names for subscriptions, every subscriber receiving votes. In this way £39,600 were subscribed for the three institutions last year, and during the present year, as far as it has gone, more than £40,000 has been collected. Brethren are usually very anxious to become Stewards, although the office entails some expenditure both of time and money, and it is a great ambition with them to carry up a large list. Of course, these lists vary in amount; but the largest amount of any one list was attained at the festival of the Boys' School in June last, when one Steward took up over £1000. Some lodges always send a Steward to one institution in the course of the year, and there are some who send a Steward every year to each institution. So strongly are the claims of charity now felt by the brethren, that it is an ordinary occurrence at the consecration (or first) meeting of a new lodge for a brother to offer himself as a Steward, and this, it must be remembered, is at a time when the lodge itself has no funds out of which to subscribe to the Stewards list, and when it has to meet the large expense of lodge furniture, the cost of its warrant, its opening banquet, and its books. There is, however, but little fear that in the course of the first year it will be able to subscribe something, for a lodge seldom starts unless its promoters have a large circle of friends who are anxious to become Freemasons, and the fees for initiation and the annual subscriptions to the lodge, in addition to paying all expenses, generally leave a sufficient balance for something to be given out of it in the cause of Masonry.

From the above statement, it will be seen that Free masonry is not a benefit society in the ordinary acceptance of the phrase. That it confers benefits is not to be denied, and it has always the claims of the poor and distressed in view, and never inquires as to creed, colour, or clime. As Grand Lodges make munificent donations when the act of God or the ambition of man desolates vast territories, so a provincial Grand Lodge or a Provincial private lodge will subscribe to local charities and hospitals, while not forgetting the Masonic institutions. The nearest approach there is in Masonry to the character of a benefit society is in the Fund of Benevolence, towards which there is a payment out of every initiation fee, and a fixed contribution every year, which lodges have to send to Grand Lodge out of each of the subscribing members' subscriptions. The lodges which are composed principally of Jews have also what they call a Benevolent Fund, but this has nothing to do with Grand Lodge, and is a matter entirely of fraternal arrangement. This Benevolent Fund is only for the use of the members of the particular lodge, and in all cases it has its treasurer, secretary, and committee. If a member of the lodge is in distress, or can be assisted to regain the position in life which adversity has removed him from, his case is laid before the committee, and he receives relief if found worthy. In a community like that of the Jews there is but little fear that the real facts of a case are not known to the committee; but with reference to these Benevolent Funds in the Jewish lodges, this highly honourable trait presents itself, that the name of the applicant for relief, or even his initial, or anything which may lead to his identification, is never known to the members of the lodge who are not on the committee of the fund. Frequently have the applicants not only regained their former position, but also advanced to positions of affluence, and it has not been an uncommon occurrence for the money lent to be returned.

Grand Lodge on Wednesday last, true to its old character, subscribed 1300 guineas for benevolent objects outside the Order. The unanimity with which the grants were made might encourage the proposers of the grants to ask for more on a future occasion if the necessity should arise; but it is to be hoped, not for the sake of Grand Lodge funds, but of suffering humanity, that the horrors of the Indian famine will have passed away before the brethren could reasonably be asked for a further grant. Nevertheless, should occasion require their further assistance, we have no doubt they will remember the moment they were received into Freemasonry, and extend to the people who are in want of charity that never faileth. Grand Lodge was in very good humour when it made the grants on Wednesday. The grants of £210 and £105 were voted instantaneously, the brethren being anxious to have the matter relating to the Lodge of Benevolence out with the Board of General Purposes. The gracefulness of the concession made by the Board with respect to this subject put them in still further good humour, and Mr. Clabon's fear that there would be an amendment to the thousand guineas' proposal was quite uncalled for. Had his scheme for finding funds for enabling the children leaving the schools to begin life been ready, the brethren would, at least, have allowed the principle of the scheme to pass, though the carrying out of the proposal would have been sent to a committee. Presuming that the alteration of the Lodge of Benevolence will not be again brought forward, and looking at the very strong disposition on the part of the brethren to maintain the charities to the utmost, the adoption on a future occasion of Bro. Clabon's well-conceived motion is a foregone conclusion.

THE "APOLLO UNIVERSITY" LODGE, OXFORD.

By BRO. W. J. HUGHAN.
(From the Voice of Masonry.)

One of the most illustrious and distinguished lodges in England is that of the "Apollo University," of Oxford. It was chartered by H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex, M.W.G.M., and bears date December 21st, 1818, as No. 711. By the alteration of the number in 1832 it became 460, and again in 1863 it was raised to 357, at which it still remains. The addition of "University" to its original title of the "Apollo" was agreed to soon after its advent, though its shorter description was noted in the records until 1826. The first Worshipful Master and Wardens (according to the warrant) were respectively John Ireland, George Hitchings, and Sir Charles Macdonald Lockhart, Bart.

Among the old resolutions and bye-laws were the following: "On account of keeping the good-will of the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors, the members of the lodge shall proceed to the meetings in Academics." Fines were levied on brethren who did not come till supper-time, and also on those who did not appear in full dress, or who did not wear white gloves. It was ordered that at each meeting the charity box should be taken round. In 1853 it was proposed that "henceforth no one shall be proposed for this lodge except he be or has been a member of this University," but the Provincial Grand Master refused to confirm it. The restriction has been practically maintained, however, in balloting for candidates.

On August 4th, 1864, the foundation of the University Masonic Hall, especially reserved for the use of this lodge, was laid in Masonic form by Alderman R. J. Spiers, F.S.A., Dep. Prov. G.M., and on February 24th, 1865, the building was solemnly dedicated to the purposes of Freemasonry by Lieut.-Col. H. A. Bowyer, M.A., the then Provincial Grand Master.

On February 19th, 1869, its jubilee was celebrated, and three months later a Royal Arch Chapter was chartered and opened under its wing, with a similar title.

On April 30th, 1872, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., was elected a member of the lodge, and in the following year became its Worshipful Master, with Bro. Reginald Bird as the Deputy Master. On May 1st, 1874,

H.R.H. Prince Leopold was, on the proposition of his brother (the Prince of Wales) elected a member, and was then initiated, subsequently becoming Worshipful Master of the lodge, and Provincial Grand Master of Oxfordshire, in succession to the lamented Bro. Colonel Bowyer, deceased.

We have gleaned these particulars from the interesting preface to the bye-laws of the lodge, edited by Bro. F. P. Morrell, M.A., P.M., etc., and the Rev Bro. H. A. Pickard, M.A., being the fourth edition of the bye-laws from 1858, the issues being as follows, viz., 1858, 1864, 1869 and 1874. The later editions are without exception some of the handsomest and best codes of bye-laws, etc., we have ever seen. The special feature, however, in the little book is the roll of members of the lodge, and which is the special attraction to students of such matter. A hasty glance would almost seem to indicate that the lodge has on its list of members all the distinguished members of the Craft. Of course that is not the fact, but so many of the chief members of the Fraternity in England are connected with the "Apollo University" Lodge as to render it unique in that respect in the annals of the society. The Grand Masters of England and Ireland are enrolled as members in the list of 1874. The Pro Grand Master of England, and the Deputy Grand Masters of England, Scotland and Ireland. Upwards of thirty Provincial Grand Masters either are or have been members, and thirty-three other members of Grand Lodges, either as Grand Wardens or other distinguished positions, and more than three hundred of its members have held office in the Provincial Grand Lodge of Oxfordshire since the year 1857. Three of the Provincial Grand Masters have also been selected by the Grand Masters for the time being from the lodge.

We could not find time to enumerate from this list anything like the number of names we should like of brethren distinguished as Masons, scholars, statesmen, warriors, and in every walk in life requiring talents, character and energy. We trust that the future of this lodge will even surpass its eventful past, and render its centenary most memorable.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGE AT ACTON.

The ordinarily quiet town of Acton was astir on Thursday week, owing to the marriage of Mr. John Howard Walker, eldest son of John Walker, Esq., of the Woodlands, with Miss Mary Annie Roebuck, only child of Bro. William Roebuck, of West Lodge. The weather was at its best, and the occasion excited great interest, both families being well known and highly respected in Acton. Two marquees were erected on the lawn of West Lodge, in one of which the presents were displayed, numbering considerably over 100 and being of the most costly and elegant description. Amongst them we may mention a handsome bronze drawing-room timepiece with candelabra to match, a pair of bronze figures representing Holbein and Chiberti, a set of silver dishes, pair of candelabra richly gilt, liqueur cabinet, a remarkably handsome pair of Chinese vases, 24 inches in height, bust on pedestal, a handsome cabinet of cutlery, with silver forks and spoons, a sofa blanket very choicely worked, magnificent bible and clasped folio album, table cloth from the Caucasus, a massive gold bracelet, old China dinner, afternoon tea, coffee and dessert services, diamond locket (presented by the bridegroom, and worn by the bride at the wedding), silver fish and dessert knives and forks, several marble timepieces and toilet sets. The presents were remarkably pretty and many of them most valuable.

The ceremony was fixed for half-past eleven o'clock, and punctually at that time the bride, accompanied by her father, drove up to the north entrance of the parish church, the bridesmaids, six in number, being stationed at the door to receive her. They were—Miss Alice Lloyd, Miss Alice Walker, Miss Linley, Miss Verity, Miss Kate Hunt, and Miss E. Walker. The groomsmen were—Mr. Fred Walker, Harry Maple, E. W. Stringer, Harry Smith, F. Haslam, and Arthur Walker.

The bride was attired in a rich white satin dress trimmed with real Brussels lace flounce, wreath of orange blossom, and veil and diamond locket. The bridesmaids wore blue silks, wreaths of apple blossom and veil, with lockets presented by the bridegroom.

The church, which was neatly decorated, was well filled with a fashionable congregation. The Rev. C. M. Harvey, M.A., rector, performed the marriage service. The bride was given away by her father (Bro. Roebuck), Mr. Fred Walker (the bridegroom's brother) acting as best man. Mr. Lamb presided at the organ, and during the service and while the wedding party were signing the register, played a sonata in G by Beethoven, an allegro by Bach, the Wedding March by Mendelssohn, and an andante by Schnerder.

After the service, the wedding party repaired to West Lodge, and at one o'clock sat down to breakfast, which was arranged in a marquee, fifty feet long by thirty feet wide, and lined with red and white striped bunting, which was provided by Mr. Blake, of Ealing. Messrs. Inglefield and Hircombe (late Withers), of Baker-street, London, were entrusted with the arrangements for the breakfast, and it is scarcely necessary to say that so eminent a firm gave the utmost satisfaction. Accommodation was provided for forty-eight persons. The tables were set out most effectively, a selection of choice plants, interspersed with bouquets, displayed in massive epergnes and plateaus, adding considerably to the attractiveness of the spectacle. The bride's cake, which was elegantly ornamented, was mounted on a handsome silver plateau at the head of the table. A large variety of ferns, palms, and other potted plants were tastefully placed round the marquee.

The guests comprised Mr. Aste, Mrs. Walker, Bro. Roebuck, Mrs. J. H. Walker, Mr. J. H. Walker, Mrs. Roebuck, Mr. Walker, Mrs. Naylor, Mr. E. Sacre, Mr. Naylor, Miss Alice Lloyd, Mr. Fred. Walker, Miss Linley, Mr. H. Smith, Miss E. Walker, Mr. F. Haslam, Mrs. John Aste, Mr. John Aste, Mrs. A. Solomon, Mr. A. Solomon, Master Alfred Walker, Miss Aste, Mr. F. Ebsworth, Mrs. Verity, Mr. Verity, Mrs. Knight, Mrs. R. W. Stewart, Mrs. Hunt, Mr. Hunt, Miss Alice Walker, Mr. H. Maple, Miss Verity, Mr. E. W. Stringer, Miss Kate Hunt, Mr. Arthur Walker, Mrs. Summers, Mr. Summers, Mrs. John Heptingstall, Master Bertie Walker, Miss Walker, Mr. A. H. Walker, Mrs. Palmer, Mr. E. Baldwin, Mrs. C. O. Barker, and Mr. Barker.

The church bells rang a merry peal when the wedding party left the church and at intervals during the day. The happy couple left at four o'clock for Scotland, where they intend to spend their honeymoon. Thursday being the silver wedding day of Bro. W. Roebuck additional interest was given to the occasion.

SKETCHES OF MASONIC CHARACTER, No. IV.

BRO. JAWKINS IN NORMANDY.

Bro. Jawkins is, as we all know, a P.M. of the "Amphibious Lodge;" the joke about which is, by our famous friend Bro. Jones, that its members are always warm, and sometimes "wet." "Not wet blankets?" "No, sir, I mean the other thing!" He is, perhaps, best known as Companion Jawkins, P.Z., as he likes to have himself known as a distinguished Royal Arch Mason of the old Jericho Chapter, renowned alike for its agreeable gathering and its admirable dinners. He is Preceptor of half-a-dozen chapters, to boot, and is a companion whose "flat" no one ever dreams of doubting or disputing. He is not an unamiable fellow, per se, but, a little too fond of praising No. One. When he tells a story, it is "I said so and so." "I observed to our excellent friend," "I saw at once what had to be done," and "I took measures accordingly."

He sometimes seems to think as if the world was composed of Jawkins, Mrs. Jawkins, and the little Jawkinses, with a few men and women and babies thrown in. We do not pretend to assert that he does any positive harm. Perhaps his is more of a negative than a positive character for good. Nay, taking the average of those with whom we come in contact, Bro. Jawkins is somewhat "above par."

We do not think Bro. Jawkins a "strong man" nor a genius who will "set the Thames on fire," but look at him all round, he is a good citizen, a good member of the family circle, a good Mason and, we feel bound to add, a good man! So that the oft-repeated axiom is still true, let us bear in mind—we do not need brilliant talent or overpowering parts to fill our lot in life, to act up to our responsibilities, or to do our duty "in that state of life" where it has pleased the Great Architect of the Universe to call us.

Bro. Jawkins, with his amiable wife and intelligent offspring, is in Normandy, but I fear hardly appreciates the beauty of the country or the contrasted habits and manners of its kindly-hearted inhabitants, as all French people really are—no kinder exist anywhere. He has that English idea strong in him, that "Heimsucht," as the Germans say, which makes him deprecate everything foreign and laud everything Britannic. He does not like the "casse au lait" (foolish man). He prefers bad English coffee very much, with a tinge of milk; he don't admire the "vin ordinaire," Bass's beer is worth it a thousand times, with some other not complimentary expressions. He don't understand the "plats," and he objects to "kickshaws." He says reproachfully, "I prefer joints, sir," and he ignores the fact that if he will only look out for himself, he can get in France the tenderest "bif steaks" and best of mutton cutlets in the world. He does not even approve of the butter, and he makes jests at the cheese. He likes a slight admixture of lard, &c., in our indigenous Anglican produce, and prefers a good Cheshire to anything out. The consequence is that Bro. Jawkins is not easy in his foreign trip, often out of temper, irritable, unpleasant, and wishes himself back in London, and the city, and the club.

We all remember the young man, who did the "Simplon," by requesting his friends to "wake him up when he got to the other side, for there is nothing for a fellow to see," and we fear that when Bro. Jawkins returns home, and is questioned about his foreign tour, he will have journeyed, as some travellers do, with his eyes shut, indifferent to those many charms which Normandy has for the archaeological and the intelligent, for the lovers of scenery and the students of nature.

One point seems to have struck him much and annoyed him more, the caps of the women. "Positively unbecoming," he says. Mrs. Jawkins remarks that Jawkins as an old married man, might have looked at other things, and we are inclined to agree with our old friend, Mrs. Balasso, who declares that in her matured experience, "old married men always behave the worst."

When then, good reader, you meet Bro. Jawkins, in the Amphibious Lodge, or the Jericho Chapter, don't "tread on his corns," to use a vulgar expression. Speak to him about anything except Normandy, and above all, never forget that as a man and a Briton, Bro. Jawkins is much in agreement with the common run of us all. But bid him forget his grievances of foreign travel in all the pleasures of Masonic Society, harmony, and good feeling.

It is strange to think how different we often are at home and abroad, how contented in the former, and how grumbling in the latter. Frenchmen often think us devoured by "spleen," when it is only a little insular perversity, and, perhaps, as Englishmen, we have yet to learn that most useful of lessons, which all citizens of the world sooner or later must master, that if there is no place like home, and if it be true still that it is our duty "ubique patriam reminisci," the philosopher will see good in all countries, and find much to charm, much to improve, and much to delight him, wherever he may pitch his tent, wandering Arab though he be, in whatever land he for the moment has the good luck to reside, which affords him protection, or lends him a domicile.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The Committee of this Institution held their monthly meeting on Wednesday last at Freemasons' Hall, Col. Creaton in the chair. There were also present Bros. Jos. Smith, Berry, Head, John M. Stedwell, S. Rawson, Richd. Hervé Giraud, Hyde Pullen, Thos White, A. H. Tattershall, C. A. Cottebrune, William Hale, Wm. Hilton, Capt. N. G. Phillips, L. Stean, J. Newton, Charles Lacey, Raynham W. Stewart, Dr. Jabez Hogg, Fred. Acland, H. Massey, (Freemason), and James Terry.

After the reading and confirming of the minutes, Bro. Terry reported the death of Bro. K. Prescott (Chichester), after having received annuity for six years, £209; Bro. R. T. Peters, (London), five years £183; Mrs. E. King, (London), three years, £95; and Mrs. C. Govier, (Exeter), £67 10s.

Bro. Terry also reported that he received from Grand Lodge £70, to provide the annuitants at Croydon with coals.

The application of a widow for half her late husband's annuity was granted, after which the Committee adjourned.

MASONRY AND MASONS.

It has been well said, that if to be virtuous required no effort and no sacrifice, if to be exemplary in all things were just as easy as the reverse, then there would be no particular merit in virtue, the philosophy of which we understand to be that as there is really merit in a virtuous life and walk, it is worth while for every man to make persistent effort so to live and so to act in his journey through life that he may deserve, if he do not receive, the commendation of those whose approval is worth having. This thought applies with great force to the lives of those who wish to be consistent Masons and to honour the institution which has honoured them by admitting them to its rights and privileges. That they do not all walk on this level must be admitted, and it would be strange indeed if they did, for Masonry has but comparatively little power for reforming the ways of men evilly inclined. Its force lies rather in the fact that it seeks only the companionship of those who are acknowledged to be good at the outset, and if after admission they fall from their position they occupied in the beginning, this is their fault, not that of the brotherhood. Most men are in the habit of putting their best foot forward when they wish to accomplish any given result or secure any coveted favour, and therefore when a candidate presents himself for initiation he is careful not to set forth with any great degree of ostentation the particular weaknesses of his own character. Then, too, the brethren are not infallible, but, on the contrary, as all experience shows, somewhat too apt to take on trust the bright side of the picture, and find in many cases that it would have been better had there been less haste and a more thorough testing of the proposed material. They have been told time and again that merely negative men are not those upon whom we can safely rely, for in Masonry, as in their private affairs, they wait for others; if study, investigation and labour are needed, they let somebody else study, work and investigate, and it not unfrequently happens that they are too mentally lazy to profit by the results achieved. Three months after initiation they know more about the Craft than those who have devoted their lives to the service, and to the discovery at the end of many years how much there is still to learn; they do not want to read because nothing can be said that they do not already know, and the gems dug out of the dust-covered lore of the past do not glitter in their sight, in short, if all Masons were like them, the fraternity would be years behind even its present status, and yet in this class ambition finds its most ardent votaries, and from it come the men who are more than willing to bear the honours of the Craft, while refusing the time and labour needed to qualify even the most intellectual for the proper discharge of the duties and responsibilities of office. From it come those who are ever ready to argue the case with the profane, and to present the spectacle, over which men and angels may weep, of a person assuming to teach that which he himself does not understand; and from it come those who injure the Craft, delay progress, and awaken animosity by their senseless claims and assertions. These are the men who assert that Masonry is good enough to live by and die by, forgetting, or rather not knowing, that in the whole arcana of Masonry there is nothing to warrant anything of the kind; that on the contrary the fraternity, being established on purely moral grounds, is not and cannot be a form of worship, neither a sect, nor having any affiliation with nor affinity for any particular form of religious worship.

These are they who give point and leverage to Papal Bulls and Protestant invectives; the first invariably calling us a sect, and on this utterly groundless assumption bringing to bear against us the prejudices of the countless multitudes who receive and obey without question the orders of their ecclesiastical superiors, and put us all down as devils simply because they are told so to do. The others with infinitely less justification because they are not hemmed in, and cowed by a hierarchy that assumes to hold the keys of Heaven and Hell, but on the contrary claim as a special appendage of their civil and religious birthright, freedom of thought and conscience, blazon us to the world as "Christless" and "Infidels," as desiring to lead men from the communion of the church, and into that easy and descending grade which leads to the fiery and maledorous regions upon which they are so fond of descanting. Now every one who knows anything about Masonry knows that the system of ethics comprising its morals and dogmas are the furthest possible removed from anything of the kind; that a Mason may be active and indefatigable in his attendance at lodge meetings, and never in his life hear a word calculated to weaken his faith in his own form of religion, whatever it may be, nor intended to lead him into any other path whatsoever. He may be the firmest of Catholics, the most ardent of Protestants, Jew, Gentile or Moslem, and he will only be asked to believe in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. And this is the line of distinction between Masonry and Masons. The world in general does not observe it, and a goodly share of the religious world seems determined not to do so, and therefore it should be the endeavour of the brethren in their walk and conversation to make it apparent that we understand and live up to it.—New York Dispatch.

PRINCESS'S THEATRE.

This theatre opened for the season on Monday last under the management of Mr. Walter Gooch, who, however, retains the valuable services of that able stage manager and clever actor, Mr. Harry Jackson. The bill of fare was full of promise, comprising as it did a laughable farce, by J. B. Buckstone, and a new drama, entitled "Guinea Gold," by H. J. Byron—the most prolific, and withal most popular and successful playwright we have—but so far from the promises being like Adonis's gardens, "That one day blossom'd, and fruitful were the next," it was evident long before the curtain descended on the first act that the verdict of the public would be "Faith, I have heard too much, for your words and performances are no kin together. Mr. Byron has achieved many successes and committed few failures—fewer, perhaps, than any living dramatist, but we question if either "Wrinkles" or even "Bull by the Horns," so merited critical and public censure as "Guinea Gold." We do not intend to tell the story, if we may employ a word that implies a certain continuity of incidents, for apart from the facts that we hold it unfair both to the author of a play and to those of our readers who intend to witness it, we question if in the present instance anyone but Mr. Byron could tell the story. A pretty orphan, the inevitable faithful servant, a detective of the "Ticket-of-leave" type, two brothers, one the hero, the other the villain, these latter dragged almost in their entirety out of "Brothers," and we have new materials out of which Mr. Byron presents what purports to be a new and original drama. Why, these materials have been worn to threads long ago, and we are asked to take these old rags for new garments. We deem ourselves, as old playgoers, second to none in the feelings of gratitude we entertain towards Mr. Byron, for the many hours of pure and true delight he has given us, but we maintain that no one should withhold the truth for the sake of gratitude. Is the author of "The Lancashire Lass," "Blow for Blow," "Dearer than Life," "Our Boys" and many other plays equally good, losing his cunning, or, worse still, has his success proved a bad master, because too indulgent, and made him careless, idle and indifferent? Since the production of "Married in Haste," Mr. Byron has written nothing but what his leisure should have afforded occasion for repentance. To all the actors and actresses in "Guinea Gold," nothing but praise, and high praise is due. Miss Lydia Foote struggled manfully, if she will pardon the masculine adverb, to make the most of the poorest, weakest part ever awarded to the heroine of a drama; she did her best, but even the best of such a popular, charming and pretty actress as Miss Lydia Foote cannot make a bad counterfeit in to the semblance of the sterling coin. The new and realistic scenery by Julian Hicks is above all praise, and this artist together with the actors, had to bow his acknowledgements to an appreciative and critical but kindly audience.

BIRKBECK BUILDING SOCIETY.—The 26th annual meeting of the Birkbeck Building Society was held on Thursday (at the Birkbeck Literary and Scientific Institution, Southampton Buildings, Chancery Lane, London). The report which was presented to the meeting stated that the receipts for the year were £6,129,128, and the total from the commencement of the Society £33,416,513. Notwithstanding the reduction of interest to 3½ and 2½ per cent., the deposits had risen from £1,929,965 to £2,120,823, or an increase of £190,857. The Gross Profits earned by the Society during the year were £106,017, upwards of £9000 in excess of the previous year. Of this amount £83,230 has been appropriated to the payment of interest, discount, and expenses of management, leaving a net balance on the year's working of £22,787. The Surplus Funds amounted last year to £1,365,061, of which £1,220,386 was invested in Government, Indian, and Metropolitan Stocks, City of London and Colonial bonds, gas and water stocks and shares, freehold ground rents, and other readily convertible securities, and £144,674 remained at call in the hands of the bankers. At the present time the amount invested in convertible securities is £1,575,706, being an increase of £355,320, while the sum of £170,742 stands to the credit of the Society at the bankers, being £26,068 more than last year. The total increase of the Surplus Funds is £381,387. The proportion of reserve to liabilities is now upwards of 77½ per cent. The total liabilities of the Society are £2,263,719, and the assets £2,348,603, showing a nett surplus of £84,884. Of this sum £33,750 is invested in Consols as a permanent guarantee fund, leaving £51,134 to be carried forward. The number of investors and depositors at the close of the year was 38,427, being an increase of 2525 since the last balance.—The Times.

MASONIC SECRECY.

The secrecy of Masonry is its only sybil voice proclaiming. Procul, O, procul este profani. It is only the secrecy of the lawyer to his client; of the minister to his penitent; or of friend to friend. This trustworthy confidence is the glory of man; scandal dies like an echo on the shore where the tongue is bridled by truth and honour. "Where there is no tale bearer the strife ceaseth." Wrench from the heart of a Mason the secret of his brother; and from the same heart you may blot but the image of his God, the vows made to a fond and confiding wife, or the duty he owes to his children, to country and home. The betrayer of secrets is a moral renegade too foul for the atmosphere of honour, he is the Judas of friendship and the assassin of character.

Nor never need an honest open-hearted Mason fear the better part of creation will urge against his order to its detriment the circumstances that the ladies are not admitted to its membership among Free and accepted Masons. Let him tell what is the fact, that Minerva, the goddess of Wisdom, presides in the Mason's lodge, in which she would have indeed but a divided empire if the goddess of beauty were admitted along with her. We surely would not trust Venus and Minerva together in our lodges, lest we should become too much distracted with the blandishments of beauty to hear all the severe teachings of wisdom. But it will be high time to attempt a laboured defence of this Masonic usage when a lady shall complain of it or when she shall refuse making a secret-keeping Mason the lord of her affections; pillowing on her pure heart, both the unlocked casket and the secret which it contains. Ah! could she make him a renegade to honour, how could she loathe him. How unsafe in such hands and in such keeping would she consider her own fame and those gems of affection which woman never gives save to the trusty, the brave, the unconquerable, the inflexible in purpose.

There is a sublime secret connected with everything that is valuable. Says the great light of Masonry, the Bible, "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him." There is a secret in each profession of life, in every science, in every beautiful art. There is a secret in love, an outspoken language that sometimes glances from the eye, but which is oftener hid by virgin modesty until the heart becomes an urn of suffering in which the fires of hidden attachment crimson the incense of the affections. There is a secret in hate, whispered only to the moon as its pale cold eyes gleam on the assassin's dagger. There are secrets everywhere in nature, from the pedestal to the capital of the pillar of the universe, over which the mysterious eye of Omnipotence burns with its secret meaning.—Columbia Courier.

BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.

The congress at Llangollen continued its proceedings on Saturday week, when a party visited the vale of Clwyd. Their first halting place was Denbigh, where they saw the Burgess Tower, St. Hillary's Church (which has double aisles), and the Castle, which dates from Edward I. After luncheon the party proceeded to Ruthin Castle, which contains a selection of antiquities, and where they had tea. At the evening meeting, [Mr. Thomas Morgan, F.S.A., honorary treasurer, in the chair, the following papers were read:—"On Welsh Converts of St. Paul," by J. W. Grover, C.E.; "Notes on Early Monumental Sculpture," illustrated by drawings of crosses, &c., by B. Lynam; and "Pen-y-Gaer (chiefly in connection with Caractacus) and the British Remains in North Wales," by Mr. Dillon F.S.A. On Monday week, the last day of the Congress work, an excursion was made to Mostyn Hall, rich in good pictures and historical portraits; the library contains a very fine collection of rare manuscripts and books, which was the subject of an address by Mr. W. De Gray Birch, F.R.S.L., an honorary secretary of the association. The party visited St. Winifred's Well, near Holywell, which is said to possess miraculous curative qualities. The building enclosing it was erected by Margaret, Countess of Richmond, mother of Henry VII. Basingwerk Abbey, the present buildings of which date from about 1250, was the last place visited. In the evening Mr. T. F. Dillon Croker read a paper by Mr. Westmacott Chapman, "On Harlech and Criccieth Castles," the Hon. treasurer, Mr. Thomas Morgan, F.S.A., again occupying the chair. After the usual vote of thanks, the chairman declared the thirty-fourth annual congress of the British Archæological Association ended.

AN UPRIGHT JUDGE.—Some young men in the town of—, having "cut up" one night to the detriment of certain windows and bell pulls, were lodged in the calaboose, and in due time the next morning confronted before the police magistrate, who fined them 5 dollars each and an admonition. One of the three foolishly remarked: "Judge, I was in hopes you would remember me. I belong to the same lodge with you." The Judge, apparently surprised, replied with brotherly sympathy: "Ah, is it so? Truly this is Bro.—! I did not recognise you. Excuse me for my dullness. Yes, we are brother Masons, and I should have thought of that. Mr. Clerk, fine our Bro.—ten dollars. Being a Mason, he knows better the rules of propriety than other men! Fine him ten dollars. You will pay the clerk, Bro.—! Good morning Bro.—! call the next case."

[We can vouch for the truth of the above. The "upright judge" referred to was that good man and true, Judge Storer, of Cincinnati, O., recently deceased.—E.O. ADVOCATE.]

Query.—Was the Ed. of The Advocate the erring brother?—AMERICAN PAPER.

NOTES ON ART, &amp;c.

The Bicentenary of original German Opera is to be celebrated at Hamburg next January. According to the Musical Times, it will then be two hundred years since the first representation on any stage of an original German operatic work. The piece then performed was called appropriately enough "Adam und Eva, oder der Erschaffene, Gefallene, und Aufgerichtete Mensch" (Adam and Eve; or, Man Created, Fallen, and Raised Up). The text is written by the laureate poet, Richter, the music by Johann Theile.

A costly map is stated by Engineering to be in course of preparation by the Belgian Government, which has ordered the construction of a new geographical map of Belgium. The work will extend over seventeen years, and will cost £56,600. The first instalment is proposed to be exhibited next year at the Paris Exhibition.

A somewhat novel editorial difficulty was announced in the Himalaya Chronicle a few weeks since, as follows:—"We have to apologise to our readers for the paucity of matter in to-day's issue, in consequence of some of our staff having absconded after having drawn more pay than was due to them."

The number of our London Boulevards is gradually increasing, and the Gardener's Magazine tells us that the Camberwell Vestry have adopted the recommendation of the General Purposes Committee to plant 388 trees in the Old Kent-road, 24 in Camberwell-road, 86 in Camberwell New-road, and 60 in Peckham-road. But how about the long-promised avenue up the Camden-road?

A Rain Tree is the latest novelty reported from across the Atlantic. The consul of the United States of Columbia writes from Yurimagus to President Prado, informing him that in the woods adjacent to the city of Moyobamba exists a tree called by the natives rain tree, which possesses some remarkable qualities. It is a tree of about fifty feet high when at maturity, and about three feet in diameter at the base, and has the property of absorbing an immense quantity of humidity from the atmosphere, which it concentrates and subsequently pours forth from its leaves and branches in a shower, and in such abundance that in many cases the ground of its neighbourhood is converted into a perfect bog. It possesses this curious property in its greatest degree in the summer, precisely when the rivers are at their lowest, and water most scarce; and the writer proposes that it should be planted in the more arid regions of Peru for the benefit of agriculturists.

A CANNON REVOLVER.—Is it known to our War Office that the French Government has just adopted a very formidable gun called a cannon-revolver? The peculiarity of this arm consists in its capability of throwing 80 shells per minute of rather more than 11b. each, which break up into 24 fragments. The cannon-revolver can be brought into action and the range determined with great rapidity, and when once sighted it can be worked without the slightest recoil and traversed by pivot action. Its destructive effects can thus be brought to bear on troops either in column or deployed. It commences to be effective at the tremendous range of over 3000 yards. The first delivery of this formidable arm to the French Government is principally for the use of the navy. The guns are fired from and resting on the bulwarks, and are intended for torpedo-boat searching; in this form the weight of the piece is only about 700lb., but as field pieces the additional gear required brings them up to about 1600lb. Two men only are required to move the gun itself. It is considered to be a most formidable weapon, and attention should at once be given to so important a subject by the English War Office. We understand that the Turkish Government purchased five or six of these cannon-revolvers, but, being unable to pay for them, the guns remain undelivered. Here is a good opportunity for a few Turcopoles to help the "unspeakable."—Whitehall Review.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION.—The Turners' Company, according to custom, have offered their freedom, with other rewards, to the exhibitors of the best specimen of hand-turning in any of the subjects of competition, which this year include ivory, pottery, stone and jet, and steel, brass, and gold for horological purposes. Pottery will comprise terra-cotta, stoneware, earthenware, and porcelain, and stone and jet will include any natural substance of a mineral character except those which require baking or burning. Lady Burdett-Coutts has offered a sum of £25 for money prizes to the competitors, and the Court of the Company has voted £50 for the same purpose. Among the judges are Sir Gilbert Scott, Sir Joseph Whitworth, Dr. Pole, Bro. Hutton Gregory, Mr. Doulton, and others. The articles will be on view some time in October at the Mansion House, and the Lord Mayor will distribute the prizes to the winners.
